That public sentiment is growing both strong and universal against the liquor traffic is an undeniable fact; yet, in order to make the Scott Act, or any other prohibitory liquor law effective, or to any material extent answer the purpose for which it is passed, more than mere sentiment will be required. The Crooks Act is a stringent license law, and if thoroughly enforced, the need for prohibitory liquor law would be to a great extent removed. Now the question naturally arises: Why is the license law not rigidly enforced? Whose duty is it to look after it? The law is glaringly violated every day, and yet the offenders go unheeded and unpunished, and what prospect is there that the Scott Act, if passed, would be enforced? The people have it in their power to enforce the license law and don't do it; Why? One says, well its none of my business, I'm not going to get myself into trouble and bring down upon myself the ill will of my neighbors for the public good; another says, to himself, I'm not going to risk loosing good customers by laying an information of the violation of the law; and so it goes; while each would be highly pleased to see the law enforced and law breakers punished; yet, it requires more than sentiment in order to carry out the provisions of the Act, and thereby render it practical and beneficial. This is a serious question and should have the careful consideration of every ratepayer. If the Scott Act is carried in this county, (and we have no doubt it will) it will be the duty of every citizen who has any respect for himself, to abide by the law, while it will also be the duty of every ratepayer who supports the Act, either by vote or otherwise to assist in carrying out its provisions, and not merely fold his arms and look on with indifference at the efforts which will doubtless be made towards rendering it a dead letter. If the Act is passed and the provisions thereof enforced, it will be a very important and desirable advancement in civilization, and a great moral victory, but, on the other hand, if the provisions of the Act are not enforced, the state of society will be demoralizing and the last state worse than the first.

The Late Fire.

A. Turner lost a sleigh worth $20 in the recent fire which had been built to order but not yet taken away.

J. Lamb looses about $100.00 by broken and damaged furniture by the hasty removal. This is the third time Mr. L. has been chased from his premises by fire. Mr. Mathews' loss is greater than was estimated in the STANDARD last week, and will foot up about $500.

John Hill lost a dog which he had recently paid $5 for. Smith the barber also lost one. Their bones were found among the ruins.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

Chapter of Irish History.

To the Editor of the Standard.

"It was the third day, and hunger and thirst in the house were so manifest to the bailiff's outside, by the pitiful cries of the children, and the wailings of the mother—who begged for water from their own well, and for potatoes from their own store,—that hopes were entertained of a speedy surrender."

"Reports of the symptoms of extremety were convoyed at intervals to the landlord, who, as he heard of the increasing cries for water and food, gave orders afresh to the bailiffs to persevere, to keep watch and prevent all supplies from getting in; being assured, that, as the pangs of hunger and thirst became more poignant, the sooner would the beleagured family capitulate."

"Mrs. Durmer, sister of Ring, went many times to the beleagured house to offer relief, but was not permitted to approach it with anything in her hand. She was allowed to approach the window when she carried nothing that she might hear the sufferings within, and urge her brother to surrender."

"She listened to the sickly wailings of the mother and children, and at last, on the fourth day, heard the horrible fact from the mother, that the children, maddened by thirst, had drank their own urine. Then she seized a dish which lay in the yard, and, filling it quickly from a pool of stagnant water, broke the window before she could be prevented by the officers, and gave the unwholesome water to the family, which they drank greedily. Perhaps she would have now done more, but was compelled by the officers to desist. The landlord was informed, and he promised that she would live to repent it. The crop of Dormer rotting in the field in November, and potatoes poor and meagre for the want of manure, because he was not allowed a road to his field, (of which more anon,) told whether the landlord forgot his promises. (Note, 1859. This poor woman was in Manchester in 1850, and nursed my wife at Vine Cottage, Cheetwood, when she gave birth to our fourth child, Alexander.)

"The sufferings of the family and of himself now worked on the father until he could hold out no longer. He opened the door, a pitchfork in his hand. He shewed it to the bailiffs. He bade them keep off; said he would not touch them if they did not touch him; but that the hunger of himself and family had made him desperate, that he had potatoes in the field and potatoes he would have. Let them prevent him at their peril."

"They did not prevent him. They waited until they saw and him take the potatoes, then informed the landlord. On that instant a criminal warrant was sent for from Kilkenny. It arrived, so also did a party of soldiers and constabulary who occupied the barrack built by the landlord on the estate. The door was forced, and Pat Ring was taken to gaol on a charge of robbery accompanied with threats of violence. He had stolen his own potatoes, they being under distraint, and he was in due course of time tried at Kilkenny for the felony. The jury refused to convict for a crime committed under such circumstances, and he was acquitted."

"The landlord by this time (winter of 1842 and spring of 1843) was in a labyrinth of litigation with his tenant; and it would seem that impatient of the law, he took another course. One tenant, the widow Dowling, dowed £30 and 7s 11d. costs. He had a decree against her, and she to avoid being taken to prison, shut herself up in her house. The landlord sent four bailiffs to take her, with orders not to waste time as they had done with Pat Ring, but carry her off at once. They accordingly forced her door and took her. For this they were prosecuted and found guilty."

"One of them was sentenced to four months imprisonment, the others to three months."

"The landlord, however, by whose orders they broke into the house, escaped punishment: the law could not reach him. The widow Dowling, though thus taken illegally to prison was kept there. She had been five months incarcerated when I was in the country and there was no hope at that time of her liberation."

"By this defiance of law, and escape from consequences, and by the ill-feeling now raised over many miles of country, the landlord had few friends on the estate, and many enemies. On Sunday morning 19th March 1843, between the hours of ten and eleven, when driving in his car to Kilkenny from his own residence, he was shot at from behind the pillar of a gate, but not injured. With the facility which the law in Ireland gives a landlord, he at once threw those tenants into gaol, every one with whom he had been involved in litigation. Consequently before they could prosecute for damages, or before they could be witnessed in other cases, they had themselves to be tried for attempted murder! (Thus arose the frightful calender which Sir John Easthope spoke of when sending me to Kilkenny.)"

WM. BROWN,

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Meaford Road.

OBITUARY.—This neighborhood has been again visited by the grim messenger, death; his victim this time being Miss Emily Boland, who died as stated in last week's STANDARD, on Monday, the 23rd ult. Her funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. McDowell in the Wesley church on Sabbath, March 1st. We will ever miss her from our midst, especially in the Sabbath School where she was a faithful and beloved teacher; but our loss is her gain. The Good Shepherd saeth not as man seeth, and we know that it was for a wise purpose that he called her home to His fold so early in life, and therefore we are called to bow in submission to His will, and hope to meet her on the other shore where parting will be no more.

POSTPONEMENT.—In consequence of the above sad event, the anniversary services in connection with the Sabbath School here has been postponed until Tuesday, March 10th.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

GONE TO HER REWARD.

It is our sad lot this week to chronicle the sad event of the death of one of our esteemed and respected citizens. The sudden and unexpected news on Saturday evening, that one had departed from our midst, seemed to cast a gloom over the whole village, being that of Mrs. A. R. Fawcett, beloved wife of A. R. Fawcett, Esq., Editor of the Advance, who died on Saturday evening, the 21st inst. Her last illness was very brief. On Thursday evening Dr. Christoe was called in to see her, and found that inflamation of the lungs had seized her, and on Saturday morning Drs. Christoe and Carter entertained no hopes of her recovery. When deceased was informed she was dying, although desirous to live that she might be a help and comfort to those near and dear to her, yet to her, death brought no fears; it had already lost its sting. She had been taught to love and serve her Saviour, and to look upon the religion of Jesus as above everything else in this world. Since coming to our village her life has been a consistent and happy one, such as leads many of those who knew her, to speak of her as an exemplary Christian woman. Although not constitutionally strong, and something over twelve months ago she passed through a severe illness, yet she was always bright and cheerful, and visitors remarked that while sick rooms usually seem sad, her's was full of gladness. A short time before her death she asked Miss Christoe, who was visiting her, to sing that beautiful hymn, "Sweet By and Bye;" a little later she was not, for God had taken her home to himself. Her death is a heavy stroke to her sorrowing husband, who has the heart felt sympathy of the community. The vast concourse of people that followed her remains on Tuesday afternoon to the Methodist church, and after a suitable and impressive sermon by the Rev. McDowell, to the Flesherton cemetery, indicated the loving esteem in which the deceased was held by all classes. The Flesherton Division Sons of Temperance, of which deceased was a member, paid their last tribute of respect by turning out in a body, and marched in procession before the corpse to the cemetery.

(The above came to hand just too late for last week Ed.)

Presentation and Address.

On Tuesday evening, 24th ult., a large number of the young people of the 11th line of Euphrasia took possession of the manse in the manner of a surprise party. The company seemed to enjoy themselves pleasantly until about 11 o'clock, when the tables were spread, and all partook of a bounteous repast, after which the following address was read:

To the Rev A. Wilson:

DEAR PASTOR,—The little company encircling you to-night have assembled for the purpose of showing their sincere regard for you, and also of encouraging you in the good work in which you are engaged in our behalf. We have ever recognized your unwavering zeal in the cause of Christ, and your untiring efforts to promote our spiritual interests. And now the privilege of occupying the manse for a little, and of presenting you with these tokens of our esteem, is to us a duty of unmingled pleasure. It is pleasant to have the assured conviction that you have sought to do your duty, and that in doing it, your labors have not only been successful but very acceptable. You will please accept this purse and those articles now placed at your disposal as a small token of our friendship and esteem towards yourself and family. While we are pleased with the happy relations which exist between us, at the same time we hope those ties of affection may with each returning year become stronger and deeper. In conclusion, we trust that our association together may be for our mutual benefit, and that our kind Father above may long spare you a blessing to all who hear you tell the story of the cross.

Signed on behalf of the young people of the 11th line, Euphrasia,

MARY STINSON,
ANDREW ARNOTT.

Feb. 24, 1885.

Mr. Wilson made a brief but fitting reply, fully reciprocating the kind sentiment expressed.—COM.

THE BEST COMBINATION.

The best combination of blood cleansing, regulating, health giving herbs, roots and barks, enter into Burdock Blood Bitters, a purely vegetable remedy that cures diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 73	to	$0 74
Spring Wheat	0 72	to	0 74
Barley	50	to	67
Peas	54	to	56
Oats	32	to	32
Butter	18	to	00
Eggs	20	to	00
Apples	50	to	75
Potatoes	18	to	20
Hay	9 00	to	10 00
Pork	5 00	to	5 25
Flour	3 75	to	4 25

CARD OF THANKS.

I HEREBY return sincere thanks to those who so cheerfully assisted in saving the contents of my shop from being destroyed by the recent fire.

THOS. MATHEWS.

FIRE.

I DESIRE to tender most hearty thanks to all persons who worked so earnestly and successfully to save my building from destruction by fire on the night of 24th February last.

T. S. SPROULE.

BAKERY FOR SALE.

BUSINESS AND PREMISES for sale Cheap, being 1 fifth acre on Mill Street, opposite STANDARD office, with large roughcast two story house and bake oven, good stable and never-failing well of spring water. This is an excellent opening for a pushing man. Terms and further particulars can be had by applying on the premises.

MRS. MONTGOMERY.

234-36 Markdale P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

FOR SALE or to rent, lot 14, con. 12, Holland, 100 acres, 55 cleared, comfortable log house, barn log and frame 32 x 50, first class well, ten minutes walk from school and post office, a decided bargain. Apply to F. TAYLOR, Harkaway, or R. S. McLAUGHLIN, Haydon.

STALLION TO HIRE.

HAVING a large farm to work which requires my whole attention I have concluded to lease my Stallion "Lord Byron" for the season of 1885. This is a rare chance for a reliable man, stock or good security taken in lieu of rent, the horse has proved himself a sure foal getter, and his stock has carried off the highest prizes wherever shown. Lord Byron has taken first money in open races wherever fitted, took first prize at Flesherton races in '84. For particulars apply to DAVID MADILL, Maxwell, where the horse can be seen.

Farm for Sale.

160 acres, being lots 42 and 43 second range West of Toronto and Sydenham road, Holland, about 100 acres cleared and in good state of cultivation, ballance well timbered with Maple, Beech and Hemlock, and about 10 acres cedar swamp. Good roughcast house 22x33 with stone cellar, frame barn 40x60 and good out houses, all with stone foundations. Good young orchard bearing. The farm is well watered, two good wells, one at the house, a fine spring creek croses the farm near the rear. Only two miles from the thriving village of Williamsford, a station on the T. G. & B. branch of the C. P. R.

This is a rare chance, and terms will be made very easy. For futher particulars apply on the premises to

FRANCIS McCANN,

230-44 Williamsford P. O.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture,

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all kinds of

PUMPS,

Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.

Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's

PATENT LOAD LIFTER

For Gigneg and Repairing pumps.

Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS, CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES, PURSES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James C. Russell,

Watchmaker, Jeweller,

217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs. Flour,
" "	61 "	39 "	"
" "	60 "	38 "	"
" "	59 "	37 "	"
" "	58 "	36 "	"
" "	57 "	35 "	"

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it, if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT

And therefore has supplied a want long felt.

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

—FINE—

S, CLOCK & JEWELERY

iving every week, consisting of

CLOCKS, CHAINS,

SUECTACLES, PIPES,

VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

ing kings always in stock.

Clocks and Jewellery

... Hand satisfaction guaranteed.

... TO SHOW GOODS.

... me a Call.

s G. Russell,

...ker, Jewelle...

Flesherton.

...YARD'S

...LOW OIL

REEMAN'S

M POWDERS.

...nt to take. Contain their own ... a safe, sure, and effectual ... worms in Children or Adults.

...le Roller Mills.

... announce to ... country that ... to any other ... the best is being ... exchange:—

... Flour. ... " ... " ... " ... " ... " ... " ... amount of flour. ... new wheat to ... the most of it, ... would weigh 61 or 62 to

John W. Ford.

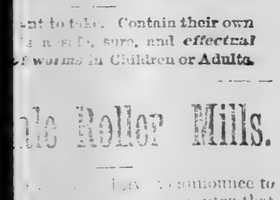
...DS SEEDS

... SEEDS

... is at

... DURHAM.

... Shop.



... can produce

...ED TO ALL PARTS OF ... WHERE ORDERED

... ge respectfully

McNeil's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

...BT. ASKIN,

...ARKDALE,

... opened out a First-Class

...TKING ESTABLISHMENT,

...ore has supplied a want long felt,

CASKETS, SHROUDS, and all

...RAL FURNISHINGS

... kind on the shortes notice.

...plendid Hearse

...or hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

...TURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

WATCHES

Reduced at Factories.

GIVE PURCHASERS THE BENEFIT.

SWISS LEAVRS,

Jewelles, Silver Hunting Cases, $9.50.

ELGIN MOVEMENTS,

...z. Coin Cases, $12.00; 4 oz. $14.50; 5 oz. $17.00.

Waltham and Springfield

MOVEMENTS KEPT IN FINE GRADES

Close Cash Prices.

...ertificates 1 and 2 Years, according to Grade, Clocks, Silverware, and Wedding Rings 18 k. Fine ...ck in other lines of goods.

Difficult Repairing a Specialty.

W. A. BROWN.

JEWELLER,

MARKDALE.

ANXIETY FOR EGYPT CONTINUES,

—AND THE EXCITEMENT CAUSED BY—

Mr. Still Coming to Assist Hamilton

To take PHOTOGRAPHS is rapidly increasing.

This will be the best chance you ever had of securing Life-Like Pictures. Mr. Still, the celebrated Photographer, will arrive on the 11th and remain until the 19th March.

☞ Don't loose this rare chance. Bring the babies early in the day.

JAMES HAMILTON.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit individual or Society will be charged ten cts a line for the first insertion and five cts a line each subsequent insertion.

THE frame of the Dundalk sash and ...factosy is up.

IT is entirely pure and unadulterated. McFarland's Japan Tea.

EX Lieutenant Governor, Cauchon, Manitoba, is dead.

NEW, neat, nobby novelties in Mens & Boys Hats at McFarland's.

WM. MASON is likely to accept a ... in Tottenham.

MR. DOUGLAS now occupies the ... just vacated by Alex Kay.

... solid silver Swiss Watch ... $8.00 up at Russell's, Flesherton.

... has removed this week to ... next door to McKenna's.

... Lumber, Sash, Doors, ... Mouldings, go to Grant ...

... JOHN BEATY is ill, though ... again, he is not likely to ...

... big rush still continues to ... for Sap Buckets, Sugar ...

... is made in O'Donovan ... Mrs. Dudley's bonnet is said ... again.

NOW is the time to buy your Sap ... Walker Bros. are selling ... cheap.

MR. GEORGE RICHARDSON returned ... Thursday last from a two-weeks ... to Scarboro, CALL at Russell's, Flesherton, and ... your watch repaired. He can ... it go right.

CORRESPONDENCE must reach us before Wednesday to insure a place in the same week's issue.

SOLID Silver American and Springfield watches from $11.00 up, at Russell's, Flesherton.

THE Mount Forest Representative is a rattling fine paper. We have no better exchange on our list.

WALKER BRO'S. will hold an auction sale of tinware at Maxwell, on Thursday, March 12th.

CORNWALL and Large have been awarded the contract of building the Dundalk school house at $2,700.

IF you want a reliable Watch or Clock at a very small figure, go to Russell's, Flesherton.

MRS. MONTGOMERY wishes to sell out her Bakery business and premises, see advertisement in another column.

Go to James G. Russell, Flesherton to get your watch or clock repaired. He can do it properly.

THE American Agriculturist is the best agricultural paper published in America, price $1.50 per year, clubbed with the STANDARD $2 for both. Call and see sample copies.

JOHN HALL, painter, has accepted a situaton painting and trimming in Gravenhurst, and left for that place on Tuesday.

ROLLER skating rinks are all the rage; splendid recreation, and unanimously recommended by leading undertakers.

MR. J. J. Johnson and son, and Mr. Thos. Chambers of Meaford were in town last Friday. They gave us a pleasant call.

MR. W. G. RICHARDS of this village has been awarded the contract for the building of the Methodist Church for $6,800.00.

DR. SPROULE, M.P. made a flying visit home arriving on Saturday night and departing for Ottawa again on Tuesday morning.

FARMERS are coming over twenty miles to the Markdale roller flour mills to have their gristing done, and well satisfied with results.

EVERYONE apperas to have been disappointed in not having an even winter, but, they may reasonably expect an open summer.

A POLICEMAN is a curious creature. He knows a rogue when he sees him, but very often he doesn't seize a rogue when he knows him.

WE have just received additions to our already well furnished plant so that the most artistic work can be turned out. Call and see samples.

A SUBSCRIBER informed us last week that he read several local papers and that the STANDARD is the only one whose market reports he could depend on.

OXEN FOR SALE.—A well matched pair of oxen rising four years old, well trained. For particulars apply to Geo. Ireton, one mile from Barrhead Mills. 134 36

CHEAP RATES.—Very low rates are offered by the St. Paul, Minneopolis, and Manitoba Railway from all points on the C. P. R. on and after 1st March, fare from Markdale $20.

THOS. MATHEWS has opened again in Rae's block, next to the Drug store, where he has a splendid stock of harness made up and other lines of horse ware.

IF you want to subscribe for the Weekly Mail or renew you subscription for the same, call at the STANDARD office, the only agency for the Weekly Mail now in Markdale.

ALL who intend to purshase Watches, clocks or other goods in my line, will secure discounts of cash from now until the 14th March. That will be a material advantage to every purchaser. W. A. Brown, Jeweller. Markdale.

MR. WM. BOWLER, having sold his farm and is going to Manitoba, has called a sale for Wednesday March 11th when he will sell his live stock, implements &c. &c. Terms 10 months time on approved paper for sums over $5.00. George Noble, auctioneer.

THE MAGNET is a new reading paper, published in Toronto, and is the spiciest paper published on the continent, containing the best selections from all the best fun papers in the world, besides rich original matter. It is for sale by all booksellers. Price 5 cents.

One case Linens,
One case Embroideries,
One case Silks,
One case Cashmeres.
One case Dress Goods.

just opened out and marked off at McFarland's, imported direct from European markets.

COMMENCED BUSINESS.—Mr. Dan McFarlane wishes to announce to the public that he has opened out a blacksmith shop opposite the Markdale House, where he will be happy to wait on the public. Having given the best of satisfaction to customers while in the employ of others, I feel satisfied I can do the same now. Dan McFarlane.

BIG Stock of Rejuvenator Bitters on hand at Smith the barber's, and they are selling off fast.

Owing to my heavy loss at the recent fire, and the expense of starting businesss again, I positively request all who are indebted to me either by over-due note or account to settle the same at once. Do not look for further notice. I will be found in A. Turner's Drug Store, where I will keep my books. D. J. Shanahan. 234-35

CHANGE IN THE FIRM.—The firm of Hands & Perry (successors to Lauder & Hands) Barristers, &c., Toronto, having dissolved by mutual agreement, the undersigned have entered into partnership as Barristers, Solicitors, Conveyancers, etc., and will carry on the business at the offices of the late firm of Lauder & Hands, No. 16 King Street East, Toronto. The new firm will be pleased to see all their old clients of the firms above mentioned, and others who may favor them with their legal business. Hands, Echlin & Garvin, 16 King St. East, Toronto.

In Memoriam.

To Mrs. J. Boland:

Whereas God, in his all-wise Providence, has seen fit to remove by death your beloved daughter, we, the officers and members of United Sabbath School, beg leave to express our deep sympathy with you and your family, and to place on record the high estimate in which she was held as a teacher in this school, because of her many noble traits of character, both of mind and heart, which endeared her to us, and while we feel deeply our loss and mourn with those bereft, we cannot understand this dark dispensation by which apparently one so much needed here and whose influence was so characterized for good should be so soon cut down; yet, we feel called upon to bow in humble submission, knowing that "God is too wise to err, too good to be unkind." We feel confident that your sorrow is not that of those who mourn without hope, but that you have the comforting assurance that your loss is unspeakable gain to the departed loved one. Our desire and prayer to God is that the promises of His word may give you comfort through the journey of this life, and that you may experience the joyousness of a blessed reunion where farewell words are never spoken and where tears of sorrow are unknown.

J. I. GRAHAM,
Sec. U. S. S.

O sprey

From our own correspondent.

Fine weather and good roads.

Money, hay and straw very scarce.

Messrs. J. Crone and Edwards shipped a car load of cattle to Toronto last week.

The Salvation army opened their barracks on Sabbath last in Feversham, they also held a tea meeting on Wednesday evening when about three hundred were present. They realized about $70.

With drums to beat and music sweet
They go it all the day
Then with delight they sing at night
Until the dawn of day.

But that has nothing to do with the hop over at Douglas' on Wednesday night, but Mr. George Ottewell and Miss Mary Douglas were in a measure the cause of it. All enjoyed themselves immensely.

People are now busy hauling hay, straw, firewood, &c., and another Hall was added to the family of Mr. Hall, Feversham on Sunday last.

Last Thursday night while tobogganing on the mountain, four miles from Collingwood, John E. Moberly, son of George Moberly, barrister, was almost instantly killed by his toboggan striking a stump.

ODDS AND ENDS.

GATHERED FROM EXCHANGES AND BOILED DOWN FOR THE STANDARD.

The English army estimates for 1886 amount to £17,820,700, which includes the expenditures for the Soudan expedition.

The Paper World declares that the ten plagues of a newspaper office are bores, poets, cranks, rats, cockroaches, typographical errors, exchange fiends, book canvassers, delinquent subscribers, and the man who always knows how to run the paper better than the editor does himself.

MR. BEAUDRY was defeated by Mr. Beaugrand for the mayoralty of Montreal by a majority of four hundred and one votes.

A proposal has been submitted to the Dominion Government to build a branch railway from Parry Sound to connect with the Callander extension at Burk's Falls.

THE relations between England and Russia are seriously strained, and England is holding 150,000 troops in readiness for Afghanstan.

BURYING PORK.—We have been informed that a wealthy farmer residing on the fifth concession of the township of W. Luther killed a lot of very fine hogs some time ago, and finding the prices did not range to suit him, buried his pork at night in a bank of snow which was found sufficiently extensive on some part of his farm. The pork market, however, improved in a few days and the farmer on going to, as he thought the place where the hogs were buried was horrified to find they were gone. He has been digging snow constantly ever since and whether some person has taken the hogs or the farmer mistaken the burial place is a mystery which the spring thaw will alone determine.—Exchange.

M. W. DUNHAM

Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,

HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE

Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which includes

75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES

Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE.

EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.

All Stock Guaranteed Reasonable Prices

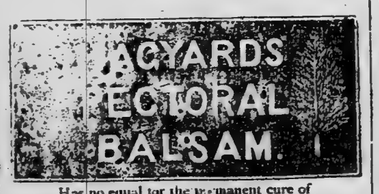
STOCK ON HAND:

150 Imported Brood Mares,

250 Imported Stallions, Old enough for service,

100 COLTS, Two years old and younger.

Recognising the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that, however well-bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Societe Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884; purchased by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.



FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres, mostly cleared and under cultivation. This farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For full particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE, Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO. NOBLE, Markdale. 234

NOTICE.

FOR SALE—Aged working horse and span young mares also about 25 tons prime timothy hay in barn.

233-35 WM. BROWN.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

ENVELOPES supplied and prinred at the STANDARD office for $2.00 per thousand up.

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense, on the

Most APPROVED

plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat.

☞ Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

MARCH BLIZZARD.

The United States Government Census Volume, just published, speaks of the "REMARKABLE SUCCESS" attenaing our "UNIQUE AND UNTIRING EFFORTS," in pushing the American Agriculturist It began the current year with a larger subscription list than at any corresponding period in twelve year. The able corps of Editors, who have made the American Agriculturist a welcome visitor to hundreds of thousands of readers for a quarter of a century, are still bending all their energies to make the Journal, if possible, more interesting and valuable than ever. And you may rightly conclude that it to the Provinces, where it already has so many susscribers and friends, to quadruple its circulation. For who will fail to embrace THIS UNPARALLELED OFFER? A FAMILY CYCLOPÆDIA FREE.—Any person subscribing to the American Agriculturist (English or German) for 1885, whose subscription is promptly forwarded to us, together with the subscription price, $1.50 per year, and 15 cents extra for packing and postage on the Cyclopædia—making $1.65 in all—will receive the American Agriculturist for 1885, and be presented with the AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST FAMILY CYCLOPÆDID, just out, 700 PAGES 1,000 ENGRAVINGS.

IS COMING

TWO MONTHS FREE.—Every new subscriber (and only new ones), who promptly forwards his subscription in accordance with these conditions, can have his year's subscription date from March next, receiving free the numbers of the American Agriculturist for January and February

TWO MAGNIFICENT ENGRAVINGS FREE.—Every such subscriber will also be presented, post-paid with the magnificent plate Engravings "In the Meadow," and "Foes or Friends," of which over eighty thousand have been sent for by our subscribers.

CYCLOPÆDIA, ENGRAVINGS, AND A DICTIONARY FREE.—To any one promptly forwarding us the name of a new subscriber to the American Agriculturist with $2 we will send Webster's Practical Dictionary, just out 600,000 words, 1,400 illustrations, while to the new subscriber we will send the American Agriculturist 1885, and also the Family Cyclopædia, post free. Furthermore, on receipt of fifteen cents extra, (making $2.15 in all), in this case for packing and postage, we will forward the two engravings, "In the Meadow," and "Foes or Friends," to the sender of the subscription, or to the subscriber himself, as we may be directed. Mention the offers in writing.

Send six cents (stamps), for mailing you specimen American Agriculturist; forth page Premium List, with two hundred illustrations; specimen pages of Cyclopædia and Dictionary, and full descriptions of the Engravings presented.

Canvassers Wanted Everywhere.

Address PUBLISHERS AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

DAVID W. JUDD, Pres't. SAM'L BURNHAM, Sec.

751 Broadway, New York.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP

NOTICE is hereby given that the partnership which has for some time past been carried on by Samuel Sarjeant and Robert Burnside, under the firm of Sarjeant & Burnside, at the village of Markdale, in the County of Grey, as butchers, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

As witness our hands this 24th day of February, A.D. 1885.

S. SARJEANT,
R. BURNSIDE.

Witness—C. W. RUTLEDGE.

P. S.—The business will be carried on in the premises occupied by the late firm in Markdale, by the undersigned, to whom all accounts and debts due the said firm must be paid, and all liabilities owing by said firm will be paid by him.

SAMUEL SARJEANT.

SINGLE copies of the STANDARD 5 cents each.

THE MACKAY ROMANCE.

The Poor Nevada Woman whose Daughter has Just Wedded the Prince Colonna.

Some twenty odd years ago there dwelt in California a family of three persons, father, mother, and daughter. The latter was a mere child. All were young. The father was a physician. Unfortunately he injured his not very extensive practice by intemperance. His habits became so dissipated that the poor wife, despairing of his reformation, and also of the possibility of independent action on her own part to secure support for herself and child, proposed a separation. The man agreed to it; but he was not put out like Rip Van Winkle. He was assured that while he lived she would never cease to help him, and that when he mended his ways their old relations should be restored. He departed to cure himself, if possible, and become worthy of the woman who, sorely beset, undertook the maintenance of the family. Encouraged by his wife's prayers, letters, and heroic conduct, the doctor redeemed himself. At least he thought so, and his poor wife was more than willing to believe it. He returned to her home and heart, warmly welcomed back to both. Unluckily, he had either miscalculated his will power, or the demon of indulgence was simply asleep, and by no means dead within him. He went back to his cups, and very soon the skeleton finger of poverty was laid upon his domestic affairs. The devoted wife, unwilling to undertake an experimental separation, and unable to remain where she was, determined to try what change of scene would do for this miserable man who naturally kind, talented, and wholesome, seemed to be insanely abandoned to the devil of strong drink. Just at this crisis rumors had reached California of the Comstock lode discovery, and thither many of the mining population drifted. Across the Sierras to Virginia City this little and most wretched family journeyed.

The doctor pulled himself together for a while and did some business, but his health was gone, and very soon he died. Widow and orphans were left in the very depths of poverty. The generous miners had clubbed together to bury the doctor. They made up a purse for the mother and child from time to time, and thus saved both from utter deprivation of food, shelter, and raiment. There was at that time, superintendent of one of the mines, a sturdy young Irishman, who, from the lowest rounds of the ladder, had begun to push his way to fortune. He was not then more than moderately well off, and little dreamed of the Monte Cristo casket in store for him. He used to carry the weekly or monthly stipend to the widow, and his visits to her became more and more frequent. At last he married her, and her days of fear on the score of poverty were over. She possessed a well-to-do husband, who was the master of his possessions, and certain to make his way in the world. But in the days of distress the unhappy woman had resorted to the morphine habit, and could not, of her own effort, release herself from it. A young physician at Virginia City, who had recently graduated in France, informed her that if she would visit Paris and put herself implicitly under the care of his old master there, her cure could be guaranteed. While the husband remained to uncover, with the present junior Senator from Nevada, the richest silver deposit the world has ever known, the wife crossed the seas and submitted to a rigorous medical treatment. It was successful after many months of endurance. Meanwhile, the famous California and Consolidated Virginia mines were penetrated by the husband, and the world-renowned bonanza, of which he was principal owner, made him at least forty times a millionaire. The wife in Paris, now perfectly cured and blooming, at once rose into prominence and celebrity, for how could the marvel-loving Parisians help adoring a woman whose talents and beauty were matched by such fabulous wealth so romantically discovered. For years this lady, who is no other than Mrs. John Mackey, has been a silver queen in the most splendid capital of Europe She has lived in palaces. Noblemen and men of genuis have paid court at her shrine.

Now all Paris and therefore all the universe, is in a ferment over the approaching marriage of Miss Mackey and the Prince Colonna. The drift is nuptially to Rome, the city of the soul, and to Italian nobility. It is a miraculous bridging of the chasm that lies between the mining gulch of the Nevada Mountains and St. Peter's Church, where stands in supernal splendor, "the grandest dome that mortal hand has painted against God's loveliest sky." Little did the widow of the wretched doctor of Virginia City imagine that she would fairly roll in wealth, dwell in palaces, be courted by Church and State, be familiarly associated with the proudest names of the descendants of the crusaders, and finally become the mother-in-law of a Prince Colonna, whose nobility dates back almost to the time of Saladin. The family name is as famous as any in history, and the heir of the Colonna family is, at 27 years of age, to wed the daughter of the poor doctor who fell by the wayside in Nevada, and sleeps his last sleep in that stony desert.

She Wasn't so Covetous as That.

"I wish I had a new silk dress like Mrs. Jones bought yesterday," said Mrs. Smith to her husband.

"Growing covetous?" asked Smith, dryly. "You should remember, my dear, the commandment: Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor his ass—"

"I wasn't coveting another husband, I'd have you know!" said Mrs. Smith, with a mischievous smile.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS.

The Late Governor-General on the National Life of Canada and the United States.

An article from the pen of Lord Lorne, published in the New York Tribune, is very interesting. The following are some of its leading features: The relations between Canada and the United States seem to realize the conditions favorable to progress and peace in the harmless rivalry of two kindred people. It has fallen to the lot of the Canadians to occupy the northern belt of the great continent named after Amerigo. It is a tract of country possessing in the central portion magnificent lands, and having in the eastern regions areas comparable to those first settled by the Puritan leaders in New England. It is a region likely from its climate to breed a race of great physical power. "Tis the hard gray weather breeds hard Englishmen," said Charles Kingsley, and the descendants of Norman and Saxon show after many generations in Canada that the blood is by no means deteriorated by the bracing and pure air of their new northern home. To be sure these "blameless hyperboreans" have beyond their habitations which stretches away to the countries of the midnight sun and the o'erarching glow of the auroral light. But if Canada has parts too cold for our race, the United States has parts too warm. The cotton harvest is more popular in the markets than is the "ice crop," but the "Kanucks" have enough, and more than enough, in territory under an excellent climate to make them a nation strong in political power. The purchase of Alaska has given the authorities of Washington an opportunity to show their good will by helping the British Columbians to keep order among the coast Indians. On the northern boundary river the territories of the two countries are so dovetailed that a rectification of the line is needful, because prisoners to justice are obliged to be taken across places where an escape would mean freedom under international laws. Here the old Indian depredator has almost disappeared, but the white ruffian, the whiskey smuggler and the horse stealer represent the criminal classes, and these gentlemen ply their vocation along the whole prairie frontier until

THE EVER FROZEN EARTH

WE ARRIVE AT MANITOBA.

An agreement between our Government is needed to make these disturbers of the public peace amenable to law and extraditable. The frontier once crossed gives them protection for their persons. Obligations recognized by international law have been observed to the letter by the United States government in the matter of attempted Fenian raids, although the complication of legal procedure and the power of the Irish vote have sometimes made action tardy and engendered expense. The treaty in regard to the Atlantic fisheries has for a period of years opened to American industry the northern banks. A mixed commission might determine what local laws are worthy of being maintained in the common interest of all who wish to use the fisheries. With the Canadians a wholly new world has been opened. The young men of the present time allow no one to take any prominent part in public life who displays a tendency which is considered that of a dastard to his country's hopes.

Some indeed speak of independence, and that party would be larger if the wiser did not know that premature independence would mean absorption of the rising nationality. The Canadian Government is a crowned democracy. It provides for a most perfect and rapid representation of the national will in parliament. Look where you will through the long list of national communities in ancient or modern times, you will find none that have made a fairer use of their opportunities than have the Canadians. They have made known to themselves the marvellous territories they possess, and they feel that the only strength they now need is a fair field and the favor for a time of the mighty empire whose history is their own, and future story shall yet be theirs also when their sons shall call their country the strong ally of the old mother of free peoples.

SERMONS IN SHORT.

Home is the rainbow of life.

Without a rich heart wealth is an ugly beggar.—Emerson.

The greatest homage we can pay to truth is to use it.—Emerson.

The Lord intends that our wealth shall be our servant, not our master.

If men are so wicked with religion, what would they be without it.—Franklin.

The human heart is like heaven—the more angels the more room.

Hundreds of people can talk for one who can think, but thousands can think for one who can see.

Value the friendship of him who stands by you in the storm, swarms of insects will surround you in the sunshine.

If thou wouldst attain to thy highest, go look upon a flower; what that does willingly, that do thou willingly.

When worthy men quarrel, only one of them may be faulty at the first; but, if strife continue long, commonly both become guilty.—T. Fuller.

No man has ever lived a right life who has not been chastened by a woman's love strengthened by her courage, and guided by her discretion.—Ruskin.

All impatience of monotony, all weariness of best things, even, are but signs of the eternity of our nature, the broken human fashions of the divine everlastingness.—G. Macdonald.

JEWELS OF THE ORIENT.

Three Bushels of Diamonds Found Inside a Barbarian Idol.

The history of jewels in the east is the history of the governing princes, for so often has the course of history in the orient been affected by intrigues about precious stones that they assume a state importance. The traditional diamond in the east is the Great Mogul The original weight of this stone was 787 carats, but by cutting it was reduced to 297 carats. The stone disappeared at the last Tartar invasion, when treasures to the value of $350,000,000 were captured by Nadir Shah. It is believed to be at present hidden away in some obscure fortress in Asia Minor, and it may be recovered at some future time.

Some idea of the abundance of precious stones in the east may be gained from the fact that when Mahmoud, in the eleventh century, captured Sumnat, an idol statue was broken open and found to contain three bushels of diamonds, rubies, and emeralds. Ala-ud-Deen obtained from the rajah of Marattus fifty pounds of diamonds and rubies and 175 pounds of pearls. Shah Jehan, the greatest of the mogul sovereigns, left a treasure of incalculable value at his death, a throne valued at $30,000,000 and a crown worth $12,000,000 The throne was the celebrated peacock throne, so called from the images of two peacocks which stood before it, each made of precious stones so matched in color and position as to resemble the natural colors of the bird.

The throne was six feet long and four feet wide, of solid gold, and crusted with diamonds, rubies, and emeralds. Steps of silver led up to it, while a canopy of gold, fringed with pearls, supported by twelve pillars emblazoned with gems, surmounted the whole. On each side was a sacred umbrella made of velvet, embroidered with pearls, the handle being of gold, inlaid with diamonds. It was the most costly work of art ever made. Its only rival was the cerulean throne of the house of Bahmenee, in the Nizam. This was built in the seventeenth century, was nine feet long by three feet wide, was made of ebony, covered with plates of gold, crusted with gems, and was valued at $20,000,000.

A late traveler gives an account of the magnificence of the Persian crown jewels. In the jewel-room he found treasures valued at $35,000,000, among them the crown, a mass of diamonds surmounted by a ruby as big as a hen's egg. The king's belt is a wonder of barbaric magnificence, weighing about twenty pounds, and composed of a solid mass of diamonds, rubies, and emeralds. As Persia is the native land of the turquoise, it is but natural that the finest stone of this discription is to be found in its collection. This royal specimen is four inches long, perfect in color, and without a flaw. When the shah was in Europe, some years ago, he wore a variety of diamonds and other precious stones that kept the detectives in a constant fever of fear lest he should be robbed of some of them, for one, even of the smallest, would have been a fortune for a half-dozen thieves. The buttons of his coat were five in number, and each button was a diamond larger than the Kohinoor, while every part of his clothing seemed to be useful, not as a covering for his body, but as places to hang diamonds on.

Lincoln's Great Strength.

A writer in the New York Times records an incident in the life of Abraham Lincoln as follows:

I have chanced upon a new anecdote of Abraham Lincoln, or one that is new to me, at least. The Hon. Allen Francis, United States Consul at St. Thomas, Can., tells it to me. The first daily newspaper in Illinois was Mr. Francis'. He and Mr. Lincoln were fast friends in their early manhood, and he tells many anecdotes illustrative of the simple life and manly career of the future President ere he was called to responsibility and fame.

Lincoln was the local athlete beyond compare. In leaping, running, wrestling, boxing, swimming, in every rural sport, he was at the head. One winter night young Francis and Lincoln went sleighing. Into an ice covered slough went the horse, to flounder deeper and deeper at each attempt to extricate himself. Out jumped the young men to the rescue. Breaking the ice from around the legs of the sunken animal they prepared to place their shoulders under the horse's body to lift him out. But before Francis was fairly in position Lincoln had shot his head and shoulders between his steed's forelegs, and with a tremendous effort had raised the heavy, helpless body high and dry to a firm foothold. "It was a task for a half-dozen men," comments the venerable Consul as he recounts the incident, and affirms that in all things that go to make up the best manhood Abraham Lincoln was pre-eminently blessed.

Her Hint was Taken.

"George," said a country young lady to her beau as they snuggled into a seat, "it's nice to ride on the cars, aint it?"

"Yes, Safah."

"George, if you were going to travel a long ways on the cars, where would you rather go?"

"To Chicago, or California. Where would you rather go?"

"To Florida, by all means."

"Why?"

"Be—because, you know, George, because—because in Florida they have so many orange blossoms, you know."

On the return trip they sat still closer together, and she laid her pretty head upon his big shoulder. He must have taken the hint.

WHO IS THE COUNTESS?

A Gilded Parisian Lady Rescues a Beggar from Starvation.

An incident happened recently on the Quai des Invalides. It is 5:30 in the evening. Not a carriage can be seen. All was silent and deserted. The countess' coupe approaches; the trot of the two steppers can hardly be heard on the muddy pavement. The coupe stops. The countess alights and walks a short distance.

She is soon accosted, without having seen him coming, by a person who asks for alms. At that hour, in this deserted corner of Paris, she naturally believes him to be an imposter and continues her promenade without replying. The man follows close behind, reiterating his tearful appeals, that refrain familiar with all professional beggars. She remains silent.

"Then nothing is left for me but to die," groans the individual, and, running to the bridge of the Invalides, which is only one hundred feet distant, he climbs over the parapet and throws himself into the Seine. The countess hears the noise made by the body as it strikes the water. She in turn runs the distance, throws off her hat and shawl, and in the darkness plunges headlong into the murky water, in which the poor unfortunate, already exhausted, is struggling feebly a few arm's length off. She seizes him, drags him out of the water, hoists him up the steps, stretches him on the ground, makes sure that he is safe and sound, slips 100 francs into his hand, and returns to her coupe. She is freezing, her wet garments cling to her form, her teeth chatter. The horses are driven at a gallop to her residence.

The same evening, accompanied by her husband, the countess was present at a grand ball. Nobody knew, nobody suspected that two or three hours previous she had risked her life to save a beggar, under circumstances from which every other woman would have shrunk. As usual, she was radiant in her glorious loveliness—even more beautiful, perhaps, from the reflections of her great heart, which shone in her eyes, and wearing on her brow, with the diamonds of her coronet, a more precious crown.

The countess is one of three young, pretty, and fair-haired countesses whose grace society admires, whose beauty it extols, and whose illustrious name it honors.

Young, pretty, and fair—fairer to-day than ever. Can't you guess her name?—[Paris Gaulois.

An Antidote for Cholera.

A discovery has been made in regard to cholera, namely, that marriage is a prophylactic so far as men are concerned. Recent statistics of the cholera in France show that married men are much less liable to be attacked by cholrea than bachelors. In a population of 100,000 men between the ages of 25 and 50, 51 unmarried men died of cholera while only 18 married men fell victims to the disease. Between the ages of 30 and 35 the mortality from cholera was 78 among bachelors and 21 among married men, and between the ages of 50 and 55, 167 unmarried men and only 37 married men died. It is thus evident that in time of cholera the married man has more than three times as many chances of life as the unmarried man has.

No attempt has been made to explain this remarkable fact, but it is not, on the whole, difficult of explanation. The married man lives in circumstances much more favorable to health than those in which the bachelor lives. For instance, his food is better, for he has a wife to look after it, and in many cases he buys his meat, his groceries and his vegetables himself, whereas the unmarried man daily risks his digestion at restaurants or trifles recklessly with it at boarding-house tables. The married man's linen and sheets are properly aired, and he is made to change his clothing when the weather changes, to wear rubber overshoes and to go to bed at reasonable hours, whereas the bachelor has no one to see that he is properly clothed, and that he does not risk his health by keeping unholy hours.

If a calm frame of mind and an absence of nervous dread contribute to exemption from cholera, the married man is peculiarly fortunate. In cholera time the moment the nervous bachelor feels the slightest pain he begins to fancy that he may have contracted the cholera, and he ends by frightening himself into a genuine attack. On the other hand, when a married man has a pain he mentions it to his wife, who instantly replies: "Stuff and nonsense! You've no more got the cholera than I have. Why, I've just such a pain every day in the week," whereupon the married man is encouraged and consoled, and straightway forgets the cholera. In case he really has symptoms of the disease his wife promptly sends for the doctor and compels her husband to keep quiet and take the proper remedies, but the unfortunate bachelor who is smitten with cholera, sees himself deserted by frightened servants, and is left to die or recover by himself.

Some dwelling houses in Antwerp are to be lighted by electric glow lamps, the current for which is to be conveyed from the generating station by a system of underground wires.

Dr. W. Huggins has been awarded the gold medal of the Royal Astronomical Society, London, for his researches regarding the motion of the stars in the line of sight, and for his photographic spectra of the stars and comets. On a former occasion he and Dr. Miller received this medal for researches in astronomical physics in 1861.

FIGHTING WITH KNIVES.

The Champion of Europe Beats the Knife Stabber of Sicily.

Capt. Charles Englebrecht of Denmark, who says he is champion of all Europe, and Marcus San Antonius, styled champion of Sicily, make a specialty of fighting with knives. They agreed to have it out for the championship of America and the world, and 300 men and one woman went to Gardendon Hall, New York, on a recent night to see them do it. About half of the crowd were Germans, and the remainder Italians, with a sprinkling of sporting men.

The heroes of the evening wore blue shirts and white trousers Antonius, the Italian, wore a blue scarf, and was very big and black, with a fierce eye, false black beard, false mustache, false eyebrows, and false hair. He looked as through he must win, and the Italians greeted him warmly. Engelbrecht, on the contrary, was small, with a faint yellow mustache, and a broad, bald spot. But he walked with a step so catlike and wiry, and gazed with such indifference at his adversary's proportions, that the Germans took heart and applauded enthusiastically. Ned Mallahan announced that the men were to stab five rounds, and endeavor to pierce "the heart" of the other. The round was to conclude when the heart was pierced or at the end of five minutes.

Each man put on an ordinary fencing mask, and padded fencing gloves. A thickly padded plastron was strapped over each man's chest, and over the heart was fastened a small round box, like a blueing box, which would yield blood when pierced. It was called the heart. A small brass buckle fastened on the left forearm, and a steel knife, twelve inches long, with dull edges and padded point completed the outfit. Ned Mallahan said "Time," advised the public to keep its eye on the "bladders," and the men went at it.

First they stretched their arms and legs far apart, to get their muscles in working order. Then they stamped their feet with a loud bang, and drew nods of approval from Matsada Sorakichi, who does the same thing himself. Engelbrecht edged around cautiously, eying the Italian's heart, and Antonius, when he saw a good chance, jumped forward and stabbed. He was met half way, and the shields clashed and banged beneath the rapid thrusts for nearly a minute. The men drew back to breathe and the crowd howled.

Then the stabbing and clashing began all over again. The men jumped backward and forward six or eight feet at a time, and showed so much strength and agility that even the boxers admitted there was something in it. At the end of five minutes both men were dripping with perspiration, and their patriotic backers were purple with enthusiasm. Ned Mallahan shouted: "No bladder bust yet," and ordered the men to their corners.

The second round was like the first, except that the men stabbed at each other more viciously, and their knives glancing off the small bucklers landed on the men's windpipes in a very painful way. This and the next round were finished without the heart being reached. Each had been disarmed once, and the honors were even.

But Engelbrecht was beginning to show that he was the better man. His knife thrusts were as rapid as the sting of a wasp, and he seemed to be all over the stage at once. Now doubled up to jab his knife under Antonius' guard, and now leaping into the air to strike down and over the shield. In the middle of the fourth round he made a feint and grabbed both of his adversary's wrists. A fierce struggle followed, and Antonius got away with his heart still safe. But Engelbrecht was after him, and, flourishing his knife in every conceivable direction, he deceived the wary Italian, and with a final thrust, landed his knife in the middle of his adversary's heart.

That closed the round, with Engelbrecht ahead, and the Germans were wild in their joy. The Italians objected to the German applause, and loudly advocated throwing the fat German, who led it, out of the room. Policemen's clubs restored order, and the last round began.

Antonius knew it was his only hope, and fought all he knew how. But Engelbrecht did his best also, and would not be beaten. He disarmed the Italian twice, thus increasing the advantage already gained.

No more hearts had been pierced at the end of the round, and the match, championship, gate money, and receipts went to the Danish champion. The Germans who had read his name were much surprised to learn that he was no German.

Home should be made the dwelling place for souls rather than a mere lodging place for bodies.

Prof. Li Shan-lan, who died at Pekin a few months ago, was the greatest mathematician that China has produced within the present century. Western mathematicians define a point as to that which has no parts and no magnitude—that a point is mere position without magnitude. Li Shan-lan took exception to this definition, maintaining that a point must be an infinitesimally small cube.

Dr. T. D. Phipson finds that in grapes grown out of doors the production of sugar first occurs in the periphery, and gradually extends inward as the Autumn advances, while the organic acids disappear. These acids remain to the last in the pulp around the seeds, where they act as antiseptics until the moment arrives for the seed to fall and germinate. At this moment only is the greater portion of organic acid replaced around the seed by sugar.

GHTING WITH KNIVES.

hampion of Europe Beats the Stabber of Sicily.

Charles Englebrecht of Denver, ys he is champion of all Europe, arcus San Antonius, styled champ Sicily, make a specialty of fight- h knives. They agreed to have it the championship of America and rld, and 300 men and one woman o Gardendon Hall, New York, on t night to see them do it. About the crowd were Germans, and the der Italians, with a sprinkling of g men.

heroes of the evening wore blue nd white trousers Antonius, the wore a blue scarf, and was very black, with a fierce eye, false eard, false mustache, false eye- and false hair. He looked as h he must win, and the Italians him warmly. Engelbrecht, on trary, was small, with a faint yel- tache, and a broad, bald spot. walked with a step so catlike and d gazed with such indifference at ersary's proportions, that the Ger- ok heart and applauded enthusi- y. Ned Mallahan announced that n were to stab five rounds, and en- to pierce "the heart" of the other, nd was to conclude when the as pierced or at the end of five s.

man put on an ordinary fencing and padded fencing gloves. A padded plastron was strapped over an's chest, and over the heart was a small round box, like a blueing which would yield blood when It was called the heart. A rass buckle fastened on the left , and a steel knife, twelve inches th dull edges and padded point ed the outfit. Ned Mallahan ime," advised the public to keep n the "bladders," and the men it.

they stretched their arms and legs t, to get their muscles in working Then they stamped their feet ud bang, and drew nods of ap- rom Matsada Sorakichi, who does e thing himself. Engelbrecht round cautiously, eying the heart, and Antonius, when he od chance, jumped forward and

He was met half way, and the lashed and banged beneath the rusts for nearly a minute. The w back to breathe and the crowd the stabbing and clashing began again. The men jumped back- d forward six or eight feet at a d showed so much strength and hat even the boxers admitted s something in it. At the end of utes both men were dripping with ion, and their patriotic backers ple with enthusiasm. Ned Mal- houted: "No bladder bust d ordered the men to their cond round was like the first, ex- the men stabbed at each other iously, and their knives glancing mall bucklers landed on the men's s in a very painful way. This next round were finished without rt being reached. Each had rmed once, and the honors were ngelbrecht was beginning to show was the better man. His knife ere as rapid as the sting of a d he seemed to be all over the nce. Now doubled up to jab under Antonius' guard, and now to the air to strike down and hield. In the middle of the und he made a feint and grabbed is adversary's wrists. A fierce followed, and Antonius got away Fears still safe. But Engel- s after him, and, flourishing his very conceivable direction, he he wary Italian, and with a t, landed his knife in the mid- adversary's heart.

sed the round, with Engel- d, and the Germans were wild y. The Italians objected to the plause, and loudly advocated he referee man, who led it, out m. Policemen's clubs restored the last round began.

s knew it was his only hope, t all he knew how. But it did his best also, and would ten. He disarmed the Italian increasing the advantage al- d.

hearts had been pierced at the ound, and the match, cham- ate money, and receipts went ish champion. The Germans d his name were much sur- arn that he was no German.

hould be made the dwelling uls rather than a mere lodging odies.

Shan-lan, who died at Pekin a s ago, was the greatest math- at China has produced within century. Western mathema- e a point as to that which has d no magnitude—that a point ition without magnitude. Id ok exception to this definition, that a point must be an in- small cube.

Phipson finds that in grapes f doors the production of su- curs in the periphery, and tends inward as the Autumn while the organic acids disap- e acids remain to the last in und the seeds, where they septics until the moment ar- seed to fall and germinate. ent only is the greater por- ic acid replaced around the r.

FOR THE FARMER.

About Churning.

Many questions are asked in regard to trouble in churning. The main trouble with those inquirers is that they do not use a thermometer. To attempt to regulate the temperature at which the butter should come without the use of the thermometer is like trying to sail across the Atlantic without the aid of a compass. True, some people do churn, and have always done so, without a thermometer, but they do not belong to that class which sell at the highest prices. To churn properly, the work should be done at a temperature of sixty-two to sixty-five degrees, and if this is done there will be less complaint about foaming of milk, and the delay of the butter coming. If the temperature is too low add warm water to raise it; if too high, use cold water. It is a simple matter, but without a thermometer no degree of temperature will be known. Another fault is to churn too rapidly. Butter requires time, and the work must not be done with too much of a rush. It is done when the globules appear, and should not be worked too much afterward, although it should be well separated from the buttermilk. By all means get a dairy thermometer, which will only cost you fifty cents, and use it summer and winter, even though your grandmother did not use one.

Poultry Suggestions.

If they are cared for, and always have clean, wholesome quarters and not crowded, poultry will always be healthy. If a fowl merely acts a little "cranky," do not imagine that it is sick, and commence stuffing with drugs; simply remove it to a pen some distance from the flock, and let it alone a few days. If it proves to be very sick, chop off its head and burn it. For cholera, a strong solution of hyposulphite of soda, given three times a day, in teaspoonful doses, is probably the best remedy we have. For gapes, dip a feather in turpentine, and insert it into the windpipe. One application will generally cure; two are sometimes necessary. Dip scaly legs in kerosene two or three times. A little sulphur mixed with the food once a week in winter, prevents packing of the crop, and irregularities of the bowels, caused by over-eating, and the constant production of eggs. Gravel and coarse sand are necessary for the digestion of food. Crushed bones, old plaster, lime, etc., are necessary for the formation of egg-shells. Cayenne pepper in small quantities, mixed with the food occasionally during the winter, promotes egg-laying.

Fifty hens will eat and trample down half as much grass, if yarded upon it, as will keep a cow. A coop of small chicks in the garden will destroy an enormous number of bugs and worms. Do not permit your poultry to forage upon your neighbor's farm; it is a mean, contemptible trick, and often practised by men who would resent it if accused of petty thievery. Ducks and geese prefer to have their nests on the ground; some will not lay anywhere else Place their nests in rows along one side of the house, and separate them with thin board partitions.

Live Stock Notes.

This is a trying month for live stock, and they will need extra care until the pastures produces sufficient herbage. All animals should be kept from exposure to the long, cold storms. We have seen many flocks and herds that were obliged to be in deep mud continuously through the spring. The yards should be properly drained, and the floors of the sheds and feeding-rooms kept dry. Horses have hard work at this season, and need to be fed and groomed accordingly. Much depends upon the driver; let him be patient and gentle. Fretting horses are never doing their best. Milch cows thrive when kept clean and fed with an abundance of wholesome food. Let the milking be done by careful hands, otherwise new cows will be spoiled, and old ones dried off. Early lambs, with their dams, need warm pens. As the days grow warmer, the ticks get more active. Dip the infected sheep in one of the preperations sold for the purpose. For lice on calves, pigs and fowls, nothing is better than grease or kerosene. Speak now for June pigs. Give brooding hens clean nests, with food close at hand. Be an "early bird" in the spring.—[American Agriculturist.

Prepare for the Hatching Season.

The time is now approaching for the interested poultryman and the thrifty farmer who thinks, and righly, that fowls properly managed, are good paying stock on the farm, to make preparations for the annual setting of eggs and hatching of chickens. It will not be well for those having no warm place for the young chicks, to attempt hatching before the first of March or the first of April. Pullets coming out at this time lay in October, and with good care, will continue to lay all winter, when eggs are scarce and high, and cockerels will bring more for boilers at three months old than when raised later and kept much longer. Keep watch of your flocks, so that the difference in their dispositions can be noted. Use only those hens for sitters that are quiet and not inclined to be nervous, for they will invariably make surer hatchers, and better mothers. A hen that is uneasy and wants to be off the nest frequently during incubation, especially in the cold weather of spring, should not be depended on.

Provide the hens with large, flattish nests, and place whole corn and fresh water each day near them. It is most necessary to keep the nest and body of the fowl free from vermin, for if they are not they will not sit quietly, and labor and eggs are lost. It cannot be expected that success will follow attempts at hatching and raising chickens, unless the hens have been kept in a vigorous and thrifty condition during the winter. Filth causes weakness and breeds disease, and the product, if any, of a slovenly kept flock of fowls, will always be weak and unprofitable in the extreme.

AGRICULTURAL ITEMS.

A two-year-old native heifer, owned by Mr. John Donovan, Ipswich, Mass., is reported to have given milk between January 15 and Dec. 1, 1884, which made 454½ pounds of butter.

Discussing the manufacture of bone-dust, Prof. J. Konig shows that when bones, previous to grinding, are freed from fats by treatment with benzol, they are purified from ingredients which have no agricultural value.

"Neutral Stock" is the term a Chicago rendering establishment applies to its lard, which is prepared and sold for making country butter. "Imitation creamery" we presume, is the name the mixture will take on when it gets to the counter of the retail grocer.

Professor H Monk, a worker of some eminence in agricultural chemistry, says that moderate muscular exercise on the part of cows increases the yield of milk, but that violent motion hinders the process of milk secretion. Dairy farmers may turn his remarks to profit.

It is now asserted that the common earthworm is the cause of the gape parasite in chicks. In examining earth-worms from a gape-infected district the gape parasite was found to be coiled up in the structure of the earth-worm, and on feeding chicks with such earth-worms the disease was at once produced among the brood.

Probably as curious an article of export as is often carried in an ocean steamer was lately taken out to New Zealand. It consisted of a consignment of "bumble-bees." At present clover does not "seed" in that country, though it grows readily, because there are no bumble-bees to fertilize the flowers. The importer hopes that the bumble-bees will save him $5000 a year in clover seed.

For quality, the Polled Angus; for early maturity and size, the Shorthorn; for grass beef, the Hereford; for general utility, the Devon; for butter, the Jersey; for milk, the Holestein; for cheese, the Ayrshire; for cold, the Galloway; for heat, the Brahma, and for starvation, the Texas. This is the way it was put by an old dealer and breeder to the Texas Live Stock Journal.

Dr. Dio Lewis says that some years ago he laid a thousand feet of paper pipe, two inches in diameter, to convey water from a spring to his house and barn in the country. It has never leaked, and has never imparted any perceptible taste to the water. This pipe is made of strong paper wound into pipe form and thoroughly soaked in tar. It becomes so hard and strong that it will bear a pressure almost equal to iron.

Mr. F. M Wilson, of Selma, O., is quoted by the National Stockholder as believing that the prevailing idea that sheep require more ventilation than other stock, is largely erroneous. He especially cautions against such ventilation as will produce a draught. "They had better be out of doors than in a house with a draught through it." And he believes that such exposure is what produces "stiffness" in sheep that are housed at night

The Aylesbury, England, dairy farmers have been sending milk made from cows fed on ensilage, to a milk condensing factory, and the company find so much trouble with the milk that when the time for making new contracts comes round, milk will be refused that is made by cows fed on ensilage. The New York State condensing factories have had a similar experience, yet ensilage milk is pronounced by the city milk peddlers as of the very best quality.

From a summary of auction sales of pedigree cattle compiled by the Breeder's Gazette, it appears that 7500 passed under the hammer in 1884, bringing a total of $1,880,000, or, say, $250 a head for all ages. Shorthorns brought $200 each; Herefords, $376; Polled Angus, $376; Galloways, $312; Holsteins, $264; Jerseys, $314. With all the breeds, the prices, at private sale, were firm during the year, in spite of financial depression and the outbreak of contagious disease.

Grafting Frog's Flesh into Human.

A new use for the frog has been discovered. A medical correspondent of the London Lancet says that, finding the treatment of granulating wounds by skin grafting is in country practice liable to fall into disuse through the unwillingness of patients to part with the little bit of skin necessary, he has lately been induced to try experiments with other substances as a substitute for human grafts. As the outcome of these experiments he finds that bits of skin from a decapitated frog make grafts which admirably answer all purposes, forming a source of supply always at hand in the country except during the winter months, and being easily applied on account of their uniform thickness, and necessitating no pain to suffering humanity. The skin of a single frog yields grafts for an enormous extent of surface and preserves its vitality so long that if the patient is at a distance the portion of skin required can be carried by the surgeon in his pocket for an hour or more without injury, provided it is wrapped in waterproof tissue to prevent drying.

The Koorbash of Egypt.

Three Arabs, escorted by two guards, are led before the prefect. These unfortunates seem to belong to the poorest of the people; their feet are bare, their clothes are worn and ragged, their hands tremble convulsively, their eyes are haggard and their faces twitch in apprehension as they listen in mournful silence to the words addressed to them by the prefect. After the exchange of a few words, two of the prisoners are led from the room Then five men enter. These are the torturers, and nothing more fell or hang-dog than their looks can be imagined. Four of them seize the Arab that is still standing before the prefect, and the poor wretch, as he is cast upon the ground, throws at him a glance eloquent with agony and fear; but the great man's countenance remains fixed and impassive, and he makes no sign of grace.

The victim was then placed on one of the slabs, with his chest resting on the stone, in which position he was held by two of the executioners. Two others next raised his legs until his feet were in a horizontal position, in which they were retained by means of a cord fastened to either end of a stick. Each man held the stick with one hand, while with the other he kept fast hold of the Arab's legs. In the grip of these four powerful and expert men it was impossible for him to move, and almost impossible for him to writhe. On this the fifth torturer, who had taken no part in the preliminary proceedings, came forward, holding in his hand a sort of lash consisting of five strands of twisted gut or hide. The face of this man was singularly hideous and repulsive.

He raised his arm and struck with the regularity of a pendulum the upturned feet of his helpless victim. At the fourth stroke the Arab uttered a cry of pain, and at every fresh stroke the cry was repeated. But soon the cry became a scream, the flagellated flesh visibly shuddered, and the soles were seamed with red and livid streaks. Sitting silently on my cushion, chewing mechanically the tobacco of my extinguished cigarette, I could not help shivering with horror at the sight of so much suffering. I felt as if I were under the delusion of some terrible nightmare. Osman Bey, his secretary, and the five executioners, with their stern and sinister features, looking unmoved on so cruel a sight, seemed for a moment rather the creations of a disordered imagination than being of flesh and blood, but the heavy thud of the strokes and the screams of the victim recalled me to the sad reality which I was so reluctantly witnessing. Then the punishment ceased, and the Arab, with a ghastly face and body shaken with a feverish trembling, had to incline himself respectfully before the man by whose order he had been so cruelly tormented. Helped by a guard, for his maimed and bleeding feet refused to support him, he was then led, still moaning with agony, from the torture chamber. The other two Arabs were afterwards punished in like manner. It was now past three o'clock, and his Excellency, putting on his usual pleasant smile, gave me his orders concerning the services of the police. I then saluted him and hurried away from the place where I had seen the practical application of a barbarous jurisprudence.—Hilaire Gay's Book on Egyptian Tortures.

THE LAW OF FINDING.

Circumstances Under Which the Article Belongs to the Finder.

The law of finding is this: The finder has a clear title against the whole world except the owner. The proprietor of a coach or a railroad car or of a shop has no right to demand the property or premises. Such proprietors may make regulations in regard to lost property which will bind their employes, but they cannot bind the public. The law of finding was declared by the King's Bench 100 years ago, in a case in which the facts were these:—

"A prisoner found a wallet containing a sum of money on a shop floor. He handed the wallet and contents to the shopkeeper to be returned to the owner. After three years, during which the owner did not call for his property, the finder demanded the wallet and the money from the shopkeeper. The latter refused to deliver them up on the ground that they were found on the premises. The former then sued the shopkeeper, and it was held as above set forth, that against all the world but the owner, the title of the finder is perfect. And the finder has been held to stand in the place of the owner, so that he was permitted to prevail in an action against a person who found an article which the plaintiff had originally found, but subsequently lost. The police have no special rights in regard to articles lost unless those rights are conferred by statute. Receivers of articles found are trustees for the owner or finder. They have no power in the absence of special statute to keep an article against the finder, any more than the finder has to retain an article against the owner.

BROILED GROUSE. — Use only the breasts, or fillets as they are called. Rub with butter, broil carefully, season with pepper and salt, and serve on toast with a bit of currant jelly on each fillet.

M. Herbert has sent the Academy of Sciences, Paris, a note on the earthquakes in the south of Spain. He says that these disturbances, the most serious that have been recorded within the historic period of Spain, must be attributed exclusively to local causes, and especially to the structure of the soil, which is there formed of second strata, folded, overlapped, and often traversed by old and recent eruptive rocks.

BLUNDERS IN DRUG STORES.

The Cool Impudence of Adroit Fraud Discussed.

Behind a neat prescription counter the druggist sat smoking a cigar and talking with a friend on a moist evening when business in the drug store was less brisk than usual. Complex yet faint odors from the hundreds of carefully labelled jars and bottles on the shelves mingled with the fragrance of tobacco smoke, seemed to impart a mysterious charm to the conversation. "I have made it a point for thirty years," said the druggist, "to pay strict attention to a prescription while I am compounding it, and then to drop it out of my mind entirely. That is the best way to avoid making mistakes."

A girl with a shawl over her head came in and presented a bottle and a piece of paper on which her mother had written: "Plese send 5 cents wth orinka for sore throte." He quietly poured some arnica into the bottle, pasted on a label, took the proffered nickel, and sat down to resume his talk.

"As I was saying, I always forgot a prescription as soon as I fill it. Of course it is numbered and preserved for future reference, but if one of my regular customers should ask me to put up 'some more medicine same as the last, you know,' I would have to send him home for the bottle which had the number of the prescription on it. If I had attempted to remember all the medicines I had to mix, I would soon be insane. A druggist ought to feel that when he fills a physician's order he holds the life of some person in his hand. To mistake one drug for another at such a time may cost a life. Such mistakes result from carelessness as a rule, not from ignorance, as most people think."

"Dad wants a poor-house blister," said a boy who had entered the store unobserved.

"What does he want it for?"

"To put on ma's side where he—where it pains 'er!"

"Do you mean a porous plaster?"

"Oh! yesair."

"In nine cases out of ten, I believe," the druggist said, when he had opportunity to take up the thread of his discourse again, "carlessness and not ignorance is the cause of druggists' mistakes. A druggist who knows that he is not proficient in the business will look carefully at every jar or bottle which he uses in compounding an order. An experienced druggist, unless he is a careful man, will sometimes mistake one drug for another which has a similar appearance, because he neglects to look at the label. Such errors happen more easily when a man permits his counter to become litered with drugs not wanted for immediate use. It is safer to clear the counter after each order is filled. The worst possible habit for a druggist, however, is to remember prescriptions already compounded. When a man attempts the feat of thinking about an old prescription while he is at work on an new one, he is in a fair way of committing a murderous blunder.

"Good evening, doctor."

A man with a long, thin nose, who had entered softly, waited until the druggist had walked from the prescription counter to the front before he enquired in a low tone:

"Is there any sickness in Mr. Pillboxe's family? I see his boy came in here a while ago."

"If you wish to know about Mr. Pillboxe's you had better go and ask him. I do not make a practice of retailing gossip about my customers."

"Ah! Good evening"

"There is another reason why a druggist should forget his work when it is finished," said the compounder after the inquisitive man had departed. "Such a practice enables a man to keep the confidence of customers without trouble. Nothing is more fatal to the business of a druggist than a well-founded belief among his neighbors that he will gossip about persons who buy drugs from him. It is surprising how many persons make attempts to get information from druggists about their neighbors. I have given blunt answers in such cases, and, curiously enough many of the persons who have appeared to be most offended at my refusals to give information have become regular customers of mine. In such cases the golden rule can be followed with profit as well as with pleasure."

The Gordon Type of Heroism.

Gordon's English heart or English faith did not narrow or confine him. His manhood was of the universal type. Place him in China, in Abyssinia, in the Soudan, or among English roughs, this slight, delicate, and almost effeminate-looking man became a king in whom men trusted. He is the most striking example of the universalism of the hero character in the whole range of biography. He had some force in him that was intelligible to everything that had in it the passions of a man. The world will wait long for another such career, and longer yet perhaps, for another such example of simplicity in character and in action. England has had heroes who loved duty better than life but never one before who, while he loved life little and never cared for it at all as an end, crowded its days and nights, in unpitying rigor, with the service which makes it most worth living.

Said that dapper little lawyer, Ambrose H. Purdy, yesterday: "There is a restaurant in Chatham street where I can get twenty-four kinds of meat and vegetables for fifteen cents." "How do you do that?" asked Colonel Fellows. "I order hash."

Never put blueing in babies' clothes which come next to the skin, as it causes painful chafing.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Chloroform will remove paint stains from clothes when nothing else will.

Few women realize as they might that with due care and attention, and if taken in hand promptly, most men may be trained to habits of order and neatness in the household. Try it.

Always be careful to use earthenware dishes for putting away gravies, soups, etc. Persons have been poisoned by carelessness in using for such purposes metal vessels which contained verdigris caused by the action upon the metal of vegetable acids.

Rust may be removed from steel by covering the rusted part with oil or fat, letting it remain several hours, and then wiping off with a soft cloth. Then rub with a mixture of two drachms caustic soda and four ounces opodeldoc. Leave this on ten minutes and rub off dry.

When roasting a chicken or small fowl there is danger of the legs browning or becoming too hard to be eaten. To avoid this, take strips of cloth, dip them into a little melted lard, or even just rub them over with lard, and wind them around the legs. Remove them in time to allow the chicken to brown delicately.

The "Boston Housekeeper" mentions as a cure for nervous headache a mixture made of one quart of cider, three tablespoonsful of white mustard seed, three of burdock seed, and a small horseradish root, well steeped together. To be kept in a well corked bottle and taken three times a day, one wineglass full for a dose.

The following formula is taken from the Scientific American for the benefit of those who wish to make their own baking-powder: "Powder and dry separately by gentle heat one-half pound tartaric acid, three-fourths of a pound of pure bicarbonate of soda, and three-fourths of a pound of potato farina. Mix dry, pass through a sieve, and preserve from air and moisture."

Relations of Cholera to Topographical Conditions.

No doubt can be entertained that the configuration of the earth has a cetain influence. Relative low-lying sites are very favorable to cholera. Where the surface of the earth has an undulating outline, it will be found that districts and individual houses which are situated on the summit of the undulation very frequently have no, or only a very small, disposition to the development of an epidemic of cholera, while in the hollow of the undulation under like conditions the opposite holds good. The truth of this statement is seen in single districts where parts or single houses exist on the summit and others lie low.

Another feature which is found in every epidemic is the falling off of the disease in the neighborhood of and on mountain ranges. The Himalayan Mountains, those of Lebanon, and the Alps, have always formed the places of refuge for fugitives from cholera. Now and then an epidemic occurs in the mountains; these exceptions will be dealt with later. The immunity, or the slight susceptibility of mountain ranges for cholera is witnessed in India as plainly as it is in Europe. A familiar example is the complete freedom from cholera of the hill stations along the Himalayas, in which, through frequent changes of troops, the cholera has every chance of being taken up from the plains.

In the severe epidemic of 1869 there were only two cases of cholera in 19 hill-stations. A similar experience is met with in narrower areas. For instance, in Munich, in 1871-'74, the frequency of cholera was widely different in the seven barracks of the garrison. In the low-lying Isar Kaserne (occupied by cuirassiers, heavy cavalry regiment), out of one thousand men there were forty cases of cholera; in the high-lying Max II Kaserne (with two field-artillery regiments) only three cases, and this without there being any difference in the construction of the caserns, the occupation or the diet of the men or the drinking-water.

A New Science.

One was a devotee of fashion and pleasure. The other was a pale-faced woman, whose manner displayed great energy. She held in her hand a slip of paper, with which she measured around the neck of the fair creature of fashion.

"That will do," she said.

"What! you fix my dress by measuring my neck?"

"That is all I want," was the reply.

"Dear me," said the lady, "how strange."

"Gynametry is the name of the science," said the lady with the paper measure. "The system of measuring the female figure was discovered by me after years of patient study and hard work. I was then dressmaking in Columbia, Ga., and Profs. Bartlett and Battle gave the new science the name of 'gynametry,' which is made up of the Greek words that mean female measurement. The rules, however, which apply to the female figure apply with equal and absolute force to the male figure."

"Do you mean to say that you can make any dress fit by simply measuring my neck?"

"I do, if I see you."

"And if you don't see me?"

"Then I must know the measure of your neck, the measure of your waist, and which toe is the longest?"

"Dear me! Why do you want to know which toe is the longest?"

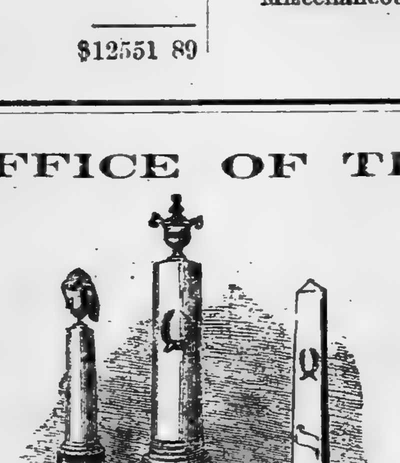
"If your big toe is longest, your shoulders are square. If your second toe is longest your shoulders are drooped, and the waist is correspondingly shorter. Drooping shoulders are those that slope from the neck outward—not stooped shoulders."—Atlanta Constitution.

ABSTRACT STATEMENT

—OF THE—

Treasurer's Receipts and Expenditure

—FOR THE—



TOWNSHIP OF GLENELG,

For the Year Ending 31st Dec., 1884.

Dr. RECEIPTS.		EXPENDITURE. Cr.
To Balance from 1883	$ 17 03	By County Rate	$3090 87
" Assessments	11424 92	" Roads and Bridges	1249 83
" License Fund	229 94	" Salaries	830 20
" Clergy Reserve	26 13	" School Monies	4363 83
" Land Improvement Fund	18 28	" Sinking Fund	1201 65
" Interest	201 55	" Interest	1200 00
" Non-Resident Tax	599 04	" Election Expences	105 00
" Miscellaneous	17 00	" Taxes Refunded	24 07
" Balance due Treasurer	18 00	" Charities	118 43
		" Printing, postage & stationery	118 33
		" Police Trustees, Markdale	200 53
		" Miscellaneous	51 25
	$12551 89		$12551 89

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenhamst, Markdale. TAILOR,

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—

Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we area not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

Burdock Blood Bitters Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice. Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the STANDARD office, Mill Street. Has a comjortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,
232-39* Markdale P. O.

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon

From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.

At prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $6 per acre, on 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country for securing Good Homes now open for settlement.

FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE—10,818,433 Acres OR MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1883, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific Country, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

NOTICE.

ALL parties indebted to me by Note or Book account, or Due-bill, are requested to settle the same at once with Adam Turner. as I must have these accounts straightened up. I can't do without the money. My books and accounts are left with him, and he is authorized to receive the money and give receipts.

T. S. SPROULE.

A RARE CHANCE.

SAW-MILL FOR SALE.

THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4¼ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill; a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.

J. A. DUNCAN,
230 tf Markdale P. O.

Live up to your engagements.

Earn money before you spend it.

Good character is above all things.

Never play at any game of chance.

Never borrow, if you can possibly avoid it.

NATIONAL PILLS act promptly upon the Liver, regulate the Bowels and as purgative are mild an thorough.

Make no hast to be rich if you would prosper.

Ever live (misfortune excepted), within your income.

DR. LOW'S WORM SYRUP has removed tape worm from 15 to 30 feet in length. It also destroys all kinds of worm.

Avoid temptation, through fear you may not withstand it.

Small and steady gains give competency with tranquility of mind.

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is highly recommended for the cure of Eruption, Chafes, Chapped hands, Pimples, Tan, &c.

When you retire to bed, think over what you have been doing during the day.

The best way to accumulate property is to buy when others want to sell, and to sell when others want to buy.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS require no other Purgative. They are safe and sure to remove all varieties of Worms.

Always speak the truth. Make few promises.

Keep good company or none. Never be idle.

NOT BAD.

It is so agreeable that even an infant will take it. For coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, asthma and bronchitis Hayarg's Pectoral Balsam is reliable for young or old.

When you speak to a person, look him in the face.

Good company and good coversation are the very sinews of virtue.

COMPELLED TO YIELD.

Obstinate skin diseases, humors of the blood, eruptions and old sores are cured by Burdock Blood Bitters, which purify and regulate all the secretions.

Your character cannot be essentially injured, except by your own acts.

If any one speaks evil of you, let your life be so that no one will believe him.

WITHOUT DOUBT.

Yellow Oil is par excellence the remedy for Pain, Lameness, Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Burns, Frost Bites, Stiff Joints and all Flesh Wounds. Any medicine dealer can furnish it.

Keep your own secrets, if you have any.

The lessons learned in youth bear fruit in maturity.

Our characters we make; our reputations are often made for us.

Conscience is the voice of the soul: the passions are the voice of the body.

GOOD ADVICE.

If our readers will accept proffered advice, they will always keep a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil at hand for use in emergencies, such as Burns, Scalds, Wounds, Lameness, Croup, Chilblains, Rheumatism, and all varieties of aches. pains and inflammations, it will ever be found reliable.

If your hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind.

The tongue which speaketh no evil is as lovely as the hand that giveth alms.

There should be less pride felt in peculiarity of employment and more in excellence of achievement.

Method implies foresight and a logical mind. A man should think of his work and arrange it beforehand.

A VOICE FROM THE UNITED STATES.

I have suffered for the last 20 years with Dyspepsia and General Debility, and tried many remedies, but with little success until I used Burdock Blood Bitters, when relief was quick and permanent. A. LOUGH, Alpena, Mich., U. S.

"I expect to pass through this world but once.

Any good thing therefore I can do, or any kindness that I can show to a human being, or any word that I can speak for the good of others—let me do it now.

Let me not neglect nor defer it, for I shall not pass this way again."

R. H. MCDONALD.

Work every [illegible] paid or unpaid; see only that you [illegible], and you cannot escape your reward.

Take care to be an economist in prosperity; there is no fear of you not being one in adversity.

It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that lobor can be made happy.

"He who would eat the kernel must crack the nut; he who would have the gain must take the pain.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

Let a man learn that everything in nature, even motes and feathers, goes by law and not by "luck," and that what he sows he reaps.

Place before children nothing but what is simple, lest you spoil their tastes; and nothing that is not innocent, lest you spoil their hearts.

It is nonsense to say that a community which has to support the widow and orphan may not control the trade which makes widows and orphans.

When a young man goes to church in the morning with a young lady, it is a sign they are engaged to be married. After they are married, he will probably take his nap at home.

A New York preacher has threatened to expel members of his church who visit the skating rink. And yet nothing will bring a man on his knees so quickly as a pair of roller skates.—Hartford Post.

Glenelg Council.

Council met in the Town Hall, Glenelg, Feb. 9th, 1885, pursuant to adjournment, all the members present the Reeve in the chair, minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed.

Communications were read from P. H. Bryce. re. Public Health Act, 1884. From Public Trustees of Markdale re appointment of pathmasters in that village.

The auditors presented their report of receipts and expenditures for the year ending 31st December, 1884.

Moved by Mr. McCuaig, seconded by Mr. Neil, that the auditors report, as revised by the council be now finally passed, and that the Clerk be instructed to get 200 copies of same printed in pamphlet form for distribution, and that the auditors be paid $5.00 each and $1.00 each for extra services in connection therewith.—Carried.

The committee appointed at last meeting to examine as to the sufficiency of the Treasurer's sureties which was adopted.

Moved by Mr. McCuaig, seconded by Mr. Neil, that the following accounts be paid, viz:—McClocklin and Nichol, repairing road scrapers, $3.00; Thos. Lauder, registration fees, $1.00; and the committee on Treasurer's sureties $2.00; each for services in connection therewith.—Carried.

By-law No. 231, appointing road commissioners. pound keepers, fence viewers, and pathmasters, and By-law No. 231, appointing Board of Health was introduced and read a first and second time.

Moved by Mr. Dunsmore, seconded by Mr. McMillan, that the Clerk be instructed to notify John Wilson to pay $19.39 to the Treasurer of Glenelg on or before the first day of March, 1885, or this Council will take legal proceedings to collect same forthwith.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McMillan, seconded by Mr. McCuaig, that By-law No. 231 be now read a third time, signed, sealed, and engrossed on the minutes.—Carried.

By-law read accordingly.

Moved by Mr Neil, seconded by Mr. Dunsmore, that John McFarlane be refunded $2.00, being charged that much for statute labor on account of error in assessment.—Carried.

By-law No. 232, appointing Thomas Davis, John S. Black, James Edge, William Douglas, and Hugh McFayden as local Board of Health, was on motion of Mr. McCuaig, seconded by Mr. McMillan, read a third time and passed.

Council adjourned till June 15th, at 10 a. m.

J. S. BLACK,
Clerk.

MR. MCCRANEY, M. P. P. for East Kent, died on Saturday at Oakville.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R.

OWEN SOUND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 18

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed
Toronto.....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	......
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	......
Charleston	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45
Orange- Arrive	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30
ville Leave	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55
Orangeville Jun.	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14
Shelburne	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05
Flesherton	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06
Markdale	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37
Owen Sound	1 09 "	10 20 "	6 30p

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed
Owen Sound	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30
Chatsworth	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25
Williamsford	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54
Markdale	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45
Orangeville Jun.	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50
Orange Arrive	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15p
ville Leave	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40
Charleston	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26
Cardwell Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03
Toronto.....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	......

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS,	DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA,	DROPSY,
INDIGESTION,	FLUTTERING OF THE HEART,
JAUNDICE.	ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH,
ERYSIPELAS,	DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
SALT RHEUM,
HEARTBURN, HEADACHE,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

FARMERS and Threshers ask your Merchants for McColl Bros. LARDINE Machine Oil.

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Sel

STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &

Which will be sold VERY CHE

I respectfully solicit the pu patronage.

198 J. PLEWES

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mi

Having made extensive improvements my Grist Mill I feel confident I can good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON H

Chopping Done Every D

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALW ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Bl Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs

9ly. M. AKITT, Euge

VOL. 5.--N

he Markdale S

issued every Thursday, at t Street, Markdale

TERMS—$1 per year in adv paid within three months. Professional and business ce and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.
hole column	$50 00
lf column	27 00
arter column	15 00
wo inch space	7 00
ree inch space	10 00

Casual advertisements 8 cen sertion, 3 cents per line ea sertion, nonpareil measure. Editorial notices, or notic n 10 cents per line first ins ch subsequents insertion. Stray animals &c., advertise , the advertisement not to es. No paper discontinued un e paid except at the aption of

JOB PRINTIN

THE STANDARD office has a s nt of poster as well as fine j l attention to orders by ed with dispatch.

C. W. RUTL

EDITOR AND PROPR

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN &

(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER &

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, taries, Conveyancers, n at lowest rates of interest Offices 16 King Stree

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER A in Chancery, Notary Pub , &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FO

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in St.; Branch office in eFarland's Store, on Friday ery week.

Creasor & Morri

BARRI SOLICITO ances, &c. &c. OFFICES in Owen Sound, D er W. F. Wolf's Store and MARKDALE er W. J. McFarland's Store d Friday of each week. Funds to lend on reasona HN CREASOR, Q. C. Du Markdale, March 15, 1882.

Alexander Bro

SSUER of Marriage Licen Life Insurance Agent. B. R. &c. Conveyancer ctioneer for the County of G rchants, and Land Sales, nded to and charges made Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880.

Wm. Brown

SSUER OF MARRIAGE L Commissioner in B. R. &c Conveyancing in all its bran ended to and carefully execu N. B.—Money to Lend on R rity.

MANSION H

MARKDA

as. Bryan, Pro

CITY HO

MARKDA

hn McAleer, -

This house is fitted up in g ed on Mill street, where the may depend on the very tion. Union bus to all trai

MARKDALE

MARKDALE,

E. Marsh,

A. HIL

Fashionable

OVER MACFARLAND'S

PERF CT FIT GUA

PRIZE. Send six cen and receive fr of goods which of either sex t ht away than anything else rtunes await the workers a once address TRUE & Co., A ADIAN ACIFIC R. R.

OWEN O UND BRANCH.
TIME TABLE.
effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.
GOING NORTH.

ATIONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed.
....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
ll Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
ston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
ville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
rne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
lk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
rton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
dle.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 39 "
nsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
worth.....	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

ATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Sound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30pm
worth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
nsford....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
dle.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
rton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
lk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
rne	7 32 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
ville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
ston.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
ll Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE USNESS, DIZZINESS, EPSIA, DROPSY,
ESTION, FLUTTERING
DICE. OF THE HEART, IPELAS, ACIDITY OF RHEUM, THE STOMACH,
T BURN, DRYNESS
ACHE, OF THE SKIN, very species of disease arising from ered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.
LBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.
FARMERS and Threshers ask your Merchants for
McColl Bros.
W GROCERY STOR
IN CONNECTION WITH es' Flour and Feed tor aving just received a cee, Fresh and Sele STOCK OF
ns.
Sugars.
Tobacco, & will be sold VERY CHE respectfully solicit the publ age.
J. PLEWES.
EUGENIA
st, Saw and Lath Mi
ing made extensive improvement st Mill I feel confident I can atisfaction.
FLOUR ALWAYS ON HA
hopping Done Every D om Sawing and Bills Filled o t notice.
BER AND LATH ALW
ON HAND.
, Butternut, White Ash, Black ood, Pine and Hemlock Logs w
M. AKITT, Eugen

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 235. MARKDALE, ONT., MARCH 12, 1885. { COPIES OF THE STANDAR FIVE CENTS EACH. }

The Markdale Standard

s issued evesy Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if ot paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch pace and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR:	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first nsertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent nsertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local col- mn 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents ach subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for , the advertisement not to exceed twelve nes.

No paper discontinued until all arrears re paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equip- ent of poster as well as fine job type. Spe- al attention to orders by mail. Orders lled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, No- taries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to oan at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyan er, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRI - -RS, SOLICITORS, CONVEY- ancers, &c. &c.
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, ver W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday nd Friday of each week.
Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
OHN CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed uctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, erchants, and Land Sales, Punctually at- ended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly tended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se urity.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situ- ted on Mill street, where the travelling pub- ic may depend on the very best accommo- dation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERF CT FIT GUARANTEED.

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the prac tice of his profession.
122-47

W. G. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHI- TECT, Markdale.
124ly

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Resi dence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market af fords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guar- anteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH
HORSE SHOEING
SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS.

MARKDALE
HARNESS EMPORIUM
ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.
THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor
Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

NOTICE.
The undersigned begs to inform the public that he has his
SAW AND SHINGLE MILL
In full operation now, and is prepared to saw all kinds of Lumber and Shingle stuff, and give you your Lumber & Shingles home with you dur- ing the winter season.
Will saw on shares or for cash.
Cash for Good Logs.
Yours truly,
W. J. ROWE,
222-3m BARR HEAD MILLS.

A DRY TIME.

When the Earth Drinks up Her Oceans.

Prof Cookley, of New York, says: Most of the planets have probably cooled down by radiation to a solid under crust like the earth. The sun owing to his greater mass is still a fiery globe not yet cooled down so as to have a solid crust. But our moon being a body of small mass only about one-eightieth of the earth's mass, is supposed to have had time to cool down to a solid globe all the way from its surface to its centre. Its internal heat is supposed to have been all radiated away into the surrounding cold space. Now the hot interior mass of the earth can, of course, contain no water, and little or none of the free gases that constitute an atmosphere. They would be boiled off, expanded and driven to the surface where are found now the great bulk of our oceans and our atmosphere. But when the earth shall have parted with all its internal heat, having thrown it into the surrounding cold space as the moon has done, then the cold, solid but porous mass within its present crust, which is now incapable of absorbing water or air, on account of the present high temperature, will begin to drink up the water and air just as the parched soil after a summer's drought drinks up the rain, and the ground is dry in a few minutes after the shower. But you may well ask, could the solid porous mass within the present crust of the earth thus drink up the whole of the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and cause all the waters of our globe to disappear? Let us examine this more closely.

While the interior of the earth remains as hot as it is at present it is no more possible for the water and air of our globe to penetrate to those fiery regions than it is for a drop of water to remain on a hot stone. But the earth is losing its heat day by day and year by year, radiating it out into the surrounding cold space. I know it has been computed that the earth receives from the sun annually just as much heat as it loses in a year by radiation into the surrounding space. Grant that it be so for the present and for many thousands of years to come. But the trouble is that the sun himself is cooling off, and, therefore, will not be always able to send us as much heat as he does at present. The time will, therefore, surely come when we shall lose more heat by radiation into space than the sun will be able to return to us. Then it will be only a question of time for the earth gradually to cool down, as the moon has already done, from surface to centre. When that time comes will not the dry but solid and porous core of our globe drink up the oceans and atmosphere, causing them to disappear, not into large cavernous pockets, but into the minute pores of its substance?

The proposition appears to be established by strict calculation that the interior of the earth when cold will be able to absorb more than four times, possibly more than thirty times, the amount of water now on its surface. Now, it seems certain that in the manner first explained the earth will continues to lose both its superficial water and its atmosphere. The earth, the other planets, and even the sun himself, are regarded as doomed at some future day to the same fate. Melancholy fate, some will say. But why complain of the general law of nature? Everything in nature has its morning of life, its high meridian of glory and strength, its evening decline and its midnight of blackness and death. Is the case of a world—is that the last term of a series?

A New Style of Umbrella.

There is a man in St. Louis who has invented a combined ear trumpet, speaking trumpet, and umbrella, which proves to be an unalloyed blessing to deaf people. The newly-invented instrument does not differ in appearance from an ordinary umbrella; the umbrella stick is, however, hollow, and the handle has the usual bell-shaped aperture of the ear trumpet. A deaf man owning one of these instruments, and desiring to converse with a friend, places the point of the umbrella in his personal ear and turns the bell towards his companion. He has thus an efficient ear trumpet, and he can use it without exciting the slightest suspicion that he is deaf. Spectators will merely notice that he is holding an umbrella to his ear, and will suppose that he is an eccentric person—a philosopher for instance—who is listening intently to remarks of an unusually profound character. When two umbrellas are used even the deafest of men can hear. In this case the deaf man uses one umbrella as an ear trumpet, and his companion uses the other as a speaking trumpet. A conversational duet on two umbrellas can thus be readily carried on without attracting the disagreeable attention that an ordinary ear trumpet always attracts. The new umbrella also has the great merit of being a genuine musical instrument. For a trifling addition to its cost the inventor will supply it with pistons, converting it into a B flat cornet. An instrument of this kind is now on exhibition at the inventor's office in connection with an excessively deaf man, who, after conversing on any subject for half an hour, by the help of an umbrella trumpet will play a selection of popular airs on the instrument without extra charge. It will at once be seen that the popularity of the new umbrella will not be confined to deaf people. Every person who plays the cornet will be glad to have a cornet disguised as an umbrella and capable of being used to shelter him from a rainstorm. In some parts of the country it is unsafe for a cornet player to carry his instrument in his hand, for popular indignation may at any moment take the forms of bricks and eggs of the kind known to Mr. Logan as "old veterans." It will always be safe, however, for any person to display an umbrella trumpet, since no one can possibly detect by its appearance when folded that it is not an umbrella. The only fault that can be found with the St. Louis man's invention is that he has not made it available as a rifle, and a fishing rod, and fitted it with a beer keg attachment. However, it is a good thing as it is, and will doubtless make the inventor a rich man.—N. Y. Times.

Why is a man who spoils his children like another who builds castles in the air?—Because he indulges in fancy too much.

The School Act.

The following are the main changes proposed to be made in the School Act by the Bill now before the Ontario Legislature.

The school age is first noticed, and is summarily fixed as between the years of 5 20. This is merely enacting what has almost universally come to be understood as being the law.

At present it is not required of a school trustee that he shall be a British subject by birth or naturalization. The new act provides that such rule shall be enforced not only as regards trustees but all officers of the school.

"Adequate accommodation" is defined to mean accommodation for all actual residents in the school section, and not for those who may attend, as heretofore.

The much vexed question of union schools is dealt with. Provision is made that when five ratepayers in each municipality interested petition their respective councils the matter shall be referred to certain prescribed arbitrators, who shall examine into the matter and report to the councils, and their report shall be final. The same proceedure shall obtain when it is sought to break up a union school section.

To settle the question of valuation it is proposed to enact that the assessors of each municipality interested in a union school section shall meet each year at the close of their labors and equalize their assessment of the section and should they fail to agree they shall call a third party who shall act as arbitrator.

It has been found that a disparity exists in the rate of taxation for the different sections and Mr. Ross frankly acknowledged that it is difficult to find a remedy. His proposition is, that the township councils shall have power to levy by uniform rate the sum of $100 for each school section within said municipality, and a proportionate rate for each union section. Where more than one teacher is employed $50 will thus be raised for each individual teacher. This measure, he hopes, will tend to lessen the evil complained of.

It is proposed in the rural districts to abolish the office of school treasurer, making the township treasurer take charge of the school moneys, and requiring of him the same bonds as are now required for the treasurer of the school board. This will make but little change, as in nine-tenths of the municipalities the township treasurer is already treasurer of the school board.

Holders of third class certificates will not be allowed to teach outside of the county within which the certificate was issued. The old first-class county board certificates will no longer be confined to one country. Where French and German are taught the county council may add additional examiners in these branches to the county board of examiners.

The examiners are now paid the same rate as a member of this county council. It is proposed to pay them a fixed fee of so much for each candidate who comes up for examination. Regarding inspector's fees, the county councils will have to pay the reasonable travelling expenses of the inspectors.

The very much discussed question of superannuation is proposed to be dealt with in the following manner: No teacher will be required to pay into the fund; Those who are now paying, and so desire, to continue to pay, the yearly fee being increased from $4 to $8. Those who have contributed in the past but cease to do so, if they leave the profession, will be entitled to receive back one half of what they have paid in; if they do not withdraw from teaching and are disabled they will receive compensation for the years they have paid.

The compulsory clauses in the act as it now stands provides that all children between the age of seven and thirteen shall attend school thirty-five days each half year but in cases where they are working in factories part of their time is remitted. It is proposed that only those that can pass an examination equal to the passing from the third to the fourth book shall have any portion of time remitted. This is but following the English principle.

Perhaps the most important of the proposed alterations is that which provides that school boards may order the election for school trustee to be held at the same time and place as those for municipal representatives. When such course is adopted the laws governing the elections for municipal officers, such as hours of voting, voting by ballot, &c, will also control the school election. It should be compulsory instead of optional.

Finally, every salaried official of the municipality is disqualified from being eligible as a candidate for school trustee.

Railway or no Railway—Bonus or no Bonus.

Rocklyn correspondence in Mirror.

There was no difference of opinion as to the necessity for the railway—every one who has resided in Euphrasia during this winter will admit it is badly needed—but on the question of bonus there is not by any means so much unanimity, and some of the old residenters are not afraid to express adverse opinions, interspersed, when recollections of the Northern railway bonus are brought up, with occasional "cursory" remarks. In 1867, when the North Grey extension of the Northern Railway was projected, Euphrasia was deluged with stump speakers from Meaford and elsewhere, and the people allege that they were "fooled" into voting in favor of bonusing it to the tune of $32,500, while the township of Collingwood, through which it passed from end to end, gave only $25,000. Whether the people were "fooled" or not is a question upon which there is room for great difference of opinion, but be that as it may I persume Squire Paterson, of Blantyre, will admit that the activity he displayed in favor of bonus cost him his subsequent defeat, and has been the means of keeping him out of the Reeveship ever since. Probably the "big guns" from Meaford, who are still men in high places, also will admit that they felgratified that they had not wasted their wind and "boomed" the hotels in vain. It cannot be denied that the extension of the line to Meaford has proved a great benefit to Euphrasia, but the Toronto, Grey & Bruce is of equally as much, if not more, benefit, and its construction did not cost the ratepayers one cent. Some of the people are "penny wise and pound foolish," and there can be no doubt but that the fact that this $32,500 was voted and is not yet all paid off will materially injure the prospects of carrying a by-law to bonus the projected branch from Durham to Meaford. If the new line runs to the south east and has its terminus at Thornbury, the residents of Kimberley and neighborhood would probably vote a sectional bonus. So with the people of Walters Falls and neighborhood if it takes to the west, but if it strikes through about the centre a liberal general bonus will likely be granted. Rocklyn would then become, as the genial editor of ot the Thornbury Standard predicted in 1882, a "nice little inland village." There is no immediate prospect of the branch being built, but as the scheme is quite feasible if it is properly boomed, and if reasonable offers of assistance are held out by those interested, the people of Euphrasia will, doubtless, ere long be placed upon an equal footing, so far as travelling facilities are concerned, with the rest of the civilized world.

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is highly recommended for the cure of Eruption, Chafes, Chapped hands, Pimples, Tan, &c.

Subscribe for the STANDARD only $1 per year in advance.

THE VANDERCOOK MURDER.

Disgusting Details—How the Victim was Mutilated—The Heart of the Murdered Man Hanging Up in a Basket.

Oscar F. Beckwith, alias Charles White, charged with the murder of Simon A. Vandercook, at Austerlitz, N. Y., on Jan. 10, 1832, was brought before Judge Boyd, for extradition to the United States, on Monday, the 2nd inst., in Toronto.

District Attorney Gardinier was the first witness called. He said he lived in the village of Vilitæ, in the county of Columbia, and was an Attorney-at-law. He produced copies of the deposition of Harrison Calkins, D L. Spaulding, U. H. Hinman, Russell Harvey, Wm. Mory, and Allan Hanor, taken before Harvey G. Kinney, a justice of the peace of Austerlitz, on February 6 and 7, 1885. These were true copies, and were duly certified.

Mr. Fenton then proceeded to read the following evidence:—Harrison Calkins deposed: I live about three-quarters of a mile from Beckwith's place, and I knew both Beckwith and Vandercook; they were interested in some mining property; they were not on good terms. Vandercook was superintendent of the stock company. Beckwith lived in a shanty on the mountain in the State of New York. The last time I saw Vandercook was on Jan. 10th, 1882. I returned from Pittsfield that day, and not finding him I went to Beckwith's shanty. When I reached there I smelled something offensive. I went in, and Beckwith was there. The top of the stove was red hot. I asked him about Vandercook, and he said he had gone to my house to get some clothes, and that he, Vandercook, was going away, and would not be back until March. When I asked him about his having such a fire, he said he had some baking to do. I could not see inside the stove. The smell and sound was like meat frying. When I got back home I found that Vandercook had not been there. The next day I continued to search in other directions and found nothing of him. On Thursday I went up to Beckwith's shanty, broke in the door, examined the stove, and found bones and signs of cloth. The rest of the remains were all mutilated and were found in the other room. This was a small room adjoining the room where the stove was, and had a bed in it. It was a room about 5x12 feet. Found flesh piled up there, and some articles that belonged to Vandercook. Among them was part of a mitten, one that my wife made for him. This belonged to Vandercook. A sack coat was also found, also one boot and one Arctic rubber. I identify all the clothing found as belonging to Vandercook. I also found two axes; one covered with blood looked very dull. There was not much furniture in the shanty. I knew Beckwith; he is about five feet six inches tall, his eyes were always cast down, and he had a bad look. He was between 70 and 80 years old, but looked younger. He was a desperate character. Vandercook was a well-disposed man, and not quarrelsome. The murder must have taken place between 11 and 5 o'clock on the 10th of January, 1882. The thumb of Vandercook's left hand had been off for some time, the result of an accident. This hand was not found among the remains at the cabin. I am satisfied in my own mind that the hand found among the remains at the cabin was the hand of Vandercook, and my opinion is based on the size and shape of it.

Dr. D. L. Spaulding, of Austerlitz. N. Y., deposed: On January 13, 1882, I made an examination of the remains of a man. I found them in a promiscuous pile upon the floor of a shanty, situate about three miles southeast of the village of Austerlitz in the mountains near the Massachusetts line. The remains bore the appearance of having been chopped in pieces with an axe. The head and neck, left forearm and hand, both legs below the knees, both feet, liver, a part of the spinal column and the left hip were missing. The breast bone and abdominal walls were divided through the center. Both lower extremeties were severed from the body, through or near the hip joint; each was again severed at about the upper third, and again about the middle third of each thigh. Both legs and feet were severed from the thigh below the knee, or at about the upper third of the leg, and the lower parts thereof were missing. The arms were severed from the body through or near the shoulder joint. Each arm was then severed about the junction of the middle with the upper third of the arm bone. Both forearms were again severed at about the junction of the upper and middle third of forearm bones. The left forearm and hand from that point were also missing. The right hip was severed from the left just right of the spinal column, that part of the spinal column being found with burned left hip. The left kidney and lungs were found in the dissected pile on the bed-room floor. The other kidney, heart and bowels were found in a half-bushel basket. In the ashes taken from the stove in the cabin were found parts and pieces of bones corresponding to each missing part of said remains, a number of pieces of skull and teeth, and of the hand and feet, and a part of the leg-bone, a part of the forearm bone, pieces of the spinal column, and the left hip and sacrum attached to each other. The middle lobe of the right lung was found to have a penetrating wound, in my opinion made with a knife. The coat and vest saturated with blood, and identified as belonging to Vandercook, were also apparently penetrated by the same instrument, and the location of the punctures in them were such that, while the garments were worn, the punctures were all in direct opposition or in the same line to each other, and also to that of the lung. My impression is that, from the location of the wound, the blow was struck from behind while the man was standing. From the appearance of the flesh my opinion is that the man had not been dead more than three days. I think that death resulted from hemorrhage caused by violent means.

Russell Harvey, a constable, testified to going into the cabin on January 12 and finding the stove full of human bones. He said: I opened the door to the side room where Beckwith slept. Underneath a sort of bed, which was about three feet from the ground, I found a lot of clothes, and I pulled them away and found a pile of meat, with an axe on top of the pile. I also found an Arctic rubber and a boot cut down through the leg. The pants were also cut up through each leg. I handled the flesh and am positive that it was human flesh. Found one hand cut off about half way between the elbow and wrist, leaving hand and forearm. There was a half-bushel basket containing intestines and heart. It was hanging up in the side room. The flesh was cut up in pieces and piled as stated. I found an axe on the top of the pile; its handle was bloody and it was greasy. The meat looked as if it had been carried in the basket. Beckwith was about seventy years of age and always had a bad reputation.

Wm. Morey deposed: I live in Austerlitz. A week before the murder I met Beckwith near the red bridge and had a talk with him. He said he wished that " or some one else would get Vandercook out of the way. He said, "You can do it and I would know nothing about it.

Allan Hanor deposed as follows: Beckwith once told me that he had been cheated by Vandercook and he would kill him in less than a year. He told me this at Ambrose Wolsey's place in the fall of 1881. He said he would like to have someone to help him to kill Vandercook. He said he thought Vandercook carried about $300 with him. He said, "It's nothing to kill a man; just take an axe and strike him on the head."

After these depositions had been put in Sheriff Humphrey, ex-Sheriff Hanor and District Attorney Gardiner were examined, and identified the prisoner as Oscar F. Beckwith, who was wanted for the murder of Vandercook.

A warrant for his extradition was issued by Judge Boyd.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Mess s. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star.

The Deutshe Medizinal Zeitung gives an account of a series of careful experiments made in the Prussian army as to the utility of serving schnapps to soldiers in active service. After prolonged trials the army surgeons abandoned the use of spirit, and gave tea or coffee in place of it.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

Too many hot drinks will knock a man cold.

Horse Breeding in America.

Fifteen Million of Horses are now owned in America, and more than a million a year must be bred to keep up the supply. The largest portion of these are used for agricultural and heavy draft purposes, and such horses bring from $175 to $250 each. It would be impossible to breed them if it were not for the importations of Percheron horses. 500 stallions are now annually imported from France to the United States. The immense wealth they are adding to the nation will be better understood when it is known that the first cross of a Percheron stallion with a native mare doubles the selling value of the colt when mature. Large numbers of Percheron stallions are exported from the United States by Canadian breeders to renew the old French blood so highly prized, and also to give quality, style and action to the large English Draft and Clydesdale stock which has been bred there so long. Nearly one hundred Percheron stallions have been sold to Canada during the past two years by M. W. Dunham, "Oaklawn Farm," Wayne, Illinois, the greatest importer of the French race, who has imported from France nearly 2,000 head. He now has on hand several hundred of the finest Percherons to be found in France, nearly all recorded with their pedigrees in the Percheron Stud Book of France.

The railroads of Java are especially prosperous, being able to declare a dividend of eight and a half per cent. and pay off part of their bonded debt at the same time. The receipts per train mile on the main line amounted last year to $4.15.

Corn Raising.

It may suprrise the good people of Canada to learn that the corn crop has been immensely increased in Canada. No doubt the N. P. people will claim this as a product of protection, but PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR alone is entitled to all the credit. It raises more corn to the acre, than anything else the world can supply. Safe, sure, and painless. Take no substitute. Only 25 cents. Try your hand. A good crop guaranteed. Beware of flesh-eating substitutes. N. C. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

Woman's Face.

"What furniture can give such finish to a room, as a tender woman's face?" asks George Eliot. Not any, we are happy to answer, provided the glow of health tempers the tender expression. The pale, anxious, bloodless face of the consumptive, or the evident sufferings of the dyspeptic, induce feelings of sorrow and grief on our part, and compell us to tell them of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," the sovereign remedy for consumption and other diseases of the respiratory system as well as dyspepsia and other digestive troubles. Sold everywhere.

"Are you sure you are converted?" asked Mr. Spurgeon of a devout housemaid. "Deed, sir, I think I am, for I sweeps under the beds and in dark corners."

Best Goods are put in Smallest Parcels.

The old proverb is certainly true in the case of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are little, sugar-wrapped parcels, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, containing as much cathartic power as is done up in the biggest, most repulsive-looking pill. Unlike the big pills, however, they are mild and pleasant in their operation—do not produce griping pains, nor render the bowels costive after using.

Bessie uses eighteen volumes of an encyclopedia in preparing her essay for commencement day, while Alice uses but ten. How many more bouquets will Bessie receive than Alice?

· · · · Delicate diseases of either sex, however induced, radically cured. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

China has hundreds of thousands of professional beggars, but not one Chinese beggar, it is asserted, has yet been found in the United States, even on the Pacific coast.

It is now pretty well understood to be a dangerous practice to attempt to palm off worthless imitations of the "Myrtle Navy" tobacco for the genuine article. In former years that practice was the cause of much annoyance, and Messrs. Tuckett & Son were compelled to resort to the law courts to put a stop to it. Though they have not met with any cases of the kind lately, it is always a safe precaution for the purchaser to see that the trade mark T. & B. in bronze letters is stamped upon each plug, no plug ever leaves the factory without it, and to appropriate the trade mark is a punishable offence.

Be pleasant and kind to those around you. The man who stirs his cup with an icicle spoils the tea and chills his own fingers.

Young Men! Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Volatic Belt and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Within a week of the day when he received his commission to relieve Khartoum, Lord Wolseley told a friend that his calculations were that he would join hands with Gordon about the 20th of January. That was on the 30th of August. Gordon's steamers met Gen. Stewart's troops on the 21st of January.

Quack Advertisements

Are rapidly becoming a nuisance, and we think it behooves publishres to examine into the merits of many articles puffed up in their columns. We do not deny that many meritorious remedies are properely to be classed under this heading. Take the hundreds and thousands relieved from severe suffering by the use of Polson's NERVILINE, would it not be unreasonable to expect them to condemn that far-famed remedy. Now we know for a fact that Polson's Nerviline is without exception the most powerful, pleasant and certain remedy in the world for pain. It cannot fail, for it goes right to the bottom of pain, penetrates to the nerves, soothes them into quietness, and affords prompt and permanent relief. Nerviline is sold by all druggists. Sample only 10 cents. Try it.

A P 218

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk, Carpet, and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, Ont.

THE SETTLER'S GUIDE & LAND LAWS OF THE U.S., 25c. by mail. DANIEL WITTER, Denver, Col.

DETACHED SOLID BRICK HOUSE.—GOOD SITuation, high and dry part of city, nine rooms gas, bath and closet. Lot 33x110. Terms easy. Apply on the premises, or address 33 Davenport Road, Toronto, Ont.

120 ACRES OF GOOD FARMING LAND FOR sale, with 100 acres under cultivation; good house, barn and sheds; large young orchard; two miles from good market, and on main travelled road to same, which is a lively town. For particulars apply to HOLDEN BROS. Rockaway Centre, St. Clair Co., Mich.

THE BLIND SEE.—Those afflicted are requested to get Williams' Eye Water, it cures all diseases of the Eye that are curable, even Color Blindness, ask your druggist for it. Wholesale by Lyman Sons & Co., Montreal. Send for circular to see the marvelous cures effected in Montreal to GEO. WILLIAMS, 709 St. Lawrence street, or at GARDNER'S Drug Store, corner McGill and Notre Dame streets.

Property for Sale, Rent or Exchange.

FIFTY ACRES NEAR TORONTO, $65 per acres also west half of 29 on 8th and of 30 on the 10th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Shelburne Station, $12 per acre; for Sale, Rent, or Exchange. Terms to Suit.

FIFTY ACRES NEAR TORONTO, $65 per acre, also west hundred acres of lot 1 on the 10th concession of Brock, cheap; and west half of 29 on 8th and 30 on 10th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Shelburne station, $12 per acre; for Sale, Rent or Exchange. Terms to suit. Save this advertisement.

J. P. JACKSON, Downsview.

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.

50 2nd-hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for List.

A. T. LANE, Montreal.

R. W. PRITTIE.
Real Estate Agent.
Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee, & Financial Agent. Room C. Arcade, Yonge St. Toronto. Money to Loan. Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged.

SMOKED SAUSAGES
The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

CAUTION
EACH PLUG OF THE
MYRTLE NAVY
IS MARKED
T. & B.
In Bronze Letters.
NONE OTHER GENUINE.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE
SEWING MACHINE
PRICE $25 CASH.
Our new machine is now ready, and is as good as any sold by Agents at $65.00.
SEE TESTIMONIAL!
LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 1884.
Machine arrived all right, and it is certainly well worth the money you ask for it with its present improvements. I prefer it to the "Singer," "Wanzer," or any other make at $60 each.
Yours truly,
AARON HAWKINS.
New Attachments New Furniture, New Stand.
Send stamp for samples of sewing and our elegant descriptive photograph of the machine before buying from Agents.
MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL.
BONUS:—From now until March 31st, 1885, we will give to any person sending us $25.00 cash in advance for one of our machines, a handsome combination table and bracket lamp complete. These lamps are something new, and the maker wants them introduced.
If you or any of your friends want a machine don't delay, but send to
Co-Operative Sewing Machine Co.,
22 JAMES ST., SOUTH. HAMILTON, ONT

EVERY FARMER,
—AND—
Especially Those Living on Rented Farms, should send me postal cards, with addresses, for Sectional maps and particulars of the special offer made by the ST. PAUL, MINNEAPOLIS & MANITOBA R'Y.
for their Lands in the Red River Valley,
within short distance of track. Only 50c. per acre down; also Nine Million acres, Free Government Land in the TURTLE MOUNTAIN and DEVIL'S LAKE DISTRICTS,
North Dakota. Particulars free.
Address—
C. H. WARREN & CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.
or H. F. McNALLY,
28 Front St. East Toronto, Ont.
(Mention this paper)

Island Home
Stock Farm,
GROSSE ISLE, MICH.
IMPORTED PERCHERON HORSES.
All stock selected from the get of sires and dams of established reputation and registered in the French and American Stud Books. We have a very large stock of imported stallions and brood mares on hand. Prices reasonable. Correspondence solicited. Send for illustrated catalogue, free by mail. Address SAVAGE & FARNUM, Detroit, Mich.

HAND STAMPS
METAL & RUBBER DATERS, SELF-INKERS & BANKING STAMPS,
NOTARY SEALS, &C. AGENTS WANTED.
KENYON, TINGLEY & STEWART MFG. CO.,
72 KING ST. WEST.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

R. U. AWARE
THAT
Lorillard's Climax Plug
bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

W. & F. P. CURRIE & Co.
100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.
Importers of Portland Cement.
Drain Pipes, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Chimney Tops, Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay.
Manufacturers of ... & Bed Springs.

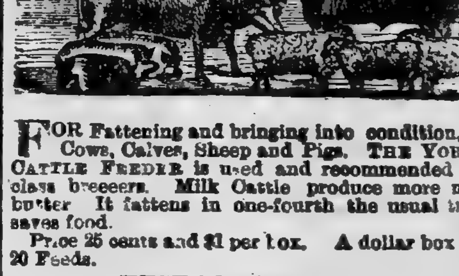
F. E. DIXON & CO.
Manufacturers of Star Rivet
LEATHER BELTING
King Street, East, Toronto.
Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

GOLD TO FARMERS. Circulars free of most and most productive varieties known of Seed Grain, Testimonial of 110 bushels per acre of Boyd's Egyptian Oats. Samples of two oz. 15 cents. JAS. BOYD, Cedar Grove, Ont., Canada.

Files RECUT!
DON'T WASTE THEM. SEND OR BRING TO
THE ONTARIO FILE CO.,
150 Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents Wanted.

SEEDS
WM. EWING & CO., Seed Merchants, 142 McGill St., Montreal, will forward their Illustrated Seed Catalogue free to all Applicants. We give special attention to Seed Grain and Grass Seeds. Our new Early Scotch Bearded Wheat is the Earliest and Heaviest cropping variety of Spring Wheat yet introduced. Correspondence invited.

FOR PLEASANT SEWING
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Cotton!
Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry Goods Dealers.



FIRE! FIRE!
Berry Growers can save 75 per cent. in labor by Burning their Strawberry Vines. For particulars and Price List of Strawberry and Raspberry Plants, address LUCIA, Flushing, Genesee Co., Mich.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N.B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Leve & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H A Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

Dominion Line of Steamships
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from PORTLAND.

Dominion, March 5th	Toronto, April 9th
Montreal, March 12th	Montreal, Ap'l 23rd
Brooklyn, March 26th

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool, $50, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate, $35, steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses, Cows, Calves, Sheep and Pigs. THE YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time, and saves food.
Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 20 Feeds.
HUGH MILLER & Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,
167 King St East, Toronto.
For sale by Druggists everywhere.

M. W. DUNHAM
Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,
HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE
Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which includes
75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES
Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE,
EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.
STOCK ON HAND:
150 Imported Brood Mares
250 Imported Stallions
Old enough for service,
100 COLTS
Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that, however well bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Societe Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884; purchased by M. W. Dunham and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating, properties of beef, and the only one which has the power to supply nourishment for brain, and bone, and muscle.

MERIDEN
BRITANNIA
COMPANY.
FINEST Electro Plate

CAUTION
Goods stamped Meriden Silver Plate Co. are not our make. If you want reliable goods insist on getting those made by the MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,
HAMILTON, Ont.

& F P. CURRIE & Co.
100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.
Importers of Portland Cement,
Canada Cement, Vent Linings,
Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting,
Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay,
Manufacturers of & Bed Springs

E. DIXON & CO
Manufacturers of Star Rivet
LEATHER BELTING,
King Street, East, Toronto.
double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Lists and Discounts.

OLD TO FARMERS.
Seed Grain, Testimonials of 110 bushels per acre of Boyd's Egyptian Oats.
JAS. BOYD

FILES RECUT!
DON'T WASTE THEM, SEND OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FILE CO.
Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents Wanted.

SEEDS
WM EWING & CO., Seed Merchants, 142 McGill St., Montreal, will forward their Illustrated Seed Catalogue free to all Applicants. We give special attention to Seed Grain and Grass Seeds. Our new Scotch Bearded Wheat is the Earliest and best cropping variety of Spring Wheat yet introduced. Correspondence invited.

FOR PLEASANT SEWING
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Cotton!
Full Length, and to run smooth on any machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on
For sale by all Dry Goods Dealers.

FIRE! FIRE!
Growers can save 75 per cent. in labor by Burning Strawberry Vines. For particulars and Price of Strawberry and Raspberry Plants, address, F. Flushing, Genesee Co., Mich.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. Steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, Nfld.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N.B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Leve & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

Dominion Line of Steamships
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from PORTLAND.
Vancouver, March 5th | Toronto, April 9th
Montreal, March 12th | Montreal, Ap'l 23rd
Brooklyn, March 26th
Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool, $50, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate, $35, steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER
Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses, Cows, Calves, Sheep and Pigs. THE YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first class Feeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time, and saves food.
.5 cents a dollar box. A dollar box contains
HUGH MILLER & Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS
167 King St East, Toronto.
Sold by Druggists everywhere.

M. W. DUNHAM
Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,
HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE
Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000,
which includes
75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES
whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE,
EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.
STOCK ON HAND:
150 Imported Brood Mares
250 Imported Stallions
Old enough for service,
100 COLTS
Two years old and younger.
Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that, however well bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authenticated, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all imported stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book of France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Société Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884; purchased by M. W. Dunham and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
... of the kind which ... together with the ... and the only ... supply nourishment to ... muscle.

CAUTION
Goods stamped Meriden Silver Plate Co. are not our make. If you want reliable goods insist on getting those made by the MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,
HAMILTON, Ont.

A LORDLY DARE-DEVIL.

The Strange and Fearless Pranks of Lord Beresford.

"The news which came by telegraph this morning," said a gentleman recently, "does not surprise me in the least. The rescue of Sir Charles Wilson is just what might have been expected from a Beresford; they are a fighting race. Those who think that the adage 'blood will tell' is a myth can not do better than study the history of this fighting family and see how from generation to generation most of the descendants have been sons, and fighting sons at that. It is not long ago when one of these fighting Beresfords thrashed an editor in his sanctum because he had printed something which displeased him. This same Lord Charles Beresford, whose exploit the telegraph recounts, wears upon his left breast two medals which he probably values more than the Victoria cross, and the British government gives him especial permission to wear them."

"How were they won?"

"While a midshipman, on two occasions he sprang overboard and saved life. On one occasion his own life was very nearly sacrificed, he, as well as the seaman he saved, being insensible when rescued. For each of these acts the Royal Humane Society of Great Britain voted him a medal and the British government has permitted him to wear them."

"Will he get the Victoria cross for this act of bravery?"

"No; this is only given for acts of personal bravery. In this case he was simply in command, and will not receive any special decoration."

"What has his history been hitherto?"

"He was a member of parliament for Waterford, and was elected against the opposition of two home-rulers; that was while Disraeli was premier. Then at the last election, which I think was in 1880, he stood again, and was beaten by Mr. Willis Stuart, the home-ruler. As to his naval record, I can say that he was the commander of the Thunderer when she blew up, but fortunately at that time was enjoying a leave of absence, or he would doubtless have gone to glory with the rest. After that he commanded the queen's yacht Osborne for a time, but speedily followed the family instinct, and, finding that there was fighting possible in Egypt, at once got himself appointed there. The present Lord Charles Beresford is the second brother of the present marquis of Waterford, and is well known in the clubs in Dublin, and London as a noted athlete, being one of the finest boxers that ever put on the gloves."

"How did his brother, Lord William Beresford obtain the Victoria cross?"

"That was in Zululand, as a volunteer. He was with the army in Afghanistan; when peace was made, peace, of course, did not suit him, and he got leave and went down to Zululand as a volunteer. He was with the mounted infantry in an engagement when they were beaten, and had to retreat. On the retreat he came across the sergeant grievously wounded and he alighted, got him on his own horse, and managed to ride off safely with him. It was in the heat of a bitter fire from the enemy, and was an act of exceptional bravery, the sergeant's life having evidently been saved. For this, Beresford received the Victoria cross, the highest honor England can pay, but, as I have said, I think Sir Charles values his modest medals of the Humane society quite as much as he would the cross."

There are in this country at the present time two of this noted family, Lord Delaval, who is earning his laurels as a cowboy in Texas, and Mr J. G. Beresford, who is well known in this city as a member of the Union, the Jocky, and the New York Yacht clubs.

This gentleman has been in this country off and on since 1870. For a time he acted as the agent of his cousin, Lord Charles Beresford, in the management of his estates in Ireland, and when he last ran for parliament this Mr. Beresford was his election agent and managed his canvass. He is well known in New York society, and is a favorite in all of the clubs.—[New York World.

The Train Boy on a Long Run.

Several years ago it was discovered that a slight error had been made in the calculation of the sun's distance from the earth, and owing to a misplaced logarithm, or something of that kind, a mistake of 3,000,000 miles was made in the result. People cannot be too careful in such matters. Supposing that on the strength of the information contained in the old-time table a man should start out with only provisions sufficient to take him 90,000,000 miles, and should then find that 3,000 000 miles still stretched out ahead of him. He would then have to buy fresh figs of the train boy in order to sustain life. Think of buying nice fresh figs on a train that had been en route 50 years! Imagine a train boy starting out at ten years of age, and perishing at the age of 60 years with only one fifth of his journey accomplished. Think of five train boys, one after the other, dying of old age on the way, and the train at last rolling slowly into the depot with not a living thing on board except the worms in the nice eating apples!"

There are a number of soap trees growing in Tallahassee. They are prolific fruiters, the berries being about the size of an ordinary marble, having a yellowish, soapy appearance, with a hard black seed from which the trees are propagated. People in Tallahassee boil the fruit to make soap, but in China, Japan, and other tropical countries the berries are used as a substitute for soap just as they are taken from the trees.

A DETECTIVE'S TALK.

Some Professional Secrets.

"I've got to testify in a divorce case next week," said a private detective yesterday, "and I'm afraid that the case will injure my business; but I'm subpœnaed, and I guess I'll have to stand the consequences."

"Is that your line of business?"

"Well, hardly; but you see that catching criminals is not as good as catching husbands, wives, and young men. It pays better, there are no risks in it, and looking up the whereabouts of criminals is a business that I've given up."

"Who are your customers?"

"Take a woman who wants to find out how her husband acts at 'the lodge,' or a young woman who is engaged to a wild youngster, and they'll pay almost any price for the information. They're a queer set, and when I make a report to them they read it over and over. I've got $25 from a woman on a South Side avenue for looking up the actions of her would be husband. The fellow was a bad 'un. She thought so, but couldn't find out herself, so I was employed. I made a report of his doings, and the result was that the match was broken, and the young fellow was out a nice wife and quite a fortune."

"How do you manage such cases?"

O, easy enough. Now in the case of a young woman who has some doubts as to the morals of the man who is to wed her, of course she does not want to marry a man who is not the pink of propriety, and wants to find out just how he acts. He'll tell her that he does not drink, gamble, play billiards, etc. She doubts it, and hires one of our men to catch him. After they return from the theatre he bids her an adieu and starts direct for home. We follow him. In nine cases out of ten he enters the first saloon on his way and indulges in about eight hot whiskies. Then he has a game of seven-up with some boon companion and takes several more drinks. He arrives home at about 4 o'clock in the morning. We make a regular report and send it to the woman. The next time the man calls on her he is asked if he got home all right, etc. He says he did, and then the report is read to him. He weakens, confesses, and the wedding is indefinitely postponed. I caught a bank clerk that way several weeks ago, and it resulted in a disagreement forthwith."

"What about the divorce case?"

"Well, that was queer. A South Side woman had some doubts as to the actions of her husband and wanted to ascertain what kept him from home until the early morning hours. His lodge had meetings every night—at least, he told his wife such was the case. She thought differently and employed me to follow him. He was paying attentions to another woman, and when his wife found it out there was a scene, and the divorce proceedings are the result."

This was a nice little story, but it is more than likely he was drawing very largely on his imagination for these "facts." The average young woman, upon becoming engaged, does not hire a detective to follow her young man.

The Story of a Burglary.

There is a lonely, remote village in Derbyshire, remote from railways, which I used to know very well. There is a fine painted-glass window in the venerable church, which has underneath it the words, "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings." This window with the inscription is connected with a daring burglary. I know well the house where it happened—an old manorial house, for the old rector was a Squarson, living in the ancestral hall, and leaving the rectory to others. The old rector had married a young wife—an arrangement, by the way, which in this case worked exceedingly well, and by and by came the inevitable baby. The old rector, at his time of life, could not stand the noise of the baby, and took himself off to a separate room of his own. One night, in the very depth of the night, the infant made a most howling, precocious noise which awoke the young mother. She attended to her child, and then went to the window and drew up the blind, to "take a look at the night," as people say. To her horror there was an atrocious looking man standing on the window-sill.

She caught her babe in her arms and, with a shriek, rushed off to her husband's room. Presently there was a crash of glass, and the burglar, followed by two other men, had dashed into her deserted bed room. If I remember aright, she had locked the bed-room door on the other side; but this, too, was broken through by the invaders. She awoke her husband, who, on hearing the state of things, lighted a candle by the bedside and produced a pistol. The three men men appeared at the bed room door. The old rector presented his pistol, and said if they should advanced another step he should fire. One of the men advanced; the rector fired his pistol and the man fell. The whole house was now alarmed, and the men made off, taking their wounded comrade with them. They were traced by the blood marks on the snow. The wounded man recovered, and, with the others, received a long sentence.

Hattie C. Cummings advertises in a Western paper that she wants "a man with red hair and blue eyes, who does not wear fine shirts much, and is not afraid to cut too much wood for the cook." She may succeed in getting a man with red hair and blue eyes, but if she had desired one with blue hair and red eyes her want would not have been so easily gratified.

A STRANGE STORY.

Tale of the Guillotine—How a Dead Man Talked—What He Said.

While traveling in Europe last spring I spent a few weeks in Paris, and one night accepted an invitation to take dinner at the house of a physician, who, although an American, has made that city his home, and has acquired a continental reputation. When I say that he is a Baltimorean, and that he spent several years in the service of a foreign potentate now in exile and disgrace, from whom he received the title which he bears, my readers can form a shrewd guess as to his identity. The company I was asked to meet was a very distinguished one. There was a United States senator from New York state a member of the French senate, who held an important position at the court of Napoleon III., but had now thrown in his fortunes with the Republic, a celebrated English novelist, a famous comedian from the Theater Francaise, and a member of the Academy of Sciences, whose works on psychology are known all over Europe. It will thus be seen how pleasant the gathering must have been, and how, under the genial influence of our host's choice Burgundy, the conversation spread over a wide field of literature, art and science. Naturally it drifted into abstruse psychological subjects, and the fact that several of the guests were materialists did not prevent the starting of a discussion on the forms of mind and matter, and the possibility of a sentient condition even after the principle of life has left the body.

Instances were cited as having been recorded by witnesses in which, after serpents and eels had been cut into small portions and the vital parts seemingly destroyed, the various portions seemed still to be endowed with life and vitality; and a case was mentioned, well known in medical jurisprudence, in which a man, an inordinate gambler, who was about to be beheaded for a heinous crime, begged as a last request to be allowed to play a game of piquet with one of the soldiers who was guarding him. The officer in command humored him, and the game began. Both were expert players, but just as the doomed man was about to lay down a card which would have settled the contest, the officer made a sign to the executioner. That functionary lifted his sword, and, with one stroke, severed the wretch's head from his body, and as the ghastly object fell to the ground the lips were see to move, and from them were heard to come, in clear, distinct tones, the words, "I have won the game."

Up to this time the member of the Academy of Sciences, whom I will call M. X., had been an attentive listener, but he now interposed and said, "Gentlemen, I can tell you something even more wonderful than this, and something which, on account of the source from which the story came to me, incredible as it may appear to you, I can not but believe. My grandfather was a physician in this city during the terrible scenes of the revolution in 1789. He was an ardent student and a successful experimentalist. One of his most intimate friends was a young Englishman, who was also studying medicine. They had tastes in common, and were almost inseparable. Imbued with monarchical ideas, this young man could not see in the revolution that men were fighting to overthrow tyranny, and, after the manner of his countrymen, he openly and boldly denounced them. Reports of his utterances were carried to the committee on safety. He was arrested, taken before the dreaded Robespierre, and sentenced to the guillotine. On the night before the execution my grandfather, who had considerable political influence, was granted permission to visit him in his cell in the prison of La Conciergerie. The young man—'S,' we will call him—was brave and nonchalant, and after a long metaphysical argument, my grandfather said to him: 'I have long wanted to prove if unconsciousness and the inability to act remain any time after death. Let me make this proposition: I will be present and near you at your execution to morrow; my profession and my relation to the committee of safety give me unusual privileges. The moment your head falls into the basket I will lift it up, and if you know me and still have the power of action, you will close your left eye three times.' The doomed man laughingly agreed, the compact was sealed, and the two friends bade each other an affectionate farewell. Morning dawned on the prison, and as each victim's name was read out he took his place in the tumbril and was carried to the scene of his execution. The young Englishman was there, so was my grandfather. Head after head fell; then name the, knife, which flashed downward, and the head dropped into the basket. My grandfather could hardly repress a shudder; but, true to his promise and his thirst for knowledge, he picked it up and held the face to him. A film seemed to be gathering over his eyes, but suddenly the eye closed, then opened. Did his senses deceive him? No! It closed again. Once more it opened; again it closed. It opened again. The experiment was complete."

Horseshoes that May be Taken off at Night.

A new horseshoe is now being made, which is in two parts, the upper designed to remain permanently upon the foot, where it will last for an indefinite time, and no wear comes upon it; the other, that which contains the corks, and which is joined to the upper in an ingenious manner. The lower halves of the shoes are interchangeable—sharp corks for icy weather and dull ones for heavy draft horses, or they may be removed entirely at night to prevent injury to the animal while in the stall.

WATER FOR THE SOLDIERS.

A Pipe Line to be Laid From Suakim Across The Desert.

The British Government, according to the cable despatches, has adopted a novel plan for supplying the forces in the Soudan with an abundance of water. This plan is to lay a system of pipes in the desert and force water through them with powerful pumping engines.

"The British Government proposes to run a pipe line across the desert from Suakim to Berber," said a member of the firm of Henry R. Worthington of New York, manufacturers of pumping engines, yesterday, "and we are under contract to furnish the pumping engines. We shipped two engines on the Adriatic on last Saturday, and will ship two more on the Britannic to morrow.

"I think it is clear that the adoption of this measure by the British Government is of great moment. The journey from Cairo to Berber by way of the Nile is about 1 200 miles. The slowness and hardships of that route are familiar to every reader of the despatches. From Suakim to Berber, in a direct line across the desert, the distance is about 260 miles. The lack of water on the route makes this stretch of desert very difficult for a large force. Even the building and maintenance of a railroad would be extremely difficult for the same reason. Water in large quantities would be needed for the construction hands, the soldiers to guard them and the completed route, and for the engines.

"It is proposed to change all this by laying two lines of four inch pipe between Suakim and Berber. At intervals of twenty-five or thirty miles, or even less, pumping stations according to the plan will be established. There will be two engines at every station, capable of pumping water at a pressure of 2,000 pounds to the square inch. There will also be a big tank at every station. Water will be delivered at the end of the route at the rate of about 150 gallons per minute.

"With plenty of water at hand the construction and maintenance of a double-track railway between Suakim and Berber will be an easy matter, and the transportation of troops and stores to Berber, which Lord Wolseley seems to be desirous of making a new base of operations, will become as much a matter of course as the conveyance of the Seventh Regiment by rail from New York to Washington.

"It has been settled that the pipe is to be laid in zig zag lines, to allow for expansion and contraction under the sand. The laying of the pipe if a sufficient force of men is put to work, ought to proceed at the rate of about twenty miles a day. An American gentleman, conversant with all the details of the oil pipe-line system, now in London, is in consultation with the British Government, and there seems to be a disposition to expedite the work.

"It will, of course, be necessary to have a guard at every pumping station on the route. These stations will also be stopping places for the railroad trains. If the Mahdi's forces cut the pipes the diminished pressure at the nearest pumping station will speedily demonstrate the fact, and a force can be sent out to repair the break."

A Modern Craze.

Two young Englishmen, fresh from Oxford, visited Melbourne, the Australian city, whose growth rivals in rapidity that of Chicago. They were on a trip around the world to complete their education, and brought letters of introduction to a professor of the Melbourne University. The Australian colonists are like children with a new toy; they must show all their sights to a visitor as soon as he arrives. The Professor, therefore, immmediately offered to show the young men round.

"Shall I take you over the Public Library?" he asked. "It is one of the finest in the world, well worth seeing; and we can kill two birds with one stone by seeing the Museum and the National Gallery at the same time."

"Well, no, thanks," replied one of the Oxonians. "It's awfully good of you, we know; but books are books all the world over, and pictures are pictures; and as for minerals, I can't say we understand them; not in our line, you know."

"Would you like to walk through the Botanical Gardens?" asked the Professor, thinking he would try them with something out of doors.

"Don't you think it's rather hot for a walk?" said one of the visitors, adding, "Besides, to tell the truth, one garden is very much like another." The abashed but persevering Professor mentioned several other "sights" which they might like to see, but was invariably met with the same polite refusal. As they took up their hats to say good-by, he, feeling vexed that he could do nothing more than to ask them to dine, said;

"Are you quite sure there is nothing I can do for you?"

"Do you know any one," asked the younger Oxonian, blushing, "who has got a lawn-tennis court? We should so awfully like to have a game!" The Professor introduced them to some of the college students, and the two young men, during their fortnight's stay, played tennis twice a day, except on Sundays. The day before they left for Japan, the Professor waxed enthusiastic over the delights in store for them in that land.

"Well, yes," said the elder. "We've got several introductions; and I hear that there are lots of English in Tokio, so that we are sure to get plenty of tennis."

While the cook weighed his thoughts the captain weighed his anchor, and the cheese skipped around in a whey of its own.

The Soudan.

The news from the war in Egypt is of such interest each day that a good map of the country is indispensible. We have, therefore taken the pains to procure an excellent engraving of the very best map obtainable, so that our readers may be able the more easily to trace out the routes being pursued by the different divisions of the contending armies. Nearly every published map attempts to give too many details in regard to the country, and is therefore confusing. It will be well to preserve this map carefully, as it will be of value probably for a long time to come.

"The Soudan," writes Sir S. W. Baker, himself a noted explorer in Africa, "now embraces the whole of that vast region which comprises the Desert of Nubia, Libya, the ancient Meroe, Dongola, Kordofan, Darfur, Senaar, and the entire Nile basin, bordered on the east by Abyssinia, and elsewhere by doubtful frontiers. The Red Sea upon the east alone confines the Egyptian limits to an unquestionable line. Wherever the rainfall is regular the country is immensely fertile. The Soudan may be divided into two portions—the great deserts which are beyond the rainy zone, and consequently arid, and the southern provinces within that zone, which are capable of great agricultural development.

Khartoum, the scene of Gen. Gordon's heroic efforts during the past year, it will be seen, lies at the junction of the White Nile and the Blue Nile, 13 degrees north of the equator. How to reach this point as easily and speedily as possible with an army of relief has been the great question for some time past. There are two proposals, one to go to Suakim, a port on the Red Sea, and then across the desert, a distance of 145 miles to Berber, and about 200 miles from that to Khartoum. This route was thought to be not as feasible as that up the Nile, in consequence of the dangers, heat, and other difficulties of the desert march, but this route will no doubt be adopted for the most of the future of the campaign. It is proposed to build as speedily as possible, a narrow guage railway from Suakim to Berber, which will prove of vast military importance and permanent commercial value. Let the fertile section of the Soudan become once well opened to the sea board and under a stable government, and a vast cotton-producing industry will soon become developed.

The route passed by General Wolseley and his army has been up the Nile from Cairo to Korti. It was in going up the rapids and dangerous sections of this river that our Canadian boatmen rendered such valuable service.

From Korti to Metemneh, overland across the Bayuda Desert, is nearly 200 miles. It was in making this march that General Stewart, with his 1,500 men, fought so bravely. General Earl started with 2,000 men to go round the great bend of the river. How both these brave and honored soldiers came to their end is now well known.

Berber, Metemneh, and Shendy are all clearly laid down in this map, and can be easily traced out. Probably these places will be historic in the future as the great battle ground between Britain and those who now so misgovern the country.

Lucky Frances Weinberger's Suitors.

Frances Weinberger, a leaf stripper in a tobacco manufactory in Gospadince, Hungary, has become the heroine of the rural region in which her family dwell. From her small earnings, unknown to her people, Frances earned money enough to purchase a ticket in the Vienna lottery. At the recent drawing her ticket drew one of the capital prizes. This amounts to 50,000 florins, a little over $25,000. Such a fortune is regarded by her acquaintences as something exceedingly desirable. Accordingly the girl has already received proposals of marriage from all the young swains in that part of Hungary, and her humble home is besieged by young fellows who wish to marry her.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Seed Grain—B. Irwin.
Stray Ewe—B. Irwin,
Stray Sheep—Mrs. Wyvill.
Abstract Statement—Holland Tp.
Milk Hauling—B. Coleman.
Money Wanted—Markdale Methodist Trustees.

The Standard.

MARKDALE MARCH 12, 1885.

STATUTE LABOR.

Euphrasia council has passed a by-law reducing the number of days statute labor per assessment. This is a move in the right direction as the number of days statute labor to be performed is becoming quite a burden. True the roades in many places need it all, yet the multiplied number of days to be performed does not generally increase the amount of labor performed farmers are well aware. We hope to see other Municipalities follow Euphrasia's example.

Obituary.

George Jackson, Esq., who died on Friday last at his residence Durham was one of the pioneers of the county, was born in Hutton. Yorkshire, England, in 1809. he came to Canada in 1844, and after carrying on milling business for several years at Collingwood and Meaford, was appointed Crown Lands Agent in 1848 for Grey and Bruce, removing then to Durham He was district councillor for Bentick and Glenelg in 1849, and first Reeve of Bentick when the Municipal Act came into operation. He retained this office for a great many years by successive re-elections, and during the peroid of such incumbency he was Warden of the County of Grey for five years, three of which were consecutive He was the first parliamentary representative of the County of Grey when it became an independent County and seperate electoral division. With the exception of but two or three "breaks" he has represented either the County of Grey or one of the Ridings into which it has been subsequently divided, ever since that time until 1882 when he was defeated by the present member for South Grey, Dr. Landerkin. The very long period during which Mr. Jackson discharged the duties of the most important representative positions, carries its own comment as to his popularity. Deceased was ill but a short time, his wife a very esteamable lady and sincere christain, died just a week previous to his demise, at the ripe age of 87 years They had no family, and had amassed a veay considerable amount of this worlds goods. The funeral (we understand) took place on Sunday last.

Valuable Importation.

Mr. J. R. Trimbule, of this village has purchased from Mr. J. M. Lott of Edgar, Ont, the celebrated Imported Heavy Draught Stallion, Garfield. Imported by Robt. Graham of Pickering. Garfield has been purchased at a very high price, he is a bright bay marked with white, 4 years old stands 16¼ hands high, will weigh when in condition over 2200 lbs., he possesses good bone and lots of hair and has grand action, has a good temper and just the horse the farmers require, he is without doubt the finest young Draught Stallion in Canada, he has taken three first prizes, one silver medal and the second prize at Toronto Industrial Exhibition the fall of 1883, beating a large field of horses, among them the Sydenham Company's horse Oak Branch which Cost $3,000.00 and three weeks after the Toronto Exhibition the horse that beat Garfield, his pedigree not being correct, it was taken out of the registry book, and when Garfield was shown in Toronto he was in no condition to be shown, but the judges pronounced him the best and purest bred Clydesdale among the 23 horses that competed. Mr. W. J. Middleton of Barrie a prominent horseman, says Garfield is the finest and smothest made Clydesdale horse he has ever seen in Canada. Garfield stamps his colts right after himself. Garfield will be on exhibition at my stable Markdale from Saturday March 14th until March 25th, so that farmers may view and examine for themselves

PEDIGREE.

Garfield (four years old) is possessed of true Clydesdale characteristics, has very superior feet and pasterns, strong flat bones, stylish action, and a powerful and symmeterically built body.

Garfield was bred by Alex. Archibald, Auld Muir, Dalry, Ayrshire. Sire Zulu, 1st Prize at Highland Society's Show; g. sire, Lord Lyon (489); g. g. sire, Hercules (378); g.g.g. sire, Rob Roy (714). Sire of dam, Loch fergus Champion (649); sire of g. dam, Blossom (207) by Farmers' Fancy (301); sire of g. g. dam, Lively by Defiance (225).

England, Russia, and India.

Judging by the tenor of the recent cablegrams, it looks very much as though England and Russia were rapidly drifting into war, as they did into the Crimean conflict. In the opinion of many a struggle is inevitable sooner or later over the frontier question in Afghaniston, owing to the steady advance of the Russians and their evident determination to extend their frontiers until they come in contact with the British possessions, and menace the safety of India. The rumors of a native rising in the latter country fomented no doubt by Russian influence, increase the gravity of the situation.

Apart from the immediate and ostensible causes of disagreement, which in cases of this kind are seldom the real underlying motives which occasion war, there is one influential reason why Russia is likely to provoke a conflict. The Czar's empire is torn with internal dissensions. The spirit of discontent is spreading and Nihilism, though frequently suppressed, is always active and patiently watching its opportunity. A foregian war is the time-honored remedy of rulers for internal discontent. It seldom fails to distract the minds of the people from domestic topics, and to overwhelm the demands for reforms with the clamor of glory or revenge. Nothing is more likely than that the Czar may seek respite from a life of continual terror and apprehension by deliberately involving his country in a war with Britain at a time when the latter has already the difficult task of managing Egypt and quelling the Soudan rising on her hands.

As to the Hindoos, it would not be surprising should an insurrection on a large scale break out at any time. The English have done a great deal for India in introducing civilization, preventing the recurrence of famine and pestilence, and suppressing barbarous practices. But they have managed to get themselves disliked intensely owing to their insolent and overbearing treatment of the natives, whom they never allow to forget that they are a conquered race. The people have long been disaffected, and though to expel the English and submit to the sterner rule of the Russians would be jumping from the frying pan into the fire, it is not unlikely that the ambitious schemes of Russia may find many adherents among the Hindoos simply because they are anxious to rid themselves of the English yoke. Present difficulties may be adjusted peaceably, despite the threatening outlook, but there are all the elements of a fierce and bloody struggle for the supremacy in Asia of the relations of England, Russia, and India, and about all that can be hoped for is a staving off of the final day of settlement.—News.

Sale Register.

CREDIT SALE.—Mr. James Lackey, lot 13, con. 14, Artemesia will sell by auction on Monday, March 16th, his stock, implements, &c. Sale at one o'clock. Terms, nine months on good paper or 10 per cent per annum off for cash. Geo. Noble., auctioneer.

AUCTION SALE.—March 18th, on lot 2, con. 15, Glenelg, consisting of horses, cattle, sheep, implements, household furniture, &c., also farm for sale or to rent. Sale to commence at one o'clock. Terms, sums over $10 nine months on approved joint notes. Mrs. Foley, Proprietoress; Geo. Noble, Auctioneer.

GOING TO MANITOBA.—Mr. Richard A. Scott is going west and has called a credit sale for March 20th on his premises, lot 50, con. 2, Holland, when he will sell his large stock of farm stock, implements, household furniture, &c., &c. Sale at one o'clock. Terms, nine months credit on approved joint notes or liberal discount for cash in lieu of notes. Geo. Noble, Auctioneer.

THE BEST COMBINATION.

The best combination of blood cleansing, regulating, helth giving herbs, roots and barks enter nto Burdock Blood Bitters—a purely vegetable remedy that cures diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys.

ODDS AND ENDS.

GATHERED FROM EXCHANGES AND BOILED DOWN FOR THE STANDARD.

The Dominion Grange passed a resolution to memoralize the Dominion Government not to increase the duty on flour.

The vote on the question of incorporating Stratford as a City resulted in a majority of 840 in favor of incorporation.

Englishmen at length perceive that their nation is at war in ernest. Though it has long seemed to outsiders that the Egyptian trouble was most serious, it has taken a most bloody argument to convince the English that such was the case. It does not look as if there were to be any half-measures, henceforward, in the present Egyptian campaign, and the vigor of the preparations now going on indicates that the Mahdi is to be "smashed" inearnest. The sooner the better.

The Scott Act has been carried in Drummond county, Quebec, by over nine hundred majority.

Mrs. Gooderham, relict of the late Wm. Gooderham, Sr., is dead.

Proton will have two new cheese factories this year.

The bill for the incorporation of Thornbury was rejected by the private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature.

The Scot Act will be voted on in Wellington on the 2nd April.

The effort to have Melancthon township divided into two separate municipalities has fell through.

Mrs. Geo. Jackson, of Durham, died on the 27th ult. at the age of 87 years.

Meaford band are procuring silver instriments.

A company has been formed in Meaford and has purchased a large building for a roller skating rink, the floor is 100 x 40 feet.

The Baptists of Durham have purchased a lot and purpose erecting a new church.

Professor George Buckland, Deputy-Minister of Agriculture, died at Toronto on Saturday. Professor Buckland was well known to the Agricultural community of the Province and universally esteemed. He was a practical farmer himself.

Orangeville is having the telephone introduced,

Dominion Land Commissioner Walsh was found dead on the street in Winnipeg on Friday night last. He died of heart disease.

Orangeville is well supplied with ministers of the various denominations besides the salvation army, and two other such army's yet the Post refers to the citizens as Orangevillains. Evidently the town still lieth in wickedness.

A sad accident happned near Exeter which resulted in the death of a woman named Mrs. David Richards. Mr. Richards was on a straw stack cutting off a piece, when his wife came near and the piece fell on her. She was dead when released, having probably been killed instantly as the straw was frozen into a solid mass.

With the increase in the war estimates it is expected that the English expenditures next year will exceed the revenue by ten million pounds.

A London despatch says Mr. Gladstone's increasing eccentricities are causing his friends much uneasiness. The St. Stephens Revenue says it is feared his mind is giving way under the severe strain to which it is being subjected.

VEGETARIAN writes: "Immorality lurks in mutton crops, brutality in beef, perverseness in poultry, and villany in veal." Same at our boarding house.—Traveller's Magazine.

It is Computed that there were 52,000 locomotives upon the railways of Europe in 1882. The number of passengers carried during the year was 1,371,000,000, while the aggregate weight of goods carried was 715,000,000 tons.

The Sentinel-Star printing office at Conburg was burned last Monday.

8,500 Fenians are said to be drilling at Buffalo with a view of making a raid on Canada.

The British army is to be increased by 15,000 men.

FREEMAN'S Worm Powders require no other Purgative. They are safe and sure to remove all varieties of Worms.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, twenty five cents.

MARRIAGES.

GOVETT—RAMSAY—By the Rev. J. E. Howll, A. M., at the Methodist Parsonage, Owen Sound, on Wednesday, March 4th, Mr. Robert Govett, of Meaford, to Miss Martha L. Ramsay, of Sydenham.

DONOVAN—KIRVAN—By the same, on the same date, at the residence of James Lemon, Esq., Owen Sound, uncle of the bride, Mr. William Donovan, of Rochester, New York, and Miss Almira Kirvan, of Meaford.

CUTLING—BOLES—by the Rev. Thos. Grandy, at Markdale, on the 4th inst., Benjamin Cutling of Keppel, to Emma Boles of Euphrasia.

DEATHS.

LESLIE—In Glenelg, on the 11th inst., Sarah Jane, wife of Mr. Moses Leslie, aged 45 years 4 months.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 72	to	$0 74
Spring Wheat	0 72	to	0 74
Barley	50	to	67
Peas	54	to	56
Oats	32	to	33
Butter	15	to	00
Eggs	20	to	00
Apples	50	to	75
Potatoes	18	to	20
Hay	9 00	to	10 00
Pork	5 00	to	5 25
Flour	3 75	to	4 25

ESTRAY SHEEP.

STRAYED from the premises of the undersigned about the 1st January, a fine Ewe with black mark on one hind foot. Any person who will furnish me with information that will lead to her recovery will be suitably rewarded.

BURROWES IRWIN,
235-36 Markdale P. O.

ESTRAY SHEEP.

CAME to the premises of the subscriber about the 11th Oct. last, a ewe and lamb. Having been unable up to the present to find an owner I take this way of finding one. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expences and take them away

MRS. WYVILL,
135-37. Markdale, P. O.

BAKERY FOR SALE.

BUSINESS AND PREMISES for sale Cheap, being 1-fifth acre on Mill Street, opposite STANDARD office, with large roughcast two story house and bake oven, good stable and never-failing well of spring water. This is an excellent opening for a pushing man. Terms and further particulars can be had by applying on the premises.

MRS. MONTGOMERY,
234-36 Markdale P. O.

Farm for Sale.

160 acres, being lots 42 and 43 second range West of Toronto and Sydenham road, Holland, about 100 acres cleared and in good state of cultivation, ballance well timbered with Maple, Beech and Hemlock, and about 10 acres cedar swamp. Good roughcast house 22x33 with stone cellar, frame barn 40x60 and good out houses, all with stone foundations. Good young orchard bearing. The farm is well watered, two good wells, one at the house, a fine spring creek croses the farm near the rear. Only two miles from the thriving village of Williamsford, a station on the T. G. & B. branch of the C. P. R.

This is a rare chance, and terms will be made very easy. For futher particulars apply on the premises to

FRANCIS McCANN,
230-44 Williamsford P. O.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all kinds of
PUMPS,
Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.
Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's

PATENT LOAD LIFTER

For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.

☞ Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS,
CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES,
PURCES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James G. Russell,
Watchmaker, Jeweller,
217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs. Flour.
"	"	61 "	39	"	"
"	"	60 "	38	"	"
"	"	59 "	37	"	"
"	"	58 "	36	"	"
"	"	57 "	35	"	"

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it, if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,
Drugstore, - DURHAM.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED.

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

ROBT. ASKIN,
MARKDALE,
Has opened out a First-Class
UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT.
And therefore has supplied a want long felt.
COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

—FINE—

TCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

oods arriving every week, consisting of

CHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS, RMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES,
ES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

ches, Clocks and Jewellery aired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

O TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

mes C. Russell,

Watchmaker, Jeweller,

Flesherton.

HACYARDS
ELLOW OIL
URES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
ORM POWDERS.

pleasant to take. Contain their own tive. Is a safe, sure, and effectual ver of worms in Children or Adults

kdale Roller Mills.

subscriber begs leave to announce to mers of the surrounding country that rning out flour equal to any other ill.
ore waiting while the grist is being following is the scale of exchange:—

At Weighing	62 lbs.	40 lbs.	Flour.
"	61 "	39 "	"
"	60 "	38 "	"
"	59 "	37 "	"
"	58 "	36 "	"
"	57 "	35 "	"

al in proportion to amount of flour.
the average weight of new wheat to
s. to the bushel, and the most of it, rly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to hel.

John W. Ford.

EEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

D AND GARDEN SEEDS

place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S, gstore, - DURHAM.

w Butcher Shop.

best meats the country can produce hand and

ERED TO ALL PARTS OF TOWN WHERE ORDERED.

are of public patronage respectfully
.
mber the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

BT. ASKIN,

ARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

RTKING ESTABLISHMENT.

refore has supplied a want long felt.

CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all

ERAL FURNISHINGS

pplied on the shortes notice.

Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

TURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

WATCHES

Reduced at Factories.

GIVE PURCHASERS THE BENEFIT.

SWISS LEAVRS,

5 Jewelles, Silver Hunting Cases, $9.50.

ELGIN MOVEMENTS,

oz. Coin Cases, $12.00; 4 oz. $14.50; 5 oz. $17.00.

Waltham and Springfield

MOVEMENTS KEPT IN.

FINE GRADES
At Close Cash Prices.

Warrants 1 and 2 Years, according to Grade, Clocks, Silverware, and Wedding Rings 18 k. Fine Stock in other lines of goods.

Difficult Repairing a Specialty.

W. A. Brown.
JEWELLER,
MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

STACKS of cottonades at J. R. Trimble's.

FARM to rent or sell, apply to J. G. Irving, Markdale.

EX Lieutenant Governor, Canchon, Manitoba, is dead.

WE regret to learn that Mr. John Lyth M. P. P. is ill.

STACKS of Denims, Blue Brown and striped at J. R. Trimble's.

A profitable plant: a spring advertisement in the STANDARD.

Get your envelopes and note paper neatly printed at the STANDARD office.

AARON WYVILL returned recently from visiting friends on Squgog Island.

PRIME clover and timothy Seeds, at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

STACKS of cotton shirtings Factory Cotton and Bleach Cottons at J. R. Trimble's.

FOR Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

JOE and Eva Allen, of Allenford, have been visiting friends in this district the past week.

FOR Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

THE handsomest Dress Goods in Silks, Ottoman Cords, and Cashmeres at W. J. McFarland's.

The big rush still continues to Walker Bros. for Sap Buckets, Sugar Kettles, etc.

MARKDALE lodge of A. O. U. W. have decided to reduce their initiation fee from $12.00 to $8.25.

22 lbs. Vozetta Currents $1.00. Salt, best quality under cover, $1.00 per barrel, at McFarland's.

THE Joseph Hill works at Oshawa, sued at $33,000, were sold at auction for 24½ cents on the dollar.

Now is the time to buy your Sap Buckets: Walker Bros. are selling them cheap.

EUPHRASIA Council meets the last Saturday in each month instead of the first Friday as in the past.

LADIES Button Boots for $1.00 cash at J. R. Trimble's. Those goods are worth from $1.50 to $1.75.

MR. and Mrs. Thomas were suddenly called away to the funeral of Mrs. Thomas' brother at Hespeler.

BIG Stock of Rejuvenator Bitters on hand at Smith the barber's, and they are selling off fast.

J. R. TRIMBLE has received a large consignment of mens Ready-made Tweed suits. He will give you your choice for $6.50, spot cash. These goods are worth double the money.

ANXIETY FOR EGYPT CONTINUES,

—AND THE EXCITEMENT CAUSED BY—

Mr. Still Coming to Assist Hamilton

To take PHOTOGRAPHS is rapidly increasing.

This will be the best chance you ever had of securing Life-Like Pictures. Mr. Still, the celebrated Photographer, will arrive on the 11th and remain until the 19th March.

☞ Don't loose this rare chance. Bring the babies early in the day.

JAMES HAMILTON.

THE worst drift of the season was on Monday last. Trains were seriously delayed, and all roads were more or less blocked.

WILL the party who took a walking cane from the Methodist Church last week, kindly leave it at this office, as the party is known.

MR. and Mrs. Turner visited friends in Chatsworth this week, returning on the last train before the snow blockade on Monday.

MONEY WANTED.—On the best of security, for a term of years, Communicate with G. S. Bowes, Markdale, Secretary, for particulars.

"PENNY wise and pound foolish:" Purchasing highly colored trashy Teas, when you can get a pure natural cup at McFarland's, direct importer.

OXEN FOR SALE.—A well matched pair of oxen rising four years old, well trained. For particulars apply to Geo. Ireton, one mile from Barrhead Mills. 134 36

REV. W. H. W. BOYLE, Paris, will please accept thanks for subscription to STANDARD. His many friends will be glad to learn that his health is improving, he having passed through a severe illness recently.

J. R. TRIMBLE has purchased part of the Bankrupt Stock of Boots and Shoes of John Garrett & Co. of Hamilton, and is offering them to his customers at exceedingly low figures for spot cash.

J. H. Hull is agent for Flury's Sylvester's and Wilkinson's agricultural implements. All kinks of repairs for the above manufacturers kept always on hand. Shop on Mill Street known as Hull's cooper shop.

EVEN MONEY.—Fare for colonists from Montreal and all points West on the C. P. R. including stations on the T. G. & B. by all-rail route to Winnipeg for $20. Call on the station agent for full particulars.

MR. HAMILTON, the photographer, is very fortunate in being able to secure the services of Mr. Still for a week. Mr. S. is an excellent artist. He arrived yesterday (Wednesday) and will remain until the 19th inst.

MR. BEATY, M. P., intends to introduce a bill prohibiting the sale and manufacture of spirits in the Dominion of Canada. This is going to the root of the evil; stop the manufacture of the article and, doubtless, the sale will be greatly lessened.

NOTICE,—The contract for hauling milk to Markdale Cheese Factory for season of 1885 will be let by auction at the Markdale House on Saturday, the 21st March, at 2 o'clock. All interested parties will take notice. B. Coleman, President; H. D. Irwin, Sec.

WE are pleased to notice that J. R. Trimble, Esq., of Markdale has purchased the Imported Clydesdale Stallion, Garfield, this it said by competent judges to be the best horse of his class in Canada, no doubt Mr. Trimble has had to pay a handsome sum to secure such an animal and certainly deserves to be well patronized.

COMMENCED BUSINESS.—Mr. Dan McFarlane wishes to announce to the public that he has opened out a blacksmith shop opposite the Markdale House, where he will be happy to wait on the public. Having given the best of satisfaction to customers while in the employ of others, I feel satisfied I can do the same now. Dan McFarlane.

Owing to my heavy loss at the recent fire, and the expense of starting businesss again, I positively request all who are indebted to me either by over-due note or account to settle the same at once. Do not look for further notice. I will be found in A. Turner's Drug Store, where I will keep my books. D. J. Shanahan.
234-35

FARM to rent or sell, Apply to J. G. Irving, Markdale.

WONDER whose duty it is to clear the sidewalk opposite the late fire. It's high time the rubbish was cleared away.

THE social held last evening at the Methodist Parsonage was largely attended, the house being literally packed. A very enjoyable time was spent. Proceeds $23. This is the last of the season.

THE report in last weeks Advance to the effect that the tools of the A. O. U. W. were burned in the late fire was incorrect, the fire not being near the hall.

THE Markdale correspondent to the Durham Chronicle says: The STANDARD report of the number in attendance at the assembly was incorrect. For our part we have no idea how many were present, but were informed by one of the gentlemen who was present that there were 17 couple. The above correspondent says there were 27 couple present. Which will we believe? Give it up.

WE had a brief but very pleasant call from our esteemed friend Mr. E. D. Wilcox, formerly Jeweller of this village. He has been three years in the North West and has returned to make his home in Ontario. He has not yet decided in what town he will hang out his shingle, but wherever it may be, the community will have a desirable citizen and an honorable business man. Mr. Wilcox did business in Markdale a number of years, and his departure from our midst was exceedingly regretted by all.

THE MAGNET is a new reading paper, published in Toronto, and is the spiciest paper published on the continent, containing the best selections from all the best fun papers in the world, besides rich original matter. It is for sale by all booksellers. Price 5 cents. THE MAGNET FREE PURCHASING AGENCY. In connection with the Magnet, the publisher has established an agency for the purchasing of goods of every kind, and in any quantity, for parties living anywhere in the Dominion outside of the city. The Agency buys anything that any person wants at the lowest prices, and ship the goods by mail or express, charging nothing for the services. See particulars in the Magnet.

Address: MAGNET PURCHASING AGENCY, 88 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont.

Town Line Tea-Meeting.

A very successful tea-meeting was held at the town line Methodist church on Wednesday evening last. Tea was served at the house owned by Mr. J. Hamilton, a short distance from the church, the tables were loaded with the danties which the ladies of that neighborhood are proverbial for supplying. After tea all adjourned to the church to enjoy the entertainment which was to follow. On motion Mr. G. S. Bowes took the chair. Short addresses were delivered by Mr. D. R. Ellis, Joseph Hawkens, E. W. Moore, Rev. T. Grandy and Rev. W. Casson; Mrs. Casson also gave a very humorous reading on young men, and several others selections were given in a very acceptable manner, these were interspersed with music by the choir which was rendered very creditably. The Misses Stinson also sang a very fine piece accompanied by Mr. McDonald and Mrs. Logan. After the usual votes of thanks the meeting closed, all being well pleased with their evening's enjoyment. Proceeds $31.—COM.

A VOICE FROM THE UNITED STATES.

I have suffered for the last 20 years with Dyspepsia and General Debility, and tried many remedies, but with little success until I used Burdock Blood Bitters, when relief was quick and permanent. A. LOUGH, Alpena, Mich., U. S.

Euphrasia Council.

The council met pursuant to adjournment on the 28th day of Febuary, A. D. 1885.

Members all present except Mr. Boyd.

Minutes of last session of council read and confirmed.

The Committee appointed to enquire into the validity of the Treasurer's securities laid their reports before council shewing that all matters in relation thereto are in a satisfactory and safe condition.

The council approved of and adopted said report.

The Reeve and Mr. Hurd were appointed to ascertain the cost of building a bridge over Beaver River at lot 5, con. 5, and report at next meeting of council.

The petition of R. Johnston and others relative to 12 & 13 side line, laid over for further consideration.

500 copies of minutes of council for last year to be printed, by C. W. Rutledge, Markdale.

The collector was authorized to strike off his Roll $40.06 returned in error as arrears against lot 17, concession 2, and charged to Thomas Harper.

The time for the collectors to return their rolls, was extended until next meeting of council.

The Reeve was appointed to employ parties to protect the bridges over Beaver River when the ice shall be breaking up.

The clerk was ordered to call on J. Myles, to fill up an excavation forthwith which he made on the fourth line, and also ordered that in case Mr. Myles should fail to comply to lay information before a justice of the peace.

By law No. 348, reducing the statute labour was carried through the different stages and passed.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to T. B. Gilleland, Esq., P. L. S., the sum of $7.00, payment for surveying deviation at 697 side road in the 3rd and 4th concessions.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to Messrs. Rousell & Hutchinson, Toronto, the sum of $30.58, payment for stationary up to date.

To remit to J. Rutherford Owen Sound $12.78, payment for stationary up to date, and to remit to J. Farewell, Thornbury, $10.50, payment for printing.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows, via:—Abraham Holden, $2.50, repairing road scrapers; James Arthur, $1.49, payment for plank; John Gibson, $9.15, repairing bridge on 5th line; Benjamin Kenzie, 75 cents, repairing road scraper; George Loughead, $4, repairing bridge and culvert; H. Hurd, Esq., $5.00, for relief of J. Feeny, Indigent; John Blain, $180.00, part payment building bridge; R. Dunlop, $8.40, registering births, marriages and deaths; J. Ross, $1.00, removing stone on 7th line.

Council adjourned until the last Saturday in March next.

ROBERT DUNLOP,
Clerk.

GOOD ADVICE.

If our readers will accept proffered advice, they will always keep a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil at hand for use in emergencies, such as Burns, Scalds, Wounds, Lameness, Croup, Chilblains, Rheumatism, and all varieties of aches. pains and inflammations, it will ever be found reliable.

Monthly Report of S. S. No. 5, Glenelg.

February—4th Class—Charlie Robson, 258; John Robson, 237; Marion McNab, 209.

3rd Class—Asa Robson, 259; Willie Banks, 257; Willie Nelson, 254.

2nd Class—Alleyia McNally, 204; Katie Martin, 202; Willie Jack, 180.

1st Class—Maggie Nelson, 119; Ellen Neil, 150; Annie Neil, 68.

A. J. WHITE,
Teacher.

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense, on the

Most APPROVED

plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

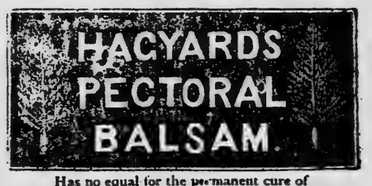
A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat.

☞ Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219



FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres, mostly cleared and under cultivation. This farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For full particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE, Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO. NOBLE, Markdale. 234

NOTICE.

FOR SALE—Aged working horse and span young mares also about 25 tons prime timothy hay in barn.

233-35 WM. BROWN.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP

NOTICE is hereby given that the partnership which has for some time past been carried on by Samuel Sarjeant and Robert Burnside, under the firm of Sarjeant & Burnside, at the village of Markdale, in the County of Grey, as butchers, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

As witness our hands this 24th day of February, A.D. 1885.

S. SARJEANT,
R. BURNSIDE.

Witness—C. W. RUTLEDGE.

P. S.—The business will be carried on in the premises occupied by the late firm in Markdale, by the undersigned, to whom all accounts and debts due the said firm must be paid, and all liabilities owing by said firm will be paid by him.

SAMUEL SARJEANT.

NOTICE.

ALL parties indebted to me by Note or Book account, or Due-bill, are requested to settle the same at once with Adam Turner, as I must have these accounts straightened up. I can't do without the money. My books and accounts are left with him, and he is authorized to receive the money and give receipts.

T. S. SPROULE.

A RARE CHANCE.

SAW-MILL FOR SALE.

THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4½ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill; a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.

J. A. DUNCAN,
Markdale P. O.

230 tf

FARM FOR SALE.

FOR SALE, or to rent, lot 14, con. 12, Holland, 100 acres, 55 cleared, comfortable log house, barn log and frame 32 x 50, first class well, ten minutes walk from school and post office, a decided bargain. Apply to F. TAYLOR, Markdale, or R. S. McLAUGHLIN, Hayden.

FOR THE FARMER.

How to Raise the Calf.

I will give the benefit of my experience in raising calves, for many years, and the best evidence I can offer that my system is right is that I have been fairly successful, having never lost but one matured calf in thirty years. Two or three weeks previous to calving, the cow is separated entirely from the herd, and given a large, airy lying in stall, and is here kept as nearly in perfect quiet as possible. As the time approaches for her to drop the calf, I watch her carefully, so as to render any assistance that may be required. Sometimes the life of a valuable calf may be saved by a few moments of timely assistance. The calf, when dropped, is allowed to remain with the mother for one week, and sometimes longer, as judgment may dictate. Some calves that are a little weak may require a mother's care even longer, but ordinarily a week will answer. The cow is then taken to her accustomed stall in the dairy. I always remove the cow at night, and she seldom misses the calf more than a day.

Now for the calf. The first time I undertake to feed it, I milk about one quart from the mother, and generally succeed in getting about two-thirds down—having sucked the night before, it is not yet hungry enough to drink. At night about two quarts is milked, and perhaps two-thirds will be drunk. Generally the third time they will drink without any trouble. After one week, in which I increase a little each day, but go slow, until the third week, they are on a ration of half new and half skimmed, and are fed three times a day—morning, noon and night. They will do much better if you have six quarts of milk to give each calf—to give them two quarts three times a day—than to give them three quarts twice a day.

This brings us up to the fourth week, when we discontinue the new milk entirely, and feed only skimmed, and you may now feed safely three quarts three times a day, and at noon a handful of dry wheat bran is thrown in their dish after they have finished drinking. In another week this may be done twice a day with entire safety. Calves having thus been fed will never have their digestive organs overtaxed, and at the age of ten or twelve weeks you can crowd along about as fast as you please. At that age I chop three parts oats and one part buckwheat for feed. I have never found it necessary to use any of the highly stimulated feeds to make fine calves, believing I can have a healthier animal, and one of stronger constitution at one year of age, although they may not make as great a growth the first few weeks. I never allow calves to be exposed to storms and keep them in a warm, dry place in cold weather, and their quarters are kept clean and neat; also, I never allow calves to drink cold milk until they are three months old, and last, but not by any means least, I do not trust to boys or hired men to feed them, always preferring to do it myself.

Feeding and Care of Swine.

None of our farm animals answer more quickly to, or yield more profit from good treatment, than swine; and, in many localities, none are more neglected than these homely, but useful animals. In the West, where hogs run at large, and follow the droves of feeding steers, their management after they are weaned is very simple, but where hogs are kept in yards or pens, and are expected to subsist mainly on skimmed milk, or the refuse from the kitchen, more care is necessary, and their wants must be carefully attended to, or they will not thrive as they ought. The most important thing to remember in feeding hogs is, that there is no such thing as "stock order;" the pig that is not so fed that it gains in weight continually and rapidly, is not a profitable animal, and soon eats more feed than it is worth. Many farmers keep a pen of store hogs in low condition through the winter, at a dead loss; the pigs do not grow, and yet eat almost as much as the fattening hogs. Here, again, we come to the "food of support." The larger part of the pig's food is needed to keep him alive, and prevent him from going backward; and a very little more food, judiciously applied, will usually make all the difference between profit and loss in keeping pigs.

The cheapest pork is that made from pigs which have been fed all that they would eat. If it does not pay to make pork by liberal feeding, it does not pay to make it at all, and it had better be given up. The care of pigs should begin as soon as they are born; sometimes the sows are very savage, and, if not prevented will eat the pigs as soon as they appear. If a sow shows this disposition she should be watched and the pigs taken from her. When her labor is finished, they should be carefully put down beside her, and she will generally take up with them at once. The pen for breeding sows should be roomy and warm, the floor nearly level, so that the weight of her body will not settle down and crush the pigs.

A Windy Day in March.

No portion of the year so tries the cheerful temper of the farmer as does the the month of March. From childhood he has been told, and the almanacs have repented it in his maturer years, that spring begins with March. This idea has become so firmly fixed that successive yearly disappointments have not dislodged it, but as each succeeding March comes round, he feels that it should bring spring weather and spring work. We are apt to think with something akin to envy, of the English farmer, whose weather comes true to the almanac, and whose spring, if it does not begin in March, is not deferred until May, but borrows the latter days of February. Even in the generally genial climate of England, March is proverbially a blustering and uncertain month. Even in our era the Anglo-Saxons had in their language names for March which meant "rugged month," and "stormy month" These people believed that March had borrowed three days from April, and expressed the character of these days in a proverb, which is said to be still in use by the rustics in parts of England and Scotland. It said of these three borrowed days:—

"The first it shall be wind and weet;
The next it shall be snow and sleet;
The third it shall be sic freeze,
Shall gar the birds stick to the trees."

With us, in some years, this ancient description of its last three days will apply to all the others that precede them. The thoughtful farmer will the more patiently endure the bluster of the month, if he thinks of the part these uncomfortable winds play in preparing his lands for the plow. A March wind is proverbially a drying one and it takes up the moisture left by melting snows with an astonishing rapidity. These winds are even fertilizing his fields. As they rapidly remove the water from the surface, more comes up from below by capillary attraction, bringing withit the plant-food it holds in solution; as this in turn is evaporated, whatever it contains is left in the soil, within reach of the roots of the crops. It is a mistake to fret about the weather. However disagreeable it may be, if we look with believing eyes we can see that every dispensation of nature is ever working for our good.

An Extraordinary Blind Man.

The blind engineer, John Metcalf, is one of the wonders of history. He was born in 1717, at Knaresborough, Yorkshire, England, the scene of Eugene Aram's famous crime. At six years he went blind, but disability did not disable him. He helped steal birds' nests and rob orchards, learned to ride, acquired a knowledge of music, and was very fond of cock-fighting and other sports. In an old picture of a cock-pit the blind engineer is seen betting on the game he could not see.

At twenty-one Metcalf was a young giant, over six feet in height, and full of mischief. In 1745 he enlisted as a musician in the army. He was a smuggler and a stage and wagon-owner; in short, everything likely to turn to money in his hands. He contracted for and laid down some of the best roads in Yorkshire, bossing the job himself.

It is of him that a famous statesman of the time observed: "Considering what this blind man can do, if he had his sight he would be the most useful man in the kingdom."

Dr. Bew, who was personally acquainted with Metcalf, in his account of him says:

"This man passed the younger part of his life as a wagoner, and occasionally as a guide in intricate roads during the night, or when the tracks were covered with snow. His present occupation is that of projector and surveyor of highways in difficult and mountainous parts. With the assistance only of a staff I have several times met this man traversing the roads, ascending precipices, exploring valleys, and investigating their several extents, forms and situations, so as to answer his designs in the best manner. The plans which he designs and the estimates he makes are done in a method peculiar to himself, and which he can not well convey the meaning of to others. His abilities in this respect are, nevertheless, so great that he finds constant employment."

Headless Officers in the Soudan.

Close observers notice a new type in this Nile Expedition—a class of officer very different from that seen in the old days. He is quiet, singularly well-mannered, and courteous, better bred, perhaps than the men who have gone before. He talks fluently, pleasantly, but not much, strange to say, about horses or the fair sex; he does not drink or swear; in ordinary life he strikes you as a most unassuming, unpretentious young fellow. He is very willing, and will do anything—when he is told; but he has no initiative about him, he never originates anything for himself; he does not seem to realize that he ought to take the lead with his men, to get things done somehow, to push through by hook or by crook; that if one way won't do another must be tried. He is apparently invertebrate, without any backbone; and unless he gets orders he does nothing at all. Possibly the Egyptian climate tends to develop helplessness; but there may be a sharp awakening for some of the listless before the campaign is at an end.

Mark Twain's Favorite Style of Reception.

Mark Twain, it seems, is a very congenial, moderate fellow, and likes a convivial time with friends. A few years ago a committee of newspaper men waited upon him and tendered some sort of entertainment in his behalf.

"Well," said he, with his customary colloquial limp, "I've had a good deal of this sort of marble palace and gilded chandelier business and I don't want any more, but if I could get together with the boys in a quite, cozy place, where a fellow might smoke a cob pipe and put his feet on the table if he wanted to, then I don't know but what I'd enjoy it."

The place was procured and the humorist sat with the pipe and tobacco beside him and his hat on his head and related yarns the whole night through to the edification of a score of fellow scribblers.

USEFUL HINTS.

Stewed Celery.—Wash and trim four or five heads of celery. Cut them in equal lengths—about four inches long is the best size. Stew them in milk until quite tender, they will take about an hour and a half to cook. Season with salt. When tender, lay them in a vegetable tureen thicken the milk with an ounce of butter, and the same quanity of flour, and serve.

Railway Pudding.—One tablespoonful flour, one tablespoonful pounded sugar, one egg, one teaspoonful baking powder. Mix all these ingredients well together, then add a little milk sufficient to make into a thick batter. Pour into a buttered flat tin, and bake ten minutes in a quick oven, When cooked spread over it a layer of preserve, and roll over three times while hot.

Rice Milk Soup.—To every ½lb. of whole rice allow three quarts of milk and sugar to taste, Wash the rice well, put it into an enamelled saucepan, and pour the milk over it. Let it come to a boil over a clear fire and then draw the saucepan on to the side and allow to simmer for two hours, or rather more. Just before removing it from the fire, add sufficient sugar to taste. Serve either hot or cold for supper. This is an excellent vegetarian dish.

To Stiffen and Glaze Collars, etc.—Melt a lump of borax in half a wineglass of hot water, mix it in cold white starch; have the things dry before starching them, then starch well once only. Place the collars and cuffs singly in a towel with a fold of it between each row, roll up each shirt tightly, have a box-iron ready, and iron at once very quickly. The heater should be red hot, and if kept moving quickly will not scorch. Each article as finished to be placed close to the fire. The cuffs and collars are best on a tray, and it is placing the shirts, etc, close to the fire stiffens them, the borax gives the glaze. I was taught by a London clear-starcher, and have found the plan successful always.

Mixed Pickles.—To every two quarts of vinegar allow two ounces bruised ginger, two ounces, two ounces of mustard, of salt, one ounce of mustard seed, half an ounce of turmeric, half an ounce of ground black pepper, a saltspoonful of cayenne pepper, half an ounce of cloves bruised. Have a large jar with an air-tight lid, put into it as much vinegar as is required, put the mustard, turmeric, pepper, and cayenne in a basin, mix them thoroughly with sufficient vinegar to make into a smooth paste, and add to the vinegar in the jar. Keep this liquor in a warm place, and stir every morning for a month. It will now be ready for use. Put vegetables into it as they come into season, taking care to pick them on a dry day, and wipe them with a cloth to remove any moisture or blacks. The following vegetables may be used: Cauliflower, white cabbage, onions celery, sliced cucumbers, gherkins, French beans, nasturtiums, capsicums, young and old carrots, beetroot, radishes. The vegetables which require it should be sliced, and the cauliflowers divided into smaller bunches. Put these into the pickle raw, and at the end of the season, when as many of the vegetables have been added as could be procured, store it away in bottles, and tie over with a bladder. It will be ready to eat in about nine or twelve months.

The Bayuda Desert.

A correspondent writing from Gakdul thus describes the Bayuda desert: The southwest of Afghanistan and the eastern part of Belochistan, the wildest part of Armenia, and that part of Arabia that lies near Aden, are, bad as they appear when one is travelling in them, perfect paradises compared with this Bayuda desert as it appears during the present season. Everything but a little mimosa, and close to the wells a few tufts of wiry and wooden grass, is withered and dried. The mountains seem but heaps of brown or black rubble, and though fuel is plentiful water is scarce. There are no historical remains. There does not appear to have even been any resident population save a few hundred wandering half-bred Arabs, who have now retired with their flocks to the pools which exist in the inaccessible gorges of the hill ranges, and who here wait events. We have had a meat ration for two days, but the cattle were driven up from Korti, and not so much as a goat have we seen, though some sportsmen have been good enough shots to get gazelle and antelope, which, with sand grouse, make a very acceptable change from ration fare. The sun is usually hot from 8 till 4, but at most times the kindly north wind tempers the heat, and sometimes it even blows with violence enough to tear down the branches of the acacia trees, from which camels and flocks have stripped all the leaves within reach. Throughout Nubia the insects are most troublesome, but here the ants leave one alone. The beautiful bronze and gold hornets are too busy thinking about getting a drink of water to concern themselves about stinging. But to the terrors of the night on the ground are added the fears of the black scorpion, as well as of his sandy-colored and larger brother. Altogether this is a country to keep away from, and we here may well hope to get out of it soon, for it is even now a very Gehenna, and what it will be in three months' time the imagination shrinks from contemplating.

The Rev. Mr. Springer and Professor Huxley have both recently asserted that tobacco is superior as a sweetener and equalizer of the temper. Wives who persuade their husbands to wear off smoking have probably found out this fact for themselves by this time.

Saved from an Avalanche.

Avalanches have been more frequent than is usual at this time of the year on the Swiss side of the Great St Bernard Hospice. Travellers who have passed over Mont Jou will remember the line of long posts that runs down the middle of the gorge leading toward Martigny, although every one may not be aware that they mark the track taken in winter to avoid the avalanches which often at this season sweep over and obstruct the ordinary zigzag road. Nearly every morning a monk, accompanied by two or three servants and several mastiffs, goes out to look for footsore and possibly perishing wayfarers. It is literally a man hunt, for the mastiffs quest like any other hounds, and can scent bodies at a considerable depth under the snow.

About ten days ago Canon Luisier and two servants who went out on an expedition of this sort, narrowly escaped exchanging the role of saviors for that of victims. While still close to the Hospice the Canon heard a sound he knew only too well—the thunder of a coming avalanche. He bounded backward at the pas gymnastique, shouting at the same time to the two servants to do likewise. The avalanche passed without touching him, but when he looked round his companions had disappeared. The next moment, however, one of them struggled out of a heap of snow. But where was the other? He could neither be seen nor heard, and the survivors felt certain that he was irrevocably lost.

After a second and longer look, however, the Canon fancied he could see a black mark on the snow some distance away. They ran to the spot at once and, surely enough, the black mark was the lost man's boot. The rest of him was buried under the avalanche. An attempt to drag him out by the leg failed—the weight of snow was too great. There was nothing for it but to dig their companion out with their hands. It was done only just in time. He was quite insensible and recovered with great difficulty. A few seconds more and he would have perished. The man's name is Collombier, and this makes the third time he has been overtaken by an avalanche and rescued, as by a miracle, from the jaws of death.—[London Times.

Hunting a Buffalo.

As we were ascending a hill, keeping a sharp lookout for game, suddenly the captain bawled out: "Boys, there's a buffalo."

"Where?" cried Mel and I, at the same time.

"On the hill over there to the right," yelled Cap. "Don't you see him? Why, he's as big as a house."

There he was, indeed. And in the haze that perpetually surrounds these hills he appeared to be forty feet high, and to grow bigger every time we looked at him "I'll tell you how we'll fix him," said Cap. "We'll tie our horses here; then I'll surround him and drive him down that ravine, and you can hide at the mouth and shoot him when he comes out." The plan looked feasible to us, and we concealed ourselves near the mouth of the ravine and waited, with our hearts in our mouths, for the noble game. The captain had about a mile to go to round him up, and we were getting awfully impatient, when suddenly we heard a great rushing sound in the ravine, and soon the gigantic animal came forth crashing through the brush that lined the ravine. We only got a glimpse of him, but that was enough, and we both fired and had the satisfaction of seeing him stagger forward through the brush a few steps and fall—the noblest game huntsmen ever brought down. We raised a shout of triumph and started toward our prey, when we heard a great hallooing, and looking up the hill saw the captain running down toward us waving his hands and shouting at the top of his voice. We thought something was the matter, and waited for him. The first words he used, as he ran up breathless, were:

"You are fools; you didn't shoot him, did you?" "You bet we did," I replied. "Well, I never saw such infernal idiots! Can't you see anything? That was nothing but a bull—a Durham bull, belonging to some cattle men here. Didn't you hear me holler?" We didn't. Sure enough the animal was a bull belonging to a neighboring ranch, and that buffalo steak cost us $25 apiece, and our stomachs were not strong enough to eat it.

A Monster Gun.

Preparations are being made at Woolwich arsenal for the proof trials of a enormous gun, which is now in process of construction at Elswick, and which will be delivered a few months hence. The gun will weigh 110 tons and have a carriage of 90 tons, and, the total weight of 200 tons being considerably in excess of previous undertakings, special arrangements will have to be made in almost every particular. The gun will be a breech-loader, and will have a bore of 16½ inches. Its length will be 43 feet 8 inches but its extreme diameter at the breech end will be only 5 feet 6 inches, and it will have a very elongated chase or barrel, tapering down to 28 inches, with a slight swelling at the muzzle. After the gun has been proven at Woolwich it will be conveyed to Shoeburyness for the purpose of testing its range and accuracy. Three guns of this description are to be manufactured for the royal navy.

"Are you going to take this speech verbatim?" said a guest at a recent banquet to a reporter, as a gentleman rose to respond to a toast. "No," was the reply; "I'm a friend of the gentleman." All reporters are not so considerate.

The Dash Across the Desert.

"An Old Campaigner," who has contributed to the London Daily World a biographical sketch of Sir Herbert Stewart, thus comments on Wolseley's plan of "dashing across the desert."

The "dash across the desert" was a task which required not only courage and coolness in the leader of it, but consummate skill. Critics, military or civil, may differ as to the strategy which required such a manœuvre to be employed, but there has been no conflicting opinions regarding the gallant way in which it was carried out by the men to whom Wolseley entrusted its execution. The movement was one which had almost the boldness of desperation about it. It has been said that the general commanding the expedition, when deciding to make a strike with part of his force across the desert from Korti to Metemmeh, anticipated only a "march over," and no more serious dangers than some exhaustion among the soldiers from a weary march over the sand, and, perhaps, a scarcity of water. But Wolseley is hardly the man to whom this kind of censure can apply. He has done many daring things, but his boldness has always been tempered with the so-called better part of valor, discretion. Years ago he had written: "Military men are far less ready to confiding than civilians in dealing with uncivilized nations. The little experience that I have had goes to prove that the latter are far from rash, and less likely to take precautions which ordinary military knowledge would indicate as necessary. How often have I known circumstances accompanying an army scoff at the precaution of general officers, forgetting altogether that any commander who fails to provide against every possible mishap or probable contingency is deeply culpable. By the strange contrariness of human nature it is generally these responsible gentlemen who are first and loudest in their abuse of officers who fail in anything through rashness or want of caution."

The gentlemen who live at home at ease and discuss critically the actions of a general in the field would do well to keep these remarks in mind before taking it for granted that Lord Wolseley had not calculated upon the possibility of the desert's force being attacked in the desert. He has been blamed for not having taken a stronger force, if he did foresee the contingency. But it may be allowed that he sent the full numbers he could spare, and for whose wants he could arrange transport with food and reserve ammunition. The attempt was of necessity a very risky one, but the risk had to be accepted, and although the heavy loss of life is to be deplored, the success of the plan has been put beyond doubt. A great deal of argument has been wasted over the vexed question of the best formation, and Gen. Hamley, the greatest perhaps of our military critics, thinks that Stewart would have done better if he fought in echelon. But then there are other critics who have had practical experience of fighting hordes of fanatical savages with small bodies of troops, and they have given as their opinion that had Stewart adopted any other formation than that of the square his men would have been surrounded and cut to pieces. It may be surely allowed that General Stewart made what he considered to be the best disposition he could of his little force with a view to carry out his instructions to get to the Nile bank, and with as little loss of life as possible. The terrible rush of the fanatical enemy despising the fear of death forced back by sheer weight of numbers one portion of the square, and although these brave savages were killed to a man our force suffered heavily. But the square formation saved the remainder. Before such an onset the thin red line of Englishmen would have been swept away. All accounts agree that Sir Herbert Stewart showed himself to be a fitting leader of brave men.

How Yale Students Dry Their Skeletons.

The students of the Yale Medical School, New Haven, or some of them at least, are likely to get into trouble on account of carelessness manifested in their intense devotions to their studies. From one of the housetops in the neighborhood of the college for nearly a month there has been a skeleton exposed for dissecting purposes, and the women and children in that vicinity tremble with fear. One of the boarders of the house in question is a member of the medical school, and during in some manner become possessed of a skeleton he wished to have it dried and bleached. Powerful field glasses directed against the ghastly object showed that there is still ligament and small particles of flesh adhering to the bones. What the offensive odor has emanated from the bones, the residents in the vicinity are indignant and there will probably be complaints to the Board of Health or police authorities in order to test the matter and ascertain whether the inhabitants of the neighborhood must endure the existence of such uncanny sights. It is said that this is one case of many and that there are perhaps a dozen students in the Yale Medical School who dry their skeletons in the same manner.—[New York Herald.

A 12-year-old boy entered a store, threw down 15 cents, and called "Gimme 'The One-Eyed Demon of the Ditches,' 'Crimson-Handed Bill'; or, 'The King of the Highwaymen,' and 'Mrs. Slumpkins, the Queen of the Shoplifters,' of the Half-Dime series." And then the English review once sneeringly asked "Who reads an American book?"

The Dash Across the Des

"An Old Campaigner," who ntributed to the Lond
orld a biographical sketch Herbert Stewart, thus olseley's plan of "dashing sert."

The "dash across the desert"
k which required not only olness in the leader of it, but te skill. Critics, military or y differ as to the strategy ured such a manœuvre to be t there has been no conflict s regarding the gallant way in was carried out by the men to olseley entrusted its execution.
vement was one which had dness of desperation about it.
en said that the general expedition, when deciding to ike with part of his force bert from Korti to Metemmeh, ed only a "march over," and no ious dangers than some ong the soldiers from a weary or the sand, and, perhaps, a water. But Wolseley is hardly n to whom this kind of ply. He has done many daring his boldness has always been ed with the so-called better or, discretion. Years ago he sten: "Military men are far ng than civilians in dealing with lized nations. The little t I have had goes to prove y are far from rash, and less ake precautions which ordinary knowledge would indicate as y. How often have I known mpanying an army scoff at the of general officers, forgetting her that any commander who vide against every possible probable contingency is deeply le. By the strange contrariety man nature it is generally sible gentlemen who are first est in their abuse of officers who nything through rashness or tion the gentlemen who live at e and discuss critically the eral in the field would do well to e remarks in mind before anted that Lord Wolseley ulated upon the possibility of force being attacked in the has been blamed for not having stronger force, if he did ingency. But it may be allowed ent the full numbers he could for whose wants he could eport with food and reserve
n. The attempt was of risky one, but the risk had to be d, and although the heavy ht be deplored, the success has been put beyond doubt.
t deal of argument has been the vexed question of the nation, and Gen. Hamley, the haps of our military critics,
Stewart would have done better ought in Cheltenham. But then other critics who have had tical experience of fighting tical savages with small bodies ps, and they have given as m that had Stewart adopted er formation than that of the men would have been surrounded to pieces. It may be surely General Stewart made what he ired to be the best disposition of his little force with a view y out his instructions to get to bank, and with as little loss of ossible. The terrible rush of al enemy despising the fear of d back by sheer weight of portion of the square, and although brave savages were killed to a force suffered heavily. But rs formation saved the remainder rs such an onset the thin red lishmen would have been swept accounts agree that Sir Herbert owed himself to be a fitting ave men.

Yale Students Dry Th Skeletons.

e students of the Yale Med l, New Haven, or some of the are likely to get into trouble on t of carelessness manifested in se devotions to their studies.
f the housetops in the neighborh e college for nearly a month een a skeleton exposed for dry ses, and the women and childre ric nity tremble with fear. On arders of the house in question ber of the medical school, and some manner become possess eton he wished to have it dried hed. Powerful field glasses dr ainst the ghastly object show is still ligament and small parti h adhering to the bones. Whil ive odor has emanated from
, the residents in the vicinity nant and there will probably aints to the Board of Health or authorities in order to test the certain whether the inhabitan eighborhood must endure this of such uncanny sights. It is his is one case of many and are perhaps a dozen students in Medical School who dry their in the same manner.—[New d.

12-year-old boy entered a threw down 15 cents, and me 'The One-Eyed Demon of es,' 'Crimson-Handed Bill,' of the Highwaymen,' and kins, the Queen of the Shoot Half-Dime series." And h review once sneeringly reads an American book."

The Bursting of the Monsoon.

o in India would be impossible out its monsoons, and the periodic oach of one of these great rain ns is always hailed with delight. The west monsoon sets in generally to-the end of April. the steady wind ping up from the Indian Ocean and ring with it the dense volumes of , which slowly collect in dark mass-f cloud as they approach the contin-

From Adam's Peak in the Isle of es, right along the Eastern and tern Ghauts and the Nilgiris, every op is gradually shrouded in mist, ind of standing out clear and sharp st the sky. Darker and denser be-the cloud masses; the horizon ass a heavy lead appearance, somes kindling into a lurid glare—an-ring to the sense of oppression, both tal and physical, which accompanies The atmosphere becomes "close" and ressive alike to man and beast; but heat is borne with patience, for reis at hand. Flames of lightning play cloud to cloud, and heavy thunder berates through the heavens; the suddenly springs up into a tempest, along the shore the white waves are ed in foam against the rocks or over burning sand. Then a few great s of rain fall, like balls of lead, the apparently leaden sky; the ed lightning is changed to sheets of
, and suddenly the flood-gates of en are opened, and not rain, but ts of water, are poured forth, re-hing the parched earth, carrying fer-over the surface of the country, fill-the wells and natural reservoirs with sh store, and replenishing the dwind-rivers and streams. The whole h seems suddenly recalled to life.
etation may almost be seen to grow, from the baked mud of the river s emerge countless fishes which for ks or months before have lain there orpor.

Eating Off Gold.

rs. Astor's supper to twenty of her mate friends was given in New York Monday night. On this occasion the ous service of solid gold was used.
se yellow dishes are seldom brought from the Astor vault. They cost 0,000, it is said, though I have heard figures exaggerated to $250,000.
how, there is no great extravagance hem, for the metal can at any time be ted into good bullion and only the kmanship lost. I have attended many he Astor entertainments, but never hen the gold utensils were displayed.
friend who has had that estimable ilege declared that she didn't enjoy experience very much, after all.
"In the first place," she said, "the bles were completely overcome and anited by the plates on which they served. The daintiest morsels ed to have no flavor at all, and after ile I fancied that they became im-nated with a peculiar metallic taste.
then I got it into my head that the sitting opposite me was a detective isguise, placed there so see that I 't slip a plate into my bodice. He afterward introduced to me, and I reason to believe that his covert es had been purely sentimental, but spoiled my supper all the same. No, k you, fine china ware is good enough me."

Martyr for His Beard's Sake.

Persecuted for Wearing his Beard" is inscription on the tomb of Joseph ner, who died at the age of 84, at mluster, Mass, in 1873. Palmer, in tion to other eccentricities, wore a and flowing beard at a time when yone else went smooth shaven For he was "persecuted, despised, jeered egarded almost as a fiend incarnate; known far and wide as a human mon-and with his name mothers used to ten their children when they were ly." Clergymen, and, among others, George Trask, the anti-tobacco re-er, labored to show him the scandal s course, but to all who asked why ersisted in making himself a "mon-ity" he only replied that he would if any one could tell him why some would, from 52 to 365 times a year, e their faces. At one time he was ked by a party of men who proposed ave him without his consent, but deed himself vigorously and repulsed ssailants. For this he was thrown jail, and there again was forced to to preserve his beard intact.

Caught in His Own Death Trap.

arcus Warner, of Shusham, N. Y., been bothered by chicken thieves
y. A few nights ago he set a large trap at the entrance of his chicken door. He also loaded a shotgun powder and fine salt and placed it at door of the coop, so that when the was opened the gun would be dis-ged, and the intruder would receive contents in his body while held in the of the steel trap. The same day friends of Warner's came to visit
They drank cider all day until late e evening. When the visitors were y to go Warner went to help them ess the horse. They broke a strap.
ner had one in the chicken coop.
forgot about the trap and the gun, went after the strap. When he ed the door of the hen house he ped in the trap. The gun went off, bored a large hole in his side. The broke his leg. He will die.

What is the difference between a y, jovial friend and the sale of a bo-silver mine? One is whole souled, the other is a sold hole.

NEWSY ITEMS.

Gen. Gordon—Long Trees—The Khedive of Kassala—Diphtheria in Paris, etc., etc.

A rough-appearing fellow applied at a police station in Boston for a lodging on Saturday night. "Too late—it is after 10 o'clock," said the Lieutenant. "I was to the theatre, and couldn't get here any sooner," said the tramp, who finally got a bed in another station.

In June last the Lancet said of Gen. Gordon: "His life is as great a mystery as his character. His physical endurance in the desert would be difficult to understand in a strong man, but in a man with angina pectoris, and with a horror of meals, it is simply a kind of miracle."

Persons addicted to the habit of sticking their tongues out while working, should take warning from the experience of an Alleghany man, who, while chopping wood a few days ago, was struck on the chin with such force by a fragment as to almost completely sever his organ of speech.

The very remarkable statement is made in the Medical Times that Dr. Fleischl, of Vienna, has discovered that the hydrochlorate of cocoaine, administered hypodermically in doses of from one-twelfth to one-fourth of a grain will cure morphinism, alcoholism, and similar habits within ten days.

A Cincinnati printer, who brought suit to compel a telephone company that had removed his telephone because he used profanity in a message through it, to replace the instrument, has been defeated in the Supreme Court of Ohio; the Court held that the company had the right to remove the instrument.

The Royal Academy of Turin will, in 1886, award a prize of $2,400 to the author of the best work that appears between 1883 and 1886 on any subject connected with physics, chemistry, physiology, geology, geography, or statistics, or to "the author of a brilliant or useful discovery." The prize is open to competitors of all countries.

A young Englishman has had his left leg specially exempted from the insurance granted him by several companies, whose losses through the sudden weakness of that limb had led him to be wary in the matter. Hence clauses in his policy provide that he cannot recover unless proof is made that his injuries shall not have been caused by the faulty member.

A thief who snatched a satchel out of the hands of a lady who was about to be photographed in a Chicago gallery fell a victim to progressive science before nightfall. The photographer, hearing the noise while he was adjusting the camera, pulled the trigger and took an instantaneous photograph by means of which the thief was arrested later in the day. He was identified by the "subject," and had some of her money in his pocket.

Italian papers are bewailing the extent and intensity of imagration fever among the peasantry. They say that the ship loads of emigrants who are taken from Italy to America are draining Italy of its most productive factors. The tide of emigration they say, is assuming proportions which is calamitous to the State, and they instance the fact that one Prefect alone issued last year six thousand passports for emigrants to America.

The telephone system is likely to be soon developed to a great extenton the Continent. The Belgian Cabinet has asked the Governments of France and Spain to allow Mr. Deubenski, an officer in the Belgian army, who has invented a new kind of telephone, fitted with a microphone, to make experiments between Madrid and Brussels is nearly a thousand miles, and, should Deubenski prove the capabilities of his telephone for intertransmitting messages at Madrid and Brussels, we are probably withing measurable distance of the time when we may converse with the American colony in Paris.

The Mudir of Kassala is a sorely tired man. He has been besieged by the Mahdi's forces for nine months, and, as if this were not enough, he has had a number of wild beasts in captivity thrown upon his hands by the death of their owner. The trade in animals for menageries and zoological gardens has developed greatly of late years, the Soudan and Nubia being the main hunting grounds. One of the principal providers of wild animals for show was a Jew of Vienna named Kohn, who had brought to Europe at various times from Nubia a large number of lions, giraffes, antelopes, and ostriches. He had collected a number of these shortly before Kassala was invested, and had them in the town at the time of the attack by the rebels. After a short time he died at the age of 72, and history has not yet recorded what became of the beasts.

France has followed the example of Germany in raising microbiology to the rank of a recognized science. The establishment over which Dr. Koch presides in Berlin is the completest and best equipped in Europe. He has four army surgeons as assistants, and some sixty or eighty students, among whom are not a few savants of standing are daily pursuing their researches in his laboratories. Dr. Koch, who was a modest veterinary surgeon in Breslau four years ago, and who has never had a regular academical training, was looked upon with some distrust and jealousy by the German universities when his studies in bacteriology brought him into prominence and won him the support of Prince Bismarck and the favors of the Government, but the opposition to his theories has nearly altogether subsided, and he has been named Professor in the medical faculty of Berlin.

In the Gazzetta des Hapitaux Dr. Rendu gives the number of cases of diphtheria in Paris in 1880 at 9,500, an enormous increase over previous years. The percentage of mortality is now from 70 to 80, according to the weather. In Berlin the number of deaths from this cause are 1,100; in Vienna, 600, and in Rome, 300. Dr. Rendu believes that contagion is the great cause of the increase, and is brought about by breathing the expired air of a diphtheretic patient. As showing how cautious we should be in exposing children to the contagion, a case is cited of a lady who, being attacked by the disease, sent her children to the country. After she had recovered, the room in which she had been treated was disinfected, newly papered, and left with the windows wide open for five weeks. The children were then brought home, but within a week one of them was seized with diphtheria and died.

HAVE A SMILE.

A forged check—Shackles.

A pitched battle—A baseball game.

The married woman's sphere—A ball of darning cotton.

Frigid comfort for a hungry tramp—The cold shoulder.

Called back—That part of uncontiguous to the spinal column.

Honesty is the best policy—outside of a certificate of insurance.

Strange as it may seem the editor's pocket-book is often a blankbook.

It's very seldom that the umbrella gets left. We know whereof we speak.

When a policeman plays poker he always smiles if he draws a pat club flush.

If your mother's sister uses only one kind of perfumery is it making game of her to say she is a "one scent anty?"

Recent despatches from the seat of war in the Soudan have aroused a suspicion in the minds of some cynical observers that General Wolseley is being paid by the day.

A wit who was asked what he had rather be during the three stages of life, replied: "Till thirty a pretty woman, till fifty a successful general, the rest of my life a cardinal."

A Virginia white man, accused of stealing apple brandy, chose to be tried by a jury of colored men. He thought his chances for "justice" would be better.

A new dictionary of the Chinese language comprises forty volumes. When a Chinese editor gets stuck on the spelling of a word, he has to delay publication for a week or two in order to consult the lexicon.

The wife of William Black copies his manuscript in such a hand that one page of his makes four of hers. Black may be popular with the novel-readers, but you can wager that his wife is a great favorite with the printers.

On one occasion a friend of Lord Alvanley came for advice under the following circumstances: "Mr. —— has threatened to kick me whenever he sees me in society. What am I to do when he comes into the room?" "Sit down," replied his lordship.

Confessions of a Lowell journalist: What was almost a plot for a good ghost story was enacted in the editorial-room of this paper late one night recently. One of the staff came in in the dark and to his horror found himself confronted by a strange white shape, motionless, but full of terror in its ghostly phosphorescence. Starting back, he hastily struck a match, and then at once the mystery was solved. It was the clean towel we had given us for Christmas.

A few weeks ago a gentleman entered the office of a well known insurance agent and, tossing a paper on the counter, said to the clerk: "That's run out and I want to get it renewed." The clerk unfolded the document and with a smile inquired: "Are you sure that this has run out?" "Oh, yes," said the gentleman, "my wife told me it run out yesterday." "Well, I am sorry for you, but we are not taking that kind of risks now," responded the clerk as he handed it back to him. It was his marriage certificate.

Attached to the staff of a Prussian general is a young officer, who is ordered on special duty to Egypt; on bidding him good-bye, the general says to the aide: "Bring me back a mummy." The aide-de-camp returns in about six months. "Well, where's my mummy?" "I've got it, general. It is down-stairs." "Well, let us go and see it." The sarcophagus is opened; the general and his aide unroll the bandages. When the mummy is at last exposed, the intelligent Dutchman exclaims: "Why your confounded old mummy is dead!"

The Busy Bee's Occupation Gone.

The spurious honey is now put up in little square boxes, which sell for from twenty to thirty cents a pound. It looks like honey, and it is said that it takes an excellent judge to tell that it is a fraud on the bee. The comb is manufactured with such skill that but few can tell it from the genuine article. It is made from paraffine or beeswax, and the honey is blown into it by machinery. Another kind is put up in glass vessels like ordinary jelly packages, the centre of which contains a piece of honeycomb, and the honey is made by pouring about six parts of glucose around one part of honey in the comb. Some of it is adulterated with glucose, some with cane sugar, with the syrup of inverted cane and others by heating ordinary sugar with an acid; but it all resembles honey and to a certain extent has its flavor and odor.

The Lime-Kiln Club.

"I hold holh in my hanst," said Brother Gardner, as he slowly rose up at the opening of the meeting, "a letter from a gull'd pusson in Texas informin' us dat he has named his baby Bruddah Gardner Holdback. I presume it am a boy baby, though it may be a gal. De writer flatters himself dat he has done a smart thing, an' dat de father of dat chile will be plain sailin'. If anybody wants to name his offspring arter me or Sir Isaac Walpole, or Giveadam Jones, or Judge Cadayer, we can't hinder, but so fur as I ar' personally consarned I want to indulge in a few remarks in regard to dis habit.

"I verily believe dat de foolishness of sartin parents in tyin' names to deir offsprings has beclouded an' wrecked many lives. De ole man who was a-ovellin' snow nex' doah to me de odder day was named Henry Clay. It was on de ideah dat he would make a mighty smart man, but de minit he got old 'nuff to realize who an' what Clay was he pulld right back. He couldn't nebber git dar', an' he knowed it. Instead of bein' addressed as Henry Clay, eberybody calls him 'Hank Dirt,' an' he's gwine to be called dat till de day kivers his coffin.

"Some y'ars ago a naybur o' mine named his baby Washington Lincoln Grant Smith.' He war' bound to fill dat boy chock full o' military genius an' statesmanship, but de chile wasn't fo' y'ars ole befo' he realized dat it was too steep. He hadn't reached ten befo' he was a thief an' a liar, an' de odder day he went to prison for burglary. De name was too long for de public to grapple wid, an' so he was called 'Wash Grant.' Loter on it got to be 'Washboard,' an' by de name of Washboard Smith he am registered on de prison books.

"I has seen Prime Minister Jones drawin' a swill cart around, while clus behind him, leading a yaller dog by a piece of old clothesline, came Montmorenci Stubbins. I has seen Queen Catherine Bivins at de washtub, while de Princess Beinville was a' hangin' out de clothes fur her. I has whitewashed on de same job wid Cæsar Jackson, an' I has blacked stoves alonside of George de Forth Bones.

"De white folks am jist as bad, an' it really does me good to see by de papers dat 'Hortense Victoria Clark' has skipped out wid 'De Lisle Fitzhue Brown,' who was a purfeshional roller skater loafer on a salary of $5 per week. Ebery day de Police Judge am sendin' Zachariah Chandlers, Roscoe Conklings, Thomas Jeffersons and Henry W. Longfellows to de jug, an' ebery day de good old names of Jane an' Betsey an' Sarah an' Emma an' Lucy am growin' in contempt wid de female sect.

"Speakin' fur de cull'd race alone, I say dat de fadder who rises above Moses or Samuel or William when huntin' fur a name fur his boy baby am coaxin' biles and bunions to grow whar' dey doan' need to. De mudder who can't make a selection from Chloe, Catherine, Violet an' Sarah Jane needn't feel riled if her gal runs off wid a bowlegged stove-blacker an' ends up her days in a garret. Let us now attack de reg'lar purceedin's."

DIDN'T RESOLVE.

Waydown Bebee begged to offer resolution asking the Legislature of Michigan to enact a law to more fully carry out the provisions of the Civil Rights bill, as applicable to the colored population of this State.

"Has you bin denied any of your rights lately, Brudder Bebee?" asked the President.

"I can't say as I has, sah, but I has heard complaints from cull'd men dat dey hain't treated as good as white people."

"Name a few."

"I has bin told dey can't stop at first-class hotels, an dat dey am not wanted at roller rinks."

"Brudder Bebee, kin you tell me why any cull'd man should want to pay $4 a day to stop at a fust-class hotel kept by a white man an' frequented by tony white folkses, when he kin be made to home at a house kept by a cull'd man fur de benefit of cull'd people, at one quarter de price?"

"Not 'zactly, sah?"

"Do you know why any respectable cull'd pusson should want to frow away his time an' money wheelin' hirself 'round an' 'round a rink patronized by silly gals, soft-headed women an' evil-minded men?"

"No, sah."

"Neither do I. It would be much mo' to his credit to go out an' pound snow. Your resolushun am decided no cause for ackshun, an you will at once sot down. De laws of dis kentry am big 'nuff and broad 'nuff to gin ebery man in it, no matter what his race or culler, all de rights he kin take keer of."

NO RELATION.

The Secretary announced an inquiry from Utah in regard to the Lime-Kiln Minstrels, at present giving performances in that country. He was instructed to answer that the club had no such band traveling, and had not authorised any person or persons to adopt the name.

RELIEVING BROTHER WATKINS.

The Committee on Relief report that Shindig Watkins was confined to his bed with a fever, and recommended that he be allowed the sum of $6 from the relief fund.

"Do you know what ails Brudder Watkins?" asked the President.

"De doctah calls it sewer gas."

"Whar' from?"

"Dunno, sah."

"I guess you doan'! All de sewer-gas aroun' his house kin be bottled up in yer eye! What ails Brudder Watkins am tryin' to lift a 400 pound grindstun' on a bet of thirty cents. He strained his back an' bent his legs out of plumb, an' all the relief he gets from dis club won't help him to a bowl of chicken broth. When a member of dis club takes his chances wid a grindstun' he mustn't look to us if an accident happens. We will now blow down the lamp-chimneys an' go home."

A HISTORIC FRAUD.

How the Bank of England Was Robbed by Clever Swindlers.

The last great fraud by which the Bank of England has been a sufferer was that of Austin Bidwell and his accomplices. On the 18th of April, 1872, Austin Bidwell called upon a tailor named Green, in Saville row, and under the assumed name of Warren gave him a handsome order. On May 4th he paid Mr. Green another visit. He was then professedly on his way to Ireland, and having about him a large sum of money asked Green to take charge of it during his absence. Green hesitated to take the responsibility, but remarked that the branch Bank of England was in Burlington gardens, close by, and offered to introduce Warren there. This was done, and Warren opened an account by a deposit of £1,200. He gave his name as Frederick Albert Warren, and his address as Golden Cross hotel. He paid in and drew out moneys to a considerable amount, and shortly began to offer bills for discount. They bore the best of names and were discounted without hesitation. On the 17th of June, 1873, a bill of Rothchild's for £1,500 was offered and was discounted in due course.

Having thus gained, by transactions in genuine bills, the confidence of the bank authorities, the supposed Warren commenced operations of another kind. Bills came in thick and fast for discount, still bearing the same first-class names—Rothschild, Blydenstein, Suse, and Silbeth etc.; but they were now cleverly-executed forgeries. The bank continued to discount without suspicion. Naturally, however, it paid in its own notes, of which the numbers were recorded, and which, when it was discovered that the bills were forged, would be difficult to realize. Bidwell, in order to dispose of these and to diminish the chances of identification, opened an account in another name (Horton) at the Continental bank. Here he paid in the notes received at the Bank of England, taking French and German money in exchange, Hills—under the name of Noyes—acting as his clerk. Sometimes, by way of variety, Hills changed notes into gold at the Bank of England itself, alleging that the coin was for export, but the gold he obtained was brought back again by Macdonnell and exchanged for fresh notes, which, thus obtained, would have no obvious connection with the original fraud. George Bidwell undertook what may be called the manufacturing department—namely, the preparation of the plates and the printing of the bill forms for the forgeries. By thus dividing their labors, and working each in a distinct department of the fraud, the gang hoped to evade discovery until they had made what they regarded as a sufficient haul, when they would doubtless have retired to foreign climes to enjoy the fruits of their labors. How much further they would have gone it is impossible to say, for they had already offered forged bills to the amount of over £102,217, when a happy oversight led to their detection. Two bills for £1,000 each, professedly accepted by Mr. Blydenstein, and payable three months after "sight," were not "sighted"—that is, the date of acceptance was not inserted. A clerk of the bank was sent to Messrs. Blydenstein's to get the omission rectified, and was met by the startling information that the bills were forgeries. With some little trouble, the whole of the gang were arrested, and, after a trial lasting eight days, were convicted and sentenced to penal servitude.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Imitation in Birds.

I remember distinctly hearing a thrusher often repeating in its madcap song some notes new to my ear, which could not be ascribed to any Michigan bird of my acquaintance. After patiently waiting for some time in the glaring sun of a bright June day, I heard the notes so plainly that I was thoroughly convinced they were an imitation of the song of the Southern bird—the "chuck-will's widow," so called, a species allied to our whippoorwill, and named—as in our familiar Northern representative of the family—from the words so plainly uttered. This thrush learned, then, the notes of the chuck-will's widow at least 500, and probably quite a thousand miles from Michigan, and yet reproduced them so distinctly that one could easily distinguish them, and from mere descriptions in books at once tell the name of the bird imitated.

Here, mounting to the top of the tallest tree near its nest, it pours forth ecstatic melody, executing the most difficult strains with the same ease that it delivers the simplest notes. All noises are attempted; the schoolboy's whistle, the bark of a dog, or the bleating of a lamb are equally well executed and issue from its throat in a continuous, harmonious strain, frequently of an hour's duration. What wonderful mimicry; what a contrast to the best attempts of ventriloquists and imitators, travelling through the country to reproduce before audiences a few mumbled sounds or attempted imitations of the sounds and notes uttered by birds and mammals.—[Dr. Morris Gibb.

"A short absence," says Mirabeau, "quickens love; a long absence kil's it." Hah! then the fellows who have been out of office twenty-four years have no desire whatever to go in. That's about as much as a Frenchman could be expected to know about politics.

ABSTRACT STATEMENT

—OF THE—

Treasurer's Receipts and Expenditure

—FOR THE—

TOWNSHIP OF HOLLAND,

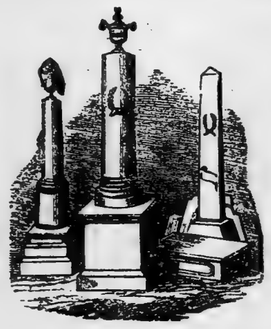
For the Year Ending 31st Dec., 1884.

RECEIPTS.

To cash ballence on hand from last audit	$1254 92
" from collector on Roll 1883	725 00
" " Roll 1884	6460 98
" Land Improvement Fund	338 12
" License Fund	222 50
" Law Expenses re Equaligation	24 45
" Non resident Land Fund	521 46
" Fines from Magistrate	6 00
	$9553 43

EXPENDITURE.

By paid County Rates	$3138 23
" Councillors Fees and Officers Salaries	485 00
" Miscellaneous Expenses	478 89
" Roads and Bridges	956 70
" To Schools	4463 12
Ballance in hand	31 49
	$9553 43



We certify the above to be correct.

JOHN SUTHERLAND, JOHN McDONALD, } Auditors.

Holland, February 10th. 1885.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham st., Markdale. TAILOR,

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—

Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we are not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the STANDARD office, Mill Street. Has a comfortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,
Markdale P. O.

232-39*

SINGLE copies of the STANDARD 5 cents each.

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS

In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.

At prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $6 per acre, on 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country for securing Good Homes now open for settlement.

FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE—10,818,433 Acres OR MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1883, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific Country, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

NATIONAL PILLS act promptly upon the Liver, regulate the Bowels and as purgative are mild an thorough.

ENVELOPES supplied and prinred at the STANDARD office for $2.00 per thousand up.

DR. LOW'S WORM SYRUP has removed tape worm from 15 to 30 feet in length. It also destroys all kinds of worm.

THE minister stopped at a house last week, and sought to improve the time bo giving an eight-year-old boy an instructive lesson in morality. "My boy," said the minister, "I have lived forty-five years, and have never used tobacco in any form nor told a lie, nor disobayed my parents, nor uttered an oath, nor played truant, nor——." "Gimmimy crickets," interrupted the lad, "yer ain't had any fun at all, have ye?"

COMPELLED TO YIELD.

Obstinate skin diseases, humors of the blood, eruptions and old sores are cured by Burdock Blood Bitters, which purify and regulate all the secretions.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Resturant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

WITHOUT DOUBT.

Yellow Oil is par excellence the remedy for Pain, Lameness, Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Burns, Frost Bites, Stiff Joints and all Flesh Wounds. Any medicine dealer can furnish it.

"Now, Johnnie," said the teacher, "if your father borrows $100 and promises to pay $10 a week, how much will he owe in seven weeks?" "One hundred dollars," said Johnnie. I'm afraid you don't know your lesson very well," remarked the teacher, "I may not know my lesson very well," Johnny frankly acknowledged: "but I know my father."

NOT BAD.

It is so agreeable that even an infant will take it. For coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, asthma and bronchitis Hayarg's Pectoral Balsam is reliable for young or old.

A Wicked Editor.

Irate Subscriber—I want to see the fellow that wrote this article.

Western Office Boy—Must a been the editor, I guess.

"So I suppose, Where is he? Where is he, I say?"

"He's not in."

"Oh he ain't in, ain't he? Ain't in, eh! Well, where is he?"

"He's attendin' the funeral of a man what called to see him on Monday." —Phila. Call.

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Durham

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Hanover—Monday before Durham.

Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

Honor Roll of S. S. No. 7, Holland for February.

4th Class—1st, Willie Vogan, 409; 2nd, Aggie Downs, 308. 3rd Class—1st, Ettie Erwin, 403; 2nd, John Crowther, 397. Senior Second Class 1st, Willie Spears, 432; 2nd, Bowers Downes, 394. Junior Second—1st, Carson Price, 348; 2nd, Ada Boulston, 307. Senior Pt. Second—1st, Sarah Stewart, 268; 2nd, John Telford, 219. Junior Part Second—1st, Albert Boulston, 268; 2nd Joshua Crowther, 251. Part First—1st E. Ireton, 2nd, K. R. Jackson.

ELIZA S. MOORE, Teacher.

Cleveland's Administration.

The inauguration of President Cleveland marks an era in American politics which, if the promises of the inaugural address are borne out, bids fair to be the most progressive the United States has yet seen. For twenty-three years the Republican party shaped the affairs of the nation, and during that time many abuses crept in. The Democrats, who come into power with Cleveland, have before them the work of reformation, and on the way in which they carry out that work depends the favor of the people. Cleveland came victorious through a desperate fight, in which the vilest means were resorted to defeat him, and there are thousands who would witness the failure of his administration with exultation. Judging from the character of the man, gathered from his utterances since his election, those who look for failure in him will be disappointed. He appears to be a plain, blunt man, of sterling honesty and lofty purpose, who will reflect credit upon those who chose him from the multitude as chief magistrate. His course will be watched with hopefulness by a large portion of the American people and with great interest in Canada, and on the other side of the ocean.—News.

The Return.

A number of the Canadian contingent to the Nile passed through Toronto on Saturday. The were the Winnipeg delegation, and were both whites and red—that is, they were once white or red but now the whites are bronze and the reds are the color of an old boot. They looked hearty enough, but most of them don't want any more Nile in theirs. They had hard work and bad food. The voyageur can stand hard work, but he wants his grub right. A stay of two hours was all that was allowed in Toronto.

The Grangers on Prohibition.

The decisive utterance of the Dominion Grange in favor of total prohibition as soon as may be, and a vigorous enforcement of the Scott act in the meantime, is a fitting reply to the despicable appeals to the selfishness of the farmers by those who argue that prohibition will destroy their market for barley. The most intelligent of the farmers, as represented in the grange, scout the notion that a great moral problem is to be considered from the huckster point of view of profit and loss, or that mere material advantage should stand in the way of the abolition of a traffic which has caused such untold misery and degradation. The barley argument is a slander upon the intelligence, no less than the conscience, of the farming community.—News.

A Humorous Letter by Abraham Lincoln.

From New York Tribune.

A New York firm applied to Abraham Lincoln some years before he became president as to the financial standing of one of his neighbors. Mr. Lincoln replied as follows: "Yours of the 10th inst. received, I am well acquainted with Mr.——and know his circumstances. First of all he has a wife and baby; togather they ought to be worth $50,000 to any man. Secondly, he has an office in which there is a table worth $1.50 and three chairs worth say $1. Last of all there is in one corner a large rat-hole which will bear looking into. Respectfully yours, A. LINCOLN.

Honor Roll.

The followinn is a list of the pupils of Markdale public school, who obtained 60½ or over, of the marks assigned at the monthly examination for the month of February:

Class V—Herby Brown, Geo. Bowes, Mamie Bowes, Robt. J. Brown.

Class IV, Sen.—Annie Cunningham, Bella Cunningham, Johnson Wilson, John Dundas, P. Thibaudeau, Jas. McKee.

Class IV, Jun.—Harry Large, Lottie Mann, Ben Coleman, Frank Bryden, Mary Nesbitt, Minnie Wilson.

Class III—Peter Thibaudeau, Mary Stevens.

F. PORTER, Teacher.

SEED GRAIN.

A LARGE quantity of good Seed Spring Wheat for sale cheap, also first-class Peas and Oats. Apply to BURROWES IRWIN, 2½ miles East of Markdale.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

OWEN SOUND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 188

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed.
Toronto....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orangeville Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Orangeville Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Owen Sound,.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30pm
Chatsworth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford.....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orangeville Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Orangeville Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto.....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

Burdock Blood Bitters.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

FARMERS and Threshers ask your chants for

McColl Bros.

LARDINE Machine Oil.

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c.

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

198 J. PLEWES.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash, Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted.

91y. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

NADIAN ACIFIC
OWEN O UND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.

effect Monday, November 24th,

GOING NORTH.

ATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.	Mixed.
to....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm
ell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "
ston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
e- Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
eville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
rne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
lk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
rton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 05 "
ale.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 35 "
nsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
orth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 57 "
Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

ATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Sound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
orth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
nsford.. ...	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
le.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
rton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
.....	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
rne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
ville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
ston.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
ll Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 08 "
....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.

ILL CURE OR RELIEVE

SNESS,	DIZZINESS,
PSIA,	DROPSY,
STION,	FLUTTERING OF THE HEART,
ICE.	ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH,
PELAS,	DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
RHEUM, BURN,
CHE, ery species of disease arising from red LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD, LBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

McColl Bros.

FARMERS'

and Threshers ask your chants for

GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

s' Flour and Feed tore.

ving just received a ee, Fresh and Select

STOCK OF

s,

Sugars,

Tobacco, &c.

will be sold VERY CHEAP.

spectfully solicit the public's ge.

J. PLEWES.

EUGENIA

, Saw and Lath Mills

made eqtensive improvements in Mill I feel confident I can give sfaction.

FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

pping Done Every Day.

Sawing and Bills Filled on the notice.

ER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash , Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

M. AKITT, Eugenia.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 236. MARKDALE, ONT., MARCH 19, 1885. COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.

W. A. Brown's Space.

LOOK OUT FOR

W. A. BROWN'S

NEW

ADVERTISEMENT

NEXT WEEK.

W. A. Brown's Space.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

DID you see the eclipse on Monday.

Easter Sunday comes on the 5th April.

MISS ANNIE MILLSAP left last week for Lefroy.

THE nicest thing in bonnets; a pretty face.

FARM for Sale or rent, James Bruce, Lilly Oak.

TRAINS were considerably delayed on Monday.

MRS. PLEWES is visiting friends in Dunedin, Ont.

LEMONS and Oranges 25 cents per dozen at Hanbury's.

The STANDARD to the end of 1885 to any address for 75 cents.

The thermometer registered 15 below zero Tuesday morning.

BLANK receipts and notes always on hand at the STANDARD office.

A BEAUTIFUL and genuine assortment of watches at W. A. Brown's.

MRS. A CHELLEW of Collingwood is visiting friends in this village.

FRESH Clover Seed at J R Trimble's for $6.25 per bushel, spot cash.

A monster sale of Boots and Shoes now going on at McFarland's.

MR. AND MRS. THOS. HANBURY of Dundalk were in town this week.

A 3 pound tin of fresh Tomatoes only 8 cents at J. R. Trimble's.

A STOCK of Cabinet Envelopes just opened at Hamilton's photo. gallery.

THIS winter has eclipsed any on record for extreme and continued cold.

Go to Hanbury's for fresh Oysters and fresh water Herring, just in today.

MRS. A. DUNLOP returned on Tuesday from a seven-weeks visit to Oshaway.

GREAT bargains in Boots & Shoes at J. R. Trimble's, as I am bound to sell out.

The British Government have invested $80,000 as a fund for Gordon's family.

FARM to rent or sell, apply to J. G. Irving, Markdale.

MRS. HOLLINGSHEAD is visiting friends at Alliston and Elmgrove.

FIRST CLASS fine salt, under cover, at J. R. Trimble's for $1.00 per barrel spot cash.

A GOOD motto for business men:
"Early to bed—early to rise—Never get tight—and advertise."

PRIME clover and timothy Seeds, at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

MR. ROBERT MYLES, ex-Reeve of Euphrasia, returned from Manitoba this week.

FOR Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

ENVELOPES, for mailing cabinet photos, for sale cheap at Hamilton's photo. gallery.

FOR Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

Mr. Geo. Snider, of Owen Sound, celebrated his golden wedding on Thursday last.

MISS CAIN of Newmarket has been visiting her sister Mrs. Rev. Grandy in this place.

J. R. TRIMBLE is offering wonderful bargains in all lines of goods to spot cash customers.

A keeper in the Winnipeg asylum was murdered on Saturday last by an insane woman.

Seeds.—Field and Garden seeds of all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

A great many potatoes and apples have been frozen in pits and cellars during the winter.

MR. and Mrs. George Stoddart of Glenelg returned last week after visiting friends near Brampton.

A grand concert will be given by the Oddfellows at Markdale, about April 9th, look out for posters.

Oil Cake, unsurpassed for Horses and Cattle, for sale at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

J. R. TRIMBLE can and will sell you goods cheaper for cash than merchants that claim to be direct importers.

THE March Lyon gave himself another vigorous shake on Sunday last; result, roads seriously blockaded.

ENVELOPES furnished and neatly printed at this office at the rate of 5 cents per package of 25, by taking 1,000.

Before purchasing Boots and Shoes see W. J. McFarland's immense stock purchased at less than cost of manufacture.

MR. STEER and family of Toronto Gower arrived last week, having retired and taken up their residence in Markdale.

A VERY pleasant and most enjoyable evening was spent by a large number of young people at the parsonage on Wednesday.

Have you a friend at a distance you would like to send an Easter present. Send the STANDARD only seventy-five cents for the ballance of the year.

MR. RICHARD A. SCOTT of Holland intends leaving about the 1st of April for Minnedosa, taking with him part of his family and a car load of stock.

The North Riding Agricultural Society's Spring Show of Stallions and Bulls will be held on the pleasure grounds, Owen Sound, on Friday, 24th April.

MISS MILLIE LYONS of Tara visited friends in Markdale on her way to Toronto where she has been recently purchasing her spring stock of Millinery.

SHELBURNE lodge A. O. U. W. has 53 members. They presented their Past Master, Mr. I. F. Belfry, with a handsome clock and an address one evening last week.

Hamilton's Photograph Gallery has been crowded during the past week, and a large number of excellent Photos turned out to the satisfaction of all concerned.

TUESDAY last was St. Patrick's day.

Hard to beat. The porcelain nest-egg.

A general thaw is expected about the 6th April.

OUR sidewalks have scarcely been seen this year.

HE couldn't find his match. and went to bed in the dark.

Two things now very generally desired: Money and spring.

THERE will be excursions to Manitoba about the 24th and 31st March.

A McGILL of Chatsworth foundry makes excellent road scrapers, and has applied for a patent for the same, Township councils should make a note of it.

OXEN FOR SALE.—A well matched pair of oxen rising four years old, well trained. For particulars apply to Geo. Ireton, one mile from Barrhead Mills. 134 36

THE STANDARD is $1.50 when not paid in advance or within three months? please don't be in a hurry for a few weeks, we can wait a while in view of the additional amount.

DR. LOW'S WORM SYRUP has removed tape worm from 15 to 30 feet in length. It also destroys all kinds of worm.

THE Ladies Aid of the Methodist church are already preparing for their annual bazaar on the 24th May. It is the intention to lay the corner stone of the new church at that time.

NATIONAL PILLS act promptly upon the Liver, regulate the Bowels and as purgative are mild an thorough.

MR. W. J. BENSON, of the Belfast House, Markdale, and formerly of the Hoffman House, New York, made a flying visit to Kimberley last Friday. He smiled with several of his friends while there.

W. J. McFarland is in Toronto attending the great sale of $100,000 worth of Boots and Shoes, belonging to the estate of John Garrett & Co., and has succeeded in getting some Great Bargains.

FOR SALE.—A splendid farm containing 100 acres, well watered, 90 acres ready for any kind of machinery and situated within half a mile of Markdale, station on C. P. R., Apply to M. Armstrong, Markdale.

Mr. R. H. Baird, Manager of the "Joshua Whitcomb Company will give an entertainment in Chatsworth Saturday evening next. This is perhaps the most popular troupe which has travelled this district, and "Uncle Josh" will doubtless have a crowded house.

The big C. P. R. elevator at Fort William is finished and has now considerable grain stored in it, awaiting the opening of navigation. This is the largest elevator in the Dominion, and will hold over a million bushels.

J. H. Hull is agent for Flury's Sylvester's and Wilkinson's agricultural implements. All kinks of repairs for the above manufacturers kept always on hand. Shop on Mill Street known as Hull's cooper shop.

NOTICE,—The contract for hauling milk to Markdale Cheese Factory for season of 1885 will be let by auction at the Markdale House on Saturday, the 21st March, at 2 o'clock. All interested parties will take notice. B. Coleman, President; H. D. Irwin, Sec.

MISS MAGGIE MELLER of this place returned home from Dundalk last Thursday, where she has been visiting friends for some time. She is looking much better after her sojourn among her old associates.

THE Meaford Mirror has entered upon its fourth year. It is a healthy and promising three year old, and, notwithstanding its serious misfortune, viz., its complete destruction by fire; it now appears without a scar. We wish it every success in future.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS require no other Purgative. They are safe and sure to remove all varieties of Worms.

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is highly recommended for the cure of Eruption, Chafes, Chapped hands, Pimples, Tan, &c.

BURNED TO DEATH.—We hear that an old man, named Robert Mills, a resident of Keppel, who lived alone, was found by a neighbor early on Monday morning, on his own hearthstone, burnt to death. He had evidently been kindling a fire, and fallen into it.—O. S. Times.

CREDIT SALE.—Mr. Joseph Manarey, auctioneer, will hold a sale on Friday the 27th March, on lot 18, con. 11, Euphrasia, commencing at one o'clock. A quantity of farm stock, implements &c. Terms nine months on approved paper for sums over $5.00, John Carefoot, proprietor.

CHATSWORTH News.—This new paper made its first appearance about a week since. It is the 13th paper in Grey County. G. J. Blyth, formerly of the Markdale Expositor is the Editor and proprietor and he has few equals as a newspaper man. We wish him every success in his undertaking.

A remarkable story of a miracle comes from Montreal, it being alleged that a man while indulging in violent profanity at Acton Vale about twelve days ago was stricken with paralysis and rooted to the spot where he stood all efforts to remove him up to the present being useless. He is also unable to take food.

THE SCOTT ACT.—Petitions for the submission of the Act in Grey were deposited in the Sheriff's office on Feb. 28. They contain 4,489 names or 739 more than necessary. Mr. A. Frost of Owen Sound, is solicitor for committee, and has carefully attended to all the details in connection with the deposite of the petition.

FOUL PLAY.—On Friday morning last Mr. Wm. Caswell, of lot 14, 10th con. Derby, on going into his stable about 5 o'clock, was amazed to find his team of horses dead and stiff. They were all right about 9 o'clock the evening before, and it is suspected they must have been poisoned. The loss will be a severe one to Mr. Caswell.—O. S. Times.

COMING.—Under the auspices of Markdale A. O. U. W. an entertainment will be given to-morrow evening (Friday) by the "Joshua Whitcomb Co.," of which Mr. R. H. Baird is manager. Those who had the pleasure of being present at any of "Baird's" entertainments in the past could not be paid to absent themselves, and we may safely count on a crowded house to-morrow evening.

MR. W. J. SHEPHERDSON of Euphrasia, who lost his stallion, "Scottish Champian" recently, has purchased a fine 3 year old, heavy draft, weighing 1,700 lbs. Mr. S. sustained a serious loss in the death of the above animal, but is not to be discouraged, and has purchased a much better one of which farmers will have an opportunity of judging for themselves in due time.

It is feared that Mr. Gladstone's want of decision in dealing with the Afghan question will result disastrously. A special to THE MAIL says his recent utterance in the House of Commons leads to the belief that he intends abandoning Afghanistan, and if the Afghan chiefs become persuaded that England is a perfidious ally, Sir Peter Lumsden's doom is sealed, and he and the troops with him will meet the fate of Gen. Gordon.

We direct attention to the new advertisement in this issue, of Mr. H. B. Harrison, of the Owen Sound Marble Works. He has lately returned from Vermont, from whence he has brought three car-loads of the finest variegated marble; and now one of the best stocks in the Dominion to select from. Those who need anything in his line should give him a call, as we feel assured from his excellent taste and long experience, he will not fail to give satisfaction.

NO MATTER.

No matter where pain, lameness or soreness exists, Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken or applied will give immediate relief, and a positive cure quickly follows its use.

A BIG ICE HOUSE.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. are building an immense ice house on the bank of the river, to the south of the passenger station, which will be used for supplying their boats during the heated term. The dimensions are ninety-four by twenty-four feet, and to be stocked immediately with a thousand tons of pure Georgian Bay ice as a send off. —O. S. Advertiser.

SCORES of farmers and leading stock men in the district have this week visited the stables of our enterprising townsman, J. R. Trimble, Esq., to view the late importation "Garfield." This is the finest stallion of his class ever brought into this district, and the spectators expressed themselves both astonished and pleased to see such fine stock being introduced. Mr. Trimble has a number of fine animals, and his well arranged stables are well worth an inspection by horsemen.

WILL OF THE LATE GEORGE JACKSON ESQ.—As many are anxious to hear how Mr. Jackson bequeathed his wealth, we give the following general particulars, omitting the technicalities, Mrs. A. Cochrane $7000; Mrs. J. Cochrane $4000; Mis. Torrance $7000; Mrs. Arch. McKenzie $2000; Miss Lizzie Jackson $500; David Jackson Sr. $500 a year for 4 years. Wm. G. Jackson, the farm adjoining the town comprising 250 acres; The residence and grounds together with the residean of real estate, cash, bank stock, and mortgages revert to David Jackson Jr. the value of which is not known, but is generally supposed to be about $40,000 at the least.—Chronicle.

We see that obituary notices in England now frequently contain the statement that by the wish of the deceased his relativs will not wear mourning. It will be a good thing when this practice becomes universal, as the purchase of mourning has frequently been a heavy expense to those who could ill afford it. It is, of course, right and proper that all due respect should be shown to the dead, but there are other ways of doing it besides the donning of expensive mourning garments. If some people were a little more careful to carry out what were known to be the wishes of neglecting them and putting on black suits and six inches of crape around their hats, they would be evincing more respect to the memory of the departed. It always strikes me as very inconsistent, to use a mild expression, when I see young men with a wide piece of crape round one arm roaring with laughter at some jest of their companions; it is evident in such cases that the mourning is mearly an outward form, and it would be far better to dispense with those symbols of grief altogether than to diaplay them where they are totally out of place.

The following notice will be read with interest by the old residents of this district who were well acquainted with Mr. Snider, who was one of the highly respected pioneers of this County.—From the O. S. Advertiser.

GOLDEN WEDDING.—We have great pleasure in congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Snider on the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, which they celebrate to-day (Thursday) Mr. Snider has attained the ripe age of 72 years, and Mrs. Snider is three score and ten. They were married at Eglinton on the twelfth of March, 1835. Mrs. Snider's maiden name being Miss Jane Maughan. Mr. and Mrs. Snider have been residents of the County of Grey, since August 1848, and of Owen Sound since March the 21st, 1854. Mr. Snider was the first Sheriff of this County, being appointed in the Fall of 1863, which office he resigned in 1853. Mr. Snider has always been held in high esteem by the residents of the County, and by the citizens of Owen Sound, being elected to serve them as member of parliament at confederation, which position he held till the year 1878. He was also Mayer of Owen Sound for five years. We are certain that our readers will join with us, in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Snider many more happy returns of this their wedding day.

LAUGHLETS.

A great wag—a dog's tail.

What relation is the door mat to the door? Step father.

A small leak may sink a great ship and a raw onion break up a court ship.

Beau: "Why do you prefer a wood fire?" She: "'Cause it pops."

The man who wants a change of scene and wants it cheap should go to the theatre.

A little girl, on seeing a peacock for the first time, remarked what a beautiful bustle it had.

Appropriate hymn for an evening meeting of colored people: "Shades of evening darkly gather."

A large proportion of the English army are now Nileists, yet they do not advocate dyin'-a-mite.

Somebody has noticed that the woman who shakes the doormat on the sidewalk "fills the public eye."

A Cincinnati claims to have a wife so hot tempered that he can light his cigar from the flash of her eyes.

"Neck or nothing," remarked the landlady as she handed that part of the chicken to the late boarder.

The latest thing in floral pillows for the departed is not "Rest," but "W. S. Y. L."—"Will see you later."

Mr. Hayes thinks of starting a hen farm in Montana. Eggs up there are 10 cents apiece and don't have to tell their age.

The dress coat is generally worn by the groom at the city wedding; but for the elopment there's nothing like the cutaway.

"Information wanted by the editor of this paper," is the suggestive heading of an advertisement in an Arkansas exchange.

Jay Gould is not in the ice business, but he is next thing to it. He handles blocks of stocks which are principally consolidated water.

"Remember the porter," said the hotel highwayman to the departing guest. "I shall," said the other; "it was worse than the ale."

A burglar got into the house of a lawyear the other day. By superhuman effort he escaped without loosing anything but his time.

Out west it is proper to speak of a party as "a great occasion," but Chicago ladies look offended if you say anything about "a big fete."

A man died in New Haven a few days while buying a cigar. The dealer probably told him it was not imported, and the shock was too violent.

Mrs. A.: "I do love to hear Mrs. Alto sing; her swell is very fine.' Mrs. B.: "What are you talking about? That is no swell; he's her husband."

Young ladies who had just returned from a court of justice wished they were Bibles because they saw so many fine looking witnesses kiss the book.

No matter how bad and destructive a boy may be he never becomes so degraded or loses his self respect so greatly as to throw mud on a circus poster.

"This is a nice time to come home and a nice state you're in," she said. "Nice time! nice state! Thanks, lovey. I thought you were going to scold me."

"Ah! you flatter me," lisped a dude to a pretty girl with whom he was conversing. "No, I don't," was the reply; "you couldn't be any flatter than you are."

"What is the matter with you, my friend? You look ill." "Yes, I've got kleptomania." "Taking anything?" "Oh, yes; taking everything I can lay hands on."

"Say, Mr. Snobby, can you play cards?" "Why, no, Johnny, I can't play very well." "Well, then, you'd better look out, for ma says if Emma plays her cards well she'll catch you"

"Susie, darling," said a mother to her little daughter of five summers, "what would you do without your mamma?" "I'd put on just such a dress as I pleased every day," was the affectionate reply.

A woman can look a man square in the eye, blink and talk to him by the hour, while all the time she is pulling Mrs. Puffman's new bonnet to pieces mentally and decorating her own. No mortal man can do it.

A German histologist states that we have a new brain every sixty days. We presume defendents in breach of promise suits will take advantage of this scientific fact and cause a "change of mind" act to be passed.

"Johnny, what would you do if you were to see a bad boy stealing some fruit?" asked a Sunday-school teacher of the best boy in the class, "would you not tell him he was doing wrong?" "Yes, indeed, I would, and if he didn't make a fair divide, I'd tell the storekeeper."

"How dare you, sir, go about calling yourself my brother-in-law?" "I didn't." "I said I wasn't your brother-in-law exactly." "What do you mean, sir? You are not my brother-in-law at all! You never married my sister?" "No; but I wanted to do so."

Hash has saved the lives of a great many people—by their not eating it. Hash is a noun, common—in boarding houses—often parsed and frequently declined, neuter gender, singular case. Shakespeare had it in mind when he wrote of "mincing matters." Hash is like a good many other things—it has to be taken largely on faith. Many people object to it, when they are not in reality accustomed to anything better. Those who are continually clamoring for better fare should eat sawdust, which is really fine board.

A Very Foolish Beast.

Once upon a time a donkey fell into a deep hole, and after nearly starving, caught sight of a passing fox, and implored the stranger to help him out.

"I am too small to aid you," said the fox, "but I will give you some good advice. Only a few rods away is a big strong elephant. Call to him and he will get you out in a j ffy."

After the fox had gone the donkey thus reasoned: "I am very weak for want of nourishment. Every move I make is just so much additional loss of strength. If I raise my voice to call the elephant I shall be weaker yet. No I will not waste my substance that way. It is the duty of the elephant to come without calling."

So the donkey settled himself back and eventually starved to death.

Long afterwards the fox, on passing the hole, saw within it a whitened skeleton, and remarked: "If it be that the souls of animals are transmigrated into men, that donkey will become one of those merchants who can never afford to advertise."

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

It is by the daily lives of Christians that Christ is either honored or dishonored.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

If men are so wicked with religion, what would they be without it.—Franklin.

Painless and Prompt.

PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR, the great remedy for corns, is absolutely safe and painless, does its work promptly, without in the least interfering with the comfort of patients, and is absolutely alone as a safe, painless remedy for corns. Do not be imposed upon by dangerous counterfeits. Use only Putnam's Corn Extractor. Beware of base substitutes. Sold everywhere by druggists and dealers in medicine. Take only Putnam's Painless Extractor. N. C. Polson & Co., proprs., Kingston.

Without a rich heart wealth is an ugly beggar.—Emerson.

The Mighty Dollar

Is long distanced by a 10 cent bottle of Polson's NERVILINE, the newest and best pain remedy. It cures colds, cramps, colic, pain in the head, sciatica, pain in the chest; in fact it is equally effiacious as an external or internal remedy. Try a 10 cent sample bottle of the great pain remedy, Nerviline. Sold by druggists. Large bottles only 25 cents. Try a sample bottle of Nerviline, only 10 cents. Take no substitute.

Home should be made the dwelling place for souls rather than a mere lodging place for bodies.

The "Myrtle Navy plug" correctly represents the whole plan upon which its manufacture is conducted. There is not a fractional part of a cent expended upon it for mere appearance. It is neither wrapped in tin foil nor worked into fancy shapes, nor put in any fancy cases, nor subjected to any kind of expense merely to please the eye or captivate the fancy. The manufacturers rightly believed that tobacco was not purchased for ornament, but for smoking, and therefore all extraneous expense was avoided and added to the quality of the tobacco. The public have testified in its case that they prefer paying their money for a high quality of article than for ornament out of place.

When worthy men quarrel, only one of them may be faulty at the first; but, if strife continue long, commonly both become guilty.—T. Fuller.

The Porte is so absolutely impotent and apathetic that half the world forgets that it owns Egypt, and that British troops are doing its fighting.

DRAFT HORSES.—40 Years Experience.

A. S. Chamberlain, for 40 years proprietor of the Bull's Head Stables, New York City, in reference to the values of different breeds of draft horses, said:

"I keep exchange and sale stables for horses. Don't deal on my own account to any extent. All classes of horses, amounting to several thousands annually, come to my stables from all sections of the country. A large number of these are draft horses of the different breeds, the Clydesdales, the French horses called Percherons or Normans, the English and Belgian. There seems to be a larger demand for the French horses than for any other breed.

"Some years ago we used to get a great many horses from Upper Canada. These were Clydesdales, and would weigh from 1,400 to 1,600 pounds, but they did not seem to answer the purpose; as a general thing their feet were thin-shelled and flat, and being heavy horses their feet would become sore and would not stand the pavements. The French horses have good feet and stand the pavements better than the Clydesdales. That is the reason they sell better.

"I would advise the farmers and breeders who are breeding horses to sell on the New York market for draft purposes to breed from the French horses in preference to all others."—Chicago Tribune.

The best horses to be found in France are recorded with pedigrees in full in the Percheron Stud Book of that country.

At the great importing and breeding establishment of M. W. Dunham, Wayne, DuPage Co., Illinois, hundreds of the finest specimens of this famous race can be found at all times.

Tall Oaks from Little Acorns Grew.

Great and good results often spring from small deeds and so fatal diseases come of a seemingly trifling neglect. Colds neglected often lead to serious catarrhal troubles. If this is your case lose no time in becoming acquainted with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Its healing virtues will surprise you. It is simple, efficacious, speedy, sure. Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges from the nose into the throat are symptoms of this horrible complaint.

Hundreds of people can talk for one who can think, but thousands can think for one who can see

No man has ever lived a right life who has not been chastened by a woman's love strengthened by her courage, and guided by her discretion.—Ruskin.

"Frozen Facts" is a purely American expression, and one, too, of recent origin. It has the merit of attracting attention, and also seems to bear conviction of truthfulness on its face. We make room in our issue of to-day, for a fact of this character. A correspondent, Henry Whiting, Esq., of Boston, Mass., says:—"Dr. R. V. Pierce's 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured my son of a fever-sore of two years' standing. Please accept our gratitude." We believe it to be a fact, whether "frozen" or otherwise, that America needs more men like Mr. Whiting; men who act, men who investigate truths, and seize opportunities.

The human heart is like heaven—the more angels the more room.

If all so-called remedies have failed, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures.

If thou wouldst attain to thy highest go look upon a flower; what that does willessly, that do thou willingly.

Young Men!—Read This.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRO-VOLTAIC BELT and other ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

All impatience of monotony, all weariness of best things, even, are but signs of the eternity of our nature, the broken human fashions of the divine everlastingness.—I. Macdonald.

A P. 219

THE SETTLER'S GUIDE & LAND LAWS OF THE U.S., 25c. by mail. DANIEL WITTER, Denver, Col

DETACHED SOLID BRICK HOUSE.—GOOD SITuation, high and dry part of city, nine rooms, gas, bath and closet. Lot 33x110. Terms easy. Apply on the premises, or Address 33 Davenport Road, Toronto, Ont.

THE BLIND SEE.—Those afflicted are requested to get Williams' Eye Water, it cures all diseases of the Eye that are curable, even Color Blindness, ask your druggists for it. Wholesale by Lyman Sons & Co., Montreal. Send for circular to see the marvelous cures effected in Montreal on GEO WILLIAMS, 759 St. Lawrence street, or at GARDNER'S Drug Store, corner McGill and Notre Dame streets.

120 ACRES OF GOOD FARMING LAND FOR sale, with 109 acres under cultivation; good house, barn, and sheds; large young orchard; two miles from good market, and on main travelling road to same, which is a lively town. For particulars apply to HOLDEN BROS., Rockaway Centre, St. Clair Co., Mich.

Files RECUT! DON'T WASTE THEM. SHIP OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FILE CO 150 Front St. E., Toronto. Agents wanted.

GOLD TO FARMERS. Circulars free of new and most productive varieties known of Seed Grain. Testimonials of 110 bushels per acre of Boyd's Egyptian Oats. Samples of two oz., 15 cents. JAS. BOYD, Cedar Grove, Ont., Canada.

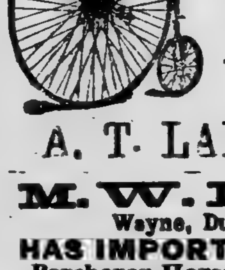
FOR PLEASANT SEWING
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Cotton!
Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry-Goods Dealers.

CAUTION!
EACH PLUG OF THE
MYRTLE NAVY
IS MARKED
T. & B.
IN BRONZE LETTERS.
NONE OTHER GENUINE.

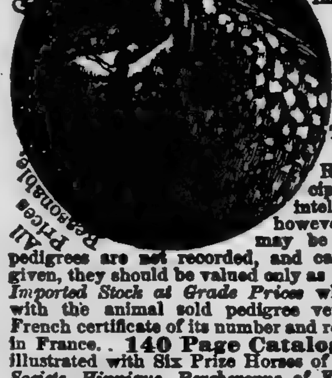
NEW CO-OPERATIVE
SEWING MACHINE
PRICE $25 CASH.
Our new machine is now ready, and is as good as any sold by Agents at $65.00.
SEE TESTIMONIAL!
LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 1884.
Machine arrived all right, and it is certainly well worth the money you ask for it with its present improvements. I prefer it to the "Singer," "Wanzer," or any other make at $60 each. Yours truly,
AARON HAWKINS.
New Attachments, New Furniture, New Stand.
Send stamp for samples of sewing and our elegant descriptive photographs of the machine before buying from Agents.
MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL.
BONUS:—From now until March 31st, 1885 we will give to any person sending us $25.00 cash in advance for one of our machines, a handsome combination table and brackets lamp complete. These lamps are something new and the maker wants them introduced.
If you or any of your friends want a machine don't delay, but send to
Co-Operative Sewing Machine Co.,
25 James St. South, Hamilton, Ont.

FIRE!! FIRE!!
Berry Growers can save 75 per cent. in labor by Burning their Strawberry Vines. For particulars and Price List of Strawberry and Raspberry Plants, address, F LUCIA, Flushing, Genesee Co., Mich.

Property for Sale, Rent or Exchange.
FIFTY ACRES NEAR TORONTO, $65 per acre; also west half of 29 on 8th., and lot 30 on the 10th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Shelburne Station, $12 per acre; for sale, rent or exchange. Terms to suit.
FIFTY ACRES NEAR TORONTO, $65 per acre, also west hundred acres of lot on the 10th concession of Brock, cheap and west half of 29 on 8th and 30 on 10th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Shelburne Station, $12 per acre; for Sale, Rent, or Exchange. Terms to suit. Save this advertisement.
J. P. JACKSON, Downsview.



Dominion Line of Steamships.
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from PORTLAND.



Dominion,	March	5	Toronto,	April	9
Montreal,	"	12	Montreal,	"	23
Brooklyn,	"	26

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35. Steerage, at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep are carried on them. For particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway local agents of the Company, or to DAVID TORRANCE & CO., General Agents, Montreal.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships,
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co, Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B. Allan & Co., Chicago; Leve & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co Quebec; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston Montreal

EVERY FARMER,
—AND—
Especially Those Living on Rented Farms, should send me postal cards, with addresses, o. Sectional maps and particulars of the special offer made by the ST. PAUL, MINNEAPOLIS, & MANITOBA R'Y.
for their Lands in the Red River Valley,
within short distance of track. Only 50 cents per acre down; also Nine Million acres. Free Government Land in the Turtle Mountain and Devil's Lake Districts,
North Dakota. Particulars free.
Address—
C. H. WARREN, & CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.
or H. F. McNALLY,
28 Front St., East, Toronto, Ont

A. T. LANE, Montreal,

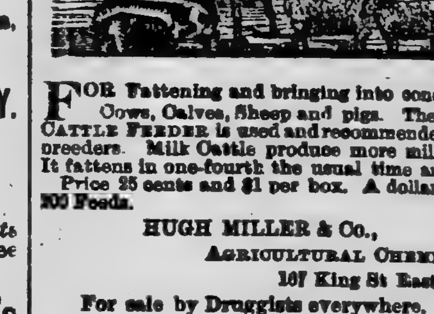
PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd-hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for list.
A. T. LANE, Montreal.

M. W. DUNHAM
Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,
HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE
Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which includes
75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES
Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE.
EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.

STOCK ON HAND:
150 Imported Brood Mares,
250 Imported Stallions, Old enough for service,
100 COLTS, Two years old and younger.
Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that, however well-bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Societé Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884; purchased by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order one from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

SEEDS WM. EWING & CO., Seed Merchants, 142 McGill St., Montreal, will forward their Illustrated Seed Catalogue to all Applicants. We give special attention to Seed Grain and Grass Seeds. The Early Scotch Bearded Wheat is the Best and Heaviest cropping variety of Spring Wheat produced. Correspondence invited.



H. WILLIAMS,
SLATE AND FELT ROOFER
Manufacturer and Dealer in Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Paper, Carpet Felt, &c., at lowest Prices.
4 ADELAIDE ST. EAST . . . Toronto.

W. & F. P. Currie & Co.
100 Grey Nun St., Montreal.
Importers of
Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay.
Manufacturers of Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair Bed & Spring.

R. W. PRITTIE,
Real Estate Agent
Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee, & Financial Agent, Room C, Arcade, Yonge St., Toronto. Money to loan. Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged. Manitoba and United States lands taken in part payment for city property.

SMOKED SAUSAGES
The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for circular to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342, Montreal.

F. E. DIXON & CO.
Manufacturers of Star Rivet
Leather Belting
70 King Street, East, Toronto.
Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses, Cows, Calves, Sheep and pigs. The YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first-class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time and saves food. Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 200 Feeds.
HUGH MILLER & Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,
167 King St East, Toronto.
For sale by Druggists everywhere.

BRUCE'S FRESH AND GENUINE SEEDS
For the Farm, Vegetable and Flower Garden. Have been used by the Canadian Public for thirty-four years, and we claim that they are unrivalled for purity, reliability & general excellence. Our Beautifully Priced Catalogue, beautifully illustrated, containing much useful information, is now published and will be mailed free to all intending purchasers.
JNO. A. BRUCE & CO., Hamilton, Ont.

HAND STAMPS
METAL & RUBBER DATERS, SELF INKERS & BANKING STAMPS, NOTARY SEALS, &C. AGENTS WANTED
KENYON, TINGLEY & STEWART MFG. CO.
72 KING ST. WEST.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, ... New York.

R. U. AWARE THAT
Lorillard's Climax Plug bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

SEEDS
RENNIE'S SEEDS are THE BEST
Illustrated Catalogue for 1885
Containing description and prices of the choicest FIELD, GARDEN & FLOWER SEEDS Mailed free. Every Farmer and Gardener should have a copy before ordering seeds for the coming season. Handsomest catalogue published. ...
WM. RENNIE, TORONTO.

Island Home
Stock Farm
GROSSE ISLE, ...
IMPORTED PERCHERON HORSES.
All stock selected from the get of sires and dams of established reputation and registered in the French and American Stud Books. We have a very large stock of imported stallions and brood mares on hand. Prices reasonable. Correspondence solicited. Send for illustrated catalogue free by mail. Address SAVAGE & FARNUM, Detroit, Mich.

The Temperance Colonization Society
LIMITED.
Free Homesteads. One Hundred and Sixty Acres of Beautiful Land Free to Actual Settlers.
SPECIAL ADVANTAGES:
First class land; plenty of pure water; navigable river passing through it; sober, thrifty, moral neighbours; healthy climate; no fevers; convenient to coal mines; season longer than in Manitoba; supply store in the colony; located in centre of fertile belt.
FIRST EXCURSION TO THE COLONY, ABOUT APRIL 2ND.
FURTHER EXCURSIONS TO FOLLOW DURING THE SEASON.
Maps of the Colony and City, and all information furnished upon application.
HEAD OFFICE, - - 114 King Street West, Toronto.
W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Manager.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating properties of beef, and the only one which has the power to supply nourishment for brain and muscle.

SEEDS WM. EWING ... Merchants ... treal, will forward ... trated Seed Catalogue ... all Applicants ...
...tention to Seed Grain and Grass Seeds ... Early Scotch Bearded Wheat is the ... heaviest cropping variety of Spring Wheat ... Correspondence invited.

H. WILLIAMS,
SLATE AND FELT ROOFER
Manufacturer and Dealer in Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building ... Carpet Felt, &c., at lowest Prices.
ADELAIDE ST. EAST ... Toronto

W. & F. P. Currie & Co.
100 Grey Nun St., Montreal,
Importers of
Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Fine Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, ...
Manufacturers of ... Steel Sofa, Chair Bed & ...

R. W. PRITTIE,
Real Estate Agent,
Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee, & Financial Agent, Room C., Arcade, Yonge St., Toronto. Money to ... Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged. ... United States lands taken in part payment for city property.

SMOKED SAUSAGES
The most convenient meat for farmers in their ... season. These meats are cooked and ready for ... Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for ... W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342, Montreal.

F. E. DIXON & CO.
Manufacturers of Star Rivet
Leather Belting
70 King Street, East, Toronto.
Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses, Cows, Calves, Sheep and pigs. The YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first-class ... Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter ... fattens in one-fourth the usual time and saves food. Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains ... feeds.
HUGH MILLER & Co.,
Agricultural Chemists.
167 King St East, Toronto.
For sale by Druggists everywhere.

BRUCE'S
FRESH AND GENUINE
SEEDS
For the Farm, Vegetable and Flower Garden. Have been used by the Canadian Public for thirty-four years, and we claim that they are unrivalled for purity, vitality & general excellence. Our Descriptive Priced Catalogue, beautifully illustrated, containing much useful information, is now published and will be mailed free to all intending purchasers.
JNO. A. BRUCE & CO., Hamilton, Ont.

HAND STAMPS
METAL & RUBBER DATERS, SELF INKERS & BANKING STAMPS, NOTARY SEALS, &C. AGENTS WANTED.
LYON, TINGLEY & STEWART MFG. CO.
72 KING ST. WEST.

... TION.
... the above disease; by its ... of cases of the worst kind and of long ... have been cured. ... is my faith ... that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. ... New York.

R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Plug bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's ... Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

SEEDS
... SEEDS are THE BEST
Illustrated Catalogue for 1885
... FIELD, GARDEN & FLOWER SEEDS
... TORONTO

Island Home
Stock Farm
GROSSE ISLE, ...

IMPORTED PERCHERON HORSES.
All stock selected from the get of sires and dams of established reputation and registered in the French and American Stud Books. We have a large stock of imported stallions and brood mares on hand. Prices reasonable. Correspondence solicited. Send for illustrated catalogue, free by mail. Address SAVAGE & FARNUM, ... Mich.

...nization Society
...ED.
... Hundred and Sixty Acres of Beautiful Land Free to Actual Settlers.
...GES:
... through it; sober, thrifty, moral neighbours; season longer than in Manitoba; ... centre of fertile belt.
...NY, ABOUT APRIL 2ND
DURING THE SEASON.
...on furnished upon application. ...
...ing Street West, Toronto.
... PEMBERTON PAGE, Manager.

...NSTON'S FLUID BEEF
...he only preparation of the kind which ... the nutritious, together with the stimulating ... of beef, and the only one which has ... supply nourishment for brain and muscle.

A Great Canadian Industry.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

TORONTO, Feb. 23, 1885.

As it is of so much importance to the ...ming interest, and through them to ...ry other business interest of our coun...y, to be well supplied with the best ...m labor-saving machinery of every ...s, some notes in regard to the largest ...nufacturing establishment of the kind ...the Dominion will, no doubt, prove of ...rest to your many readers. While ...iting Toronto recently I spent part of a ... going through The Massey Manufac...ing Company's Works, located at the ...t end of this city, and was much sur...ed at their extent and importance. ... only after visiting some such estab...ment that one gets an idea to what ...ent labor-saving machinery has been ...oduced in connection with Canadian ...iculture, and to what a fine state of ...fection many of these labor-saving ...chines have been brought.

Mr. Massey, the head of this prosper... and enterprising Company, has been ...nearly forty years in this line of busi..., and the results prove that few men ...e been so successful in it. He is a ...ve Canadian—a farmer's son—spend... his early days on a farm where, no ...bt, he often had reason to feel the ...ortance of good harvesting machinery. ...ny years ago he began business in the ...age of Newcastle, where he became so ...cessful that larger machine shops were ...d necessary to meet the growing de...ds of the business. A Joint Stock ...pany was formed there, and a few ...s ago six acres of ground were pur...ed adjoining the railways at the west ... of Toronto, where the present ex...ive works were erected.

THE PRESENT BUILDINGS.

...e premises now occupied by the ...pany are certainly very complete and ...nsive. There looms up a vast build... or series of buildings, of brick, with ...ngle frontage of 750 feet and four ...es in height. It would require too much ...e to undertake to give here any de...d description of these fine buildings. ...hey were erected for this express pur... and planned by practical men with ... years of business experience, they ...models of convenience and adaptation ...e business. To give some idea of ... extent it may be here stated that ...oor space alone of these buildings ...nts to nearly 200,000 square feet, or ...y four and a-half acres, and would ...ual to one vast floor of one mile in ...h and thirty-seven feet in width. In ... buildings the entire work is carried ...all its departments—foundry, black...ing, iron-finishing, wood-working, ...ing and storage.

...e buildings are located alongside of ...principal railway lines running ...gh Toronto, and there are sidings di... through the premises, so that car ...of raw material, such as iron, steel, ...r, paint stuffs, and the like, are de...d at the doors, and car loads of com... machines are loaded directly on the ...es for the places of transhipment.

THE LABOR EMPLOYED.

...m 350 to 450 hands are constantly ...yed in these works. As a large pro...n of the men are skilled artizans, ...arly all of them strong able men, ...r full prime, it will be at once seen ... large number of families,—enough ...e a thriving village of themselves, ...directly dependent on the success ... enterprise. The men are of more ...rdinary intelligence, and of temper...bits, and the fact that, as a whole, ...ke such a deep interest in the busi... one of the important factors of ... It may be here mentioned that ...library and reading room was open...w months ago for the benefit of ...ployees. There is a large well... well-furnished cheerful room ...d with the leading representative ...and magazines in the various de...nts of literature, to which every ...s access without charge. The of...el encouraged to note the interest ...en in this fine hall. At noon and ...certain evening hours a large num...he men may be found assembled ...joying the rich intellectual repast ... laid before them.

... Hall has also been provided for ...s, concerts, lectures, and the like, ...mmediate benefit of the men and ...amilies, and also another large ... hall, capable of holding from six ...n hundred people, for still ...gatherings. It is quite prob...t in this, regular religious ser...l soon be established by some of ...churches,—the Company freely ...g the room, lighted and heated ...urpose, but not desiring, as a ..., to take special control of the re...ervices. Probably no other in...firm in Toronto is giving better ...evidence of its interest in the in... and social well being of the men ...d with it.

IMPLEMENTS MANUFACTURED.

...tire attention of the establish...iven to the manufacture of har...mplements. A few kinds of the ...ines have been singled out and ... men and the best machinery ... provided for making them in ...best manner. Nearly everything ...tion with the machines is man... directly in the works, care be... that everything is the best of ...nd in this way a high reputa...reliability has been obtained. ...chine is not only put carefully ...n the works, but is also submit...eral tests more severe than the ...ield tests, so that any defect is ... found out and remedied before ...e workshop at all.

...wing machines—The "Toronto ...itted with the new and cele...chanical gear, and the "Massey ...e made, and these have now an immense sale, some thousands of them being made each year and sent to every Province in the Dominion. Of their peculiar excellence I cannot speak. The fact, however, that they have a well-established reputation for good work is good evidence in their favor.

A good deal of attention is now being given to the manufacture of the "Toronto Light Binder," also equipped with a novel sheaf carrier. It is only quite recently that the practicability of a self binding machine was established, and in some localities they have not yet been introduced. There can be no longer doubt, however, in regard to their success. A few years hence and no farmer will think to do binding by manual labour no more than he now thinks of mowing or reaping "by hand." Every binder here made is put to a severe test before it is declared completed, and I am informed that the demand for them is becoming very great. About fifteen each day are being completed and it is doubtful if the demand of the coming season will not be in excess of the supply.

The "Massey Harvester," a self-raking machine is also being extensively manufactured, and it has enjoyed a large sale for many years. Probably no other reaper is more extensively in use in the harvest fields of Canada, and the Company have long staked their reputation on its excellence.

It may be here stated that all the knives for the various machines are manufactured on the premises. It is claimed that this is the only firm in Canada manufacturing its own section knives. They look small, but in the process of cutting, shaping, tempering, polishing and shapening every section passes through the hands of nine experienced workmen, and a considerable machinery specially adapted to the purpose is used. There are many elaborate and expensive iron working machines specially made for these works.

HORSE RAKES.

Probably no where else in Canada is there anything like as large a number of steel tooth horse rakes manufactured as here. The "Sharp's Horse Rake" is the only kind made. Everything in connection with the rake is manufactured on the premises. The machines by which the wheels are made are such as would well repay a long journey of any carriage maker to see. The process of making and tempering the steel teeth is also very ingenious and elaborate. How so many thousands of these rakes can find yearly sale is a matter of wonder, and yet the demand has grown from year to year.

FOR REPAIRS.

The great drawback to many a valuable harvest machine is its danger of breaking just when the hurry is greatest. Where machines are severely tested before being pronounced finished the danger is not so great but "accidents will happen" even to the best tried machinery. Arrangements have been made to supply any desired piece of any machine with the least possible delay. A large room is stored with completed parts, piled up in large stalls and ready for shipment at a moment's notice. During the busy season a man is always ready for a call, and telegraph and telephone offices are on the premises, besides several express services a day, so that not a moment is allowed to be lost.

HOW SOLD.

Comparatively few machines, I am told, are ever sold at the works. A show room is fitted up with facilities to show every machine in actual motion, but its demand is not very great. The agents of the company are scattered abroad in every one of the Provinces, and through these the sales are being made. There is a branch house in Winnipeg and the sales in Manitoba are very large. At one time last year a special train of twenty one cars loads was shipped direct to Winnipeg, and almost every day during the season some car loads are being sent. Shipments by the car load from April till the end of the season are of daily occurrence.

I am informed that an agent is also employed purchasing lumber expressly for the company, and, being an experienced man at such business, they are always fortunate in getting a good quality. The samples of paints, oils, and the like, are also put to severe practical tests before quantities are ordered, and then they are mixed and ground by machinery on the premises.

Though nothing is done in the way of newspaper advertising, yet some thousands of dollars are being expended each year in reaching the public. A very neatly printed paper of sixteen pages,—"Massey's Illustrated," is issued in immense editions and sent to every available farmer in the Dominion. Any man dropping a post-card with his name and address to the company will be gratuitously supplied with a copy.

There are many other features of importance in connection with this large establishment of which I would like to write, but I fear I have already trespassed too much on your space.

A VISITOR.

The British Navy.

In the House of Lords the Earl of Northbrook, First Lord of the Admiralty, said that the British navy was superior to that of France or any other nation. He said it was the intention of the Government to build thirty torpedo boats. Ten of them had already been ordered. With regard to the naval defences of the various colonies of Great Britain, the Earl of Northbrook gave assurance that the Government would gladly assist them in any way possible to improve the defences on their coasts.

The total of the enrolled volunteers in Great Britain at the present time is 215,000 men, the greatest number yet attained.

CHOICE RECIPES.

PEANUT CAKE.—One-half cup butter, one and one-half cups milk, two and one-half cups flour, whites of four eggs, one-half teaspoonful cream tartar, one-quarter teaspoon soda; just before putting into oven sprinkle over the top one cup peanuts broken into pieces.

RAISIN TARTS.—One heaping coffee-cup stoned and chopped raisins, two small cups powdered sugar, the grated rind and juice of two lemons. Put all together in a bowl and set in the tea-kettle till the sugar is dissolved; when cool fill the shells.

LOAF CAKE.—Three cups of light dough; work in one cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one cup molasses, two eggs, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in three tablespoonfuls of milk or cream, one teacup of chopped raisins; spice to the taste, and let it get quite light before baking.

BLACK BEAN SOUP.—Three pounds of beef shin-bone, one quart of black beans, soaked all night. Chop an onion and boil with the beans and bone for five or six hours; then strain and season with salt, pepper, one tablespoonful catchup and two of hard cider. This is a soup much fancied by city epicures, but seen less often than it deserves upon farmers' tables.

LYONNAISE POTATOES.—Slice a pound of cold boiled potatoes. Put two tablespoonfuls of butter into a saucepan with a small onion chopped fine. Set the pan over the fire, and when the onion has fried to a delicate brown add the potatoes and turn and toss them till they begin to color, then stir in a little minced parsley and serve immediately.

BEEFSTEAK BALLS.—Broil very slightly two pounds of lean steak from the round. Chop it very fine, add one tablespoonful of flour, two of milk, and salt and pepper to taste. Fry in hot fat. Serve hot with mashed potato.

HONEY PUDDING.—Three pints thinly sliced apples, one pint honey, one pint flour, one pint cornmeal, small piece butter, one tablespoonful soda, the juice of two lemons, and three grated lemon rinds. Stir the dry soda into the honey, then add the apples, melted butter, and a little salt. Now add the other ingredients and stir in the flour. Bake one hour and serve with sauce.

OATMEAL MUFFINS.—One cup of oatmeal, one and a half pints of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, two of baking powder, one tablespoonful of lard, two eggs, one pint of milk. Sift together meal, flour, salt, and baking powder; rub the lard in cold, and then add beaten eggs and milk.

PARSNIP FRITTERS.—Scrape the parsnips, and, if large, put them into boiling water and boil, with salt enough to season them nicely, till quite tender; then mash them, adding to four or five parsnips a heaping tablespoonful of flour, one or two beaten eggs, and pepper and salt to taste. Make up into cakes and fry in hot pork fat. Even those who have a rooted prejudice against parsnips will generally like them in this form.

Chickens and Pills.

Dr. Jones, who practises in a suburb of Philadelphia has an elaborate machine for making pills. The doctor's practice is quite extensive and when he puts the machine in operation the result is enough to scare a nervous patient into convalescence or fits. Not long ago Dr. Jones made several quarts of pills and waited for a bright day to dry them. As soon as he got a good look at the sun he spread the pills carefully on the roof of a convient outbuilding and drove off to see his patients. About half an hour after the doctor's buggy had disappeared Mrs. Jones heard an unusually vociferous squawk from the boss rooster of the back yard, but she had not could dry enough to investigate the cause, being confident that no colored brother would invade the chicken reservation on such a bright day. If she had looked she would have seen the rooster perched on the roof of the out-building eating pills as though he were laying up for seven lean years of famine.

Attracted by the rooster's summons to the banquet, and his evident enjoyment thereof, one or two hens flew up to the top of the shed and proceeded to devour the pills. They cackled and clucked a little after satisfying their appetites, and more hens came. Then more hens cackled. Then there were still more hens and less pills. The increased volume of the cackling, indulged in by the hen convention finally attracted Mrs. Jones's attention again and she went forth to learn the cause. She didn't learn it just then, for the entire cause was concealed within the hens. Not a pill was to be seen. Two or three hens lay on the ground wreathing from the effects of blue mass. The boss rooster sat grimly in a fence corner laboring under a dose of podophyllin. Two or three gay young pullets had been so highly benefitted that they were fighting out the disputed title to a pill that one of them had swallowed. Other fowls staggered about in a dazed sort of fashion, as if wondering what was the matter with them.

Two hundred and thirty-seven pills were found in the craw of one of the chickens which was killed for dinner that day. Nobody could explain how they got there till the doctor came home. He examined the shed roof and the pills taken from the slain chicken's craw and said one or two little words. The family dined that day on eggs bought at the grocery store.

There is probably no better illustration in this world of the terrible weight of grave responsibility than a five inch dog standing on a box with his forepaws on the tailbord of a four-horse express waggon, alertly guarding its passage through the streets of a crowded city.

ROUND THE WORLD.

Slavery in Brazil—Doctors in Russia—London's Police—The Island of Madeira, &c., &c.

Slavery dies hard in Brazil. The province of Pernambuco has still 83,000 slaves. Abolitionists are not in favor in that province.

The new English Postmaster-General, having gone down to his office and let himself in with a latchkey, was promptly arrested by a detective and held until identified as a non-dynamiter.

A stage was upset in Aphlegate Creek, in southern Oregon, the other day, by a rush of salmon. The horses were cut loose, and the driver escaped on their backs. The salmon crowded the river from bank to bank, and the school was over a mile long.

Russia has 15,231 doctors, and maintaining universities at Kazan, Kiel, Charkow, Moscow, Warsaw, Helsingfors, and Dorpat. The professional men flock to the cities. In the country thousands of people die for want of medical and surgical attendance.

Arsenical floors, in addition to wall papers of that kind, are threatened in England. A correspondent writes to one of the London papers, showing that an architect directs the washing of joists for cellar floors with an arsenical solution, to prevent dry rot.

According to a careful report in Comptes Rendus, coffee is a complex aliment which acts mainly by modifying the phenomena of nutrition and the general functions. It renders the organism capable of consuming and destroying larger quantities of nitrogenous substances, and may consequently be regarded as an indirect source of available energy.

By far the best-looking men in London to-day are the police. The soldiers can't compare with them. The hard times have evidently induced many farmers' sons and others of superior calibre to enter the police force who are persons of education and have excellent manners. Yet a London policeman receives only $6 a week. He has a pension, though, if he stays on.

The descriptive terms used for neurological conditions are rapidly increasing in number, and bid fair to make an interesting vocabulary. Some of the comparitively recent terms are used by Dr. C. H. Hughes in the St. Louis Medical Journal, where he describes a patient who "has anthrophobia, being afraid to meet any one about the house," and polyphobia, "afraid of everything, sometimes;" he has also phobophobia, being "afraid something is going to happen to frighten him."

A recent work, "The London and Provincial Water Supplies," gives the daily consumption of water in London at 144,592,772 gallons, or nearly 30 gallons per head of population. Glasgow is fortunate in her supply, receiving 50 gallons per head per diem from the pure waters of Lock Katrine. The writer says that the population of London is now increasing at the rate of 100,000 per year. If this rate continues until 1919 London will have a population of about 10,000,000, and the water problem will be a very serious one.

A writer in a London paper says: "The most attractive show at the Japaneseries—at least for the lady visitors—is the hairdresser's shop; and the first result of the visit of this little colony is a development in the fashion of tonsorial art. Already I have noticed half a dozen ladies with heads trimmed a la Japanese; and now I am assured on the best authority that artists in hair are on their way from Japan, under engagement with two of our best known fashionable West End hairdressers." The Japan village has proved a great success.

A writer in the Medical Times describes the island of Madeira as presenting the curious anomaly of a country which is destitue of any wheeled vehicle whatever, a fact due to the almost complete absence of roads. People travel in hammocks, and, with three bearers only, they may journey all day with hardly a halt. The highest temperature of the island in 1885 was 90°, and the lowest 46°; the mean temperature of the months of the whole year varied but twelve degrees. Thus, for the winter months, it was 61, 60, 60; spring, 60, 63, 64; summer, 68, 71, 72, and autumn, 70, 69, 64.

The French Academy of Sciences receives innumerable letters from people who imagine they have made some brilliant discovery. A lady wrote lately that having been suddenly seized with the early symptoms of cholera, she entered a cafe and ordered a glass of absinthe, which she drank. The cholera disappeared at once. The Secretary was complimented for his gallantry in reading the lady's very important communication, but was reminded that people attacked by cholera do not generally enter cafes, but if forced to do so, do not usually call fos absinthe.

A NOVEL HEAD LIGHT.—The electric light is beginning to be utilized in a hundred ways not at first even thought of. The Scientific American thus describes a new scarf pin. Surely a fashionable gentleman, thus attireed with one of these, will shine in society as he never shone before. A couple of fine wires lead from the lamp to a small battery, made in the form of a book and carried in the pocket. By touching a button, also arranged in one's pocket, the necktie lamp is instantly lighted and continues as long as the button is pressed. The battery becomes exhausted after considerable use, but may easily be replenished. This is a device of genuine excellence, and well illustrates the progress of practical electricity.

A KENTUCKY GIRL'S CHOICE.

Eloping with one Lover and then Sending for and Marrying Another.

Miss Emma L. Henderson of Hopkinsville, Ky., a bright girl of good family, was the heroine recently of an elopement with one lover and a marriage with another. For over two years she has divided her heart about equally between W. H. Martin of Crofton and O. S. Stevens. The lovers were not on speaking terms with each other. On Saturday morning Martin and Miss Henderson, by the invitation of the young lady, took a train for Springfield to be married. Miss Henderson wept occasionally as they travelled along. Having arrived at Springfield, Martin lost no time in procuring a license. When he returned to the hotel Miss Henderson demanded that the ceremony should be postponed a few hours. She then returned to the privacy of her room and took the landlord into her confidence. She told him all, and said she loved both, but preferred Stevens, the man she had left behind. The landlord volunteered his services, and she handed him the following telegram to send:

Mr. O. S. Stevens:

Come to Springfield first train. I am waiting for you. EMMA L. HENDERSON.

Stevens received the telegram and left on the 12:26 train. Martin had again asked for the marriage to be solemnized, and had been put off until 3 P. M., at which time the train would arrive with Stevens. The young lady gave as a reason that she wanted to wait for her brother, who would come on the 3 o'clock train.

At that hour Stevens, accompanied by her brother, arrived and went to the hotel. The girl then had an interview with each of her lovers, and each of them also talked with her brother. Stevens was the prize, and the news was broken to Martin as gently as possible. He declared that he loved the girl, but accepted her decision manfully and was present at the wedding. He shook hands with his old enemy, and congratulated his bride with a kiss. The whole party then returned on the evening train, Martin dividing time with Stevens in talking to the bride on the return trip. The train arrived at 8.30 p.m., and the engineer blew his whistle for five minutes while entering the city. Stevens's father has denied him his house for the part he took in the transaction. The bridal couple are at Mr. Henderson's. Young Henderson has obtained parental forgiveness for his sister. Martin has in his possession a marriage license as a memento.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

BRIDGING THE JORDAN.—U. S. Consul Merrill, at Jerusalem, reports that, during the past summer, an attempt has been made to build a bridge over the Jordan at Jericho. It has progressed slowly, however, as the lumber furnished had to be brought from Europe, and carried on the backs of camels from the port of Jaffa to the river. The Consul suggests that there might be some market in Palestine for American lumber, as the Austrian and Turkish lumber now used there is of poor quality and high-priced, but the country is probably too poor to make much of a market for anything at present; the whole yearly imports at Jaffa, which is the Mediterranean seaport for Jerusalem, amount to only about $600,000.

A NEW ILLUMINATOR.—In Russia experiments are now going on for the production of pyronaphtha, a new illuminating material, which is destined, it is considered, to take the place of kerosene. This is a new illuminating oil, absolutely free from danger of fire. An experiment was made as to the power which pyronaphtha has of extinguishing fire; and it was found that burning kerosene was easily put out by it. Pyronaphtha can, however, itself be extinguished by water. It is a product of the distillation of naptha residue, of which large quantities remain from the Baku distillation of petroleum. From these illuminating gas is produced, and likewise pyronaphtha. The specific gravity of pyronaphtha is 0 864, and it ignites only at 230° Fah. It burns without smoke and vapor at 257°; gives a better light than kerosene; is consumed less rapidly; while its prime cost is less. At St. Petersburg it is being adopted for domestic use; and a special burner has been constructed for the purpose.

Mesmerism.

M. Verbeck, a French mesmerist, now in London, performs some surprising illusions, using but one hand. A wedding ring borrowed from a lady is hammered into a bar by some volunteer assistant among the audience. The conjurer borrows a programme, rolls it into a cornucopia-shaped receptacle for the ring, and without the use of the left hand crumples the paper into a ball, which the volunteer holds tight, full in view of the audience. When he is directed to open it he finds that the crumpled ball of paper consists of five sealed envelopes, one within the other, and with the perfect wedding ring in the smallest and innermost. In the exhibition of the effects of mesmeric control, Mlle. de Marguerit, who assists M. Verbeck, bears without sign of feeling, the thrusting of a scarf pin through the fleshy part of the forearm, and afterward, moving rhythmically under musical influence, still in mesmeric trance, stops with the cessation of the music and preserves her poise, motionless, in attitudes which a pantomine figurante would certainly find painful, if not impossible.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Seed Grain—B. Irwin.
~~Stray Ewe~~—B. Irwin,
Stray Sheep—Mrs. Wyvill.
Abstract Statement—Holland Tp.
Milk Hauling—B. Coleman.
Money Wanted—Markdale Methodist Trustees.

The Standard.

MARKDALE MARCH 19, 1885.

COUNCIL MINUTES.

The minutes of council meetings are about as interesting to ratepayers concerned as any matter we can publish provided they appear while fresh; but, when they come to hand from four to eight weeks after date of the meeting we consider them almost worthless. We are glad to publish those reports when sent in good time; but in future those only which we receive in a reasonable time after the meeting of which they are the report, will be published, two weeks should be sufficient time for any Tp. clerk to forward said reports.

THERE'S THOUSANDS IN IT.

Perhaps there is no form of recreation so universally practised as skating. Thousands of dollars have in the past been invested in ice skates, which are of service only at certain seasons, and in northern climes. The roller skates are now taking the place of the former, and in cities and fashionable circles everywhere have almost altogether taken the lead. The latter have been, up to the present time, made with four wheels, but a new, and greatly improved invention is now patented by two of our Markdale citizens, Messrs. J. Paine and J. H. Hull. The skate has but two wheels, and for speed, graceful movement and ease to the performer, is as far in advance of the four-wheel'd skate as can easily be imagined.

We understand the patentees have refused $10,000 for the patent for the Dominion. We wish them every success in their valuable find.

England and Her Troubles.

BY REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.

The present time are somewhat exciting. This is especially so in some of the older nations. The two colossal powers of the day are Britain and Russia—the Lion and the Bear. One or the other of these powers must finally have the sovereignty of the world. In days of old there seemed to be two political world-centres. One was localized and operative in the Hebrew nation. From this centre Providence seemed to work. To them as God's executive was entrusted the evangelization and civilization of the nations. The other, called the gentile centre, was located in the Babylonian Empire. Since that time it has moved to Persia, Greece and Rome, and is now in Russia.

These two central powers are aiming for the central land, which is Palestine. In this land they will finally yet meet for a final struggle in the battle of Armageddon. Britain will come off victorious. All going on now is but preliminary. Both of them are on their way to Palestine—Russia is going by way of Asia, through India, and England by way of Egypt and Turkey.

If the reader could get and read the Will of Peter the Great, he would know the policy of Russia and be able to go before them. This will each successor takes oath at the time of coronation to carry out and forward. I will quote the 9th clause:

"Take every possible means of gaining Constantinople and the Indies, (for he who rules there will be the true sovereign of the world); excite war continually in Turkey and Persia; establish fortresses in the Black Sea; get control of the sea by degrees, and also of the Baltic, which is a double point, necessary to the realization of our project; accelerate as much as possible, the decay of Persia; penetrate to the Persian Gulf; re-establish if possible, by the way of Syria, the ancient commerce of the Levant; advance to the Indies, which are the great depot of the world. Once there we can do without the gold of England."

When this will was made Russia was 2,500 miles from the Indies. At the close of last century it was 2,000, by the year 1810 it was 1,000 and in 1885 it was 400—and in 1885 the Bear and the Lion are now face to face. The past few years Russia has gained rapidly in territorial power. In her conquests of Bokhara and part of Turkistan she gained 800,000 square miles. Since the battle of Waterloo she has taken more from Sweden than remains, from Poland territory equal to the whole of Austria, from Turkey an area equal to Prussia, from Persia as much as the whole of Britain. She is 860 miles nearer Berlin and Paris, and 450 nearer Constantinople.

The reader may naturally ask where will Russia stop, and who will stop her? I answer, Britain will stop her. In her march east she is now at the end. Beyond the Afghan frontier she cannot go. I saw and wrote, ten years ago, that she would be just where she now is in 1885. Neither is the time come for them to fight, though it looks as if they would be at it before what I am now writing can be read.

England is in a critical position, but I have no fear of the final issues. The nations have choice of Russian or Britain's rule and lead, and surely it is not difficult to guess which both God and men prefer. England's present confusion and defeat in Egypt are all designed for a good purpose. She will be taught that she must lead among the nations or retire. But she herself will prefer to lead, so will other Christian nations prefer her lead, and so will the colonies prefer to be under her, hence it will tend to bind them all together. The doctrine of imperial federation is no nightmare dream but a reality. Neither Gladstone nor John Bright will after this be able to persuade England into a non-intervention policy. These are not the days for the formation of new nations, but the days of steal and conquest, and federation. Men that talk of Canadian independence can scarcely know what they are talking about. Independence would be all very well if all the world let us alone and allow us to trade with all the world and never interfere with us; but who will guarantee all this for us? The best policy for us, and all the British empire for the next few years is to keep well together. Believing as I do that the Saxons are the ten lost tribes of Israel as organized in Britain and the United States, I have faith in the future, for through the mouth of the prophet ultimate pre-eminence and rule is assigned to Israel. God bless our Queen, and the Empire at large.—Truth.

Supper and Presentation.

On Friday evening 13th inst., an Oyster Supper was given at the house of Mr. Thos. Kells, when the following address was read.

To the Rev. A. Wilson:

REV. SIR,—It affords us unmingled pleasure to have the privilege of representing an order, which in turn represents your numerous friends and well-wishers, and on their behalf to present you with this sum of money as a very slight token of their appreciation of the kind and ever-willing manner in which you have so heartily responded to their numerous invitations.

Your high character, your integrity and zeal for the Master's work have not only won the esteem of your own people, but of all those who have come in contact with you. That you may be long spared in the service which you so admirably adorn, is the wish of the many to whom your virtues are as household words.

Signed on behalf of L. O. L. No. 1383, THOS. KELLS, Master.
JOHN BOLAND, Treasurer.

REPLY.

Messrs. Boland and Kells:

GENTLEMEN,—Allow me to express to you and through you to those whom you represent, the very great pleasure this unlooked for privilege affords me, not that I wish to speak of that order, or of the sterling principles of that order, but to enjoy with you the privileges of this propitious hour. If in the discharge of my ever-increasing duties I have performed the part of a neighbor, a friend, a brother. I have done so purely from a sense of duty, and if my humble efforts in the cause of our blessed Master has been a benefit, or of service to any, I feel more than amply rewarded. I thank you for the friendly interest you have ever had in me, for the kind sentiments of this beautiful address, and for the feelings which originated this unmerited act.

Wishing you continued prosperity and the blessing of the Most High on all your doings,
I am sincerely yours.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Resturant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

Judgment was given by the Supreme Court yesterday in the West Northumberland and Lavis election appeals, unseating both the Conservative members.

The Charge of the Ten Brigade.

Half a league, half a league,
Half a league onward;
Into Trimble's tea shop
Walk many hundred.

Tea is the peoples' cry;
Which is the kind to buy;
Trimble's, at thirty cents, try,
Say many hundred.

Tea men to right of us;
Tea men to left of us;
Grocers all round us
Find they have blundered.

Plunged in the teapot fight;
Truth soon will bring to light;
Trimble's teas are always right;
Purchased morn' noon and night
By many hundred.

Stormed at with shot and shell,
By those who puff so well,
Their common tea to sell,
Say many hundred.

Our teas are always rare;
We blend with special care.
Trimble's teas are everywhere
Gladly remembered.

Ne'er shall the flavor fail;
Nothing can stop the sale,
Though all may wonder.
Oh, when our babes are old,
Then will the tale be told,
What splendid tea we sold
To many hundred.

Note the address—
MAMMOTH HOUSE,
MARKDALE.
Noted for cheap goods of all kinds.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

The entertainment given in the Town hall on the 11th inst, under the auspices of Flesherton Division of Sons of Temperance was a good entertainment the programme was lengthy and interesting. The play as advertised, Johnauthum Slocum, King Dodds and the Scott Act, was very well rendered, each one doing their parts admirably well.

Miss Veitch of New York has been spending a few weeks with Miss Frank Wright of this village.

Miss Tait of Orillia, is at present the guest of the Misses Richardson's.

Mrs. T. Aikenhead of Toronto, is at home spending a few days with her parents, Mr. & Mrs. J. W. Armstrong.

Mr. Samuel Cleland, an old resident of this township, who moved to Manitoba about four years ago has been down here paying a visit to some relatives in this vicinity, and looks quite hale and hearty, just as though the prairie climate agrees with him. Mr. Cleland who has had a fair trial of the Manitoba climate, now, speaks of it in the most praiseworthy terms and for the season round much prefers it to that of Ontario. Mr. C. states, upon going into Manitoba he bought a quarter of a section and has now broke up and in good condition 100 acres all of which he can cut and bind with the self-binder. Mr. C. is now looking for some horses for the North West.

Meaford Road.

(From our correspondent.)

The anniversary tea-meeting in aid of the Sabbath School here was held in the Wesley church on the 10th inst. The attendance was not so large as on former occasions, which was due to the very bad state of the roads, the day previous being very inclement. It was in every other respect a most decided success. The tea, which was supplied by the ladies of the neighborhood, was both ample and of the best kind. The interval between replenishing the inner man and the feast of wisdom was fully occupied by both old and young in a liberal distribution of lozengers, of which there seemed to be an inexhaustible supply. Mr. W. Buchanan, jr., occupied the chair, and was in his most felicitous mood. The Secretary's report showed the school to be in a very prosperous condition. The speakers were Messrs. T. Boland and D. R. Ellis, each of whom made short, pithy and practical speeches. The childrens part of the programme was well rendered, and seemed to please both the audience and themselves. The musical portion of the entertainment was furnished by a choir composed of part of the teachers and scholars of the school, and right well did they fill the bill; each piece being rapturously applauded. The proceeds, including the social on Thursday evening, netted about $30.

Ex-Judge Wilkins of Nova Scotia, is dead.

Cheese Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Flesherton cheese factory for the purpose of electing officers, letting contracts for hauling milk to the factory and other business, was held in the Town Hall, Flesherton, on Monday, the 9th inst. Although the day was very stormy there was a good turnout of the patrons. A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered to the President, Secretary and Directors, for the very efficient and satisfactory manner in which they discharged their duties during their various terms of office. The following were elected officers for the next year:—

President, G. Stewart, re elected.
Secretary, J. Brodie, re elected.
Director, T. Wright.
" W. Wilcock.
" W. Harrison.
" W. Hill.
" W. Pickle.
" H. Meldrum.
" D. McMullen.

Auditors—W. Harrison and W. Wilcock.

The following secured the contracts on the different routes for hauling milk to the factory, commencing on the 12th of May:—

Route No. 1, W. Leek,	$153	00
" 2, J. Hooly,	95	00.
" 3, E. Brodie,	119	00.
" 4, R. Walter,	100	00.
" 5, J. Lyons,	194	00.
" 6, W. Hopper,	145	00.
" 7, D. McMullen,	67	50.

J. BRODIE,
Secretary

Artemesia Council.

This council met in the Town Hall, Flesherton, on Monday, Feb'y 2nd, 1885.

Present—Messrs. Christoe, Blakley, Elliott, McArthur and McKee.

Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. John Whitby was appointed assessor for 1885, and by-law passed confirming the appointment.

Mr. C. C. James tendered his resignation as auditor, and Mr. Henry Meldrum was appointed in his stead, and by-law passed confirming the appointment.

An account from John Gordon of $1.25 was presented and ordered to be paid.

The committee appointed to investigate Treasurer's securities was presented and read.

Applications were received from the following parties for the office of assessor, viz., John Whitby, Thos. Granger, J. G. Irving.

H. Meldrum was refunded $9.90, being statute labor charged on lot 33, con. 8, the pathmasters certifying that the work had been performed.

The council adjourned.

Township officials for the current year:—

Overseers of highways:—Wm. Brown, Thos. Matthews, Wm. Henry, Wm. Burnet, A. Beattie, R. Lever, J. Sharp, A. Roe, Thorp Wright, D. Stinson, G. Ludlow, R. Ludlow, T. Elliott, Jr., R. Foster, Jas. O'Brien, Jacob Holley, Ed. Watts, C. W. Bellamy, W. H. Johnson, J. Brown, W. Gollop, J. Cornfield, S. Sheardown, T. Reid, H. C. Wilson, Wm. Blair, Wm. Spear, M. Kennedy, J. Piper, A. Cullan, P. Quigg, G. Best, Jno. Lyons, J. Neilson, D. McLean, R. J. Conkey, Jos. Watson, Wm. Waters, J. White, R. Olliver, Jno. Watson, J. G. Little, A. McLean, P. Muir, D. Harrow, H. Stone, Wm. Chard, J. Chard, J. McKee, Sr., Pat Welsh, J. J. Atwell, J. Genoe, J. Hargrave, D. Thompson, H. Kennedy, J. Hickling, Wm. Purvis, T. Genoe, T. Boland, R. Warling, C. Turner, G. Gordon, R. Cooper, A. Elliott, A. Sewell, J. Braniff, J. Stewart, J. B. Sloan, J. I. Graham, J. Weber, R. Smith, J. H. Heard, R. Cook.

Fenceviewers:—R. Whittaker, Jr., P. Muir, A. McLeod, D. Currie, J. Aussum, H. D. Irwin, R. Shannon, Wm. Blair, G. Moore, C. W. Bellamy, E. Ross, A. Down, J. Hickling, J. B. Sloan, J. Stewart.

Pound Keepers:—W. J. Dennis, Jas. Briant, A. Munshaw, M. Akitt.

CHOLERA PREVENTATIVE.

In order to withstand Cholera and such like epidemics a perfect purity of blood, and the proper action of the stomach are required. To insure that end, in the cheapest, most available and complete manner, use McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia, and Impure Blood. There is no purer, safer or more reliable remedy in existence for indigestion, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, etc. Ask your neighbor or any person who has used it. Sold by Hill Bro's. Trial bottle given free. 1

Mr. Perkins, who celebrated the 100th anniversary of his birth last October, died at Watersfor on Saturday.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths twenty five cents.

DEATHS.

RITCHIE.—In Glenelg, on Wednesday the 11th inst., Ellen Mariah Aljoe Mede, beloved and only daughter of George and Emma Ritchie, aged 1 year, 9 months and 9 days.

The storms of life she will not fear
On that eternal shore;
Mourn not for her, the lovely dear,
Her Father called her home.

Leave her with Him
Who loves us all with tender love and true
Trust her with Him who did for her
What you could never do.

Her death is died, her tears are shed,
Empty her cup of pain;
No troubles now can vex her heart,
No sin her garments stain.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 73	to	$0 00
Spring Wheat	0 73	to	0 00
Barley	50	to	67
Peas	54	to	76
Oats	34	to	00
Butter	15	to	00
Eggs	20	to	00
Apples	50	to	75
Potatoes	18	to	20
Hay	9 00	to	10 00
Pork	5 00	to	5 00
Flour	3 75	to	4 25

SEED GRAIN.

A LARGE quantity of good Seed Spring Wheat for sale cheap, also first-class Peas and Oats. Apply to BURROWES IRWIN, 2½ miles East of Markdale.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED,
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

N B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON.

NOTICE.

The undersigned begs to inform the public that he has his

SAW AND SHINGLE MILL

In full operation now, and is prepared to saw all kinds of Lumber and Shingle stuff, and give you your Lumber & Shingles home with you during the winter season.

Will saw on shares or for cash

Cash for Good Logs.

Yours truly,
W. J. ROWE,
222-3m BARR HEAD MILLS.

MARKDALE
FURNITURE STORE

STOCK COMPLETE

—IN—

HAIR CLOTH SUITS,
BEDSTEADS,
SPRING BEDS,
MATTRASSES

Extension, Side, Center, Fall-leaf and Kitchen Tables, Sideboards, Dressing Cases, Lounges and Cradles, &c., &c.

If we have'nt what you want we can have it on short notice.

—ALSO—

Lumber, Sash, Doors, Door Frames, Newel Posts, Stairs, Balusters, Hand Railing, and all such at

GRANT & CO'S,
Markdale.

f Births, Marriages, and ... cents.

DEATHS.

n Glenelg, on Wednesday, ...
llen Mariah Aljoe Mede, ... daughter of George ...
aged 1 year, 9 months ...

of life she will not fear eternal shore;
for her, the lovely dear, er called her home.

with Him
s us all with tender love and ...
with Him who did for her could never do.

s died, her tears are shed, er cup of pain;
now can vex her heart,
r garments stain.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

eat..........	$0 73	to	$0 00
Wheat.........	0 73	to	0 00
....	50	to	67
....	54	to	76
....	34	to	35
....	15	to	00
....	20	to	00
....	50	to	75
....	18	to	10
....	9 00	to	10 00
....	5 00	to	5 00
....	3 75	to	4 25

ED GRAIN.

E quantity of good Seed Spring
t for sale cheap, also first-class
Oats. Apply to BURROWES miles East of Markdale.

WEN SOUND
BLE WORKS

HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF BLE AND GRANITE
ENTS & HEADSTONES,
es, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED,
ads Finest Variegated Marble

est stock in the Dominion to . Personally selected at the quarmont. Will be sold at prices competition.

FACTION GUARANTEED.

Beware of Monuments and Head-in, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered tooiled and Sandblasted to hide ections, and called White Bronze.
H. B. HARRISON.

OTICE,

ersigned begs to inform the public that he has his

AND SHINGLE MILL

peration now, and is prepared all kinds of Lumber and ngle stuff, and give you ur Lumber & Shingles home with you during the winter season.

w on shares or for cash
n for Good Logs.

Yours truly,
W. J. ROWE,
BARR HEAD MILLS.

ARKDALE
ITURE STORE

CK COMPLETE

—IN—

OTH SUITS,
DSTEADS,
SPRING BEDS,
MATTRASSES,

Side, Center, Fall-leaf and Tables, Sideboards, Dress-Cases, Lounges and Cradles, &c., &c.

'nt what you want we ca...
e it on short notice.

—ALSO—

Sash, Doors. Door Frames
Posts, Stairs, Balusters, Hand Railing, and all such at

NT & CO'S,
Markdale.

HORSEMEN, ATTENTION!

When your horse is galled, scratched or cut, or has an ugly sore, bathe twice daily, and apply McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. It is undoubtedly the finest healing and cleansing application for it. Be sure you get McGregor & Parke's. Sold for 25c. per box, at Hill Bro's. 1

FLUID LIGHTNING.

All sufferers from the terrible torment, neuralgia, can be made happy in one moment by a single application of Fluid Lightning briskly rubbed on painful parts, and without taking any disgusting medicine day after day with little or no result. Fluid Lightning also cures as effectually Toothache, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Headache, and is only 25 cents per bottle at Hill Bro's. 1

Gone Over.

I.

"Come hither, come hither!" the broom was in blossom all over yon rise,
There went a wide murmur of brown bees about it with songs from the wood;
"We shall never be younger; O love, let us forth for the world 'neath our eyes—Ay, the world is made young e'en as we, and right fair is her youth and right good."

II.

Then there fell the great yearning upon me that never yet went into words,
While lonesome and moansome thereon spake and falter'd the dove to the dove,
And I came at her calling: "Inherit, inherit! and sing with the birds."
I went up to the wood with the child of my heart, and the wife of my love.

III.

O pure! O pathetic! Wild hyacinth drank it, the dream light apace.
Not a leaf moved at all 'neath the blue, they hung waiting for messages kind;
Tall cherry trees dropped their white blossom that drifted no whit from its place,
For the south very far out to sea had the lulling low voice of the wind.

IV.

And the child's dancing foot gave us part in the ravishment almost a pain;
An infinite tremor of life, a fond murmur that cried out on time.
Ah short! must all end in the doing and spend itself sweetly in vain,
And the promise be only fulfilment to lean from the height of its prime?

V.

"We shall never be younger!" nay, mock me not fancy, none call from yon tree:
They have thrown me the world, they went over, went up; and, alas! for my part,
I am left to grow old, and to grieve and to change, but they change not with me.
They will never be older, the child of my love and the wife of my heart —Jean Ingelow.

Cloth and its Manufacture.

A writer who depicts English life in Shakespeare's time, pays considerable attention to the state of trade, commerce and industry in various departments, as well as the social customs of the time. The condition of the woollen trade in 1558 appears to have been a fluctuating and uncertain one. Several monarchs had tried to manufacture English wool at home by employing Flemish artists. The cambric of Cambray, the calico of Calicut, the domoker of Damascus, the dimity of Damietty, the drape of Ypres, the millen of Milan, are still recognized by the names they bore. Flemings introduced the cloth trade in Yorkshire, and the east and west of England. The woad-plant was still cultivated in cloth regions for its dye. Lincoln green was famous, and so were the cloths of Kendal, Norwich, Peniston, and Halifax, as well as the coverlets of the city of York. Foreign uncertainties had caused the decay of these industries, and possibly the goods themselves were not as fine or as well made as those imported. Imperfect ... and bad materials would account for the roughness of the manufactured articles. "As we have the best wools in the world," says an old writer of the time, "we ought to have the best cloths; but there is more false cloth made in this realm than in all Europe besides. All countries be trying to make their own cloths in consequence." As a matter of fact, this is what they had been doing for hundreds of years. The English cloth trade was new, and difficult to establish.

An effort to introduce kersey-making into Leicester had failed. Hose are made there. In 1594 Alderman Robert Herwich wrote to the Earl of Huntington in London: "I have sent up by Henry White forty pairs of good worsted hose, tied together in four bunches, which I pray you will sell for me for 12*d*., or else lay them up in your press. I cannot afford them for less." In 1589 William Lee had invented the stocking machine, but he had carried it with him to France, and hand-made stockings were the rule until some time after his workmen returned with the secret. In the early part of the century Coventry had been famous for its woollens and its dyed thread. "As true as Coventry blue," was a proverb. But the business had declined, though it was revived in the later years of the century, when the "tammies," "comlets" and "shalloons" of the city were staple articles of trade. There was a good market for Irish linen in some of the Cheshire and Lancashire towns. Chester, then known as West Chester, petitioned in 1556 for a cotton staple in the city. Coatings, or imitations in cotton of the worsted stuffs of the Continent, were made by the shermen, or drapers, cottoners, and pressers of Shrewsbury, and also at Bolton and at Manchester. The Manchester trade was yet in its infancy, its fusions, vermilions and dimities did not become famous until the time of Charles I. The fulling of cloths was effected by walking upon them, as may still be seen in the Hebrides, and the name of the fulling ground was the "walken milne." In 155., recorded Cecil, from his own observation, the statement that "those who depend on the making of cloths are of worse condition to be quietly governed than husbandmen," showing the wretched state of manufacturing industry. Foreign manufacturers from France and Flanders set up their looms in various parts of England with the Queen's license. Elizabeth protected them against local exactions. Children spinning fine bay yarn, "a thing well liked both of Her Majesty and nobility and ladies," formed one of the special sights arranged for the Queen when she visited the town.—Hatter's Gazette.

Calculation.

A man walks three miles an hour—Sometimes.

A horse trots seven.—Now and then.

Steamboats run eighteen.—Occasionally.

Sailing vessels make ten.—When the wind is fair.

Slow rivers flow four.—Generally.

Rapid rivers flow seven.—Normally.

Storms move thirty-six.—More or less.

Hurricanes, eighty.—More or less.

A rifle-ball one thousand miles a minute.—Said to.

Sound, eleven hundred and forty-three.—Yes.

Light, one hundred and ninety thousand.—Certainly.

Electricity, two hundred and eighty thousand.—And a trifle over.

—At the time when the great body of citizens went to the several churches in Paris to return thanks to Heaven for the recovery of Louis XIV., Benserade, in an eulogium which he delivered at the French academy on that Prince, said, "To thank God for our monarch's recovery, the merchant leaves his country house, the artisan his workshop, and the doctor leaves his patient; and," he added, "the patient feels all the better for it."

Burned to Death.

HAYSVILLE, Ont., March 11.—About two o'clock this morning the house owned and occupied by Wm. Ellenbaum was totally destroyed by fire. The charred remains of Ellenbaum and his wife was found in the ruins this morning. Ellenbaum has lived in the village for about forty years, and married his third wife about six weeks ago. The origin of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to have caught by a pipe running through the roof. At the inquest this afternoon the jury returned a verdict of accidental death, caused by carelessness on the part of the disceased in allowing a stove pipe to project through the roof, which caught fire twice before, and is generally believed to be the direct cause of the sad affair.

Caught in a Storm.

THESSALON, Ont., March 16.—A furious storm from the east sat in on Saturday, 14th, and continued all the next day. Seven men on their way from Cockburn's Landing to Bruce Mines were caught in it, but managed to reach a fisherman's hut four miles from the latter place on the morning of the 15th. Three of them were so exhausted they had to remain there while the rest proceeded to Bruce Mines, for assistance. The relief party on their return found two of them, Robert and Simon VanNorman, badly frozen, but they will recover. The other man, named Geo. Forongo, of Mt. Forest, was so badly frozen that he died a few minutes after their arrival. It is still drifting and blowing furiously from the west. The roads are all blocked.

The C. P. R. Scheme.

MONTREAL, March 16.—Hon. J. J. C. Abbott the legal adviser of the Canadian Pacific, said to-day that the directors of the road were about to make a proposition to the government to the following effect: (1) That the lien of the government upon the line and all its belongings for the $30,000,000 loan, be changed into first mortgage bonds for $30,000,000. (2) This done, that the government accept lands in leau of $15,000,000 of these bonds, the remaining $15,000,000 of bonds to be disposed of by the company, the proceeds applied to the completion and equipment of the line. "By complying with this offer," said Mr. Abbott, "the government will not have to contribute any more money. Every dollar realized by the sale of the bonds will be applied to the completion of the road and its equipment, thereby enhancing the security. This will also advance the price of the stock, as the government will have no preference. The line from Winnipeg round Lake Superior to this city will be finished in three weeks and opened shortly after."

LATER.

MONTREAL, March 17.—Hon. J. J. C. Abbott says he is not aware of any plan or arrangement being contemplated to lay before the government by the directors of the Canadian Pacific railwaw, but he personally believed something, on the basis suggested, would be favorably received in parliament as involving no further loan. Mr. Abbott charges the reporter of the Witness with erroneously reporting what he said, and has given his own version as above.

Almost Murdered.

Talleyrand, the famous statesman, used to tell a remarkable anecdote. "I remember, he said, "upon one occasion feeling beforehand ... a single ... ment with an unknown and ... power. I know not to this hour whence it came, it has never once returned, and yet upon that one occasion I saved my life. I was then at New York, and had freighted a ship in concert with my friend Beaumetz. Beaumetz was a good fellow, of whose friendship I had not the slightest doubt. Everything was embarked for our departure; bills were all paid, and farewells all taken, and we were waiting for a fair wind with most eager expectations, being prepared to embark at any hour of the day or night in obedience to the warning of the captain. This state of uncertainty seemed to irritate the mind of poor Beaumetz; he grew remarkably restless. One day he entered our lodging, evidently laboring under great excitement, although commanding himself to appear calm. I was engaged at that moment in writing letters to Europe; and, looking over my shoulder, he said, with forced gayety, "What need you waste time in perusing these letters? they will never reach their destination. Come with me and let us take a turn on the Battery." I suffered myself to be persuaded. Beaumetz, I remembered afterwards, displayed an unusual officiousness in aiding me to close my desk, and doing other services to quicken my departure, which, at the time, I attributed to his restless desire for change. We walked through the crowded streets to the Battery. When we had arrived at the broad esplanade, Beaumetz quickened his pace still more until we reached close to the water's edge. He talked loudly and quickly, admiring in energetic terms the beauty of the scenery when suddenly he paused in his mad incoherent discourse—for I had freed my arm from his grasp, and stood immovable before him. Staying his wild and rapid steps, I fixed my eyes upon his face. He turned aside, cowed and dismayed. "Beaumetz," I shouted, "you mean to murder me! you intend to throw me from the height into the sea below! Deny it, monster, if you can." The maniac stared at me for a moment, but I took special care not to avert my gaze from his countenance, and he quailed beneath it. He stammered a few incoherent words, and then strove to pass me, but I barred his passage with extended arms. He looked vacantly right and left, and then flung himself upon my neck. "'Tis true, 'tis true, my friend! The thought has haunted me night and day like a flash from the lurid fire of hell! It was for this I brought you here. Look! you stand within a foot of the parapet; in another instant the work would have been done." The demon had left him, and he suffered me to lead him home, without a single word. A few days' repose, bleeding, abstinence, completely restored him to his former self, and what is most extraordinary the circumstance was never afterwards mentioned between us."

Moths and their Habits.

Many are not aware that all the present damage is done when the millers commence to fly, as their very presence indicates the absence of the worm. It is to prevent the miller's incubating, that precautions should be taken. A large proportion of the millers never hatch eggs, but die without causing any harm.

The male miller, which does not fly, but runs very rapidly, is quite easily detected by his triangular-shaped figure; but, keeping himself out of sight, he is not so easily found. His hiding explains the devious flights of the female in her search. The killing of one male is equal to the extinction of many ordinary millers. The male miller is commonly known by the name of "silver fish."

Carpets are seldom troubled with moth worms, except where hatched in a dark unprotected space, and where it is moderately warm. It is for this reason, no doubt, that carpet-houses are seldom if ever troubled by them, the stocks in the larger houses being disposed of between seasons.

Nearly all the trouble from moths emanates from the furniture, the burlap inside the outer covering being their best field for work, where they can be free from annoyance, and find plenty to eat. Many of the furniture dealers of to-day realize their danger, and cleanse the burlap used with naphtha.

It is when the worms are either tired of their food, or it lacks the nourishment that they desire, that they seek an outlet and drop upon the carpet. It is well to examine the furniture once a year at least, to prevent such happenings.—From "A few facts about carpets."

The Value of Eloquence.

Every day's experience proves that the power of public speaking is not only absolutely essential to the most moderate success in many professions, but is indispensable to the highest grades in all. In Congress, at the bar, in the pulpit, it is, of course, necessary from the very outset, if the very least eminence is to be looked for. But not only in the professions of which oratory is the very foundation, but in every case of life where a certain degree of eminence has been attained, it becomes of equal importance, and the want of it will be equally felt. The merchant and the manufacturer, even the soldier and the sailor, when they rise to eminence in their professions, are called upon to speak in public, and grievously suffer if they cannot do so. Many a gallant spirit which never quailed before an enemy has been crushed and his reputation injured by inability to speak in a public assembly or to answer appropriately a complimentary speech at a public dinner. Indeed, the influence of public speaking in this country is not only great, but daily increasing, and it confers influence and distinction often far beyond the real merits of the speaker, and, for the want, the most solid or brilliant parts in other respects can make no comparison. The great body of men invariably impute inability to speak in public to want of ideas, whereas, in reality it generally arises from want of practice, and often consists with the greatest acquirements and the most brilliant genius.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

What is the difference between a gaoler and a jeweller?—One watches cells, and the other sells watches.

A VALUABLE PATENT.

The most valuable discovery patented in modern times is that of the best blood purifier and liver and kidney regulator known. We refer to Burdock Blood Bitters, which is making so many wonderful cures and bringing the blessed boon of health to so many people.

There is considerable distress in England just now, and times are not as good as they might be, and it does look as if the immense sums of money spent in paying high salaries to men whose offices are mere sinecures might be put to a better use. The cost of maintaining the royal family is something enormous and the worst of it is that it increases every year, and it must make John Bull wince every time he hears that a royal personage is to be married or is coming of age, for these things mean the loosening of his purse-strings. Luckily Her Majesty has no more daughters to get married now that the princess Beatrice is about to be taken off her hands—off her hands, mind, not off those of the long suffering British people who will be called upon to help to keep the Battenburg pot boiling—and John may breathe a little easier when he reflects that he will not be compelled to provide for any more destitute German princes.—Truth.

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

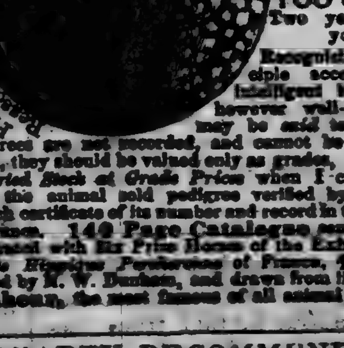
"What is good for a cold?" is a question often asked, but seldom satisfactory answered. We can answer to the satisfaction of all, if they will follow our advise and try Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, a safe, pleasant and certain throat and lung healer. Sold by all Druggists.

A teacher in one of our schools inquired the other day if any of her scholars could give the definition of the word "dandy." This seemed a puzzler till a little boy near the front held up his hand and said: "I know what a dandy ith." "And what is it?" "He ith a boy what kitheth the girlth!"

A DECIDED HIT.

Hagyard's Yellow Oil touches the right spot every time when applied for rheumatism, neuralgia, pain, soreness or lameness, and internally for colds, sore throat, etc., it is equally infallible.

Monthly Fairs.



Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

A PLANT OF RARE VIRTUES.

Is the common and well-known Burdock. It is one of the best blood purifiers and kidney regulators in the vegetable world, and the compound known as Burdock Blood Bitters possesses wonderful power in diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys and stomach.

M. W. DUNHAM
Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,
HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE
Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000,
which includes
75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES
Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE.
EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.

STOCK ON HAND:
150 Imported Brood Mares, 250 Imported Stallions,
Old enough for service,
100 COLTS,
Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that, however well-bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book of France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Société Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884; purchased by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

A HEARTY RECOMMENDATION.

Jacob A. Empey, of Cannamore, states that he has taken Burdock Blood Bitters with great benefit in a lingering complaint, and adds that he would gladly recommend it to all.

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS, CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES, PURSES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James G. Russell,
Watchmaker, Jeweller,
217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the STANDARD office, Mill Street. Has a comfortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,
232-39* Markdale P. O.

ESTRAY SHEEP.

STRAYED from the premises of the undersigned about the 1st January, a fine Ewe with black mark on one hind foot. Any person who will furnish me with information that will lead to her recovery will be suitably rewarded.

BURROWES IRWIN,
235-36 Markdale P. O.

ESTRAY SHEEP.

CAME to the premises of the subscriber about the 11th Oct. last, a ewe and lamb. Having been unable up to the present to find an owner I take this way of finding one. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expences and take them away

MRS. WYVILL,
135-37. Markdale, P. O.

BAKERY FOR SALE.

BUSINESS AND PREMISES for sale Cheap, being 1-fifth acre on Mill Street, opposite STANDARD office, with large rough-cast two story house and bake oven, good stable and never-failing well of spring water. This is an excellent opening for a pushing man. Terms and further particulars can be had by applying on the premises.

MRS. MONTGOMERY,
234-36 Markdale P. O.

Farm for Sale.

160 acres, being lots 42 and 43 second range West of Toronto and Sydenham road, Holland, about 100 acres cleared and in good state of cultivation, ballance well timbered with Maple, Beech and Hemlock, and about 10 acres cedar swamp. Good roughcast house 22x33 with stone cellar, frame barn 40x60 and good out houses, all with stone foundations. Good young orchard bearing. The farm is well watered, two good wells, one at the house, a fine spring creek crosses the farm near the rear. Only two miles from the thriving village of Williamsford, a station on the T. G. & B. branch of the C. P. R.

This is a rare chance, and terms will be made very easy. For futher particulars apply on the premises to

FRANCIS McCANN,
230-44 Williamsford P. O.

Farm to Sell or Rent.

North ½ 16 con. 11. Holland, 100 acres, 70 acres cleared. 4½ miles from Williamsford Station and 8 from Berkeley, only 60 rods from School and post office. On the premises there are a good log house with frame kitchen and a well near the house, and log barn. Will be sold on easy terms, small payment down, and good time given for the balance, or will be rented for five years, and improvement taken for part rent.

Apply to JAMES BRUCE,
136-39 pd. Lily Oak P. O. Ont.

Africa's Cawnpore.

Khartoum is no exception to the ruinous aspect that marks all Arab towns when seen from a distance. It needs all the picturesqueness of the graceful palms that rise above it in every direction, the white-sailed boats that flit along its shores like butterflies, the noble sweep of the Blue Nile on one side and the White Nile on the other, the rich blue sky and dazzling sunlight, to counteract the depressing effect of this mass of flat-roofed, white-gray, tomb-like houses amid the dim, boundless emptiness of the eternal desert, along the horizon of which quivers a film of intense heat like the reek from a furnace mouth. During the wet season the narrow, crooked, filthy streets are mere ponds, breathing stench and fever. Many of the "houses" are circular mud burrows topped with a pointed thatch of corn stalks, while the high, blank walls encircling the countless gardens enhance indescribably the dreary effect.

About 108 miles north of Khartoum, and almost midway to Berber, lies the fortified village of El Metemneh, connected with Shendy, on the opposite bank, by a clumsy native ferry-boat, on which an Arab stands upright with a strip of canvas held outstretched above his head to do duty for mast and sail, two others holding this living mast firm, and a fourth steering. Shendy has never recovered it destruction by Mehemet Ali's son-in-law in 1821, and the sole token of its former greatness is the huge crumbling fort overlooking the river, the present "town" being a cluster of low hovels two miles distant, grouped around a wide, bare market-place.

In the hollow between the Upper Nile and its great westward bend beyond Abu-Hamed lies the Bayuda Desert, across which the British marched (via Abu-Klea) from Korti, General Wolesley's present head-quarters. The latter place, overhanging the Nile from a steep bank shaded by clustering trees, is pleasant enough, despite the perilous shoals around its landing-place. The now momorable halting-place of Jebel-Gakdul lies a little to the north of Abu Klea.

But here, as everywhere else in the Soudan, the life-giving stream is powerless to nourish anything beyond the spot on which it flows. The waters of the Nile itself are frequently sprinkled with the powdery sand of the mighty deserts which have pushed their borders to within less than a mile of its edge. So, too, with the oasis of Gakdul, or of Abu-Klea. Before the refreshing drops have dried upon your beard you are once more amid the hot, brassy glare and the dead, crushing silence of "the land where all things are forgotten." Waves of burning rock or lifeless sand, wearying your aching eyes with their grim sameness, surge up one beyond another into the dim horizon, while the bleaching bones of a skeleton start from the drifting sands at your feet in gloomy warning of what your own fate may soon be.

Here it is that the fatal "kamsin," or hot wind of the desert, which the ill-fated British troops are now encountering a full week before its wonted time, blows in all its fury. In the old Arabian legends one often finds a caliph or pasha impatiently exclaiming at the close of a long-winded story, "By Allah, thy talking is worse than the hot blast of the wilderness!" No one can fully appreciate this rough-hewn sarcasm who has not been in Arabia or the Nile Valley in the earlier weeks of March. Everything looks suddenly dim and blurred, as if seen through a wet pain of glass, and all at once you feel a gust of stifling, prickly heat and a qualm of overwhelming nausea. Your eyes smart and burn, your temple veins throb as if they would burst, your skin seems one vast pincushion filled with red-hot needles, and in another moment you are staggering as if stunned by a heavy blow, and groping blindly for any support that you can find, to the utter refutation of the polite Italian proverb that nothing can face the sirocco except "un porco ed un Inglese" (a hog or an Englishman). Woe to any sick or wounded European who meets its destroying blast in mid-desert!

Horses' Memories.

A couple of years ago a gentleman in Providence owned a little gray horse that was used in the family by himself, his wife, and children. It was made quite a pet of. Finding that it could speed quite sharp, he entered it in a number of country races, in the end getting a record of '32 for it. Then he sold it. Later on, the children missed it so much that he endeavored to get track of it, and sent to a number of places, but failed to find it. A couple of days ago he was on Washington street, and his attention was attracted by a little gray pacer that came whirling down. He had never seen his gray pace, but he was sure this was his old pet, and when opportunity offered he drove alongside and called it by name. The pony knew him at once, and gave unmistakable evidence of recognition.

Another instance showing the memory of the horse is that of the pacer purchased by Mr. Lloyd last year of a Winsted gentleman. A few weeks ago the former owner was in town and went up to see Ginger. The horse's present attendance was in the box stall petting him when his old master stepped in and called him by name. The horse no sooner heard his voice than he forsook his companion and showed his delight in meeting his former owner in various ways, among other tricks going into his coat pockets for the delicacies that he used to find there. The gentleman asked him to "roll over" for him, and he went down upon the straw and over in a moment. Mr. Lloyd's health prevents his showing Ginger much this winter, but it is generally conceded that the handsome little horse would make it quite interesting for the best of the trotters.—[Hartford Courant.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSE.

If flannel dresses of the children are soiled and at all greasy, add borax to the water in which they are washed. Dissolve a large tablespoonful of borax in a pint of boiling water, put about a third of it in the first suds in which the garment is to be washed, another third in the next water, and the rest of it in the rinsing water; shake the garments thoroughly before hanging them up to dry.

The onion is said to be a specific for the sting of poisonous insects of all kinds. The application of onion-juice instantly allays the pain caused by the stinging of hornets, yellow-jackets, wasps, bees, etc.

Rough iron pots look well painted dull red, pale blue, or sage green, with a large flower—such as a lily or a sunflower—painted on them. They are a good size, and will take a large plant well.

A new way of decorating the glass lamp shade is to tie a bow of ribbon round the shade, with a fall of coffee-colored lace from the ribbon. Rooms get darker and darker, the light is so much shaded.

A pretty counterpane for summer can be made of twill calico of a good substance, bordered with furniture lace and covered with detached sprays of embroidery, or squares of guipure d'art and linen alternately, with a guipure edging. The lace and squares are now sold cheap. For hospitals either plain white are used, or the text quilts, the texts being printed on calico.

M. S. T. writes: "I have at last got the art of washing dishes down to a fine point, and I send the results of my experience for the benefit of your readers. When I begin to clear the table, I scrape out the largest plates first and set them into a large, deep dishpan, on these I put the smaller plates, the cups, saucers, knives, forks, and spoons, butter-dishes, etc, and on top of all a bowl or nappy with a cake of soap in it. On this I pour hot water till the dishpan is nearly full, then take out the soap and in the bowl rinse off the glasses and wipe them. Then with a dish-cloth with a handle I wash the dishes as they come, putting them to drain on an old shirt of one of the boys that is past wear. When the pan is empty of dishes I put others to soak while I wipe what I have washed, separating them as I wipe, putting plates of a size together, spoons together, knives ditto, and so on, all on a large tray, so with one handling they can be set away into the closet. Proceeding in this way I very soon get through and have no waste movements steal away my time."

The Pampas.

The peculiar characteristics of these vast level plains which descend from the Andes to the great river basin in unbroken monotony are the absence of rivers or water storage, and the periodical occurence of droughts, or "siccos," in the summer months. These conditions determine the singular character both of its flora and fauna. The soil is naturally fertile and favorable for the growth of trees, and they grow luxuriantly wherever they are protected. The Eucalyptus is covering large tracts wherever it is inclosed, and willows, poplars, and the fig surround every estancia when fenced in. The open plains are covered with droves of horses and cattle, and overrun by numberless wild rodents, the original tenants of the Pampas. During the long periods of drought which are so great a scourge to the country, these animals are starved by thousands, destroying in their efforts to live every vestige of vegetation. In one of these siccos, at the time of my visit, no less than 50,000 head of oxen and sheep and horses perished from starvation and thirst, after tearing deep out of the soil every trace of vegetation, including the wiry roots of the Pampas grass. Under such circumstances the existence of an unprotected tree is impossible. The only plants that hold their own, in addition to the indestructible thistles, grasses and clover, are a little herbaceous oxalis, producing viviparous buds of extraordinary vitality, a few poisonous species, such as the hemlock, and a few tough, thorny, dwarf acacias and wiry rushes, which even a starving rat refuses. Although the cattle are a modern introduction, the numberless indigenous rodents must always have effectually prevented the introduction of any other species of plants, large tracts are still honeycombed by the ubiquitous biscacho, a gigantic rabbit, and numerous rodents still exist, including rats and mice, Pampas hares, and the great nutria and carpincho on the river banks. That the dearth of plants is not due to the unsuitability of the subtropical species of the neighboring zones cannot hold good with respect to the fertile valleys of the Andes beyond Mendoza, where a magnificent hardy flora is found. Moreover, the extensive introduction of European plants which has taken place throughout the country has added nothing to the botany of the Pampas beyond a few species that are unassailable by cattle, such as are the two species of thistle which are invading large districts in spite of their constant destruction by the fires which always accompany the siccos.

A gang of eight men raided the China houses at Huntingdon, Oregon, the other day, and secured about $2,000 from the inmates, who were forced with halters around their necks to give up their money.

At his own request a Georgia farmer who died recently was buried in a plain pine coffin, not even painted, and a pocket knife that he had carried for twenty years, together with a toothpick and pocket comb, were placed in his pockets.

The Germans Pushing into Africa.

After assuming a protectorate over eight hundred miles of African coast line within the past few months, Germany is now pushing inland. Nearly every week brings some new development of her remarkable activity in Africa. Her latest exploit has been to acquire a large tract of land in the highlands about a hundred miles west of Zanzibar.

A while ago Dr. Peters and Herr Julke were sent by the German Society of Colonization to the mountains of Usagara, which overlook the jungle forming the unhealthy maritime region of this part of the east coast. These ranges of lofty hills comprise the principal region where white men can live in health and comfort between Zanzibar and the big lakes. The Usagara district is 85 miles in width, and stretches northeast and southwest about 200 miles. Its average altitude is 3,500 feet, and it has peaks 6,000 feet above the sea. Burton said Usagara had a cool and in its upper regions a salubrious climate, a fertile soil, and the best of water. Stanley said that in these uplands the "greenest verdure, purest water, health, and abundance of food" were assured to the white man. Many travellers have sounded the praises of Mpwapwa, with its fine mountain scenery and its abundant and cheap supplies of grain and vegetables, poultry and milk. The missionaries who have lived there for four years say they can raise anything that is grown in Southern Europe.

This is the region referred to in the despatches just printed announcing that the agents of the German Colonization Society have acquired 2,500 square miles of territory, and that Dr. Rohlfs, the celebrated African traveller and the new counsul at Zanzibar, has placed it under German protection.

It is not to be supposed that Germany can make Usagara at once available for colonization. No spot in equatorial Africa is likely to become the home of many white settlers if it has to be reached by a weary tramp through pestilential jungles. If a railroad, of which there has been some talk, is built from Zanzibar west, bringing Usagara within a few hours of the coast, the Germans may try their colonizing experiment with some prospect of success. They will not have to wait for a railroad if Stanley's belief proves well founded, that the Wami River is navigable for small boats from the ocean to the mountains.

On the west coast the German possessions no longer merely fringe the sea. Dr. Nachtigal has established a protectorate over Bethany, a district northeast of Angra Pequena, whose copper mines are said to be well worth developing. Germany has also just placed under her protection the region between the Bramia and Dubreca rivers in the southern part of Senegambia. This country is very populous, and is favorably situated for trade with the basin of the Upper Niger. Dr. Passavant, with eighty men, left Cameroons on Jan. 1 to travel through an unknown country about 200 miles west to Lake Liba, to see whether it is worth while to push German enterprises thither.

Dr. Blowitz.

M. Blowitz gave me a lecture of about an hour's duration on all manner of political topics. His intellect, like others of his race, is sharp, and his method of explication lucid enough. I may mention two of M. Blowitz's journalistic feats which stamp him as the correspondent par excellence of his age. At the time of the ever-memorable Berlin congress, M. Blowitz applied to the German chancellor for an early copy of the treaty, which was to be signed on a certain Saturday morning, but, although the request was made through the medium of two ambassadors, Bismarck refused to entertain it. To the intense surprise of all the other correspondents, M Blowitz, in a "huff," announced his intention of leaving Berlin forthwith, and he did so, but with the treaty in his pocket! That precious document never left Herr Blowitz's letter-case until Brussels was reached, and there it was put on the wire and published by The Times in a second edition on the Saturday, at the very moment that the plenipotentiaries in Berlin were signing it! Needless to say that no other paper had it until the following Monday, nor to describe the wailing and gnashing of teeth in Berlin and Cologne, and the other great newspaper centers in Germany. The second great feat of M. Blowitz was that of interviewing the Sultan! Such a thing had never been previously dreampt of, and, as Herr Blowitz rightly says, no one will ever do it again. I left the journalist regretfully, feeling that I had been in the company of a giant, compared with whom nous autres "specials" are for the most part dwarfs —[London Life.

Pointing to a ragged scar on his cheek, a tramp said to a pal: "How do you think it happened?" "Bulldog?" "Nope." "Tomcat?" "Nixey." "What then?" "I slept with my face on the edge of a poorhouse pillow."

A lady whose bang was destroyed by a recent explosion of natural gas in Allegheny county, Pa., has sued the company whose pipes lead to the disaster, placing the value of the hirsute ornament at $100; and the value of a bang is to be judicially determined.

La Medicina Contemporanea gives a sketch of the life of Pacini, the great biologist, who died in Florence in 1883. In his early researches into the nature of the blood he discovered, with a rude microscope of his own construction, what are known as the Pacinian corpuscles. Years ago, while investigating the causes of cholera, he came upon and described the vibrio now known as Koch's comma bacillus.

Progress in Electricity.

Of all the forces of nature, electricity is to-day playing the most striking and important part in the material advancement of the race.

In telling what electricity has done in the past fifty years, the inventor Edison says in a recent article, "It has strengthened the bond of international amity; it has quickened all the methods of trade, and lent ten-fold precision and celerity to the innumerable energies by which it works.

"It has breathed new vitality into the arts and sciences; it has even warmed and strengthened the social forces, and has been such a universal stimulus as cannot be credited to any other purely physical agency in the world's history.

Edison goes on to show how electricity, mainly in the telegraph and the telephone has effected these results. The system of telegraphy is a far more perfect and efficient one to-day than it was even ten years ago.

Now, thanks to Edison's invention of the quadruplex system, four messages may be sent similtaneously over the same wire and in opposite directions.

Telegraphy, moreover, has, within recent years, been extended in its uses many ways. The telegraph has been laid beneath the oceans, and now encircles the earth; it has been utilized for local business in the cities; it has been brought into domestic service, so in the cities one may at any time summon doctor, marketman, fireman, or police.

While the telephone is yet in its infancy, it has yet already become a first necessity to the people, both for business and for private purposes. There is now no city or large town in the United States without its telephone station.

The newest and one of the greatest triumphs of electricity is electric lighting. The arc light has come into very familiar use in the illumination of open spaces, streets and large buildings; while the incandescent light is gradually being adopted for domestic lighting in many parts of the country.

Besides these uses, electricity has recently come to be employed in electroplating, electrotyping, in houses for call-bells, protection from burglars, connecting clocks, lighting jets, and many other purposes.

But the promise of what electricity is destined to achieve in the future, outstrips even what it has done in the past. In regard to this subtle agency of nature, Edison declares that "we stand to-day only on the threshold of its tremendous probalities."

In telegraphy he believes that a large number of messages will be sent over a wire at the same time; and the messages will be so sent, that the handwriting itself of the sender will be transmitted. The telegraph printing machines will be improved to greater rapidity of action, and submarine telegraphy will be brought to a higher efficiency.

The telephone is also destined to be much more highly developed than it is to-day. The difficulty of telephoning to a great distance remains to be overcome. This arises from "the loss of the current by static induction on the earth and wires in close proximity." If a single wire could be placed so high as to clear all the mountain tops, one could hear a whisper around the world.

But the time is near when the telephone will transmit the voice perfectly, clear, for a distance of three hundred miles; and by means of repeating stations, messages will be sent by voice to all parts of the country.

Electrict lighting, too, is certain, according to Edison, to be brought to a far greater efficiency in the near future. Electricity can be used safely and economically in lighting; and it can, like gas, be measured and sold by means of metres. It can also be used in houses for driving fans, for running sewing machines, for pumping water, for working dumb waiters and elevators, and for cooling purposes.

The future of electric power, indeed, is not to be measured in its possible varieties and importance. It seems as if the twentieth century would find it the most potent and universal physicical agency in operation on the earth.—[Youth's Companion.

The Peabody Fund.

The building fund of £500,000 left by Mr. Peabody for the benefit of the poor of London has now been increased by rents and interests to £857,320. The whole of this great sum of money is in active employment, together with £340,000 which the trustees have borrowed. A total of £1,170,787 has been expended during the time the fund has been in existence, of which £80,903 was laid out during 1884. The results of these operations are seen in blocks of artisans' dwellings built on land purchased by the trustees and let to workingmen at rents within their means, containing conveniences and comforts not ordinarily attainable by them, thus fulfilling the benevolent intentions of Mr. Peabody. At the present time 4,551 separate dwellings have been erected, containing 10,144 rooms, inhabited by 18,453 persons. Thirteen new blocks of buildings are now in course of construction and near completion. Indeed, there is no cessation in the work of fulfilling the intentions of the noble bequest.

Dr. J. H. Roberts writes from Liberia to the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal that he is convinced the medical herbs grown in certain climates are especially adapted for the cure of diseases which prevail in them, though they may be useless elsewhere. He finds the plants of Liberia much more successful in African fever than the best of drugs prepared in more highly civilized countries.

How the King of Persia [illegible] Breakfast.

The King of Persia is very careful [illegible] his health, and his French physician, [illegible] Tholozan, is ever within call, so that [illegible] unfortunate doctor is as great a sadduk as his master. His Majesty enjoys very [illegible] health, a slight paralysis having as [illegible] been his only ailment. His habits of [illegible] are simple, his diet plain roasts and boiled. The King is an early riser, 4 or 5 A. M. being his usual time in summer. This gives him a long day, but he breaks it by a siesta. It is the royal habit when tired to be shampooed by his attendants, and it is thought no indignity for a high official to be told to assist in the kneading process. Shampooing is a real art, and is carried out to scientific perfection by some of his Majesty's more confidential servants, The chief barber is a man high in office.

At 12 o'clock the royal breakfast is served. It is a solitary meal. The King is squatting on the ground: some fifty dishes are set before him. His Majesty selects the simplest, and quenches his thirst with buttermilk or iced sherbets, which are served in delicious profusion in magnificent china bowls. Dead silence is observed by the few favored courtiers who stand around the walls of the apartment. The royal butlers silently hand the various dishes. As the King eats he addresses those whom he may deign to honor with his notice, and these fortunate ones bow low, and answer in humble affirmatives, "May I be your sacrifice, Asylum of the Universe. So it is." "It happened exactly as your Majesty ordained," and so on. The same kind of language is used by the royal princes in addressing their father, and they would not presume to attempt to sit in the royal presence; but as in Persia no son would sit in his father's presence unless ordered to do so, this is more due to filial respect than the awe of majesty.

The King rinses his mouth and wipes his hands over a golden bowl, and then he rises and the meal is served to the princes. On leaving them it goes to the courtiers, and lastly the royal farrashes pick the bones and literally lick the platters clean. The royal dinner, served about 9 P. M., is a repetition of the breakfast; generally it is enlivened by the playing of the brass bands or by the music of the native musicians attached to the court.

The Nomads of the Soudan.

The Bedouins, or nomads, of the Soudan are not a very numerous race. They are altogether outnumbered by the people of the towns and villages, who, Mussulmans though they are, are unwarlike, and, like all agricultural and commercial people, will quietly submit to the governing powers if fairly well treated. The people against whom the English are now fighting, the soldiers of the redoubtable Mahdi, are these same Bedouins, and their revolt, though connected with the spread of Islam, and fanned by the flames of fanaticism, is also a revolt against the dominance of the settled peoples of the country over the nomads. These wanderers of the Nubian desert and Kordofan possibly number some half milllion, and claim to be of Arab descent. A pure Arab, like a pure Turk, is hard to find, and these desert tribes have not escaped great admixture. The principal tribes between the Nile and the Red Sea are the Ababdehs, Bishareens and Hadendawas, while west of the Nile dwelt the Hassaneeyehs, the Kabaheesh and the Beggaras. Their sole wealth consists in flocks and camels. In times of peace they are carriers, guides, and camel-drivers, but no amount of money can induce them to till the ground, and they look with contempt upon the humble, patient fellaheen of the villages and upon the "dwellers among bricks." They are fine-looking, of medium height, well formed, with small hands and feet, arched insteps, aquiline noses, thin lips, splendid teeth, and long and frizzled hair. Their weapons are long, straight and broad double-edged sword blades, of Spanish or German make, to which they manufacture handles to suit themselves. A few have flint-lock muskets, and double-barrel guns. All carry lances made in the country, with horrible barbed heads. To these are now added the arms taken from the defeated Egyptian army. Of the mettle of the men, the British, who with great difficulty withstood them at Tamasi and Abu-Klea, are the best judges.

Lotteries in France.

The French are fond of lotteries. When the city of Paris issues a loan there is a lottery attached, by which the purchaser of a bond of 1,000 francs may draw 100,000 francs. The lottery principle is to be ingrafted upon the approaching salon of 1885. There are to be 150,000 tickets sold at 1 franc each. Of this amount 135,000 are to be distributed in eleven lots of different sums. The possesor of a prize can then purchase of the artist any painting in the exhibition valued at the amount which his ticket represents.

An Inherited Infliction.

If any one does not believe that punning is inherited, let them read this:

Old man Collarbutton took his little boy, who has just acquired the art of talking, to the circus last summer, and when the performance was about half over the boy says:

"Papa, let's do home."

"Why, Frankie, this is the best part of the show. Ain't you satisfied?"

"Es," said Frankie, "I'se satisfied. I'se 'saw dust' enuff."

Frankie has since had an attack of brain fever.

the King of Persia ... Breakfast.

... King of Persia is very careful of ... alth, and his French physician, Dr. ... zh, is ever within call, so that ... unate doctor is as great a ... master. His Majesty enjoys very ..., a slight paralysis having ... his only ailment. His habits of ... mple, his diet plain roasts and ... The King is an early riser, 4 or ... being his usual time in summer, ... ives him a long day, but he ... siesta. It is the royal habit when ... be shampooed by his attendants; ... is thought no indignity for a high ... to be told to assist in the knead... ...cess. Shampooing is a real art, ... carried out to scientific perfection ... e of his Majesty's more confidential ...rvants, The chief barber is a man ... office.

... 2 o'clock the royal breakfast is ... It is a solitary meal. The King ...tting on the ground: some fifty ...are set before him. His Majesty ... the simplest, and quenches his ... with buttermilk or iced sherbets, ...re served in delicious profusion in ...cent china bowls. Dead silence is ...d by the few favored courtiers who ...round the walls of the apartments. ...al butlers silently hand the va... ...shes. As the King eats he ad... ... those whom he may deign to honor ... notice, and these fortunate ones ..., and answer in humble affirma... "May I be your sacrifice. Asylum ... ulverse. So it is." "It happen... ...tly as your Majesty ordained," ...n. The same kind of language is ... the royal princes in addressing ...ther, and they would not presume ...pt to sit in the royal presence; ...n Persia no son would sit in his ... presence unless ordered to do so, ...hore due to filial respect than the ...majesty.

...ing rinses his mouth and wipes ...s over a golden bowl, and then ... and the meal is served to the ... On leaving them it goes to the ..., and lastly the royal farrashes ... bones and literally lick the plat... ...n. The royal dinner, served ...P. M., is a repetition of the break... ...nerally it is enlivened by the ... of the brass bands or by the ... the native musicians attached to ...t.

Nomads of the Soudan.

...Bedouins, or nomads, of the Sou... ...not a very numerous race. They ...together outnumbered by the ...f the towns and villages, who, ...hans though they are, are unwar..., like all agricultural and com... ...people, will quietly submit to the ...g powers if fairly well treated. ...le against whom the English are ...ing, the soldiers of the redoubt... ...hdi, are these same Bedouins, ... revolt, though connected with ...d of Islam, and fanned by the ...f fanaticism, is also a revolt ... the dominance of the settled ...f the country over the nomads. ...anderers of the Nubian desert ...ofan possibly number some half ...and claim to be of Arab descent. ...Arab, like a pure Turk, is hard ...nd these desert tribes have not ...great admixture. The principal ...tween the Nile and the Red Sea ...Ababdehs, Bishareens and Ha..., while west of the Nile dwelt ...aneeyehs, the Kabaheesh and ...garas. Their sole wealth con...flocks and camels. In times of ...ey are carriers, guides, and ...vers, but no amount of money ...e them to till the ground, and ... with contempt upon the hum... ...nt fellaheen of the villages and ... "dwellers among bricks." ...ine-looking, of medium height, ...ed, with small hands and feet, ...teps, aquiline noses, thin lips, ...eeth, and long and frizzled ...ir weapons are long straight ... double-edged sword blades, of ...r German make, to which they ...re handles to suit themselves. ...ave flint lock muskets, and ...rel guns. All carry lances ...e country, with horrible barbed ... these are now added the ...fro.. the defeated Egyptian ... the mettle of the men, the ...ho with great difficulty with... ...n at Tamasi and Abu-Klea, ...t judges.

...tteries in France.

...nch are fond of lotteries. ...ity of Paris issues a loan ...ttery attached, by which the ... a bond of 1,000 francs may ...0 francs. The lottery prin... ...e ingrafted upon the approach... ...1885. There are to be 150,... ...old at 1 franc each. Of this ...000 are to be distributed in ...f different sums. The pos... ...ize can then purchase of the ...inting in the exhibition valu... ...ount which his ticket repre...

...herited Infliction.

... does not believe that pun... ...ited, let them read this:

Collarbutton took his little ...as just acquired the art of ...he circus last summer, and ...erformance was about half ... says:

...'s do home."

...rankie, this is the best part ... Ain't you satisfied?"

...d Frankie, "I'se satisfied. ...t' enuff."

...s since had an attack of brain

THE LAND OF THE FALSE PROPHET.

[The reader will be interested in knowing that General Colston writes out of his knowledge of the Soudan gained while he was an officer on the general staff of the Egyptian army, in the service of which he commanded two expeditions of exploration in the Soudan, travelling on the principal caravan routes, and spending two years in the towns and among the tribes which are frequently mentioned in connection with El Mahdi's rebellion.]

In this paper I have endeavored to describe the Nile route which the British have selected for their line of advance, the country in which their operations must be carried on, and the warlike race they have to encounter. The Soudan, as any one may see by referring to the map, is an immense region extending on both sides of the equator and across the entire continent of Africa. Its name is derived from the Arabic aswad, plural suda, black, and Beledes-Soudan, as the Arabs call it, means literally the Land of the blacks. On the east of the Nile it extends to the Red Sea, and on the west it embraces Kordofan and Darfour. Its capital is Khartoum, at the junction of the White with the Blue Nile. South of Khartoum is Sennaar, bounded on the west by the White Nile and on the east by Abyssinia. When General Gordon was Governor-General of the Soudan in 1873-78, a chain of Egyptian garrisons, of which Gondokoro was the principal, reached as far as the great lakes. Egypt proper extends only from the Mediterranean to the first cataract.

The Nile, issuing from the lakes near the equator, is the only source of life for the entire region. No wonder the ancient Egyptians worshipped the Nile as a god, for without it their country would have been a desolate, sandy waste, like the deserts to the east and west of it. After a course of 3,300 miles (the last 1,700 without a single affluent or tributary) the Nile separates into two main branches at the head of the Delta, finally discharging the greatly diminished volume of water into the Mediterranean through the Rosetta and Domietta.

Let us imagine ourselves ascending the stream when it is at its full, in early September. Twelve miles above the apex of the Delta we arrive in sight of the city of Cairo. On the eastern bank, on a plain extending three miles back to the Mokattam hills, stands the vast Arab city of nearly half a million of people, with the thousand minarets of its four hundred mosques, its palaces, and its gardens of waving palm-trees. On one of the first spurs of the Mokattan, three hundred feet above the plain, rises the great citadel founded by Saladin. On the west bank tower those wonders of the world, the great pyramids of Gizeh, and beyond them the Libyan desert stretches without limits until it merges into the Great Sahara. As we advance, the ever-shifting kaleidoscope of the Nile unfolds itself before our eyes. We pass the site of ancient Memphis and the eleven pyramids of Sakkara. In the narrow valley, rarely three miles in width, and generally much less, contained all the cultivable land of Egypt. Excepting a few oases, all the rest is the desert. At many points the nearly barren hills of the Arabian and Libyan chains come down to the river's edge, and nothing is seen but the rugged gray and yellow cliffs, with the heated air visibly quivering under the fierce African sun. Then, again, as the hills recede for a mile or less, sometimes on one shore alone, sometimes on both, are rich harvests, whitening cotton, green sugar-cane, groves of palms, and native villages with their quaint pigeon-houses and solitary minarets; while here and there under the foliage and fig trees may be seen the white dome over the tomb of some Mussulman saint. As sunrise and sunset long files of veiled women in loose blue robes come down to the river's brim; then, with their water-jugs carefully poised on their heads, walk away with stately stride

We pass Denderah, Karnak, Luxor, Esneh, with their temples, sphinxes, obelisks, and majestic ruins, before we reach the first cataract. Our boat, towed by some five hundred naked Nubians, looking like so many black demons, is dragged up above the rapids between great rocks of glistening basalt, and resumes its course up the river. Passing the island of Elephantine and the great Ptolemaic temple of Isis at Philæ, the most picturesque ruin in Egypt, two hundred miles more of uninterrupted navigation brings us to the wondertul rock-excavated temple of Abou-Simbel and to the second cataract at Wady Halfa.

Here we must leave our boat, which has carried us nine hundred miles from the sea. Five great cataracts and many rapids several miles in length make navigation impracticable, if not quite impossible, to Berber, a further distance of one hundred and fifty miles by water. Here at and beyond Wady Halfa that the British expedition will encounter its greatest difficulties; yet there is nothing within the limits of possibility that British pluck, skill, and pluck may not accomplish. But too much time has been lost, for the season is as regular as the course of the sun. It begins to rise at Khartoum about June 21st, is at its fullest by September 1st, and decreases steadily and rapidly from October 1st until the next summer solstice. Instead of wasting time in vacillating about impossible short routes, the British authorities should have understood from the first that the expedition must follow the Nile, which alone can save it from perishing with thirst. The army should have left Cairo in August, and have reached Khartoum in December. Now it is impeded by low water—the hot season begins in March, and a summer in the Soudan will cost more lives than the enemy.

At Wady Halfa ordinary expeditions mount the desert-ship—the camel—and follow the western bank of the river. As we ascend the Nile, the complexions of the natives shade towards black. The fellah of Lower Egypt, no darker than a creole, becomes of a deeper hue with every day's journey. The Nubians above the first cataract are chocolate in color, but with straight hair and profile. Next, the Dongolawee, more or less mixed; and after them, the endless variety of Central African types begins to prevail, the complexion growing darker, the profile more prognathous, and the hair more kinky, yet altogether unlike the woolly headed negro of the Guinea coast, the parent-stock of America's colored population. Ruins of great temples bear witness in these far regions to the extent of the dominion of ancient Egypt.

At Hannek, near the third cataract, numerous islands of basaltic rock rise to the height of two or three hundred feet above the bed of the river. Most of these are crowned with the ruins of large and imposing castles with lofty towers and battlements, erected nine or ten hundred years ago by the dwellers of the Nile Valley as a refuge against the razzias of the robber tribes. These ruins, especially at Sarras, are strikingly like those of the feudal castles on the Rhine. Above the third cataract we pass the large and fertile island of Argo on our way to New Dongola, the place so frequently mentioned in the daily dispatches. It is the center of a turbulent and adventurous population, in great part descended from the old Memloyks who escaped Mohammed Ali's massacre in 1811 and fled here for refuge. Among these people, slave hunters always find a number of willing recruits.

Passing Old Dongola, an almost abandoned town on the eastern bend, we reach Debbeh just at the elbow where the Nile resumes its northern course after its sharp bend to the south-west at Abou-Hamed, nearly two hundred miles above. At Debbeh the great caravan route to El Obeid and Darfour leaves the Nile and strikes off to the south-west through desolate deserts. Half way between Debbeh and Abou-Hamed is the fourth cataract, near Merawi, which acquired a tragic celebrity as the scene of the massacre of Colonel Stewart in October last. Abou-Hamed is a miserable Nile town, memorable for the destruction of a body of eight hundred Turkish Bashi-Bazouks (irregular cavalry), who were surprised by the Bishareens, in 1820. All who escaped from Bedouin swords and spears were driven into the river and drowned in the cataracts below. It derives its only importance from being the southern terminus of the great Korosko caravan route. On the way between Abou-Hamed and Berber is the fifth cataract, one of the most picturesque as well as difficult on the Nile. From several days' observation at two different times, I believe this cataract to be impassible for ascending boats on account of the rocks and the extreme velocity of the water. The crocodile and hippopotamus abound there, and aquatic birds are found in great numbers. One hundred and thirty-three miles above Abou-Hamed is Berber, a town of ten thousand people, recently shelled and temporarily recaptured by General Gordon. It owes its importance to its position, being the great entrepot of almost all the Soudan export trade, which here leaves the no longer navigable upper river and finds its way by the great caravan route to Suakim on the Red Sea.

Here the ascending traveller may take to the river once more, embarking on one of the small side-wheel steamers brought in sections on camel's-back many years ago and put together at this point. Not over seventy feet in length, drawing very little water, yet frequently getting aground on sand-banks, they seem to have been Gordon's chief reliance. Thirty miles above Berber we pass the mouth of the Atbara, the last affluent of the Nile, coming down from Abyssinia and flowing only during the rainy season. In the peninsula formed by the Nile and the Atbara, called by Strabo the island of Meroe, and just above the sixth cataract, are wonderful vestiges of Ethiopian civilization. Besides sphinxes and ruined temples, I counted no less than forty-two pyramids, which, though far smaller than those of Gizeh, would be considered gigantic in any other land.

A few miles above these ruins is Shendy, an important market-town, the terminus of the caravan route from Kassala and Abyssinia, and also of the intended Soudan railway, surveyed and mapped out for the ex-Khedive Ismail Pasha by the English engineer Fowler, of which only thirty miles (out of five hundred and fifty-five) above Wada Halfa are constructed.

Steaming one hundred miles above Shendy, we reach the point where the Blue Nile, flowing from the mountains of Abyssinia, merges its limpid stream with the turbid waters of the White Nile. Just above the angle formed by the two rivers lies the city of Khartoum, the capital of the Soudan. It was founded by Mohammed Ali, a man of great genius and iron will, who originated all those reforms, both civil and miltary, that placed Egypt far ahead of all other Mussulman countries. When he had completed the conquest of Kordofan and the submission of the Bedouin tribes in 1820, he at once recognized the importance of the commercial and strategic position of Khartoum. A palace for the governor, barracks for a garrison, an arsenal and a shipyard were constructed in substantial style, and the new city soon became the center of a vast trade in ivory, ostrich feathers, gum arabic, grain, cattle, and last, though far from least, slaves. In fact, it always was the point where slave-traders fitted out their expeditions obtained their recruits, and found a market for their human cattle. I was there when General Gordan was Governor-General of the Soudan. He had received from the Khedive Ismail Pasha the most stringent orders to suppress the slave-trade by the sternest exercise of military power, and the native governors dared not show any remissness in seconding him; but the trade was so interwoven with the ideas and customs of the people, that very little effect was produced beyond forcing it to seek concealment by going around the city instead of through it. The Austrian consul, Mr. Rossett, a very intelligent gentleman, told me at the time that the slave-bazaars were closed, it was true; but if any one wanted one hundred boys or girls, they could be procured quietly, within two hours, at the rate of thirty-five to fifty dollars a head.

Khartoum is a city numbering between fifty and sixty thousand people. Several European consuls reside here. The American consul was Azar Abd-el-Melek, a Christian Copt from Esneh, and one of its principal merchants. The European colony is small and continually changing; for Khartoum is a perfect grave-yard for Europeans, and in the rainy season for natives also, the mortality averaging then from thirty to forty per day, which implies three to four thousand for the season. Khartoum is the commercial center of the Soudan trade, amounting altogether to sixty-five million dollars a year, and carried on by one thousand European and three thousand Egyptian commercial houses. Drafts and bills of exchange upon Khartoum are as good as gold in Cairo and Alexandria, and vice versa. From official sources I learned that the city contained three thousand and sixty houses, many of them two-storied, each having from ten to one hundred and fifty occupants. Stone and lime are found in abundance, and the buildings are, after a fashion, substantial, the houses belonging to rich merchants being very spacious and comfortable. There are large bazars, in which is found a much greater variety of European and Asiatic goods than would be expected in such distant regions. In the spacious market-place a brisk trade is carried on in cattle, horses, camels, asses, and sheep, as well as grain, fruit, and other agricultural produce. Many years ago an Austrian Roman Catholic mission was established and liberally supported by the Emperor of Austria and by contributions from the entire Catholic world. It occupies a large parallelogram surrounded by a solid wall. Within this inclosure, in beautiful gardens of palm, fig, pomegranate, orange, and banana, stands a massive cathedral, a hospital, and other substantial buildings. Before the people of Egypt and the Soudan had been irritated by foreign interference, such was their perfect toleration and good temper that the priests and nuns, in their distinctive costumes, were always safe from molestation, not only at Khartoum, but even at El Obeid and the neighborhood, where the majority are Mussulmans and the rest heathens. It was stated some months ago that Gerdon had abandomed the Governor's palace and transformed the Catholic mission into a fortress, its surrounding wall and massive buildings rendering it capable of strong resistance.

From Khartoum the Nile is navigable nearly to the great lakes. Sennaar on the east and Kordofan on the west of the White Nile are the most southern provinces of the Egyptian Soudan, and extend to about the twelfth degree of latitude, which is also the limit of Moslem predominance. Beyond are the heathen tribes known as Shillooks, Denkas, Doowairs, etc. A little south of the tenth degree the Sobat falls into the Nile on the east and the Bahr-el-Gazal on the west. A few miles above, the Nile Valley expands into an immense net-work of almost inextricable marshes, over one hundred miles in breadth. There is no river that presents more sudden and enormous variations than the Nile. On one of the little steamers which have been doing Gordon such good service, I passed through a narrow gorge of basaltic cliffs, at Jebel Rowyan, about fifty miles below Khartoum. There the whole volume of the Nile flows through a canon just forty yards in width, but the stream is one hundred and fifty feet deep at low water. A mile below, the river is three miles wide, full of islands, and becomes so shallow that my steamer grounded five or six times a day.

From Khartoum to the lakes, crocodiles and hippopotami become more and more plentiful. On a cool day, in December or January, crocodiles of all sizes are seen sunning themselves on every sand-bank, as thick as logs after a freshet. Herds of wild buffaloes and gigantic antelopes, elephants, and giraffes come to slake their thirst at the water's edge, and the night is made lively, if not hideous, by the lion's roar on the land, and the continual bellowing of the hippopotamus in every pool.

Agriculture is carried on industriously enough all over the narrow valley of the Nile, which, from Sennaar to the Mediterranean, including the few oases, containing only ten thousand square miles of arable land, inhabited by seven or eight millions of people cultivating the soil and living in towns and permanent settlements. Even where the cliffs come down by the river, if a strip of cultivable ground only a yard or two in breadth is left exposed at low Nile, it is made to bear its tribute of a few rows of beans, onions, or doura. Wherever water can be elevated, the land exhibits wonderful fertility; and the amount of labor expended upon merely lifting water to the highest attainable level, by means of the most primitive machines, is absolutely prodigious as well as continual, for a few hours' intermission would result in the burning up of the crop. At the line where the irrigating waters halt the desert begins, and its limit is as sharply marked as a gravel walk across a greensward. Ancient Egypt was the granary of the Roman Empire, and the soil has lost none of its fertility.

It is impossible to form an accurate estimate of the savage tribes along the Nile between the tenth degree and the lakes, but they probably number two or three millions. They cultivate only a little land, and are herdsmen, hunters, and robbers.

Such is the valley of the Nile, that mysterious river which, the reverse of all others, steadily decreases in volume by irrigation and enormous evaporation for the last 1700 miles of its course, and whose fountain-heads south of the great lakes have never yet been ascertained.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

Brother Gardner announced at the opening of the meeting that he took pleasure in announcing the presence of the Hon. Jerusalem Shotwell, of Virginia. The honorable gentleman was known in the Shenandoah Valley as the "Giant of the Opequaw," and he frequently had invitations to deliver his celebrated lectures in fifteen different places at once. His repertoire comprised twenty-eight different lectures on as many different subjects, and the one selected for delivery in the presence of the Lime-Kiln Club was entitled: "The Right Side of Human Nature." During the delivery of the lecture, members were requested to pay strict attention to the discourse, and Elder Toots was given a stool with only two hind legs, to prevent him from falling asleep and rolling against the stove.

THE LECTURER.

As the honorable gentleman was ushered into the hall there was a general buzz of admiration. It was evident at the first glance that he was a man no horse-fly would light on by mistake for a sea-side hotel. His weight seemed to be about 175 pounds, his height a little under six feet, and on the white vest which shielded his manly bosom was a constable's silver star. His coat fitted him to precision, and the tails were modestly decorated with rows of brass buttons. Giveadam Jones sized him up as a hard man in a rough and tumble, and Waydown Bebee whispered to himself that the Hon. Jerusalem Shotwelll was capable of composing a poem to stir the heart of every man, woman and child in the land.

"Feller mortals," said the lecturer, as he gulped down a glass of water and cautiously looked at the three shirt-buttons in the bottom of the glass, "dis human natur' of ours am a strange muddle. We kin feel de sentiment of hate, love, indifference, sentiment, admirashun, fear, reverence an' disgust in one short day. We attain de highest eminence, an' we sink to the lowest slums. We feel hilarious one hour an' shed tears of sorrow the next. Stranger dan all de winds dat blow—more valuable dan any weather furnished by natur'—bold an' fearless—weak an' vascilatin'—human natur' can be praised an' condemned in de same breaf.

IT IS A STUDY.

"If we studied de natur' of a man as clusly as we do dat of a hoss we would not tread on his co'ns so often. Man am as pliable as 'lasses if you take him right. If you take him wrong he am as brittle as glass an' as hard as stun. Dat am a matter we seldom stop to consider. We take him as pleases us—not to please him. Our ideah is dat he mus' put up wid our style—not to bring us to his. I has seen dozens of men who war' bo'n all right spilt by contact wid de world. Nobody took 'em jist right, an' dey wouldn't study to take udder men right.

THE RIGHT SIDE.

"Some men kin be bossed—some has to be coaxed. Some am naterally mulish—some plastic. Some kin be reached frew deir weakness—some frew deir strength. A modest man an' a proud, vain man mus' be handled on teetotally different principles. We make enemies and meet wid needless rebuffs an' refusals bekase we fail to consider dese troofs. If our hoss has a habit of bitin' we lay awake nights to devise some remedy fur it. If our naybur am a nateral kicker we ridicule his grievances an' burlesque his tribulashuns. If our hoss am too high-strung we take de whip we are keerful to keep de lash away from him. If our naybur am too high-spirited to borrer our wheelbarrer an' lend us his washboa'd we declar' him beneath our notis an' wash our hands of de hull fam'ly.

STUDY A MAN.

"It am de easiest thing in the world to make a friend. Fust, locate your man. Second, size him up. If he am a vain, proud man praise his personal appearance, his home—his wife, chill'en an' speeches. No man am so poo' an' lowly dat his words of praise won't soun' sweet to an egotist.

If he am a cross, surly, out-o' sorts chap, feelin' sartin in his own mind dat de world wasn't built on correct principles, doan try to argy wid him to convince him dat dis airth am all O. K. from cellar to garret. On de contrary side in wid him. Growl at de world, abuse mankind an tell him how sorry you am dat he wasn't on han' to manage things about 200 y'ars B. C. It will be like doin' up a sore toe in a greased rag.

"When you meet a man who am sort o' sneakin' frew life on de quiet—nebber heard of outside of his own nayburhood—modest, unassumin, an' only wantin' to be let alone, feed him gum-drops. Tell him you have heard his name menshuned as candidate for Alderman. Ask him what y'ar he was when he run fur de Legislachur. Inquar' when his next book of poems am to be published. Ax him if he am de Smith who invented de comet. He will cringe and wince, but he will go home an' think it ober an' be your friend for life.

"Dar' am cranks to be humored. Dar' am eccentrics to be praised. Dar' am circlin' 'round us day by day a chain of men an' women who doan' know beans from broomsticks, but who must be complimented on deir exquisite tastes an' high order of intelleck.

MAKE FRIENDS.

As de time allotted to me has 'bout expired, let me say to you in closin' dis discourse, dat de man who makes enemies am no reader of human natur'. It am jist as easy to make ten good friends as one enemy. Abuse no man's pollytics. Slur no man's religion. Hold no arguments wid a man who has been soured by misfortunes. As fur women—treat all alike by praisin' all. Returnin' you my capacious thanks fur de emblematical indifference you have exhibited throughout the delivery of this celebrated lecture, I draw myself to a close."

An Arabian Sect.

A court was filled with the forms of Arab men and women squatting on sacred mats, and facing a platform where eight Arabs engaged in a fantastic and fascinating dance. As the muscians began to play slowly they moved the upper parts of their bodies forward and backward and from side to side. Gradually the music became faster, and faster and faster they went, throwing their limbs and bodies about in almost inconceivable positions, until I could scarcely believe that the rapidly whirling mass before me were human beings.

Several hundred years ago there lived in a pashalik of Arabia a learned marabout (priest) who gathered about him many disciples, but as his teachings were not consistent with the Koran he drew upon himself the enmity of the reigning pasha, who banished him and his disciples to the Desert of Sahara, whither they were taken and left without food or water. Then the marabout arose, declaring he had received a revelation from Heaven telling him that nothing they would eat would injure them. Accordingly they feasted upon scorpions, snakes, and prickly-pear leaves. When this miracle came to the ears of the pasha, he enticed them by offers of pardon to his palace. He threw them into a dungeon filled with scorpions, bits of crockery, glass, and other similar tonics, and told them they would not be released until they ate everything. It was no difficult task, as they had been growing fat on the same sort of food. The pasha, having seen them eat, granted them all a full pardon, and made Ali Ben his vizier. The descendants of Ali and his disciples formed a sect called Aissaouas, who every year, on the anniversary of the trial in the dungeon, celebrate the event in the manner I have described. I am told that in some places the sect still eat scorpions, and chew glass.—[Arabia Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

Generals Killed in Battle.

The death of Gen. Earle calls to mind how few instances there are of British generals being killed on the field of battle. Since Picton fell in the hour of victory at Waterloo, the cases have been very few and far between, no instance occuring until Sobraon, when that fine soldier, Maj Gen. Sir Robert Dick, was slain at the head of his division. Some of the old school of officers will no doubt recall Gen. Dick, a hero of countless escapes in his day, who had been wounded at Maida, severely before Roscetta in the Egyptian campaign of 1801, again in the peninsula, and a fourth time at Quatre Bras, when he had command of the Black Watch. The only remaining instances are those of Lieut. Gen. Sir George Cathcart, "blest," to quote Kinglake, "with a soldier's death in action," at the head of the Fourth division on the field of Inkerman; Maj. Gen. Sir George Colley, shot through the head on that awful day at Majuba hill—as yet unavenged; and Maj Gen. William Earle, killed in action at Dulka. That fine old horse-artilleryman, Fox-Strangways, also killed at Inkerman, held only brigadier general's rank. The three general officers killed in the Indian mutiny campaign—viz., Sir Henry Lawrence, Neill, and Penny—belonged to the Indian army, as did Sir Hugh Wheeler, slain in his old age in the massacre of Cawnpore. Havelock, Anson, and Barnard—all three lamented victims to the dark days of 1857—were not killed in action, but died of illness contracted during the campaign.

Impure Air in Schools.

An incident told by an inspector of schools shows the importance of a careful oversight of the ventilating apparatus. Upon visiting a school house the inspector noticed the impure air of the rooms and questioned the janitor on the cause, but was unable to discover the exact reason. The janitor took him to the basement, where he saw four furnaces in operation and where he also noticed theodor of chickens. The peculiarity of the circumstances caused him to investigate further, and he found that the air-box had been converted into a chicken coop, carefully boarded up. The hens were having a snug little time, but the inspector thought he had found foul air, indeed.—[Boston Journal.

Creases in drawing paper or in engravings may be removed by laying the paper face downward upon a sheet of smooth, unsized white paper, covering it with another sheet of the same, slightly dampened, and then ironing it with a warm flatiron.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

OWEN SOUND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.		Mail.	Exp.	Mixed.
Toronto	Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction		9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston		9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orange-	Arrive	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
ville.	Leave	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun.		10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne		10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk		11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton		11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale		11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford		12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth		12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound		1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Owen Sound	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
Chatsworth	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun.	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orange | Arrive	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
ville. | Leave	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto	Arrive 10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select

STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c.

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made eqtensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

A RARE CHANCE.

SAW-MILL FOR SALE.

THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4½ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill; a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.

J. A. DUNCAN,
230 tf Markdale P. O.

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE.

THIS NEW

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense, on the

Most APPROVED

plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat.

☞ Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS

In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.

6 prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $8 per acre. n 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country or securing Good Homes now open for settlement.

FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE—10,818,433 Acres OR MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1883, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific Country, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all kinds of

PUMPS,

Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.

Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's

PATENT LOAD LIFTER

For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.

☞ Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satistaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS, CASKETS, SHROUDS,

and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farmers & Threshers

Ask your merchants for

McCOLL BROS.

LARDINE MACHINE OIL.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

ROBERT S. RAE,

TAILOR,

Sydenham Street.

MARKDALE.

HACYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, at the office, Main Street, Markdale.

Terms—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	5 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,

(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,

199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priseville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,

MARKDALE,

Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,

MARKDALE,

John McAleer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 197-239

MARKDALE

HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

Thos. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession. 122-47

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale. 124ly

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. All orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

COMMERCIAL HOTEL

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON

CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of

BRICK AND STONE WORK,

Plain Ornamental Plastering.

Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention. 124-ly.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given.

All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebrated

CHATHAM WAGONS.

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs.	Flour.
" "	61 "	39 "	"
" "	60 "	38 "	"
" "	59 "	37 "	"
" "	58 "	36 "	"
" "	57 "	35 "	"

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it, if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture,

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres mostly cleared and under cultivation. This farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE, Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or G. NOBLE, Markdale.

Medical.

MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
ADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL
f Dentistry, will be at the Marshall Markdale, on the 1st and third Wed of each month and also at Munday's Flesherton, the day following the Wednesday in each month for the pres his profession.
122-47

W. C. RICHARDS,
ILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHI
ECT, Markdale.
124tf

SAMUEL WARDELL,
ELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Resi
—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-55

MMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
e and commodious Sample Rooms Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde upplied with the best the market af good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

SEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
CK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
mining in all Shades and Colors.
ges moderate and satisfaction guar Orders left at the STANDARD office ceive prompt attention.
126-5.

ISAAC STINSON.
ilder and Contractor ll kinds of Brick and Stone work.
mates given.
work guaranteed.
rs by mail promptly attended to.
MARKDALE P. O.

HN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
NER'L BLACKSMITH,
ORSE SHOEING
A SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
ATHAM WAGONS.

rkdale Roller Mills.
subscriber begs leave to announce to rmers of the surrounding country that urning out flour equal to any other mill.
more waiting while the grist is being
.
following is the scale of exchange:—
eat Weighing 62 lbs, 40 lbs. Flour.
" 61 " 39 " "
" 60 " 38 " "
" 59 " 37 " "
" 58 " 36 " "
" 57 " 35 " "
ffal in proportion to amount of flour.
d the average weight of new wheat to
bs. to the bushel, and the most of it, erly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to shel.
John W. Ford.

ew Butcher Shop.
best meats the country can produce
hand and
VERED TO ALL PARTS OF TOWN WHERE ORDERED.
are of public patronage respectfully
d.
ember the stand in McNea's block.
W. H. RUTLEDGE.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
ndersigned is manufacturing an ex cellent assortment of chool Furniture.
ing of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, HERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest and most approved pattern. Highly mended by School Trustees and Teach cheapness, comfort and compactness er tried. An assortment of Farm and Bells kept always on hand. Send for ue to Chatsworth P. O.
ANDREW McGILL.

ARM FOR SALE.
T 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres ostly cleared and under cultivation rm is three miles from Markdale, and sold on very easy terms. For fu lars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE
o, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO
E, Markdale.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 237. MARKDALE, ONT., MARCH 26, 1885. {COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.}

Spring Stock
COMPLETE.

54 Complete Watches.

Gold and Silver Cases, Ladies and Gents sizes, Waltham, Elgin, Springfield and Swiss movements, 7, 9, 11 and 15 Jewelled. Close time-keepers. Warrants cover all breakages, for 1 and 2 years.

32 FINE CLOCKS,

Seth Thomas & other makes.

WEDDING RINGS, ACID TEST.

3 oz. Coin Case, Elgin movement, Exp. Bal., $12.00.
A good Swiss Watch, 15 Jewelled, Silver Case, $9.50.

I Advertise Actual Present Stock,

And am in a position to give better terms, time or cash, than any other dealer in this section of Grey Co. Get quotations, compare with mine, and prove my statement. Long warrants help to sell—very often—inferior or imitation watches. I hold to the plan of honest representation of every article, and give no warrants exceeding 2 years. Cash discount 5 per cent. is worth considerable to every purchaser.

DIFFICULT WATCH REPAIRING A Specialty.
ALL WORK FULLY GUARANTEED.
W. A. BROWN,
Jeweller, - Markdale.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

SEE Russell's adv. on supplement.

Mr. Geo. Lamb has three cows for sale.

THE Riel Rebellion report is much exaggerated.

Easter Cards at the Medical Hall.

MHE Shelburne Free Press struck oil last week.

"Hello!" Mt. Forest is introducing the telephone.

MIKE CUMMINGS of Glenelg lost a horse recently.

FARM to rent or sell, apply to J. G. Irving, Markdale.

EUPHRASIA Council meets at Rocklyn on Saturday, 28th.

MISS KNAGGS of Meaford is visiting at Mr. Wm. Brown's

A baby-carriage is almost sure to be struck by a squall.

MR. W. H. Hunter of Orangeville was in town last week.

THE STANDARD to the end of 1885 to any address for 75 cents.

A LOAD of good apples would sell readily in the village now.

SEE W. A. Brown's new advertisement. He means business.

LAST week's Confederate was largely taken up with Scott Act matter.

SPECIAL dicount on watches for 30 days at Russell's, Flesherton.

DEAD.—Joe Goss, the well known pugelist, died Monday at Boston.

A STOCK of Cabinet Envelopes just opened at Hamilton's photo. gallery.

AN interesting letter from our John Hill may be seen in another column.

CLOCKS.—32 of them to choose from at Brown's watch shop, Markdale.

SELLING OUT: A large assortment of choice candies cheap at Montgomery's.

FOR Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

W. A. WROWN, watchmaker, is an excellent hand to repair and clean watches.

MR. T. HALL, of the Dundalk Herald gave us a brief but pleasent call on Saturday.

SPECIAL attention to repairing clock's and watches at J. G. Russell's, Flesherton.

MR. H. J. Middaugh of Durham, who has been ill for some time is now recovering.

FOR Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

ENVELOPES, for mailing cabinet photos, for sale cheap at Hamilton's photo. gallery.

Seeds.—Field and Garden seeds of all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

DWELLING houses are very scarce in Markdale, there not being sufficient for the demand.

AN assortment of 54 complete watches in stock at Brown's jewellry store, Markdale.

Oil Cake, unsurpassed for Horses and Cattle, for sale at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

NATIONAL PILLS act promptly upon the Liver, regulate the Bowels and as purgative are mild an thorough.

DR. LOW'S WORM SYRUP has removed tape worm from 15 to 30 feet in length. It also destroys all kinds of worm.

ENVELOPES furnished and neatly printed at this office at the rate of 5 cents per package of 25, by taking 1,000.

PROF. LOW'S SULPHUR SOAP is highly recommended for the cure of Eruption, Chafes, Chapped hands, Pimples, Tan, &c.

HANLAN won an easy victory over Clifford at Sydney, Feb. 7th, for a thousand pounds, beating him by seven boat-lengths.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS require no other Purgative. They are safe and sure to remove all varieties of Worms.

PARTIES having good seed grain for sale would find it to their advantage to say so through the STANDARD; only 50 cents.

Don't purchase a common painted Green Tea when you can get a nice, sweet, pure Japan from McFarland at a low price.

FIRE.—J. S. George's large warehouse in Port Elgin was destroyed by fire on Sunday last; loss $15,000, insured for $11,000.

HEAD QUARTERS.—For Implements and repairs of all kinds, call on J. H. Hull, agent for Fleury's Sylvester's and Wilkinson's manufacture.

MRS. MERRIAM of Chatsworth, formerly, of Flesherton, spent a few days with friends here on her way to Toronto to purchase a stock of millinery.

A SEVERE snow and wind storm prevailed on Tuesday, delaying trains and bringing business generally to a standstill. Wednesday, however, was mild and beautiful.

THE Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be dispensed (D.V.) next Sabbath 29th inst., in the Markdale Presbyterian church. Service will commence at 10:30 a. m.

AT THE HEAD OF THE LIST.—Lampton county voted on the Scott Act on Monday last, giving a majority of 8,100 for the Act. This is the gratest majority on record.

New Prints at McFarland's;
New Tweeds at McFarland's;
New Cottonades at McFarland's;
New Shirtings at McFarland's;
New Dress Goods at McFarland's.

Mr. G. S. Brown arrived yesterday from Arkansas. We are pleased to see him looking so well. It is his intention to rebuild his portion of the burnt district of the recent fire.

HARDWARE.—A large and well assorted stock of hardware just opening at Walker Bro's, Markdale. Call and examine for your selves and get prices before purchasing.

MR. A. GAMEY, son of Josiah Gamey, Esq. Osprey, is home for a short time from the North West. He spent a few days in Markdale and will return to the prairie province next week.

The big shipment of Boots & Shoes recently purchased by W. J. McFarland at the great sale of John Garrett & Co's stock, will arrive in a day or two, and will be sold at unprecedently low prices.

JAMES LACKY has purchased the Berkeley steam saw mill and is having it overhauled and put in good order. He is a first class sawyer, and we hope he may make this a profitable investment.

THE MICHIGAN GONE DOWN.—The propeller Michigan, valued at $145,000, which has been ice-locked in mid-lake for the past month, sank on Thursday. The crew were rescued by a tug in the vicinity.

NOTICE. — Parties indebted to me will bestow a great favor upon me by making immediate payment, as I have sustained quite a loss by the recent fire, therefore I must have my money. Thos. Mathews.

WE occasionaly receive a communication, or batch, of correspondence without any name. We cannot pay any attention to such. We must have the name, not necessarily for publi cation of course.

CUNNINGHAM AND BURTON.—Two detectives who were sent to the United States to work up testimony against Cunningham and Burton have returned to London with important information against the prisoners,

JUST received at McFarland's direct from Nottingham, England, White and Cream Laces, Lambrequins and Lace Curtains, which will be sold at same price as wholesale merchants charge for same goods.

WE have sent out a large number of accounts; will the parties interested kindly respond as promptly as possible, the're not very large amounts, but sakes alive the're numerous, and we are in sore need of them.

THOSE who wish to purchase a cow or a yoke of oxen, or any other stock, or have such to sell should let the public know through the STANDARD; nearly everybody in the district is either a subscriber or else reads his neighbor's paper.

If you want an easy shave,
As good as barber ever gave.
Just call on me at my saloon
At morn' or eve' or busy noon.
My raisors are both sharp and keen,
And towels are also neat and clean.
T. D. Smith, Markdale.

DUNDAS' Custom Boot & Shoe Shop is now running in full blast. Orders promptly executed and repairing in all its branches done with neatness and despatch. It matters not where you have bought your boots, bring your repairing to Dundas'.

SETTLERS and colonists, March 31st there will be a special excursion to Manitoba, Dakota, the Pacific Coast and the North West via. the Albert Lea Route from all points on the Canadian Pacific Railway. For full particulars apply to Station Agents.

MR. WM. GLENCROSS, ex-councillor of Glenelg, died on Monday the 16th inst. Mr. Glencross was highly respected and an excellent neighbor, has been ill for some time past with that prevalent disease, consumption, which carried him to a premative graye.

CREDIT SALE.—Mr. Michael Sullivan will sell by public auction at the City Hotel, Markdale, at one o'clock on Saturday, 4th April, a quantity of farm stock, implements, &c. Terms on sums over $10 nine months credit on approved paper. Geo. Noble, auctioneer.

DUNDAS' is selling No. 1 Prince of Wales Chewing Tobacco at 38 cts. per lb.; Brier 6 s. smoking at 47 cents; Napoleon at 42 cents; X X X White Wine Vinegar, No. 1, at 30 cts. per gallon; 3 lb. can Tomatoes at 7 cents per can. Other lines of Groceries proportionately low.

CREDIT SALE, at Berkeley on Friday, 27th, at one o'clock, consisting of Horses, Lumber, Wagons, Trucks, harness, &c., &c. Geo. S. Brown, proprietor; Geo. Noble, auctioneer, also at the same time and place 63 acres land being lot 15, con. 12, Holland; Terms easy.

THE place to get reliable Watches. In 17 months I have sold 60 Watches —Waltham, Springfield, Elgin and Swiss grades—from $4.00 to $85.00 each. Kindly read my new adv. No trouble to show goods. Large stock. Close prices. The reliable Jeweller, W. A. Brown, Markdale.

CREDIT SALE.—Mr. Joseph Manarey, auctioneer, will hold a sale on Friday the 27th March, on lot 18, con. 11, Euphrasia, commencing at one o'clock. A quantity of farm stock, implements &c. Terms nine months on approved paper for sums over $5.00, John Carefoot, proprietor.

A MARKDALE youth who had been sent to the butchers for 3 lbs. of steak said to his mother on returning? Ma, what part of the critter is the steak? Part of the hind quarter my boy. That's what I thought, said the child, but the butcher cut this off the front quarter and said it was steak.

THE anniversary of the Markdale Presbyterian Sabbath School will be held in the Presbyterian Church on the evening of Tuesday next, 31st inst. Tea served from 5 to 8 o'clock. A sufficient and well prepared programme is provided for the occasion, admission 15 cents.

EASTER HOLIDAYS.—Return tickets will be issued to all stations on the C. P. R. and branches (Ontario Division) at one fair and a third good to go on April 2nd, 3rd and 4th; good to return until April 7th. Tickets at above rates can be procured at any station. Passengers paying on the train will be charged full fare.

AT Dundas' Ladies can get any style of Boots & Shoes from the coarsest Double Sole Kip, or Buff Boots to the finest Kid. Misses, Girls and Childrens Boots & Shoes in endless variety; Gentlemen, Boys and Youths Boots & Shoes by the million. In any of the above departments you can be well served at Dundas'.

MR. JOHN ORR is now well up in years, and has never been successful in securing a picture of himself, (though he often tried) until last week when our Photographer, Mr. Hamilton, brought forth from the camera a beautiful and life-like photo. Mr. O. is much pleased over it and has forwarded some of them to friends in his native land.

THE TRIP HAMMER.—This is the apropriate name of a new monthly journal published by the employes of the Massey Manufacturing Co., Toronto. This company have in connection with their extensive works a splendid library and reading room, and the scores of exchanges which will be added through the publication of the Trip Hammer will add very much to the variety of reading matter.

NO MATTER.

No matter where pain, lameness or soreness exists, Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken or applied will give immediate relief, and a positive cure quickly follows its use.

A sample of silver ore from the Rabbit silver mine at Port Arthur has been assayed in London, England, and yielded at the rate of six thousand dollars a ton.

Mr. Jess, of Sarawak, has a most productive sheep. She presented him, a few days ago, with four beautiful lambs. They are all alive and doing well. Who can beat this?

MR. W. G. RICHARDS, has let the contract of the mason and brick work and plastering of the new Methodist Church to Mr. Thos. Chambers of Meaford, who is to have the brick work complete by the 1st July. Mr. Chambers is a pushing contractor and first-class workman and the prospects for a first-class job is now assured.

A BIG BOY.—A teacher informed a friend the other day that there was hanging in one of the rooms at the High School, a map drawn by a boy seven feet long and four and a half feet wide!

An Irish gentleman having purchased an alarm clock, an acquaintance asked him what he intended to do with it. "Och," answered he, "sure I've nothing to do but pull the string and wake myself."

WE give this week a list of all the post offices in the County with the revenue from stamps together with renumeration paid to each post master with other allowance. It will be seen that Markdale stands fifth highest in point of revenue; Owen Sound, Meaford, Shelburne, and Durham being the only places in the County over our post office.

A BIG HAT CARNIVAL will be held at Roller Rink, on Friday, March 27th, when prizes will be given for the largest and smallest Hats; also for the largest and smallest Collars and Neckties.—O. S. Times.

GAZETTED.—Letters patent have been issued to Heap's Dry Earth or Ashes Closet Co. (limited). Capital $180,000. The Company consists of the following members:—W. Heap, Managing Director; J. B. Taylor, Sec'y Treasurer; Mrs. Taylor; Mrs. D. A. Creasor and Mrs. Wm. Heap.

A man near Hanover in search of a wife said to a friend, "I will give you a load of peas if you will get me a wife." The friend procuerd him a wife, the couple were married instanter, not having seen each other previous to the day of the ceremony, and the friend received his load of peas the following day. The Hanover "Post" is responsible for the above.

GREY PRINTER'S ASSOCIATION.—This really desirable organization was never consummated principally through the incompetence of the secretary. However it is about time the treasurer returned the subscriptions paid by those who attended the first meeting. It dosen't amount to much but he has no right to retain them.—Chronicle. Correct Mr. Jenkins, that's our opinion.

SENSIBLE SUGGESTIONS.—The following suggestions are good ones and would be highly beneficial to the public; In many cases serious loss would be averted and the cost would amount to a mere bagatelle. The Port Hope Times thinks that the holding of the Division Courts should be properly advertised and paid for by the Counties in the local papers where the Courts are held.

The Campbellford Herald adds that the Treasurer's sale of Lands for taxes should be advertised in every paper in the county. The mere appearance of this advertisement is next to useless. The folly of it may be seen by the fact that the paper in which the advertisement appears may not circulate a single copy in the districts where most of the land advertised is located, and many times the sale is known only to the few within the range of the one newspaper circulation. Our County Council should slice up this matter and have the sale of lands properly ventilated in the local press.

FAIR SCHEMERS.

And the Traps They Lay for Their Dupes.

Among the persons who leaned over the ice-box in the Pearl street undertaking establishment, not long since, in which lay the body of Lyman D. Minor, the Broadway merchant who committed suicide, was a woman of scarcely 23 years of age. She was soberly dressed, and when she raised her veil a modest little face and a pair of jet black eyes twinkling beneath black eyelashes were seen. With her kid-glove hand she smoothed back the hair from the ugly bullet wound in the temple of the dead man, and when she was leaving left a bunch of lillies on the box. She came and went as unostentatiously as a sister of charity. This woman was Annie Greenville, who, in connection with Pliny White, the king of confidence men, was the unseen power that drove the merchant to his grave. Sergt. Frink, of the Central police office, said Annie Greenville had a heart of iron and was a tool in the hands of White. White would never leave a man while there was a dollar in him. He was heartless, treacherous, and cruel.

It is perhaps an ungallant thing to say, but in New York and large cities generally beauty and blackmail have come to be associated to such an extent that the only safeguard for a susceptible person is to steer clear of good-looking strangers altogether.

This blackmail is a trade that can only be plied successfully in the great populous cities, as there the possibilities of detection are reduced to a mere nothing. It takes an adroit rogue to be a first-class swindler, hence women, who have more tact than men, are always chosen to do the fine work of entrapping the victim. Once in the toils the plucking is done by the male comfederates and is usually an easy and safe process. Their methods are many, curious, and novel. The latest and most novel is one recently come to light.

A beautiful and accomplished girl sought employment in a down-town business establishment run by a father and son. She managed to entangle both, and get up an escapade with the young man which cost him a very tidy little sum before the end was reached. He wrote her affectionate letters, made short excursions around and had a lovely time generally, until one fine morning an elderly ruffian stepped up, claiming to be her father. The idiot was only too glad to disgorge liberally on the spot. Then the ex-charmer threatened to sue for the recovery of her letters and a balance due on some furniture; to avoid a scandal he paid up handsomely. Finally, fearing that he was to be bled to death by these vampires, he appealed to the police. A single visit with a promise of arrest sufficed to settle the whole business.

A well-known editor of much brilliancy and sagacity on the metropolitan press was badly done for some time ago by a pretty little widow. She first called on him, and her woful tale, backed by her girlish face, enlisted his sympathies in her cause. Then came requests for theater and concert tickets and other courtesies, in the compliance of which he generally sent a gallantly worded note. On the strength of these letters and a confederate it cost him $1,000 inside of three months. He was too sensitive to public opinion to hand him over to the police, and had not a friend of his stepped in and grappled matters with an iron hand he probably would have been a victim to-day of either her greed or lies.

Here is another case: A Broadway merchant who makes a specialty of silks and satins has a dark room fitted up in his store where he can show the effect of gaslight upon his goods. One day he escorted a lady to this room to show a fine piece of satin under the gas jet. Hardly had the door shut upon them than she tore off her bonnet and sacque and flinging her arm about his neck shrieked at the top of her voice. The clerks rushed in and saw the boss struggling with a beautiful lady whose clothes were half torn off her back. Here was a pretty kettle of fish. It cost $500 to hush the matter up, but he refuses to enter that room with a lady unless accompanied by a cash boy now.

There is no limit to the resources of the business, and, like Mulberry Sellers's eye-water, "there's millions in it." They have been known to invade a private wedding and come off successful. Women are invariably the principals. Men suspect men always, but they are consummate fools enough never to suspect a handsome woman. The glamor of her face, the witchery of her eyes, and the soft ripple of her tongue is too much for their senses, and their suspicion is lulled until too late to be of any value. One meets these women everywhere—at the theater, on the cars, in the street. The summer boarding houses and seaside resorts are favorite stamping grounds for them. Saratoga is full of them in season, and not long since I knew of one who entertained two clergymen—one a bishop in the episcopal church—with their wives at a cozy dinner. Of course the guests had no idea of the true character of the "charming" hostess, and perhaps some day, when I write up her brilliant but checkered career, they will rub their dear old ecclesiastical optics.—Chicago News.

Sunday school teacher—"What is meant by the words 'Quench not the spirit?'" Bright scholar—"Please ma'am, my father says he guesses as how it means don't put too much water to it."

"What country is this?' This? Why, this is America." "Ah, yes; America, the asylum for the poor and oppressed of all nations." "No, not of all nations." "What nation is excepted, I'd like to know?' "Why, America."

People who dislike to have their windows frosted in cold weather can prevent it by rubbing the glass inside and outside with glycerine.

In London an electric light has been used to illuminate the interior of an oven. The door was of plate glass, and every part of the process of baking could be distinctly seen.

A delicious apple custard is made with two eggs, six tablespoonfuls of sugar and one cup of cream, flavored with lemon and beaten thoroughly. Add a teacupful of strained stewed apple. Bake with only an undercrust.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city

Carpets, when a thin layer of hard wood sawdust that has been well damped with a solution of common salt is thoroughly brushed off, are found to have their freshness greatly restored.

A Single Trial

Is all that is needed to prove that Polson's NERVILINE is the most rapid and certain remedy in the world for pain. It only costs 10 cents for a trial bottle. A single trial bottle will prove NERVILINE to be equally efficacious as an external or internal remedy, and for pain of every description it has no equal. Try a 10 cent sample bottle. Sold by druggists. Large bottles 25 cents. Avoid substitutes.

It is the diplomatic clerk at the silk counter who asks the fond mother shopping with her daughter if the goods are for her or her sister, whose salary the "boss" raises.

How They Do It.

So-called respectable people would hesitate considerable before pilfering your pockets in a crowded thoroughfare. That would be too too. The same discrimination is not indicated by the so called respectable druggist when that wonderful corn cure, PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR is asked for. He will pilfer your pockets in the most genteel manner by substituting cheap and dangerous substitutes for the genuine Putnam's Corn Extractor. Watch for these gentlemen, and take none other than Putnam's Corn Extractor. Sold by druggists everywhere. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, propts.

Mr. Houzeau, has, by the transit of Venus, settled the distance of the sun from Chicago at 91,756 800 miles. This must make the married people in the sun very unhappy.

Most people suppose that the manufacture of tobacco consists merely of taking the leaf and pressing it into plugs. The fact is, however, that the process is a very delicate one, and the least false step will injure the flavor. The leaf must be carefully attended to for months after it leaves the planter's hands. It must neither dry too quick nor too slowly. Even after it has reached the factory the utmost delicacy of manipulation is required. The weather must be carefully studied, for if there is too much moisture in the air when it is pressed it will mould, and the same will happen if too much moisture is sprinkled upon it for the purpose of opening the leaf. Again, if it is overdried in the oven it will turn crisp, and will nip the tongue in smoking. It is by careful attention to all these points that the "Myrtle Navy" has been brought to such perfection. The firm who manufacture it have their own storehouses in Virginia, and from the time the leaf leaves the planter's hands until it is turned out of the factory, months afterwards, in plugs, it is under the care of their skilled and trusted employes.

China has hundreds of thousands of professional beggars, but not one Chinese beggar, it is asserted, has yet been found in the United States, even on the Pacific coast.

Wonderful Progress in Horse Breeding.

The great demand for large work horses has led to extreme experiments in breeding the small mares of Western ranges to large Percheron stallions. The results, contrary to public belief, have proven remarkably successful. From these mares, weighing from 700 to 900 pounds, when bred to imported Percheron stallions, are produced horses that possess about one-half the united weight of sire and dam, and while partaking of the characteristics of the sire, they lose none of the endurance and hardihood of the dam, selling readily for from $100 to $200.

As the vast herds of the long-horned, gaunt Texas cattle, worth from 2 to 3 cents a pound, that appeared on our markets a few years since, have been improved by the use of Short-horn and Hereford bulls until we scarcely recognize the blood-like looking steers, worth from 5 to 6 cents a pound, now coming from the range as their descendants; so may we expect that the useless horses that are being brought from the West and Southwest and sold through the states at from $25 to $50 a head, will soon be displaced in our markets by their descendants of triple their value being of sufficient size to work, and showing the character and docility of their sires.

One of the best evidences of the success of this method of breeding is deduced from the fact that M. W. Dunham, of Wayne, Ill., the greatest importer of Draft horses in America, and from whose stables have gone out nearly all the pure bred Percheron stallions now in breeding upon Western ranges, and who has had the benefit of the experience of all those who have been breeding from stallions bought of him during the past ten years, has engaged in the business with the Messrs. Studebaker, of South Bend, Ind. and John A. Witter, of Denver, Col., and invested half a million dollars in ranges and stock. The present year they are breeding about 2,000 mares to 32 of the finest imported Percheron stallions. The uniformity, beauty and size of the colts produced from the range mares and the imported sires, has attracted the attention of many of the progressive breeders of the West; notably the Hon. M. H. Post, Member of Congress, from Wyoming, who has one of the finest bands of horses, and probably one of the largest and best ranges in that territory, consisting of 100,000 acres under fence, recently purchased. During the past year Mr. Post has bought from Mr. Dunham 15 imported Percheron stallions and two imported Percheron mares; also, the Oregon Horse and Land Co., located on Snake River and owning 8,000 horses, have bought of him a large number of Percheron stallions, and are introducing them exclusively for breeding on their herd. Many other prominent stock breeders, recognising the superiority of the Percheron cross, have been liberal purchasers of Mr. Dunham. Among them Poindexter & Orr, Conrad Kohrs, Mr. Clark, Mr. Maulden, Mr. Murphy and others of Montana; Shipman Bros., of Northwest Ty., Mr. Latimer and Mr. McNutt, of Idaho; Mr. Dean, of Nevada; Mr. Cory, Mr. Clark and Mr. Boundy, of Utah; Mr. Lot Smith, Mr. Mortson of Arizona; Mr. Stark weather and numerous others of Texas; which shows what a powerful hold this system of breeding is taking on the minds of range breeders. To supply his vast trade which penetrates every portion of the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Manitoba to the Gulf, $3,000,000 worth of horses have been imported from France since 1872 by M. W. Dunham, of Oaklawn Farm, Wayne, DuPage Co., Ill., who now has on hand 600 head of pedigreed stallions and mares.

C. M. D.

Walking down Broadway is very pleasant when you feel well, and T—— K—— never felt better than when his friend asked him how he got over that severe cough of his so speedily. "Ah, my boy," said T——, "G. M. D. did it!" And his friend wondered what G. M. D. meant. He knew it did not mean a Good Many Doctors, for T—— K—— had tried a dozen in vain. "I have it," said he just hitting the nail on the head, "you mean Dr. Pierce's 'Golden Medical Discovery,' or Gold Medal Deserved as my friend J—— S—— always dubs it." Sold by druggists.

Hattie C. Cummings advertises in a Western paper that she wants "a man with red hair and blue eyes, who does not wear fine shirts much, and is not afraid to cut too much wood for the cook." She may succeed in getting a man with red hair and blue eyes, but if she had desired one with blue hair and red eyes her want would not have been so easily gratified.

We accidentally overheard the following dialogue on the street yesterday:

Jones. Smith, why don't you stop that disgusting hawking and spitting?

Smith How can I? You know I am a martyr to catarrh.

J. Do as I did. I had the disease in its worst form but I am well now.

S. What did you do for it?

J. I used Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cured me and it will cure you.

S. I've heard of it, and by Jove I'll try it.

J. Do so. You'll find it at all the drug stores in town.

The Deutshe Medizinal Zeitung gives an account of a series of careful experiments made in the Prussian army as to the utility of serving schnapps to soldiers in active service. After prolonged trials the army surgeons abandoned the use of spirit, and gave tea or coffee in place of it.

Colds, fevers and inflammations broken up by Dr. Pierce's Extract of Smart-Weed.

A miser is the golden mean.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star.

Meat for tramps.

Young Men! Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Volatic Belt and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Within a week of the day when he received his commission to relieve Khartoum, Lord Wolseley told a friend that his calculations were that he would join hands with Gordon about the 20th of January. That was on the 30th of August. Gordon's steamers met Gen. Stewart's troops on the 21st of January.

A. P. 220

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk, Carpet, and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, Ont.

BEACHAD SOLID BRICK HOUSE.—GOOD SITuation, high and dry part of city, nine rooms gas-lit and closet. Lot 33x110. Terms easy. Apply on the premises, or address 33 Davenport Road, Toronto, Ont

LECTURERS Wanted for the Deistarians. M. C. FOSDICK, Kalamazoo, Mich.

50 000 Acres farming lands in Northern Michigan for sale. Some improved farms. Terms easy. Address MERRITT CHANDLER, Cheboygan, Mich.

CASH paid for Endowment Insurance policies. For particulars, address, with description of policy, F. G. RUSSELL, Hartford, Conn. Box 423.

ONLY 21 CENTS. Look here! Upon receipt of 21 cents, silver, and one cent stamp, will send to any address a complete receipt of the Paul Brothers' celebrated writing ink, also a number of other ink receipts. Give your address plainly. Address, W. C. MEDILL, Hunter, Ont.

120 ACRES OF GOOD FARMING LAND FOR sale, with 100 acres under cultivation; good house, barn and sheds; large young orchard; two miles from good market, and on main travelled road to same, which is a lively town. For particulars apply to HOLDEN Bros. Rockaway Centre, St. Clair Co., Mich.

FARM FOR SALE.—Lots 21 and 22 on the second concession, Township of Greenock, County of Bruce; 200 acres There are a good frame house and two good barns on the place. There are 120 acres cleared, in good state of cultivation; thirty acres slashed. This is a good farm, and will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Apply to I. T. GRANT, Woodstock.

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use Sold by grocers through the Dominion Send for price to W. CLARK P. O. Box 342 Montreal

FOR PLEASANT SEWING

—USE ONLY—

Clapperton's Spool Cotton!

Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. ☞ For sale by all Dry Goods Dealers.

HE THAT SOWETH

WILLIAM EVANS' SEEDS

SHALL REAP IN ABUNDANCE.

If my seeds are not sold in your town, send for my Illustrative and Descriptive Catalogue Mailed free to all applicants.

WM. EVANS, Seedsman, Montreal.

[Established 1854]

R. W. PRITTIE.

Real Estate Agent.

Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee, & Financial Agent, Room C, Arcade, Yonge St. Toronto. Money to Loan Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged.

TREES! TREES! TREES!

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

The filling of orders from dealers specially solicited. We have ample stock and facilities for filling out in large or small quantities, on short notice, a general assortment of Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Shrubs, Roses, Russian Mulberry, Railroad to our grounds.

H. H. HURD & SON, Proprietors, Halton Nurseries, Burlington, Ont.

REOUT!

Files Don't Waste Them. Ship or Bring to THE ONTARIO FILE CO. 150 Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents Wanted.

Dominion Line of Steamships

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from

PORTLAND.

Dominion, March 5th | Toronto, April
Montreal, March 12th | Montreal, Ap'l
Brooklyn, March 26th

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool, $60, $65, $80 Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth Intermediate, $35, steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or coal agents of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO., General Agents Montreal

CAUTION

EACH PLUG OF THE

MYRTLE NAVY

IS MARKED

T. & B.

In Bronze Letters.

NONE OTHER GENUINE.

EVERY FARMER,

—AND—

Especially Those Living on Rented Farms,

should send me postal cards, with addresses, for Sectional maps and particulars of the special offer made by the

ST. PAUL, MINNEAPOLIS & MANITOBA R'Y.

for their Lands in the

Red River Valley,

within short distance of track. Only 50c. per acre down; also Nine Million acres, Free Government Land in the

TURTLE MOUNTAIN and DEVIL'S LAKE DISTRICTS,

North Dakota. Particulars free.

Address—
C. H. WARREN & CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.
or H. F. McNALLY,
28 Front St. East Toronto, Ont.

(Mention this paper)

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses Cows, Calves, Sheep and Pigs. The YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first-class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter Fit fattens in one-fourth the usual time and saves food.

Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar ox contain 200 Feeds.

HUGH MILLER & Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS
187 King St East, Toronto,
For sale by Druggists everywhere

Island Home Stock Farm,

GROSSE ISLE, MICH.

IMPORTED PERCHERON HORSES.

All stock selected from the get of sires and dams of established reputation and registered in the French and American Stud Books. We have a very large stock of imported stallions and brood mares on hand. Prices reasonable. Correspondence solicited. Send for illustrated catalogue, free by mail. Address SAVAGE & FARNUM, Detroit, Mich.

HAND STAMPS

METAL & RUBBER DATERS, SELF-INKERS & BANKING STAMPS, NOTARY SEALS, &C. AGENTS WANTED.

KENYON, TINGLEY & STEWART MFG. CO., 72 KING ST. WEST.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF

It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating, properties of beef, and the one which has the power to supply nourishment for brain, and bone, and muscle.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.

—:) MANUFACTURERS OF (:—

Finest Electro Gold and Silver Plate

New York, Meriden (Ct.), Chicago, San Francisco, London, (Eng.).

BRANCH FACTORY—Cor. Cannon and Wellington Streets, Hamilton, Ont.

TRADE MARK. MERIDEN B. CO. COMPANY

Many purchasers having through a similarity of names purchased other wares under the impression that they were of our manufacture, we are compelled to ask special attention to the above TRADE MARKS The fact that our name and Trade Marks are being so closely imitated should be a sufficient guarantee to the public that our wares are the BEST IN THE WORLD.

TRADE 1847 Rogers Bros. A1 MARK.

W. & F. P. CURRIE & Co.

100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.

Importers of

Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Flue Covers, White Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Borax, Roman Cement, Manufacturers of Dessemer Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs

F. E. DIXON & Co.

Manufacturers of Star Rivet

LEATHER BELTING

King Street, East, Toronto

Large double Driving Belts a specialty. For Price Lists and Discounts.

Property for Sale, Rent or Exchange

FIFTY ACRES NEAR TORONTO, $65 per acre, west half of 29 on 8th and of 30 on the 10th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Shelburne Station, $65 per acre; for Sale, Rent, or Exchange. Terms to suit.

FIFTY ACRES NEAR TORONTO, $65 per acre, west hundred acres of lot 31 on the 10th concession of Brock, cheap; and west half of 29 on 8th and 9th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Shelburne station, $12 per acre; for Sale, Rent or Exchange. Terms to suit. Save this advertisement.

J. P. JACKSON, Downsview.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE

SEWING MACHINE

PRICE $25 CASH.

Our new machine is now ready, and is as good as any sold by Agents at $65.00.

SEE TESTIMONIAL!

LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 18

Machine arrived all right, and it is certainly well worth the money you ask for it with present improvements, I prefer it to "Singer," "Wanzer," or any other make at each. Yours truly,

AARON HAWK

New Attachments New Furniture New Stand.

Send stamp for samples of sewing and elegant descriptive photograph of the machine before buying from Agents.

MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL

BONUS:—From now until March 31st, we will give to any person sending us $2 cash in advance for one of our machines handsome combination table and brass lamp complete. These lamps are something new, and the maker wants them introduced If you or any of your friends want a machine don't delay, but send to

Co-Operative Sewing Machine Co.

22 JAMES ST., SOUTH. HAMILTON, Ont.

CONROY'S

CONROY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order one from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.

50 2nd-hand Bicycles & Tricycles. ☞ Send for List.

A. T. LANE, Montreal

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.

DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

R. U. AWARE THAT Lorillard's Climax Plug

bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuff are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

M. W. DUNHAM

Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,

HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE

Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which includes

75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES

Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE.

EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA

STOCK ON HAND 150 Imported Brood Mares 250 Imported Stallions Old enough for service 100 COLTS Two years old and younger Recognizing the principle accepted by the intelligent breeders of France, however well bred a horse may be said to be, if pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authenticated, they should be valued only as grades. I sell Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold, pedigree verified by the official French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free, illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Societe Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884, chased by M. W. Dunham and drawn from life by Beneham, the most famous of all animal painters.

Reform in Cheese-

The dairymen of Cent... ve become convinced t... y to put a stop to remo... m milk that is to be ma... the last meeting of the ... n's Board of Trade, be... intaining the quality a... New York State chee... vinced that the good re... duct is being undermin... d by the practice of par... many factories within ... partially skimmed che... oad and sold as "full cre... ese; therefore, we wou... e our Representatives ... e at Albany "to amen... vent deception in the ... ducts," passed by the ... w York State, April 24 ... g a section or enabling ... the New York State ... ner to devise, make, and ... m stencil brand for Ne... ring a device, or mo... rds, "New York S... ese," each brand bear... each separate factory, t... the Commissioner; th... used upon full-cream c... n boxes containing th... found using such bra... s thereof on skim chee... alty of $500, or suc... islature in its wisdom ...

Farm Hint

The breeding sow shoul... ge of food. All corn... d her some slops of b... roots, if possible; an... food so her bowels will ... d and she get feve... e things are done the ... y sows to eat up the ... sulphur, and charcoal ... get it all the time. H... t deal of salt if they ha... they will do better. ... orses and also mules ... ues hang out of their ... s, because they have a ... Quite often, however, ... e they have a sharp t... h have jagged edges, w... ue when they have a ... ths. The only remedy ... harp points and edge ... ey will not hurt their ... ave the cattle sharp hor... ng off? Just heat a ...

W. & F. P. CURRIE & Co.
100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.
Importers of
Drain Pipes, Portland Cement,
Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Fire Covers,
Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris,
Borax, Roman Cement,
Manufacturers of Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs.

F. E. DIXON & Co
Manufacturers of Star Rivet
LEATHER BELTING
King Street, East, Toronto.
Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

Property for Sale, Rent or Exchange.
FIFTY ACRES NEAR TORONTO, being the west half of 29 on 8th and of 30 on the 10th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Shelburne station, $12 per acre; for Sale, Rent, or Exchange. Terms to suit.
FIFTY ACRES NEAR TORONTO, $65 per acre, west hundred acres of lot 1 on the 10th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Brock, cheap; and west half of 29 on 8th and 30 on 9th concession of Amaranth, six miles west of Shelburne station, $12 per acre; for Sale, Rent or Exchange. Terms to suit. Save this advertisement.
J. P. JACKSON, Downsview.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE
SEWING MACHINE
PRICE $25 CASH.
Our new machine is now ready, and is as good as any sold by Agents at $65.00.
SEE TESTIMONIAL!
LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 188
Machine arrived all right, and it is certainly well worth the money you ask for it with its present improvements. I prefer it to the "Singer," "Wanzer," or any other make at $65 each. Yours truly,
AARON HAWKINS.
New Attachments New Furniture
New Stand.
Send stamp for samples of sewing and an elegant descriptive photograph of the machine before buying from Agents.
MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL.
BONUS:—From now until March 31st, we will give to any person sending us $ cash in advance for one of our machines a handsome combination table and bracket lamp complete. These lamps are something new, and the maker wants them introduced. If you or any of your friends want a machine don't delay, but send to
Co-Operative Sewing Machine Co.
22 JAMES ST., SOUTH, HAMILTON, ONT.

CONBOY'S

CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order only from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAL.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd-hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for List.
A. T. LANE, Montreal.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Pl
bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuff, the best and cheapest, quality considered?

M. W. DUNHAM
Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,
HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE
Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which includes
75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES
Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE,
EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.
STOCK ON HAND
150
Imported Brood Mares
250 Imported Stallions
Old enough for service,
100 COLTS
Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by intelligent breeders that however well bred a horse may be said to be, if no pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authenticated, they should be valued only as grades. I will sell Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the oath of the French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 150 Page Catalogue sent free. Illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of Société Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884, purchased by M. W. Dunham and drawn from life by Rosbeur, the most famous of all animal painters.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating, properties of beef, and the principle which has the power to supply nourishment for brain, and bone, and muscle.

BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURERS OF
and Silver Plate,
San Francisco, London, (Eng.)
Wellington Streets, Hamilton, Ont. through a phased other n that they are compell-o the above act that our being so closeient guaran-ees are the TRADE
1847 Rogers Bros. XII.
MARK.

FOR THE FARMER.

The Poultry Yard.

The little chicks will soon "show up." Do not forget to keep a supply of grad and broken oyster shells within reach the fowls, as they are very important the production of eggs.

Warm skim milk is excellent for the hickens to drink these cold days, and ey will pay well for the cost of it by the crease in the supply of eggs.

It is an excellent idea to use sawdust r the inside of the hen-house, and espe-ally under the roosts, as it will absorb l the moisture which gathers there. ll the wet sawdust should be cleaned nt each week and dry sawdust put in s place, for as soon as it becomes thor-ughly wet it cannot absorb any more oisture, and, when in this way, is really nuisance, but if replaced with dry saw-ust each week it will simply be a very sy way to keep the house clean and ee from filth.

A strong, healthy constitution is what e fowls need. There is no breed that ill refuse to lay well if they are healthy nd vigorous and well-fed. It is the ill-rmed, weak fowls that do not pay for e food and care given them. If the wls have a hearty appetite, and are sup-lied with good egg-producing food, and ot too much of it, they cannot help but y a goodly number of eggs and pay well r the extra trouble of feed and care. f course the kind of breed has a great eal to do with their usefulness and is ery important, but is secondary to rong constitutional vigor, and chicks f any kind can never be profitable they are not well-formed, and have lenty of healthy exercise to give them rength and keep them vigorous and tive.

Fowls should always have a dust-bath rovided for them at all times of the ear, and especially in the winter when ey are confined to their house and can-ot get out and scratch for themselves. henever there is any danger of trouble om vermin, it would be well to put a ttle sulphur into their dust-box, and hen they roll in the dust the sulphur ill penetrate their feathers and serve to eep the fowls free from lice, which are ery troublesome at some seasons of the ear.

Fowls that have scaly legs should re-eive immediate attention, for the sooner is attended to the easier it is to cure. t is a quite common affliction at this me of the year and takes away from the eauty of the fowls. The scales are used by innumerable very small para-ites which gather together in the form thin scales. It can be easily cured at rst by the application of a mixture of lphur and lard, but if it is delayed the ales will increase in size and will soon ve a white, wartish appearance. They ill then have to be bathed several times ith warm soapsuds, or an oil of some nd, until they become soft. They can en be picked off quite easily, after hich the sulphur and lard should be ap-ied two or three times. This will cure aly legs, and keep the fowls free from is trouble for some time to come, as the lphur is very obnoxious to insects of all nds.

Reform in Cheese-making.

The dairymen of Central New York ve become convinced that it is neces-ry to put a stop to removing the cream om milk that is to be made into cheese. t the last meeting of the Rome Dairy-en's Board of Trade, being desirous of aintaining the quality and reputation New York State cheese, and being nvinced that the good reputation of this oduct is being undermined and imper-ed by the practice of partial skimming many factories within this State, as is partially skimmed cheese is shipped road and sold as "full cream" American eese; therefore, we would respectfully ge our Representatives in the Legisla-re at Albany "to amend" the act "to event deception in the sale of dairy oducts," passed by the Legislature of ew York State, April 24, 1883, by ad-ng a section or enabling and authoriz-g the New York State Dairy Commis-oner to devise, make, and issue one uni-rm stencil brand for New York State, aring a device, or motto, and the ords, "New York State full-cream eese," each brand bearing a number each separate factory, to be registered the Commissioner; these brands to used upon full-cream cheese only and on boxes containing them All per-ns found using such brands or imita-ons thereof on skim cheese to forfeit a nalty of $500, or such sum as the gislature in its wisdom may see fit to ach.

Farm Hints.

The breeding sow should now have a ange of food. All corn is not good. ed her some slops of bran, and give r roots, if possible; anyway, change r food so her bowels will not be consti-ted and she get feverish. When ese things are done there will be less ay sows to eat up their pigs. Put t, sulphur, and charcoal where the sow n get it all the time. Hogs will eat a eat deal of salt if they have the chance, d they will do better.

Horses and also mules will let their ngues hang out of their mouths, some-nes, because they have a habit of doing Quite often, however, they do so be-use they have a sharp tooth, or their eth have jagged edges, which hurt the ngue when they have a bit in their uths. The only remedy is to file off e sharp points and edges of the teeth they will not hurt their tongues.

Have the cattle sharp horns which need tting off? Just heat an old scythe thoroughly hot and it will take them off just as easy without the least jarring of their heads. So it is said.

Some cows hold up their milk when things do not exactly suit them. Treat such cows gently; divert their attention by a lick of food of some kind, or by patting and talking quietly and pleasantly to them. A cow that is properly treated likes to be milked by a person who knows how to milk. If a cow is irritated on account of her calf, or from fright, or any other cause that disturbs her comfort and ruffles her nerves, she may hold up her milk, but gentle and kindly treatment will soon overcome it, while if the milker loses temper and patience the matter is only made worse.

To Break a Horse from Rearing.

Some valuable animals have a disagreeable habit of rearing before starting when harnessed to a carriage. A very simple method of breaking a horse of this habit is to procure a piece of strong cord from one-eighth to one-fourth of an inch in diameter, and fifteen feet long. After the horse is harnessed to the carriage as usual, step to the off side of the animal and pass one end of the cord under the back strap around the largest part of the body, which will be about two-thirds of the distance back from the forward to the hind legs. Bring the end of the cord up about half way from the flank to the back bone, and tie it closely in a loop or bow-knot, making the loop from the long end of the cord, so that, by pulling, the knot may be untied. After securing it in this manner, and as close to the body as possible, take the long end of the cord in one hand, step into the carriage, and ask the subject to start. Whatever he may be disposed to do, he will be pretty sure not to annoy you by rearing, and, after he has started, or in case he should attempt to kick, by pulling upon the cord from the carriage the knot may be untied and the cord drawn into the wagon.

Stood by His Flag.

A dozen rough but brave soldiers were playing cards in the camp. "What on earth is that?" suddenly exclaimed the ringleader, stopping in the midst of the game to listen.

In a moment the whole squad were listening to a low, solemn voice which came from a tent occupied by several recruits, who had arrived in camp that day. The ringleader approached the tent on tip-toe.

"Boys, he's a prayin', or I'm a sinner!" he roared out. "Three cheers for the parson!" shouted another man of the group as the prayer ended.

"You watch things for three weeks! I'll show you how to take the religion out of him!" said the first speaker laughing. He was a large man, the ringleader in mischief.

The recruit was a slight, pale-faced young fellow of about eighteen years of age. During the next three weeks, he was the butt of the camp. Then several of the boys, conquered by the lad's gentle patience and uniform kindness to his persecutors, begged the others to stop annoying him.

"Oh, the little ranter is no better than the rest of us," answered the big ringleader. "He's only making believe pious. When we get under fire you'll see him run. These pious folks don't like the smell of gunpowder. I've no faith in their religion!"

In a few weeks the regiment broke camp, marched towards Richmond, entered the wilderness, and engaged in that terrible battle. The company to which the young recruit belonged had a desperate struggle. The brigade was driven back, and when the line was re-formed behind the breastworks they had built in the morning, he was missing.

When last seen, he was almost surrounded by enemies, but fighting desperately. At his side stood the brave fellow who had the poor lad a constant object of ridicule. Both were given up as lost.

Suddenly, the big man was seen tramping through the underbrush, bearing the dead body of the recruit. Reverently he laid the corpse down, saying, as he wiped the blood from his own face,—

"Boys, I couldn't leave him with the Rebs—he fought so. I thought he deserved a better burial."

During a lull in the battle the men dug a shallow grave and tenderly laid the remains therein. Then, as one was cutting the name and regiment upon a board the big man said, with a husky voice,—

"I guess you'd better put the words 'Christian Soldier' in somewhere! He deserves the title, and maybe it'll console him for our abuse."

There was not a dry eye among those rough men, as they stuck the rudely-carved board at the head of the grave, and, again and again, looked at the inscription.

"Well," said one, "he was a Christian soldier, if there ever was one! And," turning to the ringleader, "he didn't run, did he, when he smelt gunpowder?"

"Run!" answered the big man, his voice tender with emotion, "why, he didn't budge an inch! But what's that to standing for weeks our fire, like a man, and never sending a word back? He just stood by his flag and let us pepper him—he did!"

When the regiment marched away, that rude head-board remained to tell what a power lies in a Christian life.

The wife of an Orange county milkman was reported in the local newspapers as appearing at a recent ball in a handsome milk-white silk. The report does not say that it was a watered silk, but we presume it was.

LITTLE LAUGHLETS.

"Who is that across the street?" "Oh, that is a very close friend of mine." "Indeed!" "Yes. Never lends a cent."

"Is the age of chivalry past?" asks a contemporary. Oh, no. Only last week a young man in Harlem married a red-headed girl with a wart on her chin.

The Sultan of Morocco has 1,000 wives. Solomon only had 700. But, it has been remarked, Solomon was a wise man; he knew when he had enough.

Intelligence is a very good thing in a wife, but the taste of young men rather runs to beauty. They prefer a well formed girl to a merely well informed one.

A young man gazed at his mother-in-law's two trunks in the hall, and, sadly remarked: "She has brought her clothes to a visit—would that she had brought her visit to a close."

Webster's spelling book, it is said, still sells at the rate of a million copies a year. Though not so exciting as some dime novels, it nevertheless throws a potent spell over the reader.

An unlucky inventor has brought out a fishing rod that registers the precise number and weight of the fishes caught. Up to the time of our going to press he had not sold a single one.

Henry Ward Beecher thinks the reporters ought to raise a monument to him when he dies. That's where he's wrong. Like most public men, he ought to raise a monument to the reporters.

Revivalist (to young man loitering near the door)—"Are you seeking the Lord, young man?" Young man (nervously)—"N-no. I am seeking Miss Polly Smith, but I can wait until the meeting is over."

Dr. M. E. Wadsworth says the earth has an "heterogeneous viscid, elastic, liquid interior irregularly interlocked with and gradually passing into a lighter heterogeneous crust." That is a good definition of a custard pie.

A Nebraska editor commenced his New Year's editorial in this style: "With a pen of gold dipped in the oil of gladness," and then he jabbed his old stub pen into a raw potato and went out to moisten his clay with 10 cents' worth of corn-juice.

Robert L. Winthrop proposes that inauguration day shall be restored to April 30. April 1 would be a more appropriate time for the ceremonies. Some several thousand statesmen who expected cabinet positions get badly fooled on inauguration day.

"If man wants to own the earth, what does woman want?" inquired Mr. Grap of his better-half, after a little family matinee a few days ago. "Well, my dear," responded that lady in a gentle, smothering tone, "to own the man, I suppose."

Customer—I would take the coat, Mr. Isaacstein, but it smells musty. Mr. Isaacstein—Dot goat musty? Jacob, mein son, schmell dot goat. Jacob (smelling of the coat)—I no schmell de goat musty. Mr. Isaacstein (with a superior smile)—See dot nose? He no schmell dot goat musty.

"What makes you think you saw your husband's ghost last night?" "He came into my room and I called on him to stop, but he passed on as if he didn't hear me." "Perhaps it was really your husband." "No, I'm sure it wasn't. John, poor fellow, wouldn't have dared to go on without stopping."

Speaking of De Lesseps, they say his Panama scheme will inflict great injury on the United States." "But we can collect damages from him in the courts," said the daughter of a Washington statesman, confidently. "In what way?" asked President Cleveland. "Suez canal, you know," was the belle's response.

"Now, Johnnie," said the teacher, "If your father borrows $100 and promises to pay $10 a week, how much will he owe in seven weeks?" "One hundred dollars," said Johnnie. "I'm afraid you don't know your lesson very well," remarked the teacher. "I may not know my lesson very well," Johnnie frankly remarked, "but I know my father."

"Our people want only the freshest in the dramatic market," said the Dakota dramatic critic to the representative of an eastern tragedian. "I know this 'Merchant of Venice' you talk about. I saw it in Salt Lake as far back as '81. No such wormy chestnut will go down with a cultured community that had 'Young Mrs. Winthrop' and 'The Bandit King' three months after they were brought out at Drury Lane."

Jud Clark is the son of Judge Clark, who owns numerous coal-mines in Pennsylvania. Jud is a regular dude. Owing to the hard times some of the mines have been closed, and thousands of workmen have been thrown out of employment. As Jud was taking a walk not long since, several unemployed men said to him: "For God's sake, give us employment. Our wives and children are starving. All we ask is work!" "My dear people, I can't help you; I, myself, have nothing to do. We are in the same boat."

If a man doesn't keep his eyes pretty sharp about him his children will bring his ignorance of current events directly to the front. "I say, dad," said Hopeful Jinks at the tea-table, "Gen. Stewart's had another fight." "Is that so? I thought the Oklahoma boomers had cried 'quits.'" "This was an English general, pa," chimed in Angela. "Oh, the dynamiters have licked him again. Well, served him right." "You are awfully mixed, dad," rejoined the hopeful. "This was done in Egypt." "Why, of course. These Egyptians are at it again. I'd send down a few children of Israel and clean 'em out, as of old, if I were in Bismarck's place."

Sandringham House.

The general idea of the arrangements of the house appears to have been an expansion of the original residence, a photograph of which lies before me. There is something at once stately, gracious, and home-like in the salon, the roof of which is of carved oak, the sides covered with pictures and innumerable objects of interest. This room, opening off the vestibule directly on the left of the hall door, occupies a large part of the ground-floor on that side of the wing. The first room on the right of the hall, provided with writing-tables, easy-chairs, and surrounded with well filled book-shelves, the contents of which, controlled and marshalled by Holtzmann, comprise standard works in nearly all departments of literature, tempts a visitor by the air of repose which a luxurious library generally suggests. The Equerry's room, which is next to the library, is provided with book-shelves and writing-tables, etc., and is a popular resort at such times as the Equerry may have the will and the way to encourage conversation. The books which fill the cases are well selected, and the library especially is rich in county histories and in foreign classics, French and German. Beyond the Equerry's room is a charming apartment; a peculiar cachet is set on this room by the chairs, tables, blotting-books, and garniture, stamped in gold on blue or green leather with the Prince of Wales's plumes and the letters A. E., which formed part of the furniture of the Serapis when she was fitted out for the royal visit to India. Of that voyage there are many souvenirs in this second library and in parts of the house—the grand offerings of Indian princes and peoples; the spoils of the chase; magnificent tigers pleasantly life-like to look upon in their stuffed semblance of action; peltries and skins; horns of antelope, samber, etc.; drawings and sketches; caskets in gold and silver, in ivory; vessels in bidri and kotli work; arms of all kinds—these not included in the unrivalled collection of the products of Indian art manufacture presented to the Prince, which formed the most popular and most admired exhibit at the Paris International, and which has been so liberally lent at South Kensington and elsewhere at home. From the third room the visitor passes out by the hall to the garden porch and entrance. Along the corridor which leads to the staircase are the doors opening on the morning-room of the Prince and on the reception-rooms. The first of these is one of the most attractive of all the pretty rooms at Sandringham in its elegant "coziness" and abundance of interesting objects. The principal drawing-room is approached by an ante-chamber, communicating directly with the Prince's morning room, and the eye will be caught by a fine picture on the wall of the Czar with the Prince by his side in a sleigh drawn by three horses, which appear to be galloping out of the canvas. I can not, if indeed my readers wished me to do, describe the interior with the precision and detail of an inventory, so I shall content myself, and I hope them, with saying that the drawing room is stately and bright; a painted ceiling; panelled mirrors which reflect the light from the windows, whence there is a view over the park; flowers and shrubs; "sweetness and light;" a pretty piece of statuary by Madame Jerichau, the "Bathing Girls;" another group by the same sculptor—these are the chief features of the room, beyond which there is the dining-room. This is now hung with beautiful tapestry, a present from the King of Spain, made expressly for the prince, which replaces with vivid scenes of Spanish life, portraits of the Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, the Royal Princesses, the Prince in the uniform of the Tenth Hussars, and Landseer's "Mare and Foal," which formerly filled the panels. In this room the visitors at Sandringham, and those who are staying at the Cottage, breakfast, and here the Prince and Princess appear at lunch time with their children. There is a fine buffet, with many pieces of interesting and beautiful plate. At dinner the room presents a very bright and stately appearance. The scarlet and gold-lace of the royal liveries, the play of lights, the plants and bowers on the glittering table, lend the needful color to the scene. The brilliant-room, against the walls of which are cabinets filled with arms, some exceedingly rare and curious, of all countries and periods, in beautiful order, lies at the end of a passage, beyond the dining-room, and hither, when the Princess has left the drawing room and the ladies have retired for the night, the guests follow the Prince, unless the bowling-alley asserts superior attractions, and a game in which the Princess and many of her guests take much pleasure, and which excites pleasant rivalry between the contending "sides," carries them on toward the wee sma' hours. From the bowling-alley the serious little room which contains the Prince's batteries is gained, and their in their costly simplicity are arrayed in ranks the chefs-d'œuvre in rifle and smooth-bore, of Purdey, Grant, etc., and foreign interpolations of royal, imperial, or princely gifts.

The pictures, drawings, and sketches at Sandringham are mostly illustrative of the Prince's life; but there are portraits and many paintings, souvenirs of friends and of incidents in scenes dear to the Princess. On one side of the great salon a picture, dated 1863, represents the palace in which her Royal Highness was born, and a larger oil painting by Hansen, of the same date, of the royal palace at Copenhagen. Portraits of the King and Queen of Denmark, drawings by the Princess Louise, sketches by the artists who accompanied the Prince of Wales on his various expeditions, decorate the walls. "Sir Edwin Landseer and his Dog" attracts the eye, and another painting, of Dunrobin in 1866, by Sir Edwin recalls a visit paid to the Duke of Sutherland. Sketches of scenery by Mr. Brierly and L. R.; reminiscences of India tiger-hunting by Hoyer, Akin, Simpson, and S. Hall alternate with souvenirs such as the "Serapis at Sea," and one described as "The Commanding Officer of the First Battallion of the Grenadier Guards, August, 1861." The progress through India is commemorated by splendid trophies of arms, by many objects of art, goblets of iron inlaid with silver, and "kooftgari" steel inlaid with gold. M. Zichy, who visited Abergeldie in 1872 and 1873, had a true appreciation of the incidents of Highland life and sporting, and his drawings of torchlight dances, and adventures connected with deer stalking, executed with a free and firm hand, and full of light and color, decorate the walls. Trophies of the chase in India, tigers' tusks, skins, etc., abound, and the wide extent of the Prince of Wales's sporting excursions is indicated in drawings of shooting parties in the snows of Russia and in the jungles of Jeypore, Nepaul, as well as in the less exciting and probably more agreeable sport at the covert side and at hot corners. Among the many interesting memorials with which the interior abounds are a pair of bronze field guns, inscribed "Eugenie. Louis Napoleon," presented by the late Emperor to the Prince. There is also a "trophy of arms" collected on the field of Gravelotte, which was visited by the Prince incognito on his way to Germany, a little before the illness which kept the nation in suspense for so many weeks; the hoof of Eclipse, the famous racer; a casket presented by the clergy and tenants of Sandringham to the Prince on his return from India; a jasper vase given by the Emperor of Russia; and many relics, if so they may be called, and Egyptian and Hindoo antiquities, meet the eye in room after room.

Working Winter Butter.

Perhaps the following method may save many a tired farmer's wife hours of weary work. I have tried it and like the plan very much. I use a barrel churn, holding twenty-five gallons. My butter is churned at a temperature of 63° or 64° in winter, and only churned until it comes about the size of wheat-kernels, or even smaller. The butter-milk is thoroughly drained off; then the butter is washed in two waters. Then take it out and set it away, without salting, in this fine shape, until you get enough to fill whatever sized tub or jar you wish to fill. Then I put it all in the churn, and warm two or three pails of water to a temperature of 62°, and pour it over the butter, churning it around a few times, letting it stand until the butter is to an even temperature all through, which does not take long. When in the granulated state, drain the water all off; then add salt and sugar, twelve ounces of fine salt and a tablespoon of granulated sugar to every ten pounds of butter; put the cover on and turn until well mixed through and gathered. Let it stand an hour or two until the salt is well dissolved; then work just enough to get the brine out, as there will be no streaks to work out, and pack in tubs or jars for packing. I use a common potato-masher, well scalded and soaked. In making butter this way a jar or tub will be all alike from the bottom to top, and need not be overworked. I color my butter as long as they will keep good with the coreless carrot, as it makes a nice color and a good flavor.

In His Eye.

One of those eccentric accidents which sometimes occur is narrated by the Philadelphia Press: Twenty-six years ago Samuel G. Simpson, then employed in a jewelry factory, was cutting a piece of gold from a breastpin, when the piece flew upward, cutting a deep slit in his eye.

Although the accident was not painful, the sight of the injured organ was destroyed. The piece of gold was one-sixty-fourth of an inch thick and of an oval shape, its greatest diameter being about a quarter of an inch. It could not be found at the time of the accident.

A few weeks ago Mr. Simpson's eye began to give him intense pain, and became greatly swollen. For relief he applied to it a bread poultice, which was frequently renewed.

When he removed the poultice recently, he was astonished to find clinging to it the piece of gold which had cut his eye more than a quarter of a century ago.

No one had supposed that the missing gold had imbedded itself in his eye, and the discovery was as great a surprise to the patient as to his friends.

The sharp edge of the gold had cut its way downward, and came through the skin just below the lower eyelid.

A Canine Footpad.

Prince is a very sagacious Newfoundland dog. He belongs to Mr. G. Brown, who lives at Ocean and Danforth avenues, Jersey City. The other day the dog trotted into the house wagging his tail and dropped a pocketbook from his mouth at his master's feet. He frisked about and barked with delight. Mr. Brown picked up the wallet, thinking the dog had found it. In a few minutes an officer entered the house and demanded the wallet. The dog was a thief. He had snatched the pocketbook from the hand of a lady passing the house. She waited in front of the house until the officer arrived. Prince was not so happy then, as his master flogged him for his highway robbery

"I marry that little fellow!" exclaimed Miss Mitinice. "No! I would rather die than have him—that is, if I could get somebody else."

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Standard.

MARKDALE MARCH 26, 1885.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

The prospects for building the coming summer in Markdale are good, considering the financial depression.

The Methodist church will be a very fine structure, to be 42 feet long by 72 wide, built of solid brick with stone basement, seating capacity 600, and will cost about $7,000.

Mr. Wm. Douglass will build a fine brick residence almost opposite the Methodist church.

Haskett Bro's expect to build a large brick block adjoining their hardware premises.

John McKenna is preparing to erect a large addition to his shop for a carriage making establishment.

Mr. Irvine proposes removing the cooper shop now occupied by J. H. Hull, and put up a large building on that corner.

W. J. McFarland expects to improve and perhaps enlarge his mercantile premises.

Moffat Bro's will likely enlarge their foundry to at least double its present size.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES AND DEATHS.

"By cap. 36, Revised Statutes of Ontario, all Births, Marriages and Deaths which take place throughout the Province of Ontario are required to be registered with the Clerk of the Municipality in which the occurrence takes place.

Refusal or neglect to make these reports or any of them within the spacified time, will subject the persen or persons so neglacting or refusing, to pay a penalty of $20 and costs."

The specified time is, after the occurence, for births 30 days, marriages, 90 days and for deaths 10 days. Each Post Office is supplied with blanks for this purpose where they can be procured without cost, and are carried through the mail free of postage. The clerks of the surrounding municipalities, who are the registrars for their several townships with their address are, for Glenelg, J. S. Black, Pomona P. O.; Artemesia, W. J. Bellamy, Flesherton; Osprey, Wm. Milne, Maxwell; Holland, C. Price, Williamsford; Euphrasia, R. Dunlop, Griersville.

MARKDALE CHEESE FACTORY.

The result of the last year's operations of the above factory were on the whole satisfactory, and we are very much pleased to see a much grater interest taken in it the coming season. A number of new patrons have been added, and old ones are increasing their patronage, so that already the number of cows promised is double that of last year. This is indeed encouraging alike to manufacturer and patrons, as the great expense of the past season was the cost of hauling a comparative small quantity of milk from a given territory. This difficulty will in a great measure be overcome as the expense of getting the milk will not be increased while the quantity will be doubled thereby decreasing the cost of hauling fifty per cent.

The patrons are well aware of this, and are therefore very hopeful of the results of the coming summer.

We only wish their most sanguine expectations may be realized.

Advice to Advertisers.

Well written, truthful announcements properly displayed, bring safe returns.

The best medium is a newspaper that has a good list of intelligent and prompt-paying subscribers.

Advertisements will arrest the attention in proportion as they are fresh and seasonable.

Advertising is to business what food is to existance. It should be regular, adequate and varied.

An experienced man said recently: "There are but few lines of business in which success can be obtained without the aid of newspapers. There is nothing so effective in presenting the merits of an article as an attractive advertisement; it reaches many people whoes attention cannot be commanded in any other way, and who are finally influenced by the repeated announcements of the presistent advertiser."

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

"What is good for a cold?" is a question often asked, but seldom satisfactory answered. We can answer to the satisfaction of all, if they will follow our advise and try Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, a safe, pleasant and certain throat and lung healer. Sold by all Druggists.

Hints for Letter-Writing.

Letters should always be written in a neat and distinct chirography. The sentences should be constructed with such thoughtful care, that the meaning intended will be readily understood.

Gummed envelopes are now in almost universal use; nevertheless, a neat little seal of red wax for a gentleman, and of gold or other fancy colour for a lady, are elegant and appropriate, and give an appearance of refinement to a note.

Letters of introduction or recommendation should never be sealed.

In letters of business or ceremony, do not write on both sides of the leaf.

Letters of compliment should be written in the third person.

Avoid all erasures and blots, even though you should have to re-write.

Never write letters of frendship on a half sheet, and always write with ink.

Monograms should always be in black or white—never in colours.

In communicating bad news, take care not to do so abruptly.

In sending letters, don't enlarge much on your own misfortunes.

Make your letters cheerful and never ill-tempered.

All letters should be civil in tone, otherwise they injure the writer more than the receiver.

No gentleman will send an anonymous letter. Only cowards and knaves do this.

Your paper may be either ruled or plain, but the latter is the more elegant.

Letters in regard to one's own affairs should always contain a stamp for return postage. A still better plan is to enclose a stamped and addressed envelope.

Every letter should be dated carefully and distinctly, and should always bear the address of the writer, and the name signed in full. Should the writer be a married lady, she should invariably, except in the most familiar missives, prefix "Mrs." to her name.

Persons in mourning usually write letters on mourning stationery, but this should not be used in writing letters of congratulation.

Your letter-paper and envelopes should correspond in colour and quality. White should be preferred, and especially when addressing a lady. Ladies use no other.

Good black ink is always to be preferred. Coloured inks are in bad taste. Take care to affix the proper stamp. Don't depend on others to do this.

Never send money or other articles of value in an unregistered letter.

When dropping a letter or paper into a street letter box, see that it don't stick fast.

Never enclose any writing in printed matter.

When it is desired to have letters returned in case of non-delivery, the name and address of sender should be printed on upper left-hand corner, with request to the effect.

BANGS. on a girl gives her an unruly look, like a cow with a board over her face. You take the gentlest cow in the world and put a board over her face, and turn her out in the pasture and she gets the reputation of being unruly, and you would swear that she would jump fences and raise merry hades, and you wouldn't give so much for her by $10 only for beef. It is so with a girl. If she wears her hair high on the forehead, or brushed back, or even frizzes, and has a good look, you will go your bottom dollar on her, and feel that she is as good as gold, and that when she tells her young man that she loves him there is no discount on it, and no gigging back; but take the same girl with her front hair banged, and when she looks at you you feel just as though she would hook, and you can't trust her. She has a fence jumping look that makes a young man feel as though he would not be safe, unless she was tied hand and foot, so she could not get out of the pasture.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

Euphrasia, March 21st.

DEAR SIR.—Please insert the following:—Euphrasia folks, beware of the Indian who represents himself as a Doctor, but, is only a quack, who is endeavoring to court the girls, of Euphrasia. Beware of him for he has a wife and five children who live in a shanty, and in one end of the shanty there lives a negro. His family are destitute while he tries to appear well off. He is a worthless wretch, accustomed playing corporation fiddle for a living: beware.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

McGREGOR & PARK'S Carbolic Cerate is invaluable for Wounds, Sores, Salt Rheum, Cuts, Burns, Scalds and Festers, as a healing and purifying dressing. Do not be imposed on with other useless preparations, recommended to be as good. Use only McGregor & Park's Carbolic Cerate. Sold by Hill Bro's. 2

Gravenhurst, March 17th, 1885.

To the Editor of the Standard:

DEAR SIR,—As promised I embrace the first opportunity of noting for your valuable paper a few of the interesting features of the town of Gravenhurst, which is situated in Simcoe County, Muskoka District, where I have been working for the past two weeks. After leaving you at Cardwell Junction on the 3rd inst. I took the Hamilton & Northwestern to Allandale a suburb of Barrie. This section is a first class farming district and thickly settled with (to all appearence) well-to-do farmers. Barrie has a population of some 5,000 inhabitants and is situated as most of your readers know, on lake Simcoe, Then we took the Northern Railway for Gravenhurst, passing Orillia, and having lake Simcoe on my right for over 30 miles up to the narrows, the country between those two towns is mostly good for agricultural purposes altho' there is low swampy lands where the "Canadian Band" warbles their music to the great amusment (or shall we say annoyance) of the inhabitants, of a summers evening: About 6 miles from Orillia I came to Longford where are situated the lumber mills of Messrs. Thompson, (some of the largest in the district) at which many million feet of lumber are to be seen tastefully piled. A few miles further on I got a sight, the rocks of which the Muskoka farmers have such an aversion. There was nothing further to break the monotony but rock! Rock!! Rock!!! until I arrived at Gravenhurst, after a journey of 155 miles occupying 7 horses: certainly not a very expeditious rate of travelling. This town has a population of 2,000 On arrival I soon made my way to one of the Hotels, of which there are five; and, as it were to counteract their influence there are five places of worship, if I may include the Salvation Army Barracks as one. The latter having been here about seven weeks, and one of the chief amusements of the place is to watch the soldiers on their evening war path. Gravenhurst, the "Sawdust city of the North" is, so to speak, in the midst of waters, (that is where their is'nt rock). On the West is Muskoka Bay; on the North-east Gull Lake; on the South, Sparrow Lake, and on the North a chain of lakes unknown to fame. There are some 17 saw-mills giving employment to about 500 hands; the usual proportion of Stores; a carriage works, foundry &c. The town depends chiefly on the lumbering business, and after the lumber has been culled out, (which will probably not be many years hence) except the iron mining develops, of which there is a good supply, the place will sink back into oblivion. The Northern R. Co. are extending their line from this place up to the Nippissing, 112 miles North, the opening of which is expected to take place early in August, when no doubt there will be an influx of immigrants, as the land is said to be prolific in that direction. The winter has been, and is still, very severe here, it's no wonder, if the winters were like this, that on the memorable occasion two years since the whiskey froze up here; of course this needs no explanation to a Canadian. With best wishes for the success of your paper, I am, &c.,

J. HILL, JR.

The discovery of the instantaneous process of taking photographs has been quickly followed in the medical world by a perfect and instantaneous remedy for all acute ashes and pains, as Neuralgia, Toothache, Rheumatism, etc. This valuable remedy is called Fluid Lightning, and is sold at 25 cents a bottle by Hill Bro's. 2

THE POST OFFICE.

The following is a complete list of the Post Offices in the County of Grey, taken from the Postmaster-General's report for 1884, showing the revenue derived from the sale of stamps, and the several postmaster's salaries, allowances included:

NAME OF P. O.	REVENUE.	SALARY.
Aberdeen	$ 57 28	$ 28 00
Allan Park	161 80	72 00
Alsfeldt	79 00	28 00
Annan	336 74	127 00
Arnott	116 37	49 00
Ashley	49 40	26 00
Ayton	167 04	250 00
Badjeros	105 12	39 00
Banks	31 28	18 00
Bayview	60 70	32 00
Berkeley	101 06	43 00
Blantyre	73 68	26 00
Bognor	192 27	50 00
Brookhol m	72 41	41 00
Bunessan	57 37	30 00
Cape Rich	25 62	18 00
Cedarville	119 08	42 00
Chatsworth	665 30	162 00
Clarksburg	602 93	298 00
Clavering	191 54	24 50
Colenso	29 40	19 00
Corbetton	66 77	27 50
Coverly	18 02	10 00
Craigleith	75 26	22 00
Crawford	55 91	30 00
Cruickshank	28 18	12 00
Desboro	110 87	34 00
Dornock	72 53	34 50
Dromore	141 75	69 00
Duncan	28 28	10 00
Dundalk	1316 03	555 50
Durham	1780 50	740 00
East Linton	19 52	16 00
Edge Hill	36 75	27 50
Egremont	64 23	38 00
Epping	61 33	30 00
Eugenia	184 23	65 00
Fairmount	84 37	42 50
Feversham	165 13	58 00
Flesherton 5 quars	1396 75	638 50
Flesherton Station	152 50	67 50
Garryowen	25 95	10 00
Gibraltar	47 56	19 00
Glascott	27 36	12 00
Gleneden	47 67	20 50
Griersville	89 21	46 00
Hampden	60 56	34 50
Hanover	1119 35	470 00
Harkaway	18 11	10 00
Hepworth	308 35	54 00
Heathcote	238 54	107 50
Hoath Head	39 17	10 00
Holstein	327 62	109 00
Hopeville	112 83	67 50
Horning's Mills	366 35	106 00
Inistioge	40 73	24 00
Jackson	82 07	29 00
Jessopville	12 95	10 00
Johnson	66 61	21 50
Keady	99 74	64 50
Kemble	115 60	36 00
Kilsyth	236 99	80 00
Kimberley	97 15	42 00
Kingscote	14 13	10 00
Lady Bank	36 67	13 50
Lake Charles	35 31	10 00
Lamlash	41 43	24 00
Latona	68 58	52 00
Leith	93 11	38 00
Lily Oak	34 19	20 50
Louise	37 00	13 50
McIntyre	179 79	64 50
Markdale	1409 65	620 00
Marmion	34 27	20 00
Massie	99 61	35 50
Maxwell	284 02	120 00
Meaford	3461 74	1120 00
Melancthon	100 96	38 00
Merritt	7 69	10 00
Morley	16 21	10 00
Murdock	10 05	10 00
Nenagh	210 00	80 00
Neustadt	316 49	147 00
North Keppel	134 95	60 00
Orchard	119 00	68 00
Owen Sound	5991 75	1880 00
Oxenden	101 50	46 00
Oxmead	41 04	13 16
Peabody	42 51	19 00
Pomona	27 11	14 00
Presqu' Isle	124 06	48 00
Priceville	616 14	259 50
Ravenna	112 34	47 00
Redwing	33 16	16 00
Riverview	62 98	20 00
Rocklyn	97 70	34 00
Shelburne, 5 qrs	2034 63	682 50
Strathnairn	21 72	12 50
Sullivan	224 66	86 00
Thornbury	1178 24	450 00
Traverston	78 37	27 00
Vandeleur	64 03	24 00
Varney	86 02	30 00
Walter's Falls	145 46	50 00
Wareham	26 18	10 00
Williamsford Stat.	224 05	80 00
Wolseley	22 92	10 00
Woodford	268 06	91 50
Yeovil	81 48	31 50

Following is the revenue of the principal cities for one year ending 30th June, 1884:

Toronto	$223 779 95
Montreal	206 211 49
Hamilton	61 772 45
London	42 795 50
Ottawa	38 495 77
Quebec	36 786 27

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, not to exceed five cents.

MARRIAGES.

PROCTOR—WICKENS.—At the Manse, on Wednesday, 18th inst., by the Rev. A. Wilson, Mr. George Proctor to Miss Mary Amanda Wickens, both of Euphrasia.

HICKS—ABERCROMBIE.—By the Rev. Thomas Grandy, on the 24th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, George E. Hicks of Euphrasia, to Mary Jane Abercrombie, of the same place.

CULLIS—MCARTHUR.—By the Rev. Thomas Grandy, on the 24th inst., at the residence of the bride's mother, Edwin Cullis of Euphrasia, to Eliza A. McArthur of the same place.

DEATHS.

WILEY.—In Euphrasia, on the 25th inst., Sarah, beloved wife of Mr. R. H. Wiley, aged 23 years.

ROBINSON.—In Glenelg on the 20th inst., Mrs. Robinson, mother of Mrs. Thos. Townsend, aged 92 years.

GIBSON.—In Artemesia on the 24th inst., W. H. Gibson.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 73	to	$0 00
Spring Wheat	0 73	to	0 00
Barley	50	to	67
Peas	54	to	56
Oats	34	to	38
Butter	15	to	00
Eggs	20	to	00
Apples	50	to	75
Potatoes	18	to	20
Hay	0 00	to	12 00
Pork	5 00	to	5 00
Flour	3 75	to	4 25

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED,

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON.

NOTICE.

The undersigned begs to inform the public that he has his

SAW AND SHINGLE MILL

In full operation now, and is prepared to saw all kinds of Lumber and Shingle stuff, and give you your Lumber & Shingles home with you during the winter season.

Will saw on shares or for cash.

Cash for Good Logs.

Yours truly,

W. J. ROWE,

222-3m BARR HEAD MILLS.

MARKDALE

FURNITURE STORE.

STOCK COMPLETE

—IN—

HAIR CLOTH SUITS,

BEDSTEADS,

SPRING BEDS,

MATTRASSES.

Extension, Side, Center, Fall-leaf and Kitchen Tables, Sideboards, Dressing Cases, Lounges and Cradles, &c., &c.

If we have'nt what you want we can have it on short notice.

—ALSO—

Lumber, Sash, Doors, Door Frames, Newel Posts, Stairs, Balusters, Hand Railing, and all such at

GRANT & CO'S,

Markdale.

tices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, ty five cents.

MARRIAGES.

TON—WICKENS—At the Manse, on Wednesday, 18th inst., by the Rev. A. Wilson, George Proctor to Miss Mary Amanda Wickens, both of Euphrasia.

S—ABERCROMBIE—By the Rev. Thomas Sandy, on the 24th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, George E. Hicks of Euphrasia, to Mary Jane Abercrombie, of the same place.

ES—MCARTHUR—By the Rev. Thomas Sandy, on the 24th inst., at the residence of the bride's mother, Edwin Cullis of Euphrasia, to Eliga A. McArthur of the same place.

DEATHS.

Y—In Euphrasia, on the 25th inst., Sarah, beloved wife of Mr. E. H. Wiley, aged 23 years.

NSON—In Glenelg on the 20th inst., Mrs. Robinson, mother of Mrs. Thos. Townsend, aged 92 years.

ON—In Artemesia on the 24th inst., E. H. Gibson.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

l Wheat	$0 73	to	$0 00
ring Wheat	0 73	to	0 00
ley	50	to	07
s	54	to	00
s	34	to	00
ter	15	to	00
s	20	to	00
les	50	to	75
atoes	18	to	20
y	0 00	to	12 00
k	5 00	to	5 00
ur	3 75	to	4 25

OWEN SOUND

ARBLE WORKS

B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

UMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED,

Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

Largest stock in the Dominion to from. Personally selected at the quar in Vermont. Will be sold at prices defy competition.

TISFACTION GUARANTEED.

B.—Beware of Monuments and Heads of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered to, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide perfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON.

NOTICE,

undersigned begs to inform the public that he has his

W AND SHINGLE MILL

all operation now, and is prepared saw all kinds of Lumber and Shingle stuff, and give you your Lumber & Shingles home with you during the winter season.

saw on shares or for cash.

ash for Good Logs.

Yours truly,

W. J. ROWE,

3m BARR HEAD MILLS.

MARKDALE

RNITURE STORE.

TOCK COMPLETE

—IN—

CLOTH SUITS,

BEDSTEADS,

SPRING BEDS,

MATTRASSES.

nsion, Side, Center, Fall-leaf and chen Tables, Sideboards, Dressing Cases, Lounges and Cradles, &c., &c.

have'nt what you want we can have it on short notice.

—ALSO—

er, Sash, Doors, Door Frames, ewel Posts, Stairs, Balusters, Hand Railing, and all such at

RANT & CO'S,

Markdale.

Priceville.

From our own correspondent.

The usual cattle fair was held in s place on the 16th inst., but was t a success, owing to the heavy rm of the previous day, very few tle were brought out. For the me reason, very few buyers were esent.

The all absorbing topic of the day the alledged attempt to hire a party burn the Commercial Hotel buildgs. About a year ago a fire was covered in the stables of the Com rcial, but was extinguished without doing much damage, and was supsed to be the work of an incendiary. he perpetrator of the deed was not scovered. About two weeks ago a an of the name of Walker, from the ighborhood of Mt. Forest, came to e village and informed mine host of e Com. that Joseph Dennis of the rown Hotel, had, on the 7th inst., ied to bargain with him to fire the ommercial, relating circumstances, me and place; stating Dennis had fered him (Walker) $100.00 for so oing. He also stated Dennis informd him that he had employed one Mcaster to fire them a year ago, but hat he had not made a job of it. rom what cause I know not, there as not prompt action taken to inestigate the matter. Walker's statements leaking out, Dennis had him rrested for defamation of character nd had him brought before Justices lack and Ghent, who committed him r trial at the approaching assizes at wen Sound. The court-room was rowded by residents of the village nd farmers of the surrounding ountry. The general opinion exressed, is that Walker's story is too ell connected to be a fabrication. he affair should be probed to the ottom and the guilty parties brought o justice.

A VALUABLE PATENT.

The most valuable discovery patent d in modern times is that of the best lood purifier and liver and kidney re ulator known. We refer to Burdock lood Bitters, which is making so ary wonderful cures and bringing he blessed boon of health to so many eople.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

Like the spring birds returning with eir new and beautiful plumes, with e returning spring are our merchants' ring Milliners again returning to village. We noticed some had rived a few days ago and since, we ce Miss Maud Richardson has n returned from the land of thers and flowers and we suppose s with her plumes for every body.

r. Stewart Bates, who has been ending the winter with friends in s vicinity, leaves this week for rt Arthur to prepare for navigation ason. Mr. Bates is purser on one the boats on our northern lakes.

Rev. J. E. Bowes of Toronto, New Church" missionary, spent a few ys in our village last week and on day evening gave a lecture in the wn Hall; Subject, "What is it to e? What is man's state after death? here is the spiritual world the home the departed?" 1st the speaker id death is simply the transition om one state of beeing to another ate of beeing the closing of the senses the physical beeing and opening of iritual senses, simply the withdrawel the spirit from its tenement the ysical frame. 2nd, the spirit after ath, the lectures claimed, was in e form of a man that we could not nceive of any entity without form at the physical material frame was e covering of the spirit form as a ve covers the hand that the spirit the real man. 3rd, that the abode departed spirits was not far distant space but as near us as to almost uch us, but that departed spirits uld no more see our physical aterial form than we with bodily es could see them; yet, they were ound us and near us altho' on what termed another plan of beeing at not infrequently as life is closing departing are permitted to see ir friends who have passed into the rit world before them, &c. The ture closed without bringing anying before his audience either as w or original as they had been led expect. It was neither deep nor equent. However, as he neither arged entrance fee nor took up llection we can only thank him for efforts to enlighten our darkness. Bowes gave the Swedenburg ed with some comments, after the ture sold a number of books, we ve not yet heard of any converts the faith.

WHAT WE MAY EXPECT.

Spring,
Summer,
Autumn,
And Winter,
Thaw in April,
Causing serious freshets,
Carring away numerous bridges,
So look to your cellars and save the contents.

Business to revive when spring opens.

An advance in farm produce all round.

The Assessor,
If he has not yet called;
And the majority to plead poverty.
And l—e considerable.

But the Assessment to raise all the same.

A full court at Flesherton next court day.

The skating rink to close,
And a roller rink opened e're long.

Building operations brisk in Markdale the coming summer.

Hay scearce and prices high.

Our subscription list continue to increase.

United States New Postal Law.

To take effect on and after July 1, 1885.

1—Sealed letter to go anywhere in the United States for 2 cents on each full ounce or fraction of an ounce, instead of one half an ounce. Any letter not over one full ounce for 2 cents; over 1 ounce and up to 2 ounces, 4 cents, and so on. The full ounce weight will apply to drop letters delivered for one cent where the carrier system is not in operation.

2—Registered newspapers, sent by publishers or by news-dealers, one cent per pound, to include regular and specimen copies.—Other papers sent by any one, one cent for each 4 ounces or fraction of 4 ounces.

3—Articles in newspapers may be marked with pen or pencil to call attention to them, but no words or figures can be used. This is not now allowed to publishers sending papers by pound rates.

4—A special stamp (costing 10 cents) put upon a letter going to any place having 4,000 population, according to the U. S. Census, and to other places that may be hereafter specially designated by the Department, will be immediately delivered by a special messenger, and a receipt taken for it by the messenger; provided the recipient lives within two miles of the Post office, or its sub stations in large cities. Letters arriving after midnight not thus delivered.

Another Illicit Still Seized.

Last Wednesday Inland Revenue officer, R. A. Hartley, received information to the effect that an illicit still was in operation in the Township of Tossorontio, a few miles from Lisle on the N. & N. Ry. On Tursday he proceeded with Constables Greer and H. Neelands to ferret out the matter. They had little or no trouble as Constable Greer was well acquainted with the locality. Everything was found as represented, the still in operation and the operator, Chas. R. Cherry, in the act of making ready for manufacture. They arrested Cherry, who it appears was formerly a hotel-keeper in the township of Nottawasaga and had been refused a license by the commissioners last year. The officers seized the still, worm and appurtenances and destroyed them. The prisoner was brought to Barrie the same night and placed in gaol. The following day he appeared before Mayor Sewrey and Mr. John Laird, J. P. He acknowledged the charge and said he had been led into it by others. He was fined $100 and thirty days in gaol.

This is the second still seized by these officers and the conviction of the owner secured inside of a fortnight and they are keeping a sharpe look out for similar stills said to be in operation in the county.—Barrie Gazette.

Rev. J. G. Fallis, Dutton, certifies; "For some years my wife has been troubled with Dyspepsia, and has tried one thing after another recommended but with little or no effect till advise to give McGregor's Speedy Cure a trial. Since taking the first bottle I have noticed a decided improvement, and can with confidence recommend it to be one of, if not the best medicine extant for Dyspepsia. This invaluable medicine for Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Kidney Complaint, is purely vegetable. Sold at Hill Bro's. Trial bottles given free. 6

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Durham

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Hanover—Monday before Durham.

Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

A THIEF got badly sold in Toronto recently. He was attracted by the display of wealth in the window of a broker's office, a bowl filled with gold coin being particularly coveted by him. He stayed around till an opportunity when few were passing, when he broke a pane of the window, grabbed the bowl and made off. He had not ran many steps, however, till he discovered that the bowl was of rubber, with the top gilded in imitation of coins. It is needless to say he immediately dropped it; and now has to exercise his ingenuity to keep out of the clutches of the police, having made himself a felon for the possession of a sham.

A DECIDED HIT.

Hagyard's Yellow Oil touches the right spot every time when applied for rheumatism, neuralgia, pain, soreness or lameness, and internally for colds, sore throat, etc., it is equally infallible.

ACCIDENT.—On Sunday afternoon as the C. P. R. snow plough was clearing the track after the storm of the morning, when between Williamsford and Berkeley, it struck a man who was walking on the track. His right arm was broken in two places, and his shoulder severley crushed. He was a tinsmith from Fort Wayne, Indiana, and was tramping from Markdale to Owen Sound, intending to work at R. P. Butchart's. It was a narrow escape, for had he not been seen by the conductor, who happened just then to look out, he would have been buried im the snow, and would probably have died before anything was known of the accident. He was brought here and placed in the gaol, where his injuries was attended to.—O. S. Times.

A PLANT OF RARE VIRTUES.

Is the common and well-known Burdock. It is one of the best blood purifiers and kidney regulators in the vegetable world, and the compound known as Burdock Blood Bitters possesses wonderful power in diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys and stomach.

Windows should always be so constructed that they may be opened at both top and bottom, and where a sleeping room is small, a few inches of space at top and bottom to let foul air out and admit fresh, will never do any harm unless the occupant of the room is very extremely delicate. Some imagine that night air is deadly. Let me ask whether it is more deadly to breathe pure night air than impure night air? and whether it is not night air that a person breaths at night, whether the window is open or not? the only difference being that when night air comes in fresh from the outside it is comparatively pure, whereas when the window is tightely closed the air inside from being breathed over and over again is more or less poisonous.

A HEARTY RECOMMENDATION.

Jacob A. Empey, of Cannamore, states that he has taken Burdock Blood Bitters with great benefit in a lingering complaint, and adds that he would gladly recommend it to all.

RESCUED.—On Tuesday night last while Rev. T. Grandy drove along the 9th line Euphrasia, on his way home he discovered a man in the snow dead drunk, but apparently quite comfortable. Mr. G. secured assistance and removed him to a neighbor's house where he was cared for. Had he not been picked up he would certainly have been frozen to death before morning.

The boss ov the Confederate see he is agwin too set tips his self as he nose how. We hev cum too the conclushon to doo likwise.

What Variety of Potatoes to Plant.

If you want potatoes as early as possible, select the best early potato you can find. The genuine Early Rose is good enough and early enough. The Beauty of Hebron is equally good, and there are a dozen other varieties any one of which, if you happen to have it, will ripen about as early, and give satisfaction. If any one tell you he has a potato that will ripen two weeks earlier than the Rose or the Beauty of Hebron, and yield as much again per acre, tell him that it is a most valuable variety, and that he had better plant all he has got, and not sell a tuber to anyone else for seed. For early potatoes, plant in good, rich, mellow soil as soon as the frost is out of the ground. You can hardly plant too early. Until the plants appear, severe frost will not hurt them. When the plants are up, a frost will sometimes destroy the crop, or at any rate, seriously retard or injure it. A piece of paper, or a light covering of soil will save the plant. For winter potatoes, select a variety that possesses at least four points, viz: quality, vigorous growth of leaves to resist the potato bugs, a good keeper, and productiveness.

When the potatoe bugs first appeared, everybody planted early varieties of potatoes, in hopes of getting ahead of the bugs. Now that he know how to keep the bugs in check, we can plant later kinds. As a rule, the early varieties cannot yield as well as the later sorts, which have a longer season to grow in; or if they do in exceptional cases, it is probably owing to unusual richness of land. On ordinary land, other things being equal, a late variety will yield better, and keep better (the next spring), than the early varieties. A late variety of potato should be planted as early as the soil can be got into good condition. If you do not wish to plant early—or perhaps we had better say, if you are behind with your work, and cannot plant as early as you wish, plant an early variety. The later you plant, the earlier should be the variety planted. The same principal, or rule as to planting, applies to cabbages, cauliflowers, tomatoes, cucumbers, melons, turnips, corn, beans, peas, etc. The earlier the variety, that is, the quicker it matures, the later can it be sown or planted.—American Agriculturist for April.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Resturant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

NOTICE.—All paties indebted to the late firm of Sargent & Burnside are hereby notified to call and settle and save costs.

I had for years been a miserable sufferer from Dyspepsia, and tried all known remedies and the best medical skill of my acquaintance, but still grew worse, until unable to eat any thing without great suffering, or do any kind of work. I began to think there was no hope for me, and that I must surely die; when, like a drowning man catching at a straw, I determined to give McGregor's Speedy Cure a trial, I at once began to Improve so rapidly that in two months I was as well as I had ever been in my life.—WM. EVERS LEAMINGTON. Sold by Hill Bro's. Free trial bottles 6

M. W. DUNHAM

Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,

HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE

Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which Includes

75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES

Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE.

EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.

STOCK ON HAND:

150 Imported Brood Mares,

250 Imported Stallions, Old enough for service,

100 COLTS, Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that however well-bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Societe Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884, purchased by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

Fluid Lightning is simply a marvellous Rheumatic Remedy. I was for two months a cripple, unable to get out of the house from Sciatica. One bottle gave me instant relief, and placed me on my feet again. I have driven fourteen miles to-day (something I could not possibly have done were it not for Fluid Lightning) for the express purpose of procuring another bottle. So says Wm. Dixon, Gananoque. Only 25 cents per bottle at Hill Bro's. 6

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY.

Now goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS,

CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES,

PURSES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James G. Russell,

Watchmaker, Jeweller,

217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the STANDARD office, Mill Street. Has a comfortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,

232-39* Markdale P. O.

ESTRAY SHEEP.

CAME to the premises of the subscriber about the 11th Oct. last, a ewe and lamb. Having been unable up to the present to find an owner I take this way of finding one. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expences and take them away

MRS. WYVILL,

135-37* Markdale, P. O.

BAKERY FOR SALE.

BUSINESS AND PREMISES for sale Cheap, being 1-fifth acre on Mill Street, opposite STANDARD office, with large roughcast two story house and bake oven, good stable and never-failing well of spring water. This is an excellent opening for a pushing man. Terms and further particulars can be had by applying on the premises.

MRS. MONTGOMERY,

234-36 Markdale P. O.

Farm for Sale.

160 acres, being lots 42 and 43 second range West of Toronto and Sydenham road, Holland, about 100 acres cleared and in good state of cultivation, ballance well timbered with Maple, Beech and Hemlock, and about 10 acres cedar swamp. Good roughcast house 22x33 with stone cellar, frame barn 40x60 and good out houses, all with stone foundations. Good young orchard bearing. The farm is well watered, two good wells, one at the house, a fine spring creek croses the farm near the rear. Only two miles from the thriving village of Williamsford, a station on the T. G. & B. branch of the C. P. R.

This is a rare chance, and terms will be made very easy. For futher particulars apply on the premises to

FRANCIS McCANN,

230-44 Williamsford P. O.

Farm to Sell or Rent.

North ½ 16 con. 11, Holland, 100 acres, 70 acres cleared. 4½ miles from Williamsford Station and 3 from Berkeley, only 60 rods from School and post office. On the premises there are a good log house with frame kitchen and a well near the house, and log barn. Will be sold on easy terms, small payment down, and good time given for the balance, or will be rented for five years, and improvement taken for part rent.

Apply to JAMES BRUCE,

136-39 pd. Lily Oak P. O. Ont.

FARM FOR SALE.

5 MILES from Markdale, station, on the C. P. R., Lot 9, Con. 11, Glenelg, containing 100 acres, 60 cleared, balance good timber; well watered; stone house and frame barns; soil clay loam; well fenced and in a good state of cultivation. Apply on the premises to

GEO. STODDART,

237-39* Traverston P. O.

FROST AND APPLES.

Some Facts About Frozen Apples that are Contrary to the General Belief.

"If your garret or loft is only cold enough there isn't any reason in the world why you shouldn't treat your friends with plump, full-flavored Rhode Island greenings, Baldwins, or any other choice apples, just as well next June as you did last Christmas," said a commission merchant. "I'll have last year's Baldwin's, and I don't know but last year's greenings, as sound as a knot, in my house next summer, in the same dish with this year's harvest apples; yet nine out of ten people would have thought these same apples were ruined two months ago, and would have treated them accordingly. Why? Simply because they were frozen."

"Doesn't the freezing of apples spoil them, then?" asked the reporter.

"The general opinion is," replied the merchant, "that after an apple freezes its value is gone, but the fact is that just the contrary is the truth. Let a barrel of apples freeze in the fall, and keep them frozen, or, rather, do not disturb them and in the spring they will be in the very condition they were when taken from the tree. Baldwins, and, in fact, all favorite eating-apples, do not have their full flavor of mellowness when first packed in the fall. They ripen in the barrel, and are at their best in January. After that they begin to decay, and when March comes they are few and far between, those that are left being the result of especial good care and attention.

"If they are frozen in the fall, however, the ripening process is checked. The vitality of the apple is simply suspended, and it only needs proper treatment to restore it to its natural action. The trouble has always been that when a barrel of apples was found to be frozen it was rolled off at once to a warm place and subjected to a rapid thawing. Some take the apples out of the barrel and plunge them in cold water to draw the frost out. The result is a flabby, flavorless fruit, really not worth the room it occupies, and subject to speedy decay—all because of popular ignorance. A frozen apple is one of the most sensitive things in the world. Touch your finger upon it and when the frost is thawed from the apple the spot touched will be a mark of decay which spreads rapidly over the fruit.

"Therefore, if you ever find that your barrel of Baldwins is frozen heat it gently. If the apples are thoroughly frozen the barrel will not be full by nearly a peck, so much has the fruit contracted with the frost."

The Prince of Wales as a Speech-Maker.

There are very few men in England who can make as good a speech as the Prince of Wales. His voice is singularly far-reaching, clear, pleasant, and his delivery is simple and dignified. But it must not be supposed that the ease and fluency which now characterize his public discourses were attained without trouble, or that the Prince is one of the "mob of gentlemen who 'speak' at ease," and have very little to say worth listening to. At first, when he had to address an audience—and it fell to his lot to begin speech-making whilst he was very young indeed—he spoke with some hesitation, and he gave his audience the idea of one who would be very glad when he could sit down; but by persistent practice, stimulated by the certainty that he must look forward to constant calls upon him, and animated by a high sense of duty, the Prince overcame the difficulties which beset most young orators, aggravated in his case by the consciousness that every word he uttered would be eagerly weighed and recorded. He has acquired a command of language and a felicity of expression which commend his matter to the most critical, whilst it is at the same time judicious in substance and much to the point. No one can make a better case for a charitable institution than the Prince, and his appeals to the pockets of his hearers when he is presiding at a dinner to promote the work of some beneficent association, or to further some useful and meritorious enterprise, are so successful that it is considered the fortune of an evening, from a financial point of view, is secured when the Prince of Wales has consented to take the chair. On occasions of national importance and interest, such as the opening of public institutions, the Prince's speeches, carefully prepared and excellently pronounced, are models of what such work should be, setting forth the objects in view, the history of the movement, and the claims it has to support or approval, in well-chosen and effective words. The prince has had practice enough certainly, for since his marriage he has been associated with every movement in the kingdom, and has been called upon to open exhibitions, bridges and buildings, parks and museums, "inaugurate" statues, lay foundation-stones, preside at commissions and banquets year after year, and has answered to the call with unflagging spirit, cheerfulness, and effect.—WILLIAM HOWARD RUSSELL, in Harper's Magazine for April.

An ordinary woman's waist is thirty inches around. An ordinary man's arm is about thirty inches long. How admirable are thy works, O, nature!

Two Highlanders were seen on an ocean steamer, one of whom carried and used ostentatiously a large red handkerchief. His friend, in the course of the voyage produced an orange and commenced to suck it. He of the handkerchief looked curiously at it for a few moments, and then exclaimed: "Here, Sandy, mon, gie us a suck o' your orange, and I'll gie ye a blow o' my napkin."

1 2 3 4 5 6

Dressy Lingerie.

No. 1.—"Plat val" lace net and edging to match form this lovely Moliere plastron with plain collar. It is shirred quite narrow at the waist line, and the border lace falls below. Price, $4.50.

No. 2.—A handsome jabot made of flat Valenciennes lace, arranged in a most effective and graceful manner. It is drawn in at the waist line the gathers being concealed by the ciel-blue chenille pendants, and a similar ornamentation is placed at the throat, for which however, any wished-for shade, either in chenille or ribbon can be procured. Price, $3.75.

No. 3.—A dressy vest of flat Valenciennes lace net bordered with narrow lace to match. It is gathered in at the top and the waist line and secured at both places by bows of cerise satin and gros-grain ribbon with flowing ends. If preferred, valet ribbon in any becoming shade may be substituted. Price, $3 85

No. 4.—This lovely jabot is made of point d'esprit lace, edged with Mechlin lace in a delicate pattern. Dainty bows of rose-colored Ottoman ribbon are arranged at the neck and waist line. Price, with bows of any color, $3 50.

No. 5.—This dainty bow would be a pleasing addition to any toilet. It is composed of loops and ends of dark Gordon blue velvet ribbon with satin back, though velvet or ribbon of any desired shade can be substituted for blue. Price 75 cents.

No. 6.—A simple yet very attractive arrangement of light blue silk, mull and Pompadour lace is shown in the illustration. The mull is laid in plaits at the neck and a full border of Pompadour lace extends down one side and terminates a little below the waist line. Pretty bows of light blue Ottoman ribbon are placed at the back and waist with charming effect. Price, with bows of any color, $3 50.

Drunkards' Excuses.

A drunkard is always ready to excuse his transgression, when charged with it by one whose position makes it expedient that he should be conciliated. Sometimes, as in the following specimens, these excuses are amusing: An Irishman not long since was summoned before a bench of county magistrates for being drunk and disorderly.

"Do you know what brought you here?" was the question put to him.

"Faix, yer Honor, two policemen," replied the prisoner.

"Had not drink something to do with bringing you here?" said the magistrate, frowning.

"Sorrah, ly," answered Paddy, unabashed; "they were both drunk."

"Hillos, James, tipsy as usual! What in the world has set you on a spree now?"

"Ah, ye mauna be harsh, governor; did ye no hear my grand whistling canary was déid?"

"Stupid fellow! leaving your work and getting drunk for the death of a bird? Don't you know a man should look upon such incidents as trifles?"

"So I do, governor, so I do, man; but if ye wanted a spree yersel, ye wad be glad of ony handle to turn the crane wi'."

Grant's Consideration for a Vanquished Enemy.

One of the very marked features of Gen. Grant's life in the field was that no one ever came to his quarters on legitimate business or was brought there a prisoner who was not kindly and considerately treated. He was punctilious in having all persons who came properly treated and cared for. He never gave offense himself and would not tolerate it in others. No officer in the army ever lived more plainly than Gen. Grant, and none was more willing to divide what he had. After a successful battle he never exhibited the slightest boastful feeling. To have seen him and heard him talk one would suppose he had had nothing to do with the battle if it were not for the orders he was dictating for the future movements of the army or for the burial of the dead or for the caring for the sick and wounded.

"My dear," said Mrs. Smith at the breakfast table, "why is this Mahdi called 'El'?" "Oh," replied Mr. Smith, as he took three more buckwheats, "that's a mere abbreviation, you know—the English habit of dropping the h's."

Early Tomatoes.

Probably some of our readers, who are without hotbeds, would like to know how they can raise a few hundred tomato plants in time for early fruit. Early in March take any convenient small box about six inches deep, and fill it with good, mellow garden soil, moderately moist, and set it on the stove until thoroughly warmed. Sow seeds in rows an inch apart, and cover over a quarter of an inch deep; then spread a wet newspaper closely over the box and set it near the stove, where it will keep moderately warm.

When the plants appear set them in a warm, light place. When two inches high transplant them into other boxes, setting them two inches apart each way. When four or five inches high some of the plants can be put into five-inch pots, one in each, and set in the kitchen window, where they will grow and thrive in proportion to the care given them. It is better to transplant the larger portion, if not all the plants, to a pit made on the south-east side of a hill or building. The pit should be four by eight feet, or larger, in the same proportions. Drive a stout post in each corner and one on each side midway between the ends. On these posts nail boards two feet high in front and two and a half feet at the back and board up the ends. Put in to the depth of twelve inches fresh horse manure mixed with litter, pressing it down closely and covering it with six inches of good soil. Make covers for the pit by stretching and nailing brown muslin on two or three light frames of the necessary length and breadth to fit the pit.

Got What He Deserved.

Carrie Bauer, a pretty factory girl, of College Point, Ill., who has recently been receiving a number of amorous letters from an unknown admirer, appointed a meeting on Saturday night with the writer in a secluded spot, whither she went accompanied by her brother-in-law, and met a man who proved to be Herman Hornberger, a prominent citizen. Miss Bauer's brother-in-law and a constable, gave Hornberger a severe drubbing, and a score of the lady's women friends thrashed him with brooms. Hornberger is a married man, his wife being the daughter of a wealthy retired merchant.

Waltham, Me., has no minister, doctor nor blacksmith. The skating rink gets along without the minister, but it misses the doctor and blacksmith.

A Picture of Grant.

There is in existence a photograph of Gen. Grant which is of pathetic interest at this present moment. It was taken during the last winter of the war, while the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac were at City Point. The photograph may have been instantaneous, for there is no appearance of posing for it. Grant appears in the door of his tent with one arm raised grasping the tent pole. He is in the simplest field uniform, the coat is unbuttoned, and he wears the soft hat with the twisted cord of the service. The face is thin and heavy with care, and the whole figure denotes self-forgetfulness, if not dejection. The utter absence of parade, the entire simplicity of the attitude, the rudeness of the surroundings, would advise no spectator that this was the iron commander of great armies, the man upon whom the hopes of the nation at that time centered. Upon his skill, coolness, tenacity, unshakable faith, millions reposed implicit trust. It was weary waiting; wealth was wasted in streams, debt was accumulating, foreign powers were threatening, treason was brewing, precious life was poured out like water, and the land was full of mourning. This general, silent, inflexible, stands there at his tent door, apparently unconscious of observation, not so much looking abroad as communing with himself, bearing in every line of face and figure the impress of the heaviest responsibility, and of vicarious suffering. No note of complaint, no sign of relenting, no consciousness of the show of power, but just at that moment a patient endurance in his own wasted person for the woes of an anxious nation. Upon him at that instant, rested greater responsibility than upon any other living man; upon him centered hopes, entreaties, prayers, curses, bitter criticism, brutal disparagement. He is in the attitude of bearing it all, with the capacity of suffering and of carrying the burdens of others without complaint, which is the mark of greatness. Perhaps if he had failed, perhaps if he had lost his cause and disappointed the hopes set upon him, this picture might to-day have been more utterly pathetic than it is, but remembering what the man had endured and was still to suffer before the final triumph of the people through him, this simple figure is not wanting in any of the heroic elements that touch the hearts of men.

Dr. Mary Walker now declares she will never marry. Young men! now you can come out of the woods.

HERE AND THERE.

California Oranges—New Cure for Rheumatism—The War Correspondent, &c., &c.

There is a constant stream of invalids to the Arkansas Hot Springs, and, while many get no relief and die, it is asserted that during the past ten years upwards of 25,000 people have been cured of disease there after having been given up by the doctors.

Orange raising in California has not been successful this year, prices having fallen as low as 35 cents a box in some instances. The fruit is not so large as usual, but excellent in flavor, and, though now ripe, will be better if left on the trees till May. The lemons are large and fine.

A citizen of Americus, Ga., claims to have carried an open-face watch constantly for twenty years without having broken the crystal, although several times it was subjected to rough use. The watch was inherited from his father, and the crystal was placed on it forty years ago.

A Michigan man claims to have been miraculously cured of a rheumatism which had made him helpless for many months. His hired man was carrying a hive of bees through his room and dropped it. The patient is now an active member of society and says he is "thankful to an inscrutable Providence."

At the East Kent Chamber of Agriculture some revelations were lately made which evoked the bitterest reflections on the English railway companies. It was shown that a ton of hops sent from Faversham to London costs 33s. for carriage; from Flushing, Holland, only 6s. Potatoes are delivered in London from Cherbourg, France, at 30s per ton; from Penzance the charge is 45s. A ton of Cheshire cheese from Chester costs only 6d., but from America a ton of cheese is brought for 25s.

The special correspondent resembles the poet in this, that he is born, not made. Mr. Archibald Forbes commenced life in an attorney's office. The late Cameron was originally in a bank, and Mr. H. S Pearse, whose name the papers here persist in calling Pearce, proposes at one time to do great things as an architect. Fate had fitted each for different things. Pearse is a man well known in the hunting field, and those who read his descriptions of great runs were not surprised at the nervous and graphic power of his account of the battle of Abu Klea in the London Daily News. He is a worthy successor of Forbes.

M. Berlier, an engineer, proposes a system of pneumatic transmission between Paris and London, involving the employment of two tubes—one for sending and the other for receiving telegrams, letters and postal parcels weighing up to 10 pounds. The time taken in transmission would be but one hour, notwithstanding stoppages at any stations which might be established on the way. M. Berlier points out that transmission to Lyons and Marseilles could be effected still more easily than to London, there being no sea to cross. Letters and parcels sent from Paris to Marseilles would, it is said, reach that place in two hours.

The cost of the railway from Suakim to Berber, with equipment, will be $35,000 a mile, and probably more. The distance is 250 miles. This charge will fall either on the Egyptian bondholders or the British taxpayers, but the latter must pay for it in the first instance, and to get the money from the bondholders, backed as they are by all the powers of Europe, will be like getting butter out of a cat's mouth. And when made, whose property will it be, England's or Egypt's? Since it is made on Egyptian soil without authority from the Egyptian Government, it is legally Egypt's. The cost of maintenance will be nearly $500,000 a year.

One of the many arguments brought forward in favor of the admission of French women to the franchise, one of the strangest is that which rests its claims on the traditions of the country. Plutarch, it is gravely pointed out, mentions that at one period in its history Gaul was governed by a Senate of women; and Sainte-Foix, in his work on Parisian antiquities, maintains that as long as this system of government lasted the Gauls always had the best of it in their encounters with the Romans. Even Cæsar himself was but the lieutenant of these ladies. When the Druids wrested the supreme power from the hands of the women, the glory of Gaul began to decline, and the Romans soon reduced the country to subjection.

A Blessing in Disguise.

Contrary to orders, Bobby had taken the family Bible from the parlor-table where it was very carefully kept, and by the time he got through with it the signs of wear and tear were painfully apparent.

For this act of disobedience he received a severe whipping and was sent supperless to bed.

"It is a source of great gratification to me," said the minister who was making a call that same evening, as he lifted the book from the table and discovered its condition, "to find that in this household, at least, the Bible is not neglected. It is often the case, I regret to say, that the contents of the good book remain unsought. But I am pleased, Mr. Smith, to know," he continued, "that you find daily consolation in its pages."

Mr. Smith devoutly acknowledged the pleasure and profit he derived from its frequent study, and after the minister left he took up to Bobby a glass of milk and a large slice of bread and butter and jam on it.

HERE AND THERE.

alifornia Oranges—New Cure for ... matism—The War Correspondents, &c., &c.

There is a constant stream of ... the Arkansas Hot Springs, and, ... any get no relief and die, it is ... at during the past ten years upward ... 5,000 people have been cured of ... ere after having been given up by ... ctors.

Orange raising in California has ... en successful this year, prices having ... len as low as 35 cents a box in some ... ances. The fruit is not so large ... ual, but excellent in flavor, and, though ... w ripe, will be better if left on ... een till May. The lemons are large ... e.

A citizen of Americus, Ga., claims ... ve carried an open-face watch continuously ... for twenty years without having ... n the crystal, although several times ... s subjected to rough use. The watch ... s inherited from his father, and the ... stal was placed on it forty years ... o.

A Michigan man claims to have been ... raculously cured of a rheumatism which ... d made him helpless for many months. ... s hired man was carrying a hive of bees ... rough his room and dropped it. The ... tient is now an active member of society ... ty and says he is "thankful to an ... rutable Providence."

At the East Kent Chamber of Agriculture ... re some revelations were lately made ... ich evoked the bitterest reflections ... e English railway companies. It was ... own that a ton of hops sent from ... aversham to London costs 33s. for ... ge; from Flushing, Holland, only 2 ... tatoes are delivered in London from ... erbourg, France, at 30s per ton; from ... nzance the charge is 45s. A ton of ... eshire cheese from Chester costs 4 ... , but from America a ton of cheese ... ought for 25s.

The special correspondent resembles ... poet in this, that he is born, not ... de. Mr. Archibald Forbes commenced ... life in an attorney's office. The late ... merton was originally in a bank, and ... r. H. S Pearse, whose name the paper ... re persist in calling Pearce, proposed ... ne time to do great things as an archi ... t. Each had fitted each for different ... ings. Pearse is a man well known in ... hunting field, and those who read his ... criptions of great runs were not sur ... sed at the nervous and graphic power ... his account of the battle of Abu-Klea ... the London Daily News. He is the ... o successor of Forbes.

J. Berlier, an engineer, proposes a system ... n of pneumatic transmission between ... is and London, involving the employ ... nt of two tubes—one for sending and ... e other for receiving telegrams, letters ... d postal parcels weighing up to ... nuds. The time taken in transmission ... uld be but one hour, notwithstanding ... ppages at any stations which might ... tablished on the way. M. Berlier points ... t that transmission to Lyons and Mar ... ilies could be effected still more easily ... an to London, there being no sea ... ss. Letters and parcels sent from ... ris to Marseilles would, it is said, reach ... at place in two hours.

The cost of the railway from Suakim ... rber, with equipment, will be $35,0 ... mile, and probably more. The distance ... 250 miles. This charge will fall either ... the Egyptian bondholders or the Egy ... n taxpayers, but the latter must pay ... in the first instance, and to get ... ney from the bondholders, backed ... ey are by all the powers of Europe, ... like getting butter out of a dog ... uth. And when made, whose pr ... ry will it be, England's or Egypt's ... nce it is made on Egyptian soil with ... authority from the Egyptian Govern ... nt, it is legally Egypt's. The cost ... intenance will be nearly $500,000 ... r.

One of the many arguments brought ... ward in favor of the admission of ... ch women to the franchise, one of ... strangest is that which rests the ... ims on the traditions of the country ... tarch, it is gravely pointed out, ... s that at one period in its history ... i was governed by a Senate of ... ; and Sainte-Foix, in his work ... isian antiquities, maintains that ... as this system of government last ... Gauls always had the best of it ... r encounters with the Romans. Brennus ... himself was but the lieutenant ... e ladies. When the Druids wrested ... upreme power from the hands of ... nen, the glory of Gaul began to ... e, and the Romans soon reduced ... ntry to subjection.

A Blessing in Disguise.

ntrary to orders, Bobby had taken ... family Bible from the parlor-table ... re it was very carefully kept, and ... time he got through with it the ... ear and tear were painfully apparent. ... er this act of disobedience he received ... were whipping and was sent supperless ... o bed.

It is a source of great gratification ... said the minister who was making ... that same evening, as he lifted the ... n the table and discovered its con ..., "to find that in this household, ... t, the Bible is not neglected. It is ... n the case, I regret to say, that ... tents of the good book remain ... ght. But I am pleased, Mr. ... now," he continued, "that you ... y consolation in its pages."

Mr. Smith devoutly acknowledged ... pleasure and profit he derived ... requent study, and after the min ... he took up to Bobby a glass of ... a large slice of bread and butter ... on it.

THE LAND OF THE FALSE PROPHET.

THE DESERT

All the vast spaces east and west of the ... Valley between the fourteenth de ... and the Mediterranean (over eight ... dred thousand square miles) are the ... ert. It would seem at the first glance ... be absolutely unfitted for the habitation ... on of man; but as he continues to ... and multiply amid the ice-floes of the ... ic circle, so he does here in this rain ... barren, and torrid zone. He who ... never travelled through the desert ... not form a just idea of that strange ... marvelous region, in which all the ... inary conditions of life are completely ... nged. It is essentially a waterless ..., without rivers, creeks, rivulets, or ... ings. Once away from the Nile, the ... supply of water is derived from deep ..., few, scanty, and far apart. Long ... ughts are frequent. When I explored ... great Arabian Desert between the ... and the Red Sea, it had not rained ... three years; and when I travelled ... the Suakim route and through Kor ..., no rain had fallen for two years. ... ween the twenty-ninth and nineteenth ... ree of latitude it never rains at all. ... ter becomes precious beyond the conception of those who have never known ... scarcity. Members of the Catholic ... sion at El Obeid, where water is much ... re plentiful than in the deserts, assured ... that, the summer before, water had ... n sold as high as half a dollar a gallon ... the proprietors of the few wells that had ... dried up. When long droughts occur, ... always scanty crop of doura fails ... y from the Nile, and the greater part ... the flocks and herds perish, as well as a ... siderable part of the population. It ... lows naturally that when undertaking ... journey through the desert the paramount question is water. A supply must ... carried sufficient to last to the next ..., be it one or five days distant. It is ... ally carried in goat and sheep skins ... pended from the camels' pack-saddles. ... ese are the water bottles of Scripture, ... ich become leaky from wear, and always lose a considerable portion of their ... tents by evaporation. The first thing ... er reaching a well is to ascertain the ... antity and quality of the water. As ... the former, it may have been exhausted ... by a preceding caravan, and hours ... y be required for a new supply to ooze ... again. As to the quality, desert water ... generally bad, the exception being ... en it is worse, though long custom en ... les the Bedouins to drink water so ... ckish as to be intolerable to all except ... mselves and their flocks. Well do I ... member how at each well the first skin ... was tasted all around as epicures sip ... e wines. Great was the joy if it was ... nounced "moya Helwa," sweet water; ... if the Bedouins said "moosh tayib," ... good, we might be sure it was a solution of Epsom salts. The best water is ... nd in natural rocky reservoirs in deep ... row gorges where the sun never shines. ... to "live springs," I never saw more ... n half a dozen in six thousand miles' ... vel.

The desert would be absolutely impassable without the camel. He was created ... it, and thrives better there than anywhere else. His broad, soft foot enables ... to traverse deep sands where the ... se would sink nearly to his knees, and ... uld promptly perish. He lives on almost nothing, the scanty herbage of the ... ert and the twigs of the thorny mi ... sa being his favorite food; but his ... st precious quality is his ability to tra ... five days without drinking during the ... rcest heat of summer, and much longer ... other seasons. For this reason wells ... rarely more than five days apart. The ... rican camel from Arabia, and has only ... e hump. The best breeds are reared ... the Ababdehs and Bisharеens between ... Nile and the great Arabian chain. ... ey are distinguished by small head, ... nder neck and limbs, and short hair. ... s camel and dromedary differ only in ... ed, just as the dray horse differs from ... racer. The burden camel, called ... mal by the Arabs, never changes his re ... lar walk of two and a half miles an ... r under a load, which should never ... ceed three hundred pounds for a long ... rney, for his strength must be estimated by what he can carry when exhausted by hardship and privation. The ... medary, or riding camel, called hageen, ... much swifter. With no other load than ... rider, a bag of bread or dates, and a ... n of water, he can travel one hundred ... es in one day on an emergency. The ... k of the dromedary (as of the camel) ... the most excruciating, back-breaking, ... n-abrading mode of locomotion conceivable; but when pressed into a pace ... ve or six miles an hour, which is his ... ural gate, a good, high-bred dromedary is as comfortable a mount as can be ... ired; and I can aver, from personal ... perience, that a fairly good horseman ... find himself perfectly at home on ... uel's-back after two day's practice. ... e of the most interesting and picturesque sights of the desert is a caravan of ... eral hundred camels just from Central ... ica. The sheiks and chief merchants ... r turbans and flowing robes of various ... rs; the camel-drivers and common ... ple are bare-headed, and with only a ... yards of coarse white cotton around ... loins, but all armed with swords or ... es. The animals are loaded with ... t bags and bales of ostrich feathers, ... arabic, hides, and senno, the chief ... ductions of the Soudan; while not a ... carry four or six elephants' tusks ... pped in raw hides, and looking like ... antic scythe-blades. On foot is a motley ... crowd of almost naked savages from ... the tribes of the Upper Nile, from the ... ky Dinka, nearly seven feet in height, ... the fat and squatty Bengo, about two ... shorter, and presenting every type ... feature and every variety of color from a dark olive to the brightest copper and the deepest black.

The natives divide their deserts into two classes. To the first they apply two names, el jebel, the mountain, or el barry-ieh, the wilderness. This is the kind of desert spoken of in Scripture, where John the Baptist preached to the multitude who went out to hear him, and found supplies of locusts and wild honey. I never found wild honey, but the living locusts, which are sometimes eaten by the Bedouins, great abundance at times, as well as of the pods of a species of locust tree, which are edible and are thought by some commentators to be the locust used as food by St. John. The wilderness is diversified by mountains almost absolutely bare of all vegetation. A Bedouin can hardly believe that in other lands the mountains are clothed to their summits with green and luxuriant forests, and that from their flanks dash down cascades and rivers of "living waters." Such things he has never seen or even dreamed of, unless as a vision of the Moslem paradise. But the valleys, or wadies (pronounced waddies), and some portions of the plains are often comparatively well supplied with vegetation. After every shower of the brief rainy season, the dry beds in the wadies are converted for a few hours into furious torrents. The water disappears, quickly absorbed by the thirsty soil; but where an impenetrable stratum lies parallel and close to the surface, the water is kept from sinking too deep, and in such spots will be found trees and herbage, the latter springing up with magic rapidity after the first showers. Many kinds of grasses afford camels, sheep, and goats abundant pasture for a portion of the year. Wild flowers are seen in great variety; on the slopes of the Arabian chain, acres upon acres of heliotrope; on the plains, a bush called merk, resembling the Scotch broom, and bearing small five-pointed yellow stars of sweetest fragrance. In Sennaar and Kordofan are hundreds of square miles covered with the plant which takes its name from the former province and supplies the world with senna. After the first rain the trees which drop their leaves during the intense heat of summer are swiftly clad in living green. Numerous species are found: the heglik (Balanites Ægyptiaca), and several kinds of acacia, among which are the seyal, of considerable size; the sount, used for saddles and various utensils, and its bark for tanning; the small Acacia mimosa, with its huge thorns, the favorite food of camels; and in Sennaar and Kordofan the hashab (Acacia gummifera), which produces the gum arabic of the world. It bears a small orange-colored button of intense and delightful odor, identical with the "poppinack" of Carolina and Georgia. The proximity of a thicket of these trees (the favorite resort of monkeys and guinea-fowls) is revealed hundreds of miles off by the sweet perfume wafted upon the breeze; and at the proper season lumps of the gum are seen glistening like icicles all over the limbs. South of the thirteenth degree the huge baobab (Adansou a digitata) flourishes across the entire African continent. This is the elephant of the vegetable kingdom, thin-foliaged, unsightly, from sixty to seventy feet in circumference, but not over fifty in height. Its trunk, always hollow, is used in Kordofan and Darfour as a reservoir for water, holding from fifteen to twenty thousand gallons.

From November to February, just after a good rainy season, the climate is perfection, just like the brightest and warmest October days in Virginia. Though the thermometer occasionally rises into the nineties, and sometimes higher, the air is perfectly dry, and the mornings and nights are pleasantly cool. Game is found in proportion to the vegetation; on the plains, ostriches and countless gazelles and antelopes; in the wadies, rock-partridge and grouse, guinea-fowls and hares; on the high ridges, capricorns and wild asses. Among the fauna of the wilderness are some unwelcome specimens, locusts, serpents, and scorpions, the latter quite numerous, and altogether too fond of nestling on one's blankets of a cold night, but quite unaggressive if let alone. Add to these the vultures, which stalk familiarly about the camp, picking up what they can find, and the jackals and hyenas, whose howls are heard in the night. Traveling at this season is perfectly charming. Everybody is in fine spirits, for water and pasture are plentiful; laughter and endless chaff is heard from one end of the column to the other. A caravan of five hundred camels covers more ground than a large cavalry regiment, marching with a front of about one hundred yards where the wadies are broad, and reducing to single file when crossing narrow defiles between gates of granite and basaltic cliffs. When evening comes, camp is pitched in some pleasant wady, and quickly dozens of fires illuminate the valley. The large Soudan sheep, which follow the caravan, grazing as they go, supply a delicious roast added to the game killed during the day march, and the canned soups, meats, and vegetables we used to carry in aburdance. After dinner comes the unequaled coffee, straight from Mocha, then pipes and pleasant chat, while all around we hear the laughter and gabble of the good-natured soldiers and Bedouins mingled with wild and barbaric songs, accompanied by the viol, called kemengeh. Occasionally, of a moonlight night, the Bedouins perform their national war-dance, with sword, lance, and shield, in mock attack and defence, and even their great sheikh, the princely Mohammed Khalifa, condescends to take part; while the beating of the darabukas wakes the echoes of the wady and the answering yells of the astonished jackals and hyenas.

If the "wilderness" in winter offers many attractions, it is quite the reverse with the simoon, as the Arabs call the utterly barren kind of desert. This is truly the ideal desert, consisting mainly of hard gravel plains diversified by zones of deep sand, rocky ridges, sometimes of considerable altitude, and rugged defiles. It is absolutely destitute of all vegetation, and consequently of animal life. Only the ostrich and hyena cross it swiftly by night, and the vulture hovers over the caravans by day. Not a tree, not a bush, not a blade of grass relieves the glare of the sunlight upon the yellow sand. No one can resist the solemn impression of deep silence and infinite space produced by the desert. When night has come, and the soldiers and Bedouins are asleep in their bivouacs, walk away under the unequaled African moon beyond the first ridge of sand or rocks. Around you stretches a boundless sea-like horizon. The sand gleams almost as white as snow. Not a sound falls upon the ear, not the murmur of a breeze, not the rustle of leaf or grass, not the hum of the smallest insect. Silence—only silence—as profound as death, unless it is broken by the howl of the hyena or the distant roar of the king of beasts.

Within the limits of Egypt and the Soudan these desolate atmoors extend over three-quarters of a million of square miles, never trodden by the foot of man. Only a few caravan trails cross them in their narrowest parts, with scanty wells at long intervals; and the necessities of trade alone account for their being penetrated at all. They are like oceans, where caravans pass each other in haste, like vessels at sea. The marches are perfectly terrible, and yet it is worse to halt during the day than to keep in motion, for the heat makes sleep or rest impossible, even under canvas. With the burning sand under your feet and the vertical sun over your head, you are as between the lids of an oven. In summer the thermometer rises to 150 and 160 degrees. The air that blows feels as if it had just passed through a furnace or a brick-kiln. Over the plain it quivers visibly in the sun, as if rising from a red-hot stove, while the mirage mocks your senses with the most life-like image of lakes, ponds, and rippling waters. No more laughter and merriment along the column now. Soldiers and camp-followers protect themselves as best they can with turbans and blankets, bringing over all the hoods of their capotes, leaving only a narrow aperture just enough to see; while, strange to say, the Bedouins stride along on foot, bare-headed and almost naked, without appearing to suffer any great discomfort. Were not the nights comparatively cool (80° in summer), neither men nor animals could endure the terrible ordeal.

THE BEDOUINS.

The small area, not exceeding five or six thousand square miles, coming under the description given of the "wilderness," is the wandering ground of those tribes of nomads called Bedouins. Their total number is probably about half a million. They all claim to be of Arab descent, their ancestors having crossed the Red Sea from the Hejaz (Northern Arabia) centuries before the Christian era; but some of them have become very much mixed since that time. In fact, in the Arabic language, whose plurals are so strangely formed, Arab is the plural of Bedawee, and is the name of the inhabitants of Arabia proper, though very improperly applied to all people of Egypt, who speak Arabic, it is true, but belong to an entirely different race. The nomads of the desert are always called Bedawees. The principal tribes between the Nile and the Red Sea are the Ababdehs, Bisharеens, and Hadendawas; west of the Nile are the Hassaneeyehs, the Kababeesh, and the Beggaras. All these, divided into numerous sub-tribes, have almost identical customs, and differ chiefly in their dialects and the mode of wearing their hair. They constitute the great bulk of the Mahdi's forces, and are the most formidable adversaries the British have to encounter, as the latter learned from their experience at Tamai, where a British square of two thousand men was broken, driven back half a mile, and its artillery captured by these naked sons of the desert, armed with only swords and spears. This alone would suffice to attract the attention of the world, even if their customs and modes of life did not invest them with peculiar interest. Their wealth consists in flocks and camels. They are carriers, guides, and camel-drivers, but no amount of money can induce them to work the ground, and they look with infinite contempt upon the fellaheen and the inhabitants of towns, whom they scornfully term "dwellers among brick." On my first expedition, a large sum in Austrian silver dollars (the money they prefer) was given me by the Government to hire my camel-drivers to dig out the Roman reservoirs on the ancient military road between Keneh on the Nile and Berenice on the Red Sea. In reply to my offers of extra pay, the sheikhs assured me that not one of their men would degrade himself by such labor at any price, even a guinea per day. They are governed by an absolutely patriarchal way by their great sheikhs, and their condition is very much like that of their ancestors in the days of Abraham, Lot and Ishmael. They have no individual possessions in the land, but the territorial limits of each tribe are well defined, and the encroachment of one tribe upon the range and wells of another are the most frequent cause of their feuds.

The great Bedouin tribes were not reduced to obedience to the Egyptian Government without long and fierce struggles. Mohammed Ali's iron hand forced them to submit when he conquered Kordofan in 1820. But it was a very limited submission. The Government never interferes with their internal affairs or wars, leaving them to the rule of their sheikhs, and well satisfied when they can collect their taxes more or less irregularly. Much less does it undertake to enforce conscription among them, though, being of a warlike disposition, they would make the best of soldiers if they could be disciplined; but this is impossible, for their ruling passion is independence and the free life of the desert. Yet, until recent foreign interference, broke the prestige and power of the Khedive, he held their great sheikhs responsible for the safety of trade and travel on the deserts, and both were most effectually protected. They are a fine-looking race, of medium height and very well formed, with small hands and feet, and the arched instep of the Arab. In color they range from dark olive to deep chocolate, but their features are equal to the best European types, with aquiline nose, more delicate in shape than the Hebrew, thin lips, and splendid teeth, and their hair is long and frizzled. The girls and young women often have really beautiful faces and graceful forms, but they lose their beauty early and become hideous hags. They wear no veils, like the Mohammedan women of Egypt, and their only dress is a few yards of cotton, once white, wound around the waist, hanging to the knees, and leaving the bust and shoulders exposed.

The Bedouin is the most abstemious of men. His food is a little doura obtained from the settlements in exchange for the surplus of his flocks and the skins and charcoal that he prepares for sale. His camels yield him an abundance of excellent milk, and he could live on that alone and its various preparations. He needs but little meat, which is supplied by his sheep and goats, with an occasional camel for some great feast. Those who live in more favored regions breed horses and cattle also. The desert grasses supply mats for his tents, and the trees with pack-saddles, ropes, and tan-bark. His water and milk are carried in goat-skins; his drinking-vessels are gourds and grass-woven bowls, which hold water perfectly. Civilized enough to appreciate the value of money and a few articles of European manufacture, he wants little else than long, straight, and broad double-edged sword-blades of German or Spanish make, to which he adapts handles and scabbards of his own contrivance. A few possess flint-lock muskets and double-barrel guns. All carry lances made in the country, whose iron or copper heads are generally barbed with such cruel ingenuity that it is impossible to extract them from a wound without the most horrible laceration. Fastened above the left elbow is a curved pruning-knife used to cut twigs of the mimosa for camels. On the right upper arm are one or two small morocco cases containing texts of the Koran as amulets against the "evil eye" and other dangers. Most of them carry round or oval shields of hippopotamus or giraffe hide, and it is a point of honor with them to go always armed, as the following incident illustrates:

On the march, an Egyptian soldier, having let fall the halter of his camel, ordered roughly the Bedouin guide walking in front to give it back to him. The latter replied:

"Am I thy father's camel-driver to be thus spoken to?"

Said the soldier, raising his stick:

"Thou son of a hog, give it here, or I'll strike thee!"

The Bedouin said:

"You call yourself a soldier because you wear the uniform of the Turks. You are nothing but an earth-digger; I am a warrior, as all my fathers were!"

The soldier struck him. In a moment the Bedouin's huge sabre flashed out of the scabbard. The other soldiers (whose arms were packed on the camels, for we were in a perfectly peaceful region) jumped from their camels to gather stones to defend their comrade, while other Bedouins ran up with sword and lance to the support of theirs. Hearing the shouts, I rushed on my dromedary, revolver in hand, between the two hostile groups and commanded peace. After hearing both sides, I ordered the Bedouins to deliver up their arms, which were packed upon a camel. They submitted without a word, but three or four days afterward, as we were approaching some wells where they expected to find other Bedouins, they sent me a deputation earnestly praying the return of their arms, saying they would be forever disgraced if forced to appear without them. The petition was granted upon promise of good behavior, which was faithfully kept.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

At Large Again.

Mr. Edmund Yates, editor of the World, was released from Holloway prison at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 14th inst., having served exactly one month and twenty-one days of a four months' sentence imposed by Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, for having allowed Lady Stradbroke to libel her cousin, Lady Grace Fane, and Lord Lonsdale, by an elopement story published in the World. Mr. Yates, when released this morning, appeared much worn down by his imprisonment. He was pale and haggard. To the few that met him he expressed himself as being heartily glad to be out of prison, and said that he felt fairly well. He was at once driven to his home. Mr. Yates was released at the direction of the Home Secretary, Sir William Vernon Harcourt, who had been freely petitioned for his release on the ground that his imprisonment was slowly killing him.

Motto for the cremation—Death is real and death is urnest.

It is said that there is a soft side to every man. That's the reason a dude is afraid to stand on his head.

"Pat, have you any prairies in Ireland, like we have in Illinois?" "To be shure we have. Didn't you iver hear of Tipperary?"

STORIES ABOUT ANIMALS.

A ram belonging to J. A. Adams, of Greenville county, N.C., knows a persimmon tree when he sees it. When the persimmons are ripe the ram butts the tree until fruit enough falls to make him a meal.

A cat belonging to Mrs. Gilbert L. Smith, of Vineyard Haven, Mass., sleeps regularly upon a horse's back. The cat climbs up to a beam over the stall, and thence drops upon the back of the horse, which makes no objection.

A Glasgow dog went regularly with his master to the butcher's to get his dinner. He carried a little basket and twopence to pay for it. Finally he was allowed to go alone. But another butcher soon sent in a bill for the dog's daily supply of food. It was ascertained that the animal, having a voracious appetite, was getting double rations. After he had eaten what he received at the first butcher's, he would take the empty basket to another and eat on credit.

According to an English newspaper, an officer returning from a day's shooting, left his game in the custody of his dogs, whom he locked up with it while he went upon some urgent business away from home, and soon forgot both animals and game. He was detained for days, and when he returned both dogs had died of hunger, having refrained from touching the game. They had neither barked nor whined during their confinement, evidently fearing to betray the trust of their master.

A St. Louis bachelor sat down to a table in his room to write a letter, when an immense black spider advanced toward him upon the table. He took a straw from a broom and drew it gently over the spider's back and legs for ten minutes, when it went away. The next evening the spider reappeared and went through the same antics with the broom straw, to his evident pleasure. This was kept up all the winter, the big spider coming out regularly every night for a frolic with the broom straw.

A dog belonging to a Wanaqua, N.J., lad had for a long time been in the habit of picking up his breakfast and running away with it instead of eating it. The boy followed him on Friday, and the dog led him a roundabout trip, evidently to tire out his pursuer. Finally the dog lay down and waited for the boy to go away. The boy started abruptly as if to go home. The dog then ran very fast and disappeared in a covert, where investigation revealed a decrepit and emaciated old dog, who was eagerly devouring the breakfast.

El Mahdi Dreads Assassination.

It is generally understood among the tribes that El Mahdi's reason for leaving Khartoum was his fear of assassination at the hands of people in his own camp. This fear has caused him to double the guard about his person. It is said that he discovered a conspiracy of this nature last week and had two lieutenants and twelve men beheaded in consequence. He is said to look with suspicion upon the Frenchman Pain. It is thought that the Mahdi's religious influence upon his followers is on the wane.

In a recent interview, published in the Pall Mall Gazette, an English merchant who has traded with Soudan since 1866, spoke as follows: "The reason why the Soudanese follow the Mahdi is because they think that the Mahdi will make it pay. The great bait that has held the tribes together so far has been the prospect of plunder at Khartoum. That they have now got, and there is not much left in the country to loot. They will therefore, sooner or later, fall away from the Mahdi and quarrel among themselves. As for the fear that the Mahdi at the head of 100,000 men is going to rush down on Suakin or Cairo, that is all nonsense. If the movement spreads it will spread as an insurrection, which the Mahdi will first excite and then support. Afterward, if it succeeds, he will place himself at its head, and that, of course, is a considerable danger.

GORDON'S CORRESPONDENCE.

Additional Letters from the Unfortunate Soldier Who Fell at Khartoum.

MacMillan & Co., London, publish a number of interesting letters from General Gordon to an intimate friend, Rev. Mr. Barnes. In a letter dated Feb. 8, 1884, while on his way to Khartoum, Gordon says: "I arrived at Aboo-Hamed safely. The terrible desert between Korosko and Aboo-Hamed is the worst in the Soudan. The cold is intense by night and the heat is intense by day." The letters throughout are strongly religious in tone. In one letter he narrates: "When I was at Brussels, General Wolseley telegraphed me to come over to London at once. King Leopold was averse to my going. I reached London at 6 next morning, and saw Wolseley at 8. Wolseley said that nothing had been settled, but the Ministers would see me in the afternoon. At noon Wolseley accompanied me to the meeting. He entered the room first, conversed with the ministers and returned, saying: "Her Majesty's government wants you to understand that they are willing to evacuate the Soudan because they are unwilling to guarantee its future government. Will you go and do it?' I replied, 'Yes.' Wolseley said 'Go in.' On entering the room the ministers said: 'Did General Wolseley tell you our orders?' I replied 'Yes. You will not guarantee future government of the Soudan, and wish me to go up and evacuate the country now.' They said, 'Yes.' Very little more passed between us. I started for Calais at 8 the same evening. The Duke of Cambridge and General Wolseley came to see me off.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

OWEN SOUND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.	Mixed.
Toronto....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orangeville { Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Orangeville { Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Owen Sound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
Chatsworth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford.....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orangeville { Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Orangeville { Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto.....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

198 J. PLEWES.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

A RARE CHANCE.

SAW-MILL FOR SALE.

THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4½ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill; a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.

J. A. DUNCAN,
Markdale P. O.

230 tf

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense, on the

Most APPROVED

plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat.

☞ Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS

In Minnesota: North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.

Lands prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $8 per acre. On 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country for securing Good Homes now open for settlement.

FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE 10,818,433 Acres OR MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1883, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific Country, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all kinds of

PUMPS,

Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.

Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's

PATENT LOAD LIFTER

For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.

☞ Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satistaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS, CASKETS, SHROUDS,

and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farmers & Threshers

Ask your merchants for

McCOLL BROS.

LARDINE MACHINE OIL.

Burdock Blood Bitters.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

ROBERT S. RAE,

TAILOR,

Sydenham Street.

MARKDALE.

HAGYARDS PECTORAL BALSAM

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, at the office, Main Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cts per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,

(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,

199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison.

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,

MARKDALE,

Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,

MARKDALE,

John McAleer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

A PRIZE. Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

MARKDALE

HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

122-ly

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. All orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 123-

COMMERCIAL HOTEL

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms, Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler.

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor.

JOSEPH GIBSON

CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of

BRICK AND STONE WORK

Plain Ornamental Plastering.

Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given.

All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

195-6m* MARKDALE P.O.

JOHN NOBLE

MARKDALE

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebrated

CHATHAM WAGONS

Markdale Roller Mills

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs. Flour
" "	61 "	39 "	"
" "	60 "	38 "	"
" "	59 "	37 "	"
" "	58 "	36 "	"
" "	57 "	35 "	"

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 the bushel.

John W. Ford.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

FARM FOR SALE

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres mostly cleared and under cultivation. This farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE, Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO. FORDE, Markdale.

Medical.

P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Marshall House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Tuesday of each month and also at Mansfield. Flesherton, the day following. Second Wednesday in each month for the purpose of his profession.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. All orders promptly attended to. Best —Snider's Hill Owen Sound

COMMERCIAL HOTEL,

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms and Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and Larder supplied with the best the market affords; Good Stabling and attentive Hostler.

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON

CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of

BRICK AND STONE WORK,

Plain Ornamental Plastering.

Plastering in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at the STANDARD office receive prompt attention.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given.

All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

6m MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebrated

CHATHAM WAGONS

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that his mill is turning out flour equal to any other custom mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

	Wheat Weighing 62 lbs,	40 lbs. Flour,	Offal
"	" 61 "	39 "	"
"	" 60 "	38 "	"
"	" 59 "	37 "	"
"	" 58 "	36 "	"
"	" 57 "	35 "	"

Offal in proportion to amount of flour. We find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 lbs. to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers for cheapness, comfort and compactness. Never tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send in your order to Chatsworth P. O.

ANDREW McGILL.

FARM FOR SALE

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres, mostly cleared and under cultivation. The farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BERMILL, Proprietor, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO. NOBLE, Markdale.

Markdale Standard.

VOL. 5.--No. 238. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 2, 1885. {COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.}

Spring Stock

COMPLETE.

4 Complete Watches.

Gold and Silver Cases, Ladies and Gents sizes, Waltham, Elgin, Springfield and Swiss movements, 7, 9, 11 and 15 Jewelled. Close time-keepers. Warrants cover all breakages, for 1 and 2 years.

32 FINE CLOCKS,

Seth Thomas & other makes.

WEDDING RINGS, ACID TEST.

18 oz. Coin Case, Elgin movement, Exp. Bal., $12.00.

A good Swiss Watch, 15 Jewelled, Silver Case, $9.50.

Advertise Actual Present Stock,

and am in a position to give better terms, time or cash, than any other dealer in this section of Grey Co. Get quotations, compare with mine, and prove my statement. Long warrants up to sell—very often—inferior or imitation watches. I hold to the plan of honest representation of every article, and give no warrants exceeding 2 years. Cash discount 5 per cent. Is worth considerable to every purchaser.

DIFFICULT WATCH REPAIRING A Specialty.

ALL WORK FULLY GUARANTEED.

W. A. BROWN,

Jeweller, - Markdale.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cts a line for the first insertion and five cts a line each subsequent insertion.

YESTERDAY was "All Fools Day."

TO-MORROW will be Good Friday.

AND next Sunday, Easter.

MAPLE Syrup for sale at Hanbury's.

Easter Cards at the Medical Hall.

FARM to rent or sell, apply to J. G. Irving, Markdale.

WOMEN'S Laced Boots for 85 cts. per pair at McLeod's.

MR. Marshall Beard has purchased Wm. Bowler's farm.

MR. W. S. BOWLER and family left this week for Manitoba.

The STANDARD to the end of 1885 to any address for 75 cents.

A YOUNG farm horse for sale; apply to R. O. Whitby, Markdale.

MR. Alex. Taylor of Dromore recently sold ten steers for $434.62.

MR. Samuel Wright of Euphrasia has removed to Essa, Simcoe Co.

MASTER Willie Douglas is home from the Mt. Forest High School.

MR. Hugh McKenna of Euphrasia, has moved to Mono Mills this week.

IF "brevity is the soul of wit," here's a barrel of fun in a dude's coat tail.

FOR Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

MISS McDOWELL of Owen Sound, has been the guest of Mrs. Dr. Sproule the past week.

FOR Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

MR. R. H. Whitby has been home from Orangeville a week, and returned on Monday last.

Seeds.—Field and Garden Seeds of all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

THERE were shipped from Dundalk two weeks since, in one week 161 car loads of timber.

CLOVER, Timothy and Alsike at J. R. Trimble's.

THE Ontario Legislature was prorogued on Monday.

TRY Walker Bros. for nails, hinges, glass, putty &c.

FRANCE officially declared war with China on Tuesday.

AUCTION Sale at J. R. Trimble's Saturday, April 4th.

MARKDALE stores will be closed tomorrow (Good Friday).

MR. Currie our respected egg merchant, has returned.

WITHOUT doubt McFarland has the nobbiest Suitings in Markdale.

FOR factory milk cans go to Walker Bros. They are selling Cheap.

CARPETS and Lace Curtains are having a lively sale at McFarland's.

WE had a plesent call from Mr. Josiah Gamey of Osprey on Monday.

MR. WM. MILNE, clerk of Osprey township, gave us a call on Wednesday.

MISS JIMBY left yesterday to spend her Easter holidays with friends near Owen Sound.

J. W. SPROULE has his Wanzer Sewing Machine office now in Benson's brick block.

YOU can buy cheaper Liquors of all kinds at Benson's than in any other house in the County.

MR. Geo. Nixon of Dundalk has sold his mercantile business to F. Nixon and F. Dean.

CALL and see Benson's new stock of Groceries and Liquors. Only cheap Grocery Store in town.

MR. Isaac Stinson returned recently from a three months visit with friends in Kingston and vicinity.

FOR fine Ladies boots and toney gentlemens foot wear give McLeod a trial; He's sure to suit you.

MR. Josiah Sauder has removed from near Dundalk to the neighborhood of Rocklyn, Euphrasia.

Oil Cake, unsurpassed for Horses and Cattle, for sale at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

MR. Cochrane of Durham intends opening a machine and repair shop in that place the coming summer.

WE acknowledge receipt of subscriptions for '85 from John McNicoll, Pompei, Mich., and Samuel Wright, Ivy.

THE handle of a cross-cut saw was found and left at this office last Saturday. The owner can have it by calling.

REJUVENATOR Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of diseases from the system. Sold by Smith, the barber.

MR. JOHN HILL, painter, returned on Tuesday. He expects to remove with his family to Douglas, his old home, shortly.

DAN. McFARLANE, blacksmith, and W. H. Rutledge, butcher, have invested in a sign each; painted by R. O. Whitby.

J. R. TRIMBLE has the largest, the best and cheapest lot of Teas ever offered to the public. Call and get samples.

HANLAN DEFEATED.—In the sculling match at Sydney, N. S. W., on Saturday between Hanlan and Beach, the latter won by six lengths.

HEAD QUARTERS.—For Implements and repairs of all kinds, call on J. H. Hull, agent for Fleury's Sylvester's and Wilkinson's manufacture.

MR. James Noble of the Royal Hotel, Meaford, has purchased the imported stallion. "Wonder," from Mr. Joseph Button of York County for $1,500.

REJUVENATOR keeps the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure and nature's channels free; then you have health. Sold by Smith, the barber.

WM. LUCAS & Co. have any amount of money to loan on real estate security at 6½ per cent. Call on them before borrowing elsewhere. 233-3m

THE right place to get milk pans, sap buckets, sugar kettles, &c., is at Walker Bros.

MR. ROBT. BURNSIDE, late of Markdale, has opened a butcher shop in Holland Centre.

TAKE the advice of an old shopper: Don't purchase boots until you see what McFarland is doing in that line.

THE funeral sermon of the late Mr. James Beatty will be preached next Sunday morning in the Methodist Church.

DON'T forget to attend J. R. Trimble's Auction Sale of general store goods on Saturday, April 4th, commencing at 1 p. m.

MR. J. J. IRWIN, Veterinary Surgeon, has opned an office in Hill's block, where he is prepared to receive calls, See his card in another column.

J. R. TRIMBLE is offering you good, fresh, clean Boots & Shoes at lower prices than you can purchase old shop worn, mouldy ones at.

THERE are several families recently arrived in Markdale. We wish to intimate to such, that the STANDARD is free to them for one month after their arrival.

THE DYNAMITERS COMMITTED.—The examination of Cunningham and Burton having been finished, both are comitted for trial on the charge of treason-felony.

MISS MAUD SPENCE takes charge of W. J. McFarland's Millinery establishment this season. She comes well recommended as a first class Milliner and Mantle Maker.

A NUMBER of our young men attended the Flesherton rink on Thursday evening. There is some attraction more than the ice down there. We don't know what. Probably they can explain.

Two weddings are on the cards. We saw the coming brides selecting their wedding dresses at McFarland's: One a handsome Navy Blue Silk, and the other a stylish Prune Silk. Won't they look lovely? You bet.

J. R. TRIMBLE has just opened out a large and stylish assortment of mens' Hard and Soft Felt and Wool Hats; Ladies, Misses and Childrens' Sun Shades in all colors and styles at prices, for cash, that defy competition.

DUNDAS has just received a large lot of Ladies Buttoned Boots at $1.00. This line of boots has been tested and has given entire satisfaction. Dundas is a practical Boot & Shoe man and is giving his whole attention to the Boot & Shoe business.

A merchant in the western town, who thought him wonderous wise, did swear by all the ancient gods he ne'er would advertise. He did, though in peculiar form, and thereby hangs a tale, the "ad." was set in nonpariel and headed "sheriff's sale."

DUNDAS' Custom Boot & Shoe Shop is now running in full blast. Orders promptly executed and repairing in all its branches done with neatness and despatch. It matters not where you have bought your boots, bring your repairing to Dundas'.

MRS. WM. VOGAN of Williamsford died very suddenly on Wednesday evening the 25th March. Deceased was very highly respected. She had been about as well as usual until within two days before her death. heart disease was her complaint.

THE pile of brick and rubbish still remains on the sidewalk opposite the recent fire, to the great annoyance of pedestrians. This is a shame. Why does the trustees not have it removed, if the owners of the property from which the obstruction came will not?

WE are glad to say that Mr. Wm. Mason has again opened business. His shop at present is in Walker's building, opposite Mathews' livery, where he will be happy to wait on his customers and the public generally, as soon as McKenna's new addition opposite the Revere Hotel is finished (which is being pushed with all possible speed) Mr. Mason will remove to it where he will carry on the wagon and carriage business on a large scale.

REMEMBER J. R. Trimble's auction sale at one o'clock on Saturday next, 4th April; there's no April fool about this.

WHETHER it is the return of Mr. Currie, our egg merchant, or the near approach of Easter, which causes fresh eggs to begin to appear on the market; one thing is certain the hens must have got down to business with the determination to supply the demand.

BAD CUT.—Charles Eagle gave his right foot a severe cut on Thursday last while making a rain trough in the bush; the axe handle caught his clothing throwing the axe out of balance, striking the instep crosswise, completely severing the cords of the toes.

CREDIT SALE.—Mr. Michael Sullivan will sell by public auction at the City Hotel, Markdale, at one o'clock on Saturday. 4th April, a quantity of farm stock, implements, &c. Terms on sums over $10 nine months credit on approved paper. Geo. Noble, auctioneer.

NOTE LOST.—About the28th March, a note of hand for $4.00, drawn in favor of W. S. Bowler, against Robert Shaw, drawn on the 27th ult, due one month after date. Any person finding the same will greatly oblige by leaving it at the STANDARD office, Markdale, W. S. Bowler.

DUNDAS' is selling No. 1 Prince of Wales Chewing Tobacco at 38 cts. per lb.; Brier 6 s. smoking at 47 cents; Napoleon at 42 cents; XXX White Wine Vinegar, No. 1, at 30 cts. per gallon; 3 lb. can Tomatoes at 7 cents per can. Other lines of Groceries proportionately low.

MR. J. J. IRVIN, Veterinary Surgeon, wishes the public to remember that telegraph messages as well as calls by mail will be promptly attended. He will board at the Markdale House, but may be found in his office day and night. Office: Hill's block, opposite the Markdale House.

J. R TRIMBLE has just closed a bargain for the largest stock of Ready-made Clothing ever brought to Markdale. The value is wonderful. Styles entirely new and variety enormous. This is undoubtedly a larger stock of clothing than is held by any three merchants in the Co. of Grey.

FIELD FIGHT.—On Saturday last Dinnie Sweney of Glenelg and Andrew Arnott of Euphrasia exchanged some heavy blows on the street in this village. The former bled profusely, but neither were seriously injured. Before they could be parted, about 150 had gathered around the combatants.

A SPRING Show will be held the latter part of April in Markdale by the Glenelg Agricultural Society. A good list of prizes is being arranged and other preparations made which will be announced by posters in a few days. The date has not yet been fixed on which the show will take place.

THE place to get the reliable Watches. In 17 months I have sold 60 Watches—Waltham, Springfield, Elgin and Swiss grades—from $4.00 to $85.00 each. Kindly read my new adv. No trouble to show goods. Large stock. Close prices. The reliable Jeweller, W. A. Brown, Markdale.

DROPPED ANCHOR.—Our respected friend, E. D. Wilcox, has purchased the Jewellery business of W. H. May of Uxbridge and is now in possession, Uxbridge has secured, in the person, of E. D. W. a business man of unquestioned integrity and good mechanical abilities. We wish him unbounded success.

GIVE THEM A WIDE BERTH.—Tea and Shoddy pedlars are on the war path, and we would strongly advise people to have nothing to do with them; they cannot possibly give as good value for your money as our regular dealers, accept, perhaps, in case they are stolen or smuggled goods, and even then, it is worse still to patronize them. Support those who are doing a legitimate business in our midst and you will find it by far the most profitable, all things considered.

DR. LOW'S PLEASANT WORM SYRUP—An agreeable, safe and effectual remedy to remove all kinds of worms.

IT'S quite a common occurrence for a minister, after a marriage ceremony, to be requested by the interested party to kindly have a notice of the marriage put in the local paper, but they almost invariably neglect to provide him with the necessary fee (twenty-five cents). This is scarcely fair to expect the minister to do this at his own expense.

EASTER HOLIDAYS.—Return tickets will be issued to all stations on the C. P. R. and branches (Ontario Division) at one fair and a third good to go on April 2nd, 3rd and 4th; good to return until April 7th, Tickets at above rates can be procured at any station. Passengers paying on the train will be charged full fare.

KILLED.—On Friday morning last while Mr. Chas. Boyle was feeding his stock, his son, a little lad missed a goose from the number and in searching for the lost goose he spied a a wild-cat in the goose house; he at once gave the alarm when his father gave chase with a pitchfork and captured the thief. It measured 30 inches from nose to tip of tail.

NEW DRESS MAKING AND FANCY GOODS STORE.—Miss. Benson is this week opening a store in the above line in Benson's new brick block and will be prepared in a day or two for public patronage. Miss Benson is well trained in her business and has had considerable experience, so that the public may rely on securing satisfaction. Advt. next week.

SCARCELY a week passes without our receiving communications of various descriptions, and often of a personal nature, without any name accompanying the same. Wonder what the people take us for? We have stated repeatedly, through the columns of the paper, that such would invariably be consigned to the waste basket; but still they come. If any person has a grievance worth publishing, it is surely not a humiliating act to sign it. One thing certain we must have the name, not necessarily (in all cases) for publication.

MR. JAMES BEATY of Orange Valley, Artemesia, died on Sunday last. Deceased was one of the pioneers of this district, was very highly respected, being of a kind disposition and fine principle. He has been ill for several weeks and gradually sank, without pain, until Sunday last when he passed away rejoicing in hope of a glorious resurection. He has passed the age of three score and ten by several years. His remains were interred in the Methodist semetery on Tuesday and were followed by a large concourse of friends and acquaintances.

S. S. ANNIVERSARY.—The Presbyterian Sabbath School anniversary was held on Tuesday evening, and, notwithstanding the very inclement state of the weather in the early part of the day, the evening was beautiful and the moon shone out in grandeur. The refreshments were served in the manse, after which all repaired to the church where a good programme, consisting of music, recitations, speeches, &c., was gone through without hesitation, and excellent order prevailed throughout. The attendance was good and quite an improvement is evident in the progress of the school; the children especially acted their part of the programme admirably.

WHAT might have been a serious accident happened on Thuraday evening. As Mr. Jackman and Mr. S. Hill were driving to Flesherton, the horse became unmanageable on account of the softness of the snow, and the driver, Mr. H., not being an expert, let one of the lines slip through his hands, when the horse plunged violently in the opposite direction, as if he wished to try the sleighing in the fields, but became hopelessly stuck in getting off the beaten track. Both horse and men were extricated from the unpleasant position by the aid of some others who happened to be on hand at the time. Their pale faces mutely thanked their timely deliverers.

Osman Digma a Born Frenchman.

It may not be generally known that Osman D.gma is a Frenchman by birth, and was born in the year 1832 in a small hotel in Rouen. His father dying a year or two afterward, his mother married an Alexandrian merchant in 1837, half French and half Egyptian, of the name of Osman Digma, who, taking a great fancy to young Osman (at that time named Alphonse Vinet), insisted on having his name changed to his own, and dying in 1842, left him about 500,000 francs. After the death of his step father he was left to the guardianship of Ali Khana, a kind of half partner of the elder Osman, a Mussulman, who, at the death of Mme. Digma, in 1844, took young Osman into his house. His religion at that time, being very much of the Christian unattached type, was soon converted into Mohammedanism. Ali Khana was a very wealthy man, and lived in great Oriental pomp and splendor. Though intending to be very kind to young Osman, his kindness was of a very Spartan order indeed. He had numerous professors for various branches of learning, and would often be examined by Ali himself, who, if he did not consider that he had made progress, would have him severely bastinadoed.

At the age of 15 he was sent to Cairo to an ex-French officer to be taught the various methods of European warfare. Capt. Meral had some fifty boys residing in his house studying war in all its branches, two or three of whom have since become famous, not least among them being Arabi Pasha. It is strange, as illustrating the old saying, that "the boy is father to the man," that both Osman and Arabi distinguished themselves as leaders in the mimic battles fought in the grounds of Capt. Merale, the former in a dashing, swooping, kind of way, carrying everything before him, the latter as a tactician. The consequence was that a rivalry existed between the two, both having about an equal number of their schoolfellows aiding with them. Osman remained here until his nineteenth year, when he was sent by his guardian to France on matters relating to Ali's business.

In 1866 he obtained the command of his regiment, but shortly afterward, offending the Khedive, he had to leave Egypt, and had his property confiscated. He then went to Suakim, and entered business as a ship chandler and coal agent under an assumed name; but, while on a hunting expedition, he was captured by a roving band of Arabs, and was sold as a slave to the man who at present calls himself the Mahdi. The Mahdi was charmed with his new slave as a man of unbounded learning, and who would be able to train his numerous supporters in the art of war. He gave Osman his daughter in marriage, and has ever since treated him like a son.

Coats of Mail Worn by Arabs in the Soudan.

Coats of mail are still in use among some of the Soudanese Arab tribes. Whether original or a copy, says Col. Colbourne, in speaking of one of these coats of armor, it was undoubtedly the dress of the Crusaders. The hauberk of mail was fastened round the body by the baltan, and formed a complete covering from head to foot. The long two-handled double-edged sword was borne between the leg and the saddle. The wearer of this mediæval garb was Sheik Mohammed Sebekh of the Halawin tribe of Bagarra Arabs. His armor had been in his family 810 years. The horse's head was encased in steel, and its body covered with a quilt thick enough to turn a spear. It was shaped like the armor one reads of in Froissart.

It has been asserted in connection with this curious subject that the practice survives in the Soudan alone. It may, therefore, be well to state that it is also found among the Khevsur people of the Centra Caucasus, who still habitually wear chain armor, shields and helmets, like mediæval knights. In fact, it was formerly general among all the Caucasian tribes, and the Chechenzes of Daghestan still wore coats of mail down to the beginning of the present century.

The armor does not appear to have been forged by these people themselves, but was handed down, as among the Soudanese Arabs, as an heirloom from generation to generation in the families of the chiefs. Hence the inference that this armor dates everywhere from the times of the Crusades, of which it may be regarded as a remarkable reminiscence.

How Fahrenheit Got His Zero.

Fahrenheit was a mathematician and knew that a circle was divided into 360 degrees. He found that steam and ice were the most natural fixed points in temperature, at opposite poles. He therefore naturally divided the distance on his glass tube between ice and steam into the number of degrees in the diameter of a circle, which is 180. He wanted an instrument which could be cheaply made and which would measure above steam and below ice, so far as would be used in everyday life. He found that artificial cold could be produced which would cause the mercury to fall just thirty-two of the spaces he had marked off on his glass between ice and steam, and he there, sensibly or not, placed his zero or point from which he could count. Hence, ice or freezing is 32 degrees above, and steam or boiling water is the diameter of his circle or 180 degrees above ice, or 212 degrees above zero.

Ex-President Hayes is just now especially engaged in producing a cross between a goose and a guinea fowl. He wants to hear what kind of a voice it will have.

LITTLE LAUGHLETS.

A tight place—The spectacular drama.

In these "shutting down" times it is evident that ten mills do not make a cent.

It is the husband of the woman who snores that has plenty of time for midnight reflections.

"Cleave to me," she murmured to her escort at the theatre. And as soon as the curtain fell he clove.

There's no trouble about twisting the tail of a sleeping bulldog. The disagreeable part comes when you let go.

Jones, who is visiting the Gallapagos Islands, writes to his friend Brown that the society ladies there are a "shiftless set."

A new idea for a masquerade costume: Give yourself a good coating of green paint, and go as a pickle. This will take the girls.

"The way to sleep," says a scientest, "is to think of nothing," but this is a mistake. The way to sleep is to think it is time to get up.

"You seem to have plenty of business here," said a drummer to Miss Fitz, the dressmaker. "There's a heap more bustle than business," was the lady's reply.

"I do love dress!" exclaimed a young society belle. "Then I should think you would wear more of it," returned the cynical bachelor friend of middle age.

"Were you ever caught in a sudden squall?" asked an old yachtsman of a worthy citizen. "Well, I guess so!" responded the good man. I've helped to bring up eight babies.

Adam had a joyful life, inasmuch as his wife's mother did not live with him. but on the other hand he missed the pleasure of being present at her funeral. Sorrow and pleasure always go hand in-hand.

If Adam and Eve did promptings of courage evade
When to sin he was gently persuaded,
To temper the same this excuse can be made,
His evasions were surely Eve-aided.

Miss Parvenu: "I was almost sorry, mamma, that you spoke so rudely to that poor little Mrs. Wilkins." Mamma: "Well, my dear, pray where is the satisfaction of being in the first society if you cannot snub those that are out of it?"

"Did you notice, dear, at the party last evening how grandly our daughter Clara swept into the room?" Husband (with a grunt)—"Oh, yes, Clara can sweep into a room grandly enough, but when it comes to sweeping out a room she isn't there."

"Your age?" asked the judge. "Thirty-five, your Honor," replied the woman. Judge—"But you were thirty-five the last time you were here, three years ago." She—"And does your Honor think I'm the woman to say one thing one day and another thing another?"

"Oh, George! How superlatively still, clear and beautiful is the night!" she whispered, leaning her finely veined temple against his coat collar; "how soothing, how restful." "Yes,' he replied, toying with her chesnut aureole of hair. "What a night to shoot cats!"

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

That which makes all women equally pretty—Putting out the light.

Young Men!—Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich. offer to send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt, and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Beau: "Why do you prefer a wood fire?" She: "'Cause it pops."

Make a Note of This.

Pain banished as if by magic. Polson's NERVILINE is a positive and almost instantaneous remedy for external, internal, or local pains. The most active remedy hitherto known falls far short of Nerviline for potent power in the relief of nerve pain. Good for external or internal use. Buy a 10 cent sample bottle. Large bottles 25 cents, at all druggists.

Mrs. A.: "I do love to hear Mrs. Alto sing; her swell is very fine.' Mrs B.: "What are you talking about? That is no swell; he's her husband."

The Sting Within.

It is said that there is a rankling thorn in every heart, and yet that none would exchange their own for that of another. Be that as it may, the sting arising from the heart of a corn is real enough, and in this land of tight boots a very common complaint also. PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR is a never failing remedy for this kind of headache, as you can easily prove if afflicted. Cheap, sure, painless. Try the genuine and use no other.

"I Love Her Better than Life."

Well, then, why don't you do something to bring back the roses to her cheeks and the light to her eyes! Don't you see she is suffering from nervous debility, the result of female weakness? A bottle of Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will brighten those pale cheeks and send new life through that wasting form. If you love her, take heed.

Why is there nothing like leather? Because it is the sole support of man.

How Pale You Are!

is frequently the exclamation of one lady to another. The fact is not a pleasant one to have mention, but still the act may be a kindly one, for it sets the one addressed to thinking, apprises her of the fact that she is not in good health, and leads her to seek a reason therefor. Pallor is almost always attendant upon the first stages of consumption. The system is enfeebled, and the blood is impoverished. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery will act as a tonic upon the system, will enrich the impoverished blood, and restore roses to the cheeks.

There is probably no better illustration in this world of the terrible weight of grave responsibility than a five inch dog standing on a box with his forepaws on the tailbord of a four-horse express waggon, alertly guarding its passage through the streets of a crowded city.

If you have catarrh, use the surest remedy—Dr. Sage's

An exchange contains an account of "a man dying as he was shovelling off a sidewalk." A sidewalk is generally put down to stay, and the man who undertakes to shovel it off deserves to die in the attempt. It is easier to shovel off the snow than to shovel of the sidewalk."

The Greatest Horse Breeding Establishment of America.—One of the many wonderful enterprises the great West is noted for, and one which none favored with opportunity should miss seeing, is the great breeding establishment of "Oaklawn," owned by M. W. Dunham, at Wayne, Ill., 35 miles from Chicago. His importations of Percheron horses from France to date, have aggregated the immense sum of $3,000,000 and at the present time at "Oaklawn," 500 head of the choicest specimens of that race, nearly all recorded with their pedigrees in the Percheron Stud Book of France, can be seen, while on their Colorado ranges are 2,000 mares and 32 imported Percheron stallions in breeding.

"Nurse," said a penitent Western miner, as he lay in hospital after an accident, "I'll never draw a revolver on a man again as long as I live." The nurse expressed her pleasure in this moral resolution, when the patient went on to say: "Guess I'll go for the galoot with a two-scatter shot-gun."

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the City.

Æsthetic philosophical lecturer to his hearers: "People deride skepticism. Can you tell me what skepticism is?' Unterrified optimist, with idiotic literalness: "I suppose its denying a truth that you don't believe in favor of a lie that you can't believe."

Many people are not aware that it is the wrapper of tobacco which gives the color to the plug, and are, therefore, often deceived by a handsome outside appearance. The wrapper is a single film of leaf wrapped round the plug, and is never good smoking tobacco. It is costly only because of its fine color. In the "Myrtle Navy" brand the chief attention is paid to the "filler," that is, the inside of the plug. It is this which determines the smoking tobacco. A tobacco can be made to look as well as the "Myrtle Navy" without much trouble or expense, but at the same time be a very inferior article.

A Western calf has four ears. This is fortunate for the calf as he will not be mistaken for a dude.

A P 221.

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk, Carpet and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas. Ont.

SEEDSMEN—GOOD PAY TO MEN WHO WILL work. CHASE BROTHERS, Nurserymen, Lakeport, Ont

50 000 Acres farming lands in Northern Michigan for sale. Some improved farms. Terms easy. Address MERRITT CHANDLER, Cheboygan, Mich. CHANCES

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH—HOW IT CAN BE accomplished. Sealed particulars, 3c. SANITARY FUR. Co., Canadian Depository, Toronto, Canada.

CASH paid for Endowment Insurance policies. For particulars, address, with description of policy, F. G. RUSSELL, Hartford, Conn., Box 423.

FOR SALE—TIMBER, COAL, AND IRON ORE lands; stock, fruit and truck farms, orange groves ranches in all Southern States. Address W. B. STUART 63 Carondelet-st, New Orleans, Louisiana.

ANY PERSON AFFLICTED WITH CHRONIC RHEUMATISM will hear of something greatly to their advantage by sending their address upon a postcard to the RHEUMATIC RELIEF Co., Collingwood, Ont.

DETACHED SOLID BRICK HOUSE.—GOOD SITuation high and dry part of city, nine rooms, gas bathand closet. Lot 33x110. Terms easy. Apply on the premises or address 33 Davenport Road, Toronto, Ont.

FOR SALE CHEAP—20 acres of land, suitable for market garden, just outside the corporation of Bowmanville. Title good. Terms easy. Apply E. M., No. 33 Bellevue Place, Toronto.

MANITOBA—FOR SALE—TWO STOCK AND two grain farms—160 acres each: all improved; four miles from Douglas Station, on C. P. R., fourteen miles from Brandon. Particulars from R. BRUCE, Urmston, Douglas P. O., Manitoba.

ONLY 21 CENTS Look here! Upon receipt of 20 cents, silver, and one cent stamp, will send to any address a complete receipt of the Paul Brothers' celebrated writing ink, also a number of other ink receipts. Give your address plainly. Address, W. C. MEDILL, Huston, Ont.

FARM FOR SALE.—Lots 21 and 23 on the second concession, Township of Greenock, County of Bruce; 200 acres. There are a good frame house and two good barns on the place. There are 120 acres cleared, in good state of cultivation; thirty acres slashed. This is a good farm, and will be sold cheap and on easy terms. Apply to L. T. GRANT, Woodstock.

THE BLIND afflicted SEE.—Those are requested to get Williams' Eye Water, it cures all diseases of the eye that are curable, even Color Blindness, ask your druggists for it. Wholesale by Lyman Sons & Co., Montreal. Send for circular to see the marvelous cures effected in Montreal by GEO. W. L. LAMB, 709 St. Lawrence street, or at GARDNER'S Drug Store, corner McGill and Notre Dame streets.

TREES! TREES! TREES!

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

The filling of orders from dealers specially solicited. We have ample stock and facilities for filling out in large or small quantities, on short notice, a general assortment of Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Shrubs, Roses, Russian Mulberry, &c. Railroad to our grounds

H. H. HURD & SON, Proprietors,
Halton Nurseries, Burlington, Ont.

SEEDS WM. EWING & CO., Seed Merchants, 142 McGill St., Montreal, will forward their Illustrated Seed Catalogue free to all Applicants. We give special attention to Seed Grain and Grass Seeds. Our new Early Scotch Bearded Wheat is the Earliest and Heaviest cropping variety of Spring Wheat yet introduced. Correspondence invited.

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their hay season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price list to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 493, Montreal.

R. W. PRITTIE.

Real Estate Agent.

Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee & Financial Agent Room C. Arcade, Yonge St., Toronto. Money to Loan. Estates managed. Properties Enhanced.

ENGRAVERS

Mfrs. of HAND STAMPS Steel Alphabets kept in stock & cut to order Brass Stamps in any size & style fine RUBBER STAMPS. Type, Copper &

W. & F. P. Currie & Co

100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.

Importers of

Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings. Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting. Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay. Borax, Roman Cement, Blue Clay. Manufacturers of Brass or Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs.

FOR PLEASANT SEWING

—USE ONLY—

Clapperton's Spool Cotton

Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on all sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry-Goods Dealers.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE

SEWING MACHINE

PRICE $25 CASH.

Our new machine is now ready, and is as good as any sold by Agents at $65.

SEE TESTIMONIAL

LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 1884.

Machine arrived all right, and it is certainly well worth the money you ask for it, with its present improvements. I prefer it to the "Singer," "Wanzer" or any other make at $60 each. Yours truly,

AARON HAWKINS.

New Attachments, New Furniture, New Stand.

Send stamp for samples of sewing and our elegant descriptive photographs of the machine before buying from Agents.

MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL.

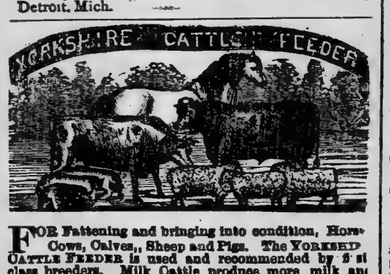
BONUS:—From now until March 31st, 1885 we will give to any person sending us $35.00 cash in advance for one of our machines, a handsome combination table and bracket lamp complete. These lamps are something new, and the maker wants them introduced.

If you or any of your friends want a machine don't delay, but send to

Co-Operative Sewing Machine Co.,

22 James St. South, Hamilton, Ont.

Island Home



Stock Farm,

GROSSE ISLE, MICH.

IMPORTED PERCHERON HORSES.

All stock selected from the get of sires and dams of established reputation and registered in the French and American Stud Books. We have a very large stock of imported stallions and brood mares on hand. Prices reasonable. Correspondence solicited. Send for illustrated catalogue, free by mail. Address SAVAGE & FARNUM, Detroit, Mich.

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses Cows, Calves, Sheep and Pigs. The YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time, and saves Food.

Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 500 Feeds.

HUGH MILLER and Co.,

AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,

167 King St East, Toronto.

For Sale by druggists everywhere.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.

DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

HAND STAMPS

METAL & RUBBER DATERS, SELF-INKERS & BANKING STAMPS,

NOTARY SEALS, &C. AGENTS WANTED.

KENYON, TINGLEY & STEWART MFG. CO.

72 KING ST. WEST.

R. U. AWARE

THAT

Lorillard's Climax Plug

bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

Files

REMOVED

DON'T WASTE TIME OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FILE

150 Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Portland every Tuesday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax, N. S., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail from Portland to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and between Liverpool and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

For freight, passage or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; Cunard & Co, Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John, N. B.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. F.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; [illegible]

Dominion Line of Steamships

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Friday during the winter months. Sailing dates from

PORTLAND.

Dominion	March 5	Toronto	[illegible]
Montreal	March 12	Montreal	[illegible]
Brooklyn	March 26

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool, $55, $60. Return, $90. $108, $117, $126 according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, Steerage lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in the steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway agent or local agent of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & Co.,
General Agents, Montreal.

CAUTION

Each Plug of the

MYRTLE NAVY

IS MARKED

T. & B.

In Bronze Letters.

NONE OTHER GENUINE

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.

50 2nd hand, Bicycles & Tricycles.

Send for list.

A. T. LANE, Montreal

SEEDS

RENNIE'S SEEDS are THE BEST

Illustrated Catalogue for 1885

Containing description and prices of the choicest FIELD, GARDEN & FLOWER SEEDS

Mailed free. Every Farmer and Gardener should have a copy before ordering seeds for the season. Handsomest catalogue published.

WM. RENNIE, TORONTO

CONBOY'S

CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

M. W. DUNHAM

Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,

HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE

Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000

which includes

75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES

Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE

EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA

STOCK ON HAND

150

Imported Brood Mares

250 Imported Stallions

Old enough for service,

100 COLTS

Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by intelligent breeders that however well-bred a horse may be said to be, if pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the seal of the French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free, illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Société Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884, purchased by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by the celebrated artist Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF

It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating, properties of beef, and the only one which has the power to supply nourishment for brain, and bone, and muscle.

The Temperance Colonization Society LIMITED.

Free Homesteads. One Hundred and Sixty Acres of Beautiful Land Free to Actual Settlers.

SPECIAL ADVANTAGES:

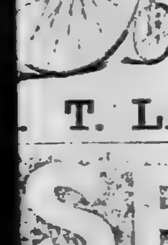
First class land; plenty of pure water; navigable river passing through it; sober, thrifty, moral neighbors; healthy climate; no fevers; convenient to coal mines; season longer than in Manitoba; supply store in the colony; located in centre of fertile belt.

FIRST EXCURSION TO THE COLONY, ABOUT APRIL 2ND.

FURTHER EXCURSIONS TO FOLLOW DURING THE SEASON.

Maps of the Colony and City, and all information furnished on application.

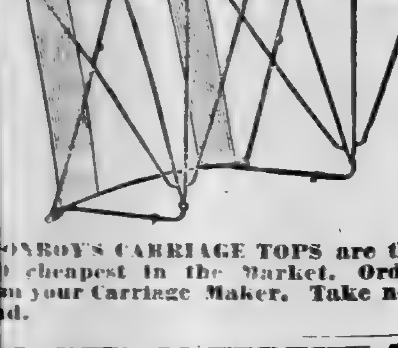
HEAD OFFICE, - - - 114 King Street West, Toronto.



W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Manager.

Files REBOU
DON'T WASTE TIME, OR BRING ...
THE ONTARIO FILE
Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents ...

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Portland every ... Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly, and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.
For freight passage or other information apply to ... Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; ... & Co, Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; ... Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & ... Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; ... Montreal.



Dominion Line of Steamships
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every ... during the winter months. Sailing dates from PORTLAND.
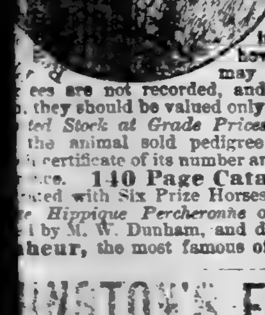
Dominion March 5 | Toronto
Montreal March 12 Montreal
Brooklyn March 26 |
Rates of passage. Cabin, ... to Liverpool ... $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, Steerage ... lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway agent or local agent of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

CAUTION
Each Plug of the
MYRTLE NAVY
IS MARKED
T. & B.
In Bronze Letters.
NONE OTHER GENUINE.



PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for list.
T. LANE, Montreal.

SEEDS
RENNIE'S SEEDS are THE BEST
Illustrated Catalogue for 1885
containing description ... of the choicest
FIELD, GARDEN & FLOWER SEEDS

CONROY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order ... from your Carriage Maker. Take no other.

M. W. DUNHAM
Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,
HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE
Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000
which includes
75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES
whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE
EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA
STOCK ON HAND
150 Imported Brood Mares
250 Imported Stallions Old enough for service,
100 COLTS Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders ... however well-bred ... may be said to be, if ... pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authenticated, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish the animal sold pedigree verified by the original certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. Illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884; taken by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
... the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious ... together with ... of beef, and ... power to supply ... heat, and bone, and muscle.

...nization Society
...ED.
... Hundred and Sixty Acres of Best ... Land Free to Actual Settlers.
...AGES:
... thorough ... sober, thrifty, moral neighbours ... in Manitoba; ... centre of fertile belt.
...Y, ABOUT APRIL 2ND ...
... DURING THE SEASON.
... information furnished on application. ...
King Street West, Toronto.
... PEMBERTON PAGE, Manager.

...OR THE FARMER.

Sowing Clover Seed.

...erience and science are agreed in ... to the advantages of growing as ... clover as possible on all farms ... wheat, barley, oats, and other ce... ...re the main object of the agricul... As long as land will grow good ...of clover, we need not fear exhaus... ...the soil But clover often fails, ...e evil is increasing In many cases ... due to the difficulty of getting a ... catch." The seed fails to germi... Occasionally this is attributable to ...eed. It is much more likely, how... ...hat the trouble is in the soil. The ... our soils are cultivated, and espe... ...when little manure is used, or green ...plowed under, the poorer the soil ...es in organic matter. We see no ... diminution in the yield of grain. This is because we cultivate bet... ...but at the same time there can be ...bt that the mechanical condition of ...l is less favorable for the germina... ...small seed, like clover. The soil ... and the surface less mellow and ...than when it was full of decaying ...and other organic matter.

...en we sow clover and grass seed on ... crops where the land has been re... ...plowed or cultivated and harrowed, ...l is, or may be, sufficiently fine, ...and mellow to insure the germina... ...f the seed. But when the seed is ...n the spring, on winter wheat or ... rye, the soil is often as hard and ... the surface as a barn floor. In ... case harrowing before or after ... the seed is decidedly advantage... We might harrow before sowing ...ed and roll afterwards.

...y of our farmers sow timothy ...eed with the wheat in the autumn, ...e clover in the spring. In such a ...arrowing is apt to pull up or smoth... ...e of the young grass-plants, and the ...eans likely to insure a good catch ...er is early sowing. In such a case, ... practice of sowing in the spring, ...there is a light covering of snow on ...ound, or when the soil is frozen ...nough to allow the sower to walk ...tably over it, is a good one. When ...st is out of the ground or the snow ...ears, the clover seed will sink into ...ft soil and germinate. Our own ...e is to sow about six quarts of ... seed and four quarts of timothy ...er acre. Many sow less clover ...d more timothy seed. Much de... ...on the condition of the land.

Items for April.

...er turn the soil when it is so wet ... will bake into hard lumps and be ...t to pulverize with the harrow and ... No seed should be sown or plant... ... soil unless it is rich, moist and ... A soil that is late in drying out ... to be thoroughly underdrained. ...st field crop sown should be wheat, ...is needs to go in as soon as the soil ... prepared. Oats come next, fol... ...by barley. Beets need to be sown ... Soak and sprout the seeds before ... them. The wet seeds may be ...with land plaster, after which they ... easily sown. Grass is one of the ...nportant of farm crops. Our far... ...eed to go to England and other old ...es to study the subject of perma... ...astures and meadows and to fully ...ate the value of mixed grasses. ... of a half dozen sorts we should ... score or more kinds upon the same ... A little concentrated commercial ...er spread upon an old pasture will ... it and give it a new lease of life. ...ass land may be rolled as soon as ...mping of the team does no injury. ...esses the heaved roots and stones ...to place and gives a smooth sur... Clover seed may be sown this ... Provide for any crops that are ... by the soiling system. Overhaul ...hinery and prepare it for use du... ...ny days.

...ood Time to Run in Debt.

...ill not take the responsibility of ... you to run in debt. It may be ...t and wise to do so, and it may ...e thing is certain, it is a good time ...e needed improvements on the ...nd elsewhere. Pluck is better ...pital. Do not say that we are ... too much of everything now, and ...s a good time to stop. It will be ... mistake. If you are going to ... all, farm well. Raise good crops, ...od horses, cows, sheep, hogs and ... Cultivate the land thoroughly, ... where needed, feed stock liber... ... make good manure, and apply it ...best paying crops. Have faith in ...re. In England it is considered ... a farmer to run in debt, in order ... his land, and there are corpora... ...ady to loan him money for this ... You may feel confident that ...ducts of man's brains and labor, ...l, will always be needed. Make ... mind to do a certain work in the ...nd get ready for it this winter.

Live Stock Notes.

...ork horses now need an abun... ... strengthening food. Keep the ... clean and soft. It is easier to ... galls than to cure them, especial... ...g this busy season, when a horse's ... most constant and valuable. ...orses working upon soft ground ... shod when they are barefoot. ...eed careful watching during this ... When a cow's time approaches, ... should be reduced. Look out ...get and use the simple remedies ...entioned in these columns. Ewes ...mbs need abundance of food, other... ... lambs as well as the dams will ... If ticks are troublesome use a dip ...co water, or some one of the sev-eral preparations sold in the shops. Swine need a run, and may do much good in the orchard. If the poultry have vermin, use kerosene upon the roosts and walls of the house. A dust bath is enjoyed by fowls.

An Interview With Arabi Pasha.

Arabi was dressed in a loose light-brown overcoat of unmistakable British make, with white duck trousers and waistcoat, and the inseparable fez. He was at work writing, with his back to the garden, and his face to the dead wall, which might with a little care bloom with jessamine, with the breath of which all the garden is sweet. He showed us his work a little later, displaying with childlike pride the laboriously made English characters by which he had spelt out "By-and-bye," "A time will come," and other simple sentences, which formed his English lesson. His exercise-book had originally been designed for accounts, and he now filled the money column with an Arabic phrase, translating it into English on the border line. As he opened the book he disclosed a couple of cheap New-Year cards, the remembrance of unknown admirers in England. The literature was execrable; but the gay colors seemed to please the Egyptian, and he evidently treasured them.

Two or three men in native dress were standing about the stables which flanked one side of the house. A gentleman whom we subsequently knew as the interpreter advanced to receive us as the carriage entered the grounds. Arabi silently bowed a welcome, but did not seem inclined for conversation with casual strangers. Many passers-by call in, and he is not quite sure that all are friendly. We had an introduction from a trusted personal friend, which smoothed matters, and presently the cold suspicious manner was altered, and the silent man became loquacious. He has so far profited by his studies in English as to be able to carry forward simple conversation. He will soon pass by his interpreter, whose command of English is not extensive, the effort of translation causing him piteously to perspire.

Arabi had no objection whatever to discuss political affairs; he even ostentatiously persisted in doing so from the standpoint of a permanent exile. Like Victor Hugo after the coup d'etat, he has taken a solemn oath (perhaps superfluous in the existing circumstances) never to let his foot press the soil of Egypt while Tewfik reigns.

Qui, tant qu'il sera la qu'on cede ou qu'on persiste,
O France France aimee, et qu'on pleur et toujours
Je ne reverrai pas to terre douce et triste;
Tombeau de mes aieux nid de mes amours!

Thus speaks Victor Hugo, in "Les Chatiments."

"I will never go back to Egypt as long as it is enslaved by Tewfik," Arabi says, with unwonted excess of animation. "I have no desire to see Egypt while it is a land of slaves. Once it was a country that smelled sweet to the nostrils; now it stinks. Its wells are covered with earth; there is no refreshment in it. Why does not England make Egypt free?"

Talking again of Tewfik, and contrasting him with his father, he said, "Ismail is a clever man, but a rogue. Tewfik is not clever enough to be a rogue; he is simply foolish. I do not think he knows the difference between right and wrong."

Of England, whose arms chased him from Alexandria and routed him at Tel-el-Kebir, Arabi speaks with unfeigned respect, and with an affectionate regard which, if not real, is well assumed.

"I hope to see England some day," he said. "I am learning English fast, and and write it, too. Look here."

Then he brought out his lesson-book, and gazed with a pleased, fond smile upon his tremendous and painful feats of caligraphy.

The Green Chicken.

A short time back a green parrot who was allowed the run of a London garden had taken it into his head to climb a tree, to get on the dividing-wall of that and other gardens, and to make voyages of exploration. He had arrived at a place where the brick wall was surmounted by a green trellis, and he perched himself on this, occasionally exclaiming, "Mother!" in a heartrending tone. The garden which he thus dominated was inhabited by a red tom-cat of decided character, who apparently took this as a challenge. He quickly mounted the wall and the trellis, and began hostile approaches in form. The scene was too interesting to be interrupted prematurely; but the household of the red cat promptly armed themselves with weapons, and attained a point of vantage whence they could protect the bird, who, though a stranger, was known and appreciated. But the parrot had sufficient resource. For a time it paid no apparent attention to the cat, but gazed into vacancy, ejaculating "Mother!" Exactly as the cat crouched for a spring at a foot or two distance, and as the spectators were wondering whether brooms ought to come into play, the parrot made a half face with the speed of lightning, rose on its heels like a cock, flapped its wings, also chanticleer fashion, and pounced on the cat with wings and beak. It did it no harm beyond a decided buffetd but the cat was so completely bewildere; that it nearly fell off the trellis and shuffled back several feet, while the parrot contemplated it with the air of a natural philosopher, and again cried "Mother!" At this point the cat, completely beaten, was picked off the wall by a benevolent cook, and retired to ruminate on the unsportsmanlike oddities of "green chickens."

The strike among the weavers at Kensington, Pa., has now lasted for four months, and it is said that in that time they have lost $1,000,000 in wages.

FOR THE SOUDAN AND TONQUIN.

American Canned Meats for the English and French Soldiers.

Within the past two months the English and French Governments have given heavy orders for canned meats in the United States, for the use of the armies in Egypt and Tonquin. The orders have been mainly for beef, and the money so far expended amounts to some $800,000. Cases of cans are being shipped weekly to London and Paris. The shippers are Armour, Plankington & Co., McNeil & Libby, and Fairbanks & Co. Recently Armour, Plankington & Co. received an order for 400,000 pounds of beef, making altogether 3,000,000 pounds which they have thus far sold to the English Government.

Most of the canned goods consist of corned and roast beef, ready cooked and put up with special reference to use in hot climates. It is packed in six-pound cans by instruction. Mr. Armour said, "We slaughter between 600,000 and 700,000 cattle every year. Only about 150 pounds of each animal are fit for canning, as the fattyparts cannot be used. To provide 3,000,000 pounds of canned beef, or 500,000 cans, would require 20,000 cattle. The parts not used in canning are sold as fresh meat. Our business with the English Government has been between $300,000 and $400,000. We understand that the meat is for the Egyptian army, and is sent from London to Alexandria and Suakim. It is bought in this country because there are no other dealers who could fill the orders.

A western cattle dealer was asked whether the demand for cattle, caused by the order received by Armour & Co. from the British Government for 5,000,000 cans of meat for the army in Egypt, would put up the price of cattle on the ranches.

"Texas," he said, "furnishes the canners. Their meat doesn't come from the fattening ranges of Colorado, Wyoming and Montana. The demand for Texans may be increased a little, and it will be a godsend to some of the cattle men down there. This Texas trade depends on the demand for canned beef, and for heifers and stock cattle for the northern ranges. Seventy thousand cattle, however, can be sent on for cannine purposes and not be missed even after this hard winter. No, we won't calculate on that demand, but it ought to please the Texas cowmen after their hard luck."

A New Kind of Cruiser for the British Navy.

The new belted cruisers, or, as they have been called in Parliament, the "new Merseys," for which certain shipbuilders have been invited to tender, differ from their more recent predecessors in having 10 feet more beam, being 300 feet by 56 feet, and in having an increase of 1 300 tons in the displacement, making them up to 5,000 tons. The protective deck has been replaced by an armor belt 200 feet long, formed of 10 inch steel-faced armor of 6-inch of backing. The ends are protected by an underwater belt similar to the Merseys. As the ends of the belted cruisers are very fine, the part of the water-line not actually protected by armor is proportionately very small. The engines of these vessels are to be 7,500 horse power, to be obtained by the use of forced draught in a closed stokehole. There are four boilers, double-ended, having a total grate surface of about 500 square feet, and working a pressure of 120 pounds. Their total weight is not to exceed 720 tons. They are of a similar type to those supplied to the Leander class by Messrs. Robert Nailer & Sons, having cast steel framing and hollow steel shafting throughout.

The armament consists of two 18-ton guns, arranged—one forward, to fire all round the bow to about fifty degrees abaft the beam, and one aft, to fire through a similar sweep round the storn. In addition to these, there are twelve 4 ton guns and six machine guns. A torpedo armament will also be provided, both above and under water. The construction of the hulls does not materially differ from that of the smaller and earlier ironclads of Her Majesty's navy, such as the Hydra, Nelson, and Conqueror, but they are of steel throughout.

These belted cruisers will each be manned by a crew of from 330 to 350 officers and men, for whom very good accomodation is found on the second deck above the water line. All the usual refinements of a cruiser have to be provided in their most modern form. When completed these vessels will be works of modern engineering second to none. As vessels of war they cannot fail to be formidable. Their weak point appears to be their speed, which is not to be more than eighteen knots.

A Man Not Apt to be Discharged.

Jobbins observed a man going about in a country village hanging up street lamps in a primitive way. He remarked to a friend that the illuminator was quite sure of holding his situation as long as he cared to.

"Why?" inquired the friend.

"Behause a man that hangs fire isn't apt to be discharged," was the reply.

What Makes the Car Go.

"My dear, what makes a train move?" asked McSwillighen of his spouse.

"The engine, of course," replied Mrs. McS.

"Mistaken," said her husband.

"What is it, then, I'd like to know?"

"The freight, my dear, makes the cargo."

COLD FEET AND THEIR CURE.

One of the Evils That Result from Wearing Tight Shoes.

"Improper treatment of the feet and lack of attention to their needs is the cause of many disorders and nervous affections," remarked a physician the other day to a young school teacher who had applied to him to get relief for "cold feet and headaches." "Now, the person who has cold feet is almost sure to have a headache," he continued, "for the fact that the feet are cold shows that the circulation is weak. The blood not circulating freely in the extremities crowds into the upper portion of the body, and the pressure in the blood vessels of the head, of course, occasions headache. Feet that are almost constantly cold tend to cause congestion of the internal organs. The blood vessels of these cold feet become narrowed by the lack of flow of the vital fluid to them, thus perpetuating and increasing the difficulty. Those who are troubled in this way should take plenty of exercise in the open air and soak their feet in warm water every night. This counteracts the tendency to congestion, enlarges the vessels, and helps permanently to relieve the feet of their special tendency to coldness.

"Feet that perspire and emit a bad odor should be washed every night, too. After they have been bathed a two per cent. solution of carbolic acid should be applied. The stockings, too, should be changed daily and the boots should have inner soles that can be taken out each day and likewise dipped in a two per cent. solution of carbolic acid. The reason that this process is necessary is that the bad odor is due to microscopic organisms and the acid kills them. The soldiers of the Bavarian army are required to bathe their feet every day, and rub them with a pomade composed of two parts of salicylic acid in 100 parts mutton tallow, to prevent perspiration. Each soldier is provided with twenty-nine grammes of this pomade.

"Most feet can be kept soft and healthy by soaking them in water as hot as can be borne before retiring, using ammonia and soap freely. They should then be rubbed briskly with a rough bath towel, and glycerine, mixed with an equal part of carbolic acid two per cent. strong, applied to them. Mutton or beef tallow will do instead of the glycerine.

Another thing that helps keep the feet cold is the conventional shoe. Even if the shoes you wear are large enough, which they very seldom are, they would pull the muscles of the feet awry, pinch up the bones in one place and let them spread out in another until they could have no natural action, and, consequently, the circulation is interfered with. Yes, yes, I know," the physician added, testily, as the young lady opened her mouth in a mild protest, "that a loose shoe could be quite as uncomfortable as a tight one. I know the shoe ought to fit as closely as the stocking, and that a loose-fitting shoe is quite as productive of corns and discomfort as one that pinches. But where it should be tight, young lady, is around the ankle, across the instep, around the arch of the foot and the heel. But the front half should have a large sole and a loose upper. Then the bones in that part of your foot will have plenty of room for movement. With the kind of shoes you are now wearing these bones are all squeezed together and the joints almost telescoped. Of course your feet can't help being cold. No; I can't give you any medicine for it. Get yourself a sensible pair of boots, take care of your feet as I have advised you, and you'll have no more trouble."

Truth Stranger than Fiction.

Moret, the French colonel, afterwards general of brigade, passed through a series of most remarkable, yet perfectly authenticated, adventures during Napoleon's Spanish campaign. On one occasion he was taken prisoner by the guerillas, and sentenced to be shot along with twelve of his comrades. The prisoners were placed against a wall and fire opened on them. Moret was not hit, but dropped to the ground and pretended to be dead. When the coast was clear he arose and rejoined his comrades in safety. Four weeks later he was taken again. This time he was hanged, but owing to some defect in the slip knot, he was found to be alive when cut down by a troop of Uhlans, who came upon the scene in the nick of time. At the end of six months he was a third time captured by the enemy, who bound him hand and foot and threw him into the Gaudiana. They saw him sink, and marched off in triumph. But Moret was an expert swimmer. Diving and swimming under the water, he reached the opposite wooded shore, Where he got rid of his bonds. After that the colonel became an object of superstition. The guerillas fled whenever they saw him. Ballads were composed on him, in which he was described as the incarnate prince of the lower regions. He was thought to be bullet-proof, and that death had no power over him. To this superstition he owed his safety when the Spaniards attacked him at Longrons, and were already on the point of victory. Springing up out of his sleep, he rushed into the street, with his sword drawn, and in very primitive costume. At his appearance the Spaniards were paralysed. They fled crying, "The fiend! the indestructible fiend!" and the French previously beaten now remained masters of Longrons.

A French physician has written a long letter on the advantages of groaning and crying. He tells of a man who reduced his pulse from 126 to 60 in the course of a few hours by giving vent to his emotions.

An Indian Encounter.

Some of the well authenticated adventures of the early settlers of the country with Indians, are more strange and thrilling than any invented by the romancer. One of the most remarkable of them is narrated in the Christian Intelligencer, as showing what sufferings men can endure and survive. Capt. Robert Benham was one of a party of seventy who, in 1779, were ascending the Ohio under the command of Major Rogers. At the mouth of the Licking River, they saw a few Indians at the end of a sand-bar, and thought to capture them by cutting off their retreat.

But they fell into a trap. When they landed, several hundred savages in ambush, started up and fired upon them. Rogers and forty-five others were killed on the spot. The remainder saw with dismay the men who had been left in charge of the boats put off in one of them, and the remaining boats were in the hands of the enemies. There was nothing left to do but to turn furiously upon their foes and force their way through them under cover of the approaching darkness. Many more men were cut down in this attempt, and a miserable remnant escaped to Harrodsburgh.

Capt. Benham was shot through both hips in this sortie. Noticing a large fallen tree near by, he dragged himself to it with great pain, and escaped discovery. He did not dare to stir until the evening of the second day, for fear of being seen and heard by some wandering savage.

He could not have stirred if he would, and began to fear that he should die of starvation, when he was so fortunate as to shoot a racoon, though he saw no way by which he could reach and cook it.

To his surprise and terror, the report of his gun was followed by a human cry not more than fifty yards off. Supposing it to be an Indian, he reloaded his gun and lay ready to defend himself. The cry was soon repeated, nearer by. But Benham remained quiet till he heard it a third time, saying in unmistakable English,—

"Whoever you are, in mercy answer me!" On replying, the two men were soon face to face.

What was their mutual amazement when they discovered that while Benham's hips were both shattered, the newcomer's arms were both broken! The poor fellows made up one complete man between them, supplementing each others deficiencies of limb and of the means of self-preservation.

Benham could use his gun and shoot game, and his ally could go after it and kick it to him to be cooked, gathering brushwood also in this way. Benham had to feed his friend, and dress his wounds as well as his own, tearing up both their shirts for the purpose. The way they obtained water was for the armless man to take one of their hats between his teeth, and wading into the river up to his neck to fill the hat by ducking his head.

When all the birds and squirrels within reach had been killed, the man who had legs would take a wide circuit and drive the game, especially wild turkeys, within gunshot of the man who had arms.

Thus they preserved their lives for several weeks, until their wounds were sufficiently healed for the one to hobble on crutches, and the other to feed himself with one of his hands. Then transferring themselves to the river-side, they waited for some boat to carry them to the Falls of the Ohio.

They were finally rescued, and both in time were restored to health. Benham served through the whole Indian war in the North-West, and finally ended his days in peace on the very spot where this accident took place, having purchased the land.

Coloring a Meerschaum.

The most common complaint is that their meerschaums will not turn from their natural yellowish-white color to a rich brown, even after the smokers have smoked themselves into the color of a dried mummy in the effort. After the artist has finished cutting the design and has shaped the bowl, the finished bowl is boiled in wax. Why in wax? Because the wax penetrates the pores for a short distance beneath the surface and serves to keep the coloring matter in the pipe. The coloring matter is the oil of tobacco, not nicotine, as many erroneously suppose, and it sinks into the meerschaum, which is simply a very fine porous clay, and is stopped by the wax before it is driven out at the outer surface by the heat inside. If it were not for the wax the coloring matter would pass out and get rubbed off and the pipe would never be colored. A glazing of glass would do as well as wax, but wax is the cheapest material that has been found for the purpose. Now when over-anxious smokers try to hurry the process of coloring the pipe, by smoking pipeful after pipeful of tobacco, the wax is driven out, leaving the pipe raw and dry. The nearer to the top of the bowl the wax is kept the finer it will look when colored. The smoker should take long, slow pulls at the pipe, and after one pipeful is exhausted the pipe should be laid down to cool off before it is filled again.

He Wanted a Receipt for His Girl's Engagement Ring

Young man—"Your daughter has referred me to you, sir."

Old man—"All right, you have my consent. It that all you want?"

Young men—"Well—er—one thing more I would like to ask, sir. If I should present your daughter with a diamond engagement ring, would you be willing to—er—give me a receipt for it, in case anything unpleasant should happen?"

The Standard.

MARKDALE APRIL 2, 1885.

More Peace.

LONDON, March 31.—The belief is general that the Russo-Afghan dispute will be amicably adjusted in a few days. At the Stock Exchange this feeling was strongly manifested by the advance in prices.

FENIAN RUMORS.

It was inevitable that the American agitators who live by notoriety should attempt to convert the risings of Canadian Indians and Halfbreeds into a means of replenishing their coffers. They are filling the American press with rumors of what they are going to do. No Canadian need be alarmed about their bluster. When ten times as many men have been sent to the North-West as are now under arms, there will be left many times more than enough to take care of any Fenian squad which may escape the vigilance of the American authorities. And the Fenian brags garts may as well take notice that in the present temper of the Canadian people it will go hard with any person who is caught in the act of perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any outrage.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

A fight between England and Russia would be like a fight between a fish and a dog. If England could get at Russia at several points by water, she would make short work of her, but this was the great difficulty on the last occasion upon which these two fought. The fighting, should it come to that, will be done mainly in Afghanistan, and the seat of war will be a long way from the base of supplies of both combatants. England will have the advantage, however, as she will be able to send her troops from India; but Russia has such an enormous number of armed men that she could keep pouring them into the scene of the conflict at a great rate. The railways which she has built will enable her to transport her troops with much greater facility than she did during the Crimean war. But England's operations would not be altogether confined to Afghanistan. Her fleet would be sent into the Baltic and Russian ports would be bombarded. Russia would also be cooped up in the Black sea, provided the Turks stood by England—and standing by England is the only chance the Turks have of preventing their territory from being swallowed up by Russia.

A PRINCELY FORTUNE.

A man may possess the fortune of a prince but can never possess happiness without good health; to secure which the blood must be kept pure and every organ in proper action. Burdock Blood Bitters purify the blood and regulate all organs.

A Case Worth Remembering.

James Hoffron is a farmer in Amaranth, and resides near Waldemar. Last June he was visited by a washing machine agent named Joseph Roulston, who offered to appoint him sole agent for Amaranth. Hoffron did not want to have anything to do with the machines, but as he was told there was a fortune in them, and that he would have nothing to pay if he did not sell any machines he consented to accept the agency. He was then asked to sign a paper agreeing to act as agent, and this he did by making his mark. The paper was nothing less than a promissory note for $72, payable in six months. Roulston went to Orangeville with the note and sold it to Gilchrist & Kent, who knew Hoffron to be worth the money. Imagine Hoffron's amazement when he was notified to pay the note of $72. He would not pay and was sued by Mr. Kent. The trial came off last week before Judge McCarthy. His Honor considered that the note has been secured through the grossest misrepresentation and fraud on the part of Roulston, and gave Judgment in favor of Hoffron with costs.—Ontario Reformer.

SURE TO CONQUER.

The most troublesome cough is sure to yield if timely treated with Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. Pleasent to take and safe for young or old.

North-West Rebellion.

A Serious Encounter.

Two Police and Ten Civilians Killed.

GREAT EXCITEMENT THROUGHOUT CANADA.

An Army to be Thrown into the Country at once.

The Rebellion to be Put Down at all Hazards.

Ottawa, March 27.—In the house of commons this evening Sir John Macdonald, amid considerable excitement, read the following despatch from Col. Irvine, the chief officer of the mounted police, who left Regina for Fort Carleton with 90 men some days ago. The despatch was sent from Carleton, but bears no Carleton date, the Winnipeg date being today:—

"A party under my command has just arrived here. When nearing Fort Carleton I found that Crozier with a party of 100 had a short time before gone to Duck Lake to secure a large quantity of supplies there stored. He was met by 200 rebels who held an advantageous position at Beardy's reserve and endeavored to surround the police and civilians. The rebels fired first, then fighting became general. Crozier, owing to the disadvantage at which he was taken, retreated in an orderly manner, arriving at the fort at the same time as my party. Ten civilians of Prince Albert and two policemen were killed and four citizens and seven constables wounded. The number of rebels killed is not known. The police and civilians acted with the greatest bravery under a heavy fire.

POLICE KILLED.

Reg. No. 1,008, Constable T. G. Gibson.

Reg. No. 1,055, Constable G. P. Arnold.

CIVILIANS KILLED.

Captain John Meriton.
W. Napier.
James Baker.
S. Elliot.
Robert Middleton.
D. Mackenzie.
D. McPhail.
Charles Hewitt.
Joseph Anderson.
Alex. Fisher.

CIVILIANS WOUNDED.

Captain Moore (leg broken).
A. MacNabb.
W. R. Markley.
Alex. Stewart.

POLICE WOUNDED.

Inspector Howe.
Corporal Gilchrist.
Reg. No. 852, Constable Garrett.
Reg. No. 1,117, Constable S. F. Gordon.
Reg. No. 1,045, Constable A. M. Smith.
Reg. No. 1,048, Constable J. J. Moore.
Reg. No. 935, Constable A. Miller.

Winnipeg, March 29.—Later—An official dispatch was received this morning by the Hudson Bay Company from Q'Appelle, stating that Fort Carlton has been burned. The company also received another dispatch from its trusted agent at Prince Albert, dated 27th, via Battleford, dated 28th, announcing that Col. Irvine with the 260 police under his command had evacuated Fort Carlton on the 27th, and had fallen back on account of the much more defensible character of the latter place, and also in view of the large number of people requiring protection. Before leaving Col. Irvine, who was in command of the police, destroyed the telegraphs and the stores, for fear of them falling into the hands of rebels. The dispatch also announces that Fort Carlton had been burned to the ground, but whether it had been set on fire by Col. Irvine's men on evacuation, or whether it had been subsequently burned by the rebels, the dispatch does not announce, a third contingency that it might have been burned accidentally during evacuation is suggested. It is thought that Col. Irvine's action in evacuating the fort, was rendered necessary by the scarcity of provisions, of which the supply at Carlton was known to be meagre. The absence of news from Prince Albert must not be interpreted as a matter for alarm, as the only means by which it could come is by Battleford, which is about 120 miles distant from Prince Albert.

TREACHERY OF REBELS.

The following dispatch from Battleford, dated the 28th, was received by the Hudson Bay Company to-day. The fight near Fort Carlton between the police and the half-breeds began by the rebels firing upon the police while Major Crozier was holding a parley with the rebels under a flag of truce. A dispatch to Governor Dewdney, filed at Qu'Appelle this morning, states that last night he and Archibald McDonald, chief factor of the Hudson's Bay company at Qu'Appelle, had a conversation with Piapot and the other restless chiefs who were in council yesterday. The result was that the Indians went peaceably back to their reserves. The dispatch further states that the half-breeds in that neighborhood are quiet.

AT QU'APPELLE.

QU'APPELLE STATION, March 29.—A terrific blizzard has been raging most of the day, and at this hour (9 p. m.) it is still snowing. This fresh snow will probably render the use of wagons for the transportation of the troops impossible. Sleighs could certainly make the journey in much better time. General Middleton keeps a close mouth, but it is evident that he does not intend to advance until more troops arrive, though he may, perhaps, go up to Fort Qu'Appelle, 19 miles north of here, whether some of the troops have already gone.

This main body of troops comfortably housed in sheds here, and all are anxious to be at work with the rebels. The battery was inspected by General Middleton this morning, and highly complimented. All day long the troops have been learning how to form zarebas. The farmers are flocking in with their teams. Should the campaign last much longer no seeding will be done this year. Freighters with supplies going north from the railway have been stopped on rout for fear they should be captured by the rebels. A number of scouts have been supplied by Mr. McDonald, the Hudson Bay factor at Fort Qu'Appelle who is discharging the duties of quarter-master-general with great ability. He is also gathering in forage the crops to the north having been almost a total failure from frost last year. All sorts of rumors are flying to-night, one being to the effect that a fight has occurred at or near Prince Albert in which 64 loyalists have been killed, but this is evidently one of the innumerable stories that are born on the plains. Telegraphic communication is still interrupted between Clarke's crossing on the main government line, and Prince Albert. All the troops here are well and full of enthusiasm, but the old soldiers are looking anxiously for reinforcements from Eastern Canada.

THE LATEST.

WINNIPEG, Midnight. March 29.—The latest dispatch from the west indicates that the indians are expected to attack Battleford to-morrow. Settlers and their families are being transported to Swift Current station. Great alarm is felt. Telegraph communication between Battleford and Edmonton has just been interupted. Grave fears are expressed that the Indians have cut the wires.

Winnipeg, Man., March 30.—The city is greatly excited over the outlook in the North-West on account of a general uprising of Indians being reported to be imminent. A despatch from Qu'Appelle reports an outbreak of Indians in the File Hills Reserve, 30 miles north-west of FortQu'Appelle. General Middleton, having ascertained that 300 Indians had joined the rebel movement there and killed the Indian Agent Nichols, sent forward to that point three companies of the Winnipeg Rifles, and one gun and a portion of the Field Battery. Gen. Middleton will not, however, move the main force until the arrival of the volunteers from the east, as his present force is not equal to the emergency should the Indians join Riel. The news from Battleford this morning than yesterday. The removal of the women and children to the Swift Current station, 180 miles, is no doubt to take due precaution. The telegraph line is still down beyond Battleford, and is attributed to emissaries of Riel rather than to Indians. No news from Col. Irvine since he left Carlton with the Mounted Police and civilians of that post. He has doubtless ere this reached Prince Albert. A courier may be despatched by him via the Carrot River settlement to the telegraph station at Humboldt. The citizens of Calgary are excited to day over rumored among the Blackfeet. This lacks confirmation, but should the Indians generally take to the war path, that would indicate that it would be on account of their being on the verge of starvation for the last three months. People east seem anxious about friends in Winnipeg, Portage La Prairie and Brandon, but no trouble is apprehended at those places as they are fully 600 miles from the seat of the trouble. Battalions are being raised throughout the Province and recruits are volunteering freely. Large orders are being given in Chicago by the Hudson Bay Company for provisions.

IS MORE PACIFIC

SIGNS OF AN OUTBREAK

A dispatch from Battleford says:—"We are in imminent danger from the Indians in the vicinity. Pound maker has gone into open rebellion and put the instructors and agents at defiance. They have left the reserve and are concentrating in large numbers in Battleford, and the hills are black with redskins. It is estimated that they are at least and more are coming in all the time. Several of them have come down to the town and threaten to burn it and take possession of the barracks and stores. All the women and children have been hurried into the barracks, and everything is being done to put the latter in the best possible condition for defence. All the men have been enrolled for service, and arms and ammunition have been issued to them. We will be able to raise a force of fully two hundred men of defence. Several houses in the town were broken into last night, and rifled. The few Halfbreeds who live about the town have gone to the hills ostensibly

FIVE HUNDRED STRONG,

TO BE OUT OF THE WAY,

but it is pretty certain that they will join the Indians and incite them to violence, when the worst is feared. The Indians will not remain long inactive, and they may descend upon the town at any moment and seize all the stores to provide themselves with provisions. There will likely be a general pow wow of the Indians some time to-day when they will make their demands known. The whites will protect their lives and property to the last, but owing to the superior number of the Indians, the position is most critical. Nearly all the police have been withdrawn to Prince Albert, and the supply of arms is limited. We hope for the best. Despatches from Qu'Appelle say the Indians at the File Hills have also risen, and have murdered the farm instructor.

REPORTED FALL OF BATTLEFORD.

WINNIPEG, March 30.—A private dispatch received from Battleford just before noon says: "Battleford has been captured, and the Indians have got possession of every house. The inhabitants have escaped to police barracks where they are now expecting an attack from the Indians, who are gathering on the south side of the Beaver river." This is believed to be an exaggerated vision of previous dispatches.

MONDAY IN TORONTO.

The scenes of excitement on the streets, especially about the city hall, have seldom been qualled in the history of Toronto. As early as six o'clock hundreds and uniformed volunteers streamed down to the drill shed, wild riders and wilder rumors flew about the city with bewildering rapidity, young ladies tramped with their departing lovers through the muddy roads, regardless of everything save those to whom they clung, while mothers and sisters bravely fought their way through the hustling, crushing croud in order to catch a last glimpse of the sons and brothers who had so nobly responded to the call of duty. West Market street, from King to the railway track, was one mass of humanity, so closely wedged together that it appeared as if a regiment of soldiers could not seperate them. At ten o'clock the crowd had become so great that they had literally forced their way into the daill shed, and had to be driven out through the east door by a squad of infantry. Special guards were placed at both entrances, and even ladies, unless they had with them permits, were refused admission. At half-past ten o'clock the Queen's Own bugle band sounded the old assembly call, "dress for parade," and immediately the soldiers, who had been lounging about in a aimless manner, brightened up, and in a moment were rushing about in every direction, stopping occasionally to say a hurried good-bye to friends. The few citizens who had gained access to the shed had hustle themselves in order to keep out of the way, and the small boys who clung to the windows in great crowds cheered lustily as the officers issued their orders. Shortly before 11 o'clock the bugles of both regments sounded the "fall in," and in a remarkable short time the battalions were ready for the march. The Grenadiers were placed at the eastern end of the shed, and presented a splendid appearance with their new fur caps, white cross-belts and belts, well-filled haversacks, heavy knapsacks and general air of determination. The battalion was formed into four companies, after which their rifles, accountrements were inspected by the respective captains.

THE EMBARKATION.

When the regiment arrived at the station they found the building and yard filled with people. The foot of Yonge and Simcoe streets were blocked with a dense mass of humanity, while that part of the Esplanade between the station and the dock was so jammed with people that it was impossible for a strong man to wedge his way through. The two special Canada Pacific railway trains ten cars each, and drawn by powerful locomotives, were standing on the tracks on the Esplanade just south of the station. The roofs of the cars as well as those of a couple of freight trains, were crowded to the edges with men and boys who had climed there to get a good view of the embarkation. Such an immense concourse of people has hardly ever been seen in Toronto. The crowds surrounding the station are estimated as numbering fifty thousand people and that is no exaggeration.

March 31.—Nicol, the farm instructor who was reported killed, has turned up all right. It is certain that, between half-breeds and Indians, Riel has now at least 2,000 men, and as the disaffection spreads, this number will, of course, increase.

Despatches from Battleford on the 30th were more reassuring, the Indians having committed no serious depredations.

A and B batteries are expected to arrive in Winnipeg by Sunday next.

A report to the effect that fenians were crossing the lines, has been contradicted.

Montreal, March 31.—The 65th Battalion Mounted Royal Rifles leave for the North-West to-morrow. The regiment will be composed of 250 picked men.

THE LATEST TO DATE.

Ottawa, March 31.—Just before adjournment Sir Hector Langevin read a telegram from Mr. Rae, the Indian agent at Battleford, which destroyed the hopes entertained previously by reason of the morning telegram from the same locality. The Stonies are on the warpath. All the Indians in the reserve have risen, and two instructors, Payne and Applegarth, formerly of the Eagle Hill farms, have been killed. The house journed in silence.

FOR ROUGH conditions of the Shampooing the head, Pimples, Eruption, and Skin Diseases, Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap.

A GOOD GUARANTEE.

H. B. Cochran, druggist, Lancaster, Pa., writes that he has guaranteed over 300 bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters for dyspepsia, billious attacks and liver and kidney troubles. In every case has it disappointed those who have used it. In Canada it gives the most general satisfaction.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths twentty five cents.

MARRIAGES.

ROBERTS—ATWILL—At City Hotel, Markdale, by the Rev. A. Wilson on Wednesday inst., Mr. Wm. R. Roberts of the to Miss Evangeline Atwill of Artemesia.

WALKER—MCFADDEN—At the Manse, Parsonage, Markdale, by Rev. W. on 31st ult., Mr. James Walker of to Miss Mary Ann McFadden of Glenelg.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 73	to
Spring Wheat	0 73	to
Barley	50	to
Peas	54	to
Oats	34	to
Butter	15	to
Eggs	15	to
Apples	50	to
Potatoes	18	to
Hay	0 00	to
Pork	5 00	to
Flour	3 75	to

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WO

H. B. HARRIS

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANI

MONUMENTS & HEADST

Mantles, Furniture Marbl

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Va Marble

Largest stock in the Dom select from. Personally selected at ries in Vermont. Will be sold which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARA

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, mixed gether, and oiled and Sandblasted the imperfections, and called White shed, and presented a splendid pearance with their new white cross-belts and belts, haversacks, heavy knapsacks general air of determination.

H. B. HARRIS

battalion was formed into four panies, after which their rifles accountrements were inspected the respective captains.

THE EMBARKATION.

When the regiment arrived at the station they found the building and filled with people. The foot of York Simcoe streets were blocked with a mass of humanity, while that part of Esplanade between the station and the was so jammed with people that it was possible for a strong man to wedge his through. The two special Canada Pa railway trains ten cars each, and drawn powerful locomotives, we standing on tracks on the Esplanade just south of station. The roofs of the cars as well those of a couple of freight trains, crowded to the adges with men and boys had climed there to get a good view of embarkation. Such an immense semblage of people has hardly ever been in Toronto. The crowds surrounding station are estimated as numbering thousand people and that is no exaggera

March 31.—Nicol, the farm instruc who was reported killed, has turned up right. It is certain that, between half-br and Indians, Riel has now at least 2,000 m and as the disaffection spreads, this num will, of course, increase.

Despatches from Battleford on the were more reassuring, the Indians ha committed no serious depredations.

A and B batteries are expected to arri
Winnipeg by Sunday next.

A report to the effect that fenians crossing the lines, has been contradicted

Montreal, March 31.—The 65th Batta
Mounted Royal Rifles leave for the N West to-morrow. The regiment will be posed of 250 picked men.

THE LATEST TO DATE.

Ottawa, March 31.—Just before adjo ment Sir Hector Langevin read a teleg from Mr. Rae, the Indian agent at Battlef which destroyed the hopes entertained viously by reason of the morning telegr from the same locality. The Stonies ar the warpath. All the Indians in the visi have risen, and two instructors, Payne Applegarth, formerly of the Eagle farms, have been killed. The house journed in silence.

For Rough conditions of the Sk
Shampooing the head, Pimp
Eruption, and Skin Diseases,
Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap.

A GOOD GUARANTEE.

H. B. Cochran, druggist, Lancas
Pa., writes that he has guaran over 300 bottles of Burdock B Bitters for dyspepsia, billious att and liver and kidney troubles. I case has it disappointed those used it. In Canada it gives the general satisfaction.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and D twenty five cents.

MARRIAGES.

Roberts—Atwill—At City Hotel, Mark
by the Rev. A. Wilson on Wednesday inst., Mr. Wm. R. Roberts of O to Miss Evangeline Atwill of Artem

Walker—McFadden—At the Meth
Parsonage, Markdale, by Rev. W. C on 31st ult., Mr. James Walker of B to Miss Mary Ann McFadden of Glen

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 73	to
Spring Wheat	0 73	to
Barley	50	to
Peas	54	to
Oats	34	to
Butter	15	to
Eggs	15	to
Apples	50	to
Potatoes	18	to
Hay	0 00	to
Pork	5 00	to
Flour	3 75	to

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WOR

H. B. HARRISO

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANIT

MONUMENTS & HEADSTO

Mantles, Furniture Marble,

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dom select from. Personally selected at t ries in Vermont. Will be sold at which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANT

N. B.—Beware of Monuments stones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, gether, and oiled and Sandblasted the imperfections, and called
H. B. HARRIS

Poetry.

WAR! WAR!

Of all the custom shoe shops
That are in the East or West,
McLeod's custom shoe shop
Is the cheapest and the best.

He has boots for all creation—
French leather and Spanish sole;
Here's a general invitation
To the people of the world.

So shove along, push along,
Making no delay,
But come from every nation,
And come from every way.

Our boots they are cheap enough,
So don't you be alarmed,
And if you call to see them
It will do you no harm.

In Spain they make our sole leather,
In France our Kip and Calf;
While McLeod, the manufacturer,
Makes up the finest half.

Our forefathers were great workmen,
But little did they dream
Of the grand display of fine work
That's at McLeod's shop to be seen.

So shove along, push along,
Making no delay,
But come from every nation,
And come from every way.

If your boots are in need of mending,
The uppers or the sole,
Just drop into McLeod's shop,
And they will stop the hole.

So if you want an easy boot—
A boot to fit your foot—
Leave your order at McLeod's shop,
And you will never rue it.

Correspondence.

Notice.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

The All-Important Question.

To the Editor of the Standard.

Dear Sir,—The present depression in the price of grain is a fitting time to cast our eyes abroad upon the world's resources for a substitute to re-fill our diminishing coffers, and a more certain income than that derived from uncertain grain-harvests.

During the present winter I had the pleasure of inspecting several herds of Holstein cattle in the County of Waterloo, more especially those of J. S Hallman and H Hilgarten, Esqs., of the township of Wilmot, in that County. My only knowledge of these cattls was derived from the short sketch given of them in the Agricultural report of Ontario. Hitherto my bias was in favour of the shorthorn Durham; but the report in question strongly inclined me to the opinion that the Holsteins were better adapted to the present status of the farmers of Grey than the Durhams, or any other breed; and this opinion was confirmed upon visiting the herds in question. The reasons for my preference are: They are more hardy than the Durhams, and little inferior to our Canadian cattle, in this respect.

They are one-third better milkers than the Durhams; and fully one-half better in butter and cheese production.

Up to two and three years old they are little inferior in size and weight to the Durhams.

At two years, they take on fat as readily as a full grown animal which the Durhams will not do until they arrive at maturity, which necessitates keeping bullocks of the latter breed thro' three winters instead of two, as in the case of the Holsteins, which form an important item of cost in our long winters; besides, the Holsteins, when turning on the third year are fully up to the standard weight for shipment to the home market.

They are better adapted to "crossing" with our common cattle than the Durhams, as may be evidenced by the slight improvement in the native stock of our County by the numberless sires imported here during the past twenty or twenty-five years—indeed it would almost seem as though there had been retrogression.

It is a well-known fact to experienced stock-breeders that certain classes of the same breed of animals deteriorate when "crossed," and vice versa, other classes are improved by the same process, the progeny engrossing the better qualities of both classes. In this respect the Holstein and Canadian cattle are a success, for the hybrids I saw in Co. Waterloo retained the size, milk and butter qualities of their Holstein ancestors, on the other hand they lost none of their Canadian hardiness.

What renders the Holstein breed especially well adapted to this County is, as I said before, their hardiness and excellent feeding qualities, their appetites keeping good during the "stalling" process; while the Durhams require constant change of diet, even in ordinary winter feeding. However, it is not the beef producing quality, alone, that renders the Holstein cattle so pre-eminently desirable for our County, with its unequalled pasturage, but the superior milk, butter and cheese qualities of those cows. They almost universally become mothers at two years old, and the test of one heifer of the above age in Mr. Hallman's herd averaged forty pounds of milk per day during a period of seven months. This ratio would indicate a yield of from seventy to eighty pounds per day upon arriving at maturity, with a lengthened period of from nine to ten months. Let it be borne in mind that it is no uncommon occurrence for Holstein cows to continue their milk flow up to the period of gestation. The gentleness of this breed is proverbial; so much so that frequently two persons will at the same time milk one cow—one seated in either side of the cow.—Owing to the large flow of milk in the better season of pasturage, this mode is considered not only desirable, but absolutely necessary.

The following is the average yield of milk of five cows during the past year:

	lbs. pr. Day	pr. Month	6 Mo's	1 Year.
1,	84	2,307	10,692	18,004
2,	82	2,289	10,904	16,823
3,	71	2,110	9,250	13,015
4,	74	2,206	9,805	12,871
5,	64	1,891	8,004	13,880

Of the butter record I may mention that 23 lbs. of milk from a two-year-old produced 1 lb. butter. From cows of Mr. Hallman's herd were tested as to their butter production, seven days each, with the following results: 1st, 20 lbs; 2nd, 19 lbs; 3rd, 19 lbs; 4th, 14 lbs. The difference may be accounted for, to some extent, by the period when the cows had the greatest flow of milk.

A full grown cow in Mr. Hilgarten's herd weighed, during her milking season, 1,673 lbs., and a full grown bull, in ordinary condition, 2,469 lbs.

Of the cheese producing qualities of these cows the above gentlemen could give me no positive data; but from the testimony of those who have made cheese exclusively from the milk of Holstein cows, the result is highly satisfactory, their milk being superabundant in caseine matter.

It is self-evident that the laudable efforts put forth by our breeders to improve their stock has been a vain attempt; and those who take initiative in the introduction of the Holsteins will secure the reward which ever attends intelligently directed enterprise.

Yours Ever.

The Rambling Editor.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

A public meeting of the ratepayers of School Section No. 5 (Flesherton) was held in the school house on Monday last, to take into consideration the petition presented to our council at last sitting, by the ratepayers of Section No. 4 (Stone's settlement) to change the boundry of this Section, joining part of it to theirs. The meeting was unanimous that at present it was not advisable to change the limits of School Sections as at present constituted. A deputation was appointed to wait on our council at their next meeting re this matter.

Mr. Munroe, head teacher in the Flesherton Public School, has resigned his position here, for reasons better known to himself. Mr. Munroe is a teacher of good ability, and we think could have given general satisfaction. We understand the trustees have engaged the services of Mr. G. Bell of Owen Sound to fill the vacancy.

Messrs. Petch & Mitchell, butchers, have removed to their new shop opposite Munshaw's Hotel.

Splendid weather for ice and skating rinks. The Flesherton rink is booming. We noticed some of our Markdaleites on the ice a few evenings ago. Come again, boys, and enjoy yourselves.

Meeting of Presbytery.

The Presbytery of Saugeen met in Knox Church, Harriston, on Tuesday, 17th inst., at 2 o'clock. There was a large representation of ministers and elders. Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Markdale, was elected Moderator, but being absent, Rev. Mr. Chisholm, the ex-Moderator, occupied the chair in his place. At the pro re nata meeting which was held some weeks ago, the call of Mount Forest congregation to Mr. Murray, of Streetsville, was laid aside. The delegates to the General Assembly were appointed as follows: By rotation, Messrs. Aull and Young; by election, Messrs. Campbell and McLeod, ministers; Rev. S. C. Fraser, Messrs. Peter McGregor, Isaac Starratt, and ———, elders.

An overture to form a new Presbytery along the main line of the Toronto, Grey & Bruce railway was, on motion of Mr. McLeod, seconded by Mr. McGregor, ordered to be transmitted to the Synod of Toronto and Kingston, and commended to their favorable consideration. Messrs. McLeod and Chisholm were appointed to support this overture before the Synod.

Remits of Assembly were considered.

(1.) Marriage with deceased wife's sister: It was agreed to adopt the recommendation of the Assembly's Committee, viz: "That church discipline shall not be exercised in regard to marriage with a wife's sister, wife's aunt and wife's neice."

(2.) Aged and Infirm Ministers Fund: The remit proposes that, "A minister who has an annual income of not less than $600, shall not receive any benefit from the fund." The Presbytery adopted the view that ministers should be admitted to the benefit of this fund without any regard to their private income. All have to contribute towards it alike.

(3.) Lessening expense of printing: Hitherto every minister and elder received yearly a copy of the "Acts and Proceedings of theGeneral Assembly." The Presbytery agreed that it is sufficient to give each minister and representative elder a copy.

There was a good deal of routine business gone through, the court being kept busy until midnight. The next meeting is to be held at Mount Forest the third Tuesday of July.—Com,

McGREGOR'S SPEEDY CURE.

It is popularly admitted everywhere that McGregor's Speedy Cure is the safest, most reliable and far cheapest remedy for Constipation, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Impure Blood, Loss of Appetite, and all similar troubles. It is not necessary to take a great quantity before any result is produced. A few doses will convince you of its merits. Trial bottle given free at Hill Bro's. 3

Holland Council.

Holland Centre, March 25, '85.

Holland Council met in Vogan's Hall for the transaction of business.

Members all present; Reeve in the chair.

A report was laid upon the table with regard to Treasurer's security.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Howey, that the above mentioned report be adopted.

Moved by Deputy-Reeve, seconded by Mr. Williscroft, that Arthur Philips be returned the sum of $1.20, taxes paid in error.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Howey, that the Clerk instruct the County Treasurer to erase the taxes against W. pt. lot 27, con. 7, appearing on his books, it being charged in error.

Moved by Mr. Howey, seconded by Mr. Williscroft, that an order be issued in favor of James Bruce, as part payment of bridge to be built over pond on 15 and 16 side-road.

Moved by Galbraith, seconded by Deputy-Reeve, that George Sinclair be refunded the sum of $63.20 on account of error in roll.

Moved by Deputy Reeve, seconded by Mr. Galbraith, that the Board of Health receive $1.00 each for arguing.

Moved by Mr. Williscroft, seconded by Mr. Howey, that we adjourn till the 28th of May, when Court of Revision will be organized, also pathmasters, pound-keepers, etc., will be appointed.

Carson Price,
Clerk.

DON'T BE DECEIVED

Beware of any druggist who will try to induce you to take anything in place of McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. It is a marvel of healing for Sores, Cuts, Burns, etc. No family should be without it. It has no equal. Get McGregor & Parke's, and have no other. Only 25c. per box at Hill Bro's. 3

THIS EXPLAINS IT.—I asked a physician if there really were any structural difference between the tongue of a woman and a man. "Certainly," he replied; "the organ is attached to the floor of the month at one extremity, and it is a fact that in the females the controlling muscles are much more pliable than in males. Those muscles which control the acts of taste, prehension, and delutition are not appreciably diverse in the sexes, but those relating to articulation are enormously developed in woman as compared with man." I told him that he was a real mean old thing, and that I didn't believe a word of it; but privately, I shouldn't wonder if it were the gospel truth.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A SENSATION.

An unparalleled sensation is being created all over Ontario by the wonderful and unequalled manner in which Neuralgia, Toothache, Rheumatism, Backache, Headache, is removed by but one application of Fluid Lightning. No offensive, disgusting drugs need be taken for days. It is an instant cure. Try a 25c. bottle from Hill Bro's. 3

ACCIDENTAL.

A. Church, of Sterling, in a recent letter, states that he met with an accident some time ago, by which one of his knees was severely injured. A few applications of Hagyard's Yellow Oil afforded immediate and complete relief.

Notice.—All paties indebted to the late firm of Sargent & Burnside are hereby notified to call and settle and save costs.

If you want an easy shave,
As good as barber ever gave.
Just call on me at my saloon
At morn' or eve' or busy noon.
Comb and curl the hair with grace,
To suit the countenance of the face.
My raisors are both sharp and keen,
And towels are also neat and clean.
T. D. Smith, Markdale.

Obstructions of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, are promptly removed by National Pills.

Model Farm "Inspection!"—The local Legislature paid a visit last week to the Model Farm at Guelph. This is just the season for inspecting a farm. The fields are all aglow with Nature's smiles, and then the Legislators picked up so many good points about the ice crop. The legislator who does not know all about the ice crop, well, he isn't much of a legislator.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Freeman's Worm Powders destroy and remove worms without injury to adult or infant.

Rev. J. A. Ross who completes his College course at Knox on the 1st April is to be settled over the Presbyterian congregation of Dundalk and Fraser settlement. We understand Mr. Ross is an energetic worker and also a good preacher, and consider the Presbyterians of Dundalk and Fraser settlement fortunate in securing his services.—Dundalk Herald.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Resturant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

On Advertising.—About two months ago a farmer of this neighborhood, advertised in the Toronto Mail for ladies to correspond with him with a view to matrimony, asking them to address "Wm. Snodgrass," Milton. We understand the replies were very numerous. One of those who responded was a widow said to be possessed of some property. The correspondence which ensued between her and the whilom Mr. Snodgrass proved satisfactory to both and the upshot was that they were married a couple of weeks ago. The bridegroom is the father of a grown-up family and the bride is considerably younger than he and the mother of two small children. Long life and happiness to them.—Milton Champion.

THE CHEAPEST AND BEST.

On account of its purity and concentrated strength and great power over diseases, Burdock Blood Bitters is the cheapest and best blood cleansing tonic known for all disorderly conditions of the blood.

Woman's Credulity and Man's Duplicity—A rather singular case was tried in Durham last Monday before Messrs. Cochrane, Edge and Jamieson J. P's. One John Nevens, baggageman on the G. T. was charged by Margaret Cuff with obtaining money on false pretences, under promise of marriage. The two have been acquainted for some months past, about last July she lent him $40 to get out of some trouble he was in, and since then she swore that month by month she had given him her wages. On the 4th of this month he married another girl, with whom he had been keeping company, but kept the marriage secret. On the 16th inst. she advanced him nine dollars, on which occasion he assured her that he was not married according to her own story, on which was based the charge of obtaining money under pretence of marriage when he was really unable to fulfil his promise. The magistrates committed him to stand his trial at the next assizes. W. Barrett of Walkerton for the defence and James Miller of Durham for the prosecution.—Durham Chronicle.

WHERE TO KEEP IT.

Keep it in your family. The best remedy for accidents and emergencies, for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness, Sore Throat, Croup, Rheumatism, Chilblains and Pain or Soreness of all kinds, is the marvellous healing remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil.

J. J. IRWIN,

Veterinary Surgeon,

GRADUATE of the Ont. Vet. College, Toronto, has opened business in Markdale, and is ready to attend all calls.

Office and residence opposite the Markdale House, Sydenham St.

☞ Charges Moderate. 228-tf

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS,
CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES,
PURSES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James G. Russell,

Watchmaker, Jeweller,
217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the Standard office, Mill Street. Has a comfortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,
232-39* Markdale P. O.

BAKERY FOR SALE.

BUSINESS AND PREMISES for sale Cheap, being 1-fifth acre on Mill Street, opposite Standard office, with large roughcast two story house and bake oven, good stable and never-failing well of spring water. This is an excellent opening for a pushing man. Terms and further particulars can be had by applying on the premises.

MRS. MONTGOMERY,
234-36 Markdale P. O.

Farm for Sale.

160 acres, being lots 42 and 43 second range West of Toronto and Sydenham road, Holland, about 100 acres cleared and in good state of cultivation, ballance well timbered with Maple, Beech and Hemlock, and about 10 acres cedar swamp. Good roughcast house 22x33 with stone cellar, frame barn 40x60 and good out houses, all with stone foundations. Good young orchard bearing. The farm is well watered, two good wells, one at the house, a fine spring creek crosses the farm near the rear. Only two miles from the thriving village of Williamsford, a station on the T. G. & B. branch of the C. P. R.

This is a rare chance, and terms will be made very easy. For futher particulars apply on the premises to

FRANCIS McCANN,
280-44 Williamsford P. O.

Farm to Sell or Rent.

North ½ 16 con. 11, Holland, 100 acres, 70 acres cleared. 4½ miles from Williamsford Station and 3 from Berkeley, only 60 rods from School and post office. On the premises there are a good log house with frame kitchen and a well near the house, and log barn. Will be sold on easy terms, small payment down, and good time given for the balance, or will be rented for five years, and improvement taken for part rent.

Apply to JAMES BRUCE,
136-39 pd. Lily Oak P. O. Ont.

FARM FOR SALE.

5 MILES from Markdale station, on the C. P. R., Lot 9, Con. 11, Glenelg, containing 100 acres, 30 cleared, balance good timber; well watered; stone house and frame barn; soil clay loam; well fenced and in a good state of cultivation. Apply on the premises to

GEO. STODDART,
137-39* Traverston P. O.

A LOCK OF RED HAIR.

CHAPTER I.

The spring season was nearly over at Fastcliffe, and Trickett's Boarding House almost empty, the visitors having left, with the exception of a few had no home attractions awaiting them.

Among those remaining were Mr. and Mrs. Enson, an ordinary young couple, well provided with the good things of this life, of which they had a thorough appreciation; Lucy Starr, a frank, unaffected, clever girl, with an unusual power of discerning character, and a habit of speaking her mind plainly and strongly; the only little spice of self-conceit in her nature being her consciousness of the talent she really possessed of character-reading—no human counterfeit need hope to escape her penetrating eye and rather severe animadversions. She was completely unselfish and a staunch friend, and at this time was on a visit to Mrs. Enson, an old schoolmate. Another visitor who was still staying at the boarding-house was Miss Hunt, a nervous, shy, very plain, deaf woman of about fifty, and the last, Mr. Edgar Richmond, a dashing, handsome, dark-moustached young man of thirty, who enjoyed the utmost popularity. He had been the life and soul of the boarding-house all the season, and had made hosts of friends—the Ensons being prominent among these; the secret of his success was that he was always in a good temper, and had a happy knack of appearing kind and thoughtful for the comfort of others. Thoughtfulness, however, was more apparent than real, though none of the boarders, with one exception, ever thought of questioning his good intentions.

A habit of his which delighted people was a way he had of appearing to think the most ordinary observations strikingly clever and sharp; it is doubtful whether he would have understood a really witty remark, or seen anything to applaud in it—for instance, a lady would say, "I'll take my umbrella out with me, and then we shall be certain to have no rain" Richmond at once would break into his sweet musical laugh, repeating with an appearance of the most intense enjoyment, "That's really capital! 'I'll take my umbrella out, and then there will be no rain.' I say, really, you know, that's awfully good—'my umbrella out, no rain!'" et-cætera; or, again, some one would remark that pouring cats and dogs did not adequately describe the rain that had fallen in the night.

This not very original observation would convulse Mr. Richmond for a few minutes; and, when he could speak, he would be heard murmuring, "Cats and dogs didn't describe it. Awfully funny idea, really—cats and dogs!"—and so on. By this means, he put all his acquaintances on good terms with themselves—an infallible method of securing a popular position. He openly confessed that he was looking out for a rich wife; but people did not think the worse of him on that account; they only regretted he had not enough of his own to enable him to follow the dictates of his own kind heart.

"I must have money when I marry," he said to the Ensons almost immediately he made their acquaintance. "I have, on an average, a thousand a year, which I derive from several small vineyards in France and Italy; but what's that to a fellow who is fond of horses? Really nothing!"

He always took care that this should be distinctly understood whenever he made new friends, especially when, as in the case of the Ensons, any unmarried ladies were of the party. He was not a flirt; and, having a superlative notion of his own irresistible qualities, he thought it only fair to the unmoneyed young ladies that his intentions should be plainly understood. As to his unselfish good-nature, take the following instance:

During his stay, a young fellow of seventeen, sent alone by his parents to Trickett's, met with an accident, and sprained his ankle so severely that he was unable to move off the sofa for nearly a week. His only resource, in these circumstances, was chess. Richmond happened to be the one other chess-player staying in the house. The first day young Grant was laid up, there was an incessant downpour of rain, making it almost impossible to stir out. Here was an opportunity not to be neglected of playing the Good Samaritan, and amusing himself at the same time. With tender solicitude, Richmond devoted himself to Grant, and earned his everlasting gratitude. It was not noticed that the next five days the young fellow lay there, weary and dull, were fine, and consequently Richmond could find better entertainment elsewhere. Then, again, a very rich exclusive couple were staying at Trickett's, with two most unpleasing children. Richmond made up his mind, before the season was over, that he would get an invitation to the country-house; and, to attain this end, he paid most assiduous court to the children—took them out for walks and presented them with stores of toys. Every one thought how kind it was of him.

"Poor little beggars!" he would say, "None of you seem to care for them."

The parents, who doted on their spoilt children, were easily won by this; and, before they left, Richmond was their invited guest. It did not occur to any one as being singular that, directly the parents had gone, the children, who stayed on a week or two with the governess, had no more of Richmond's attention.

The one person in the house who was not favorably impressed by Edgar Richmond was Lucy Starr. She declared his imperturbable good-temper was due, in a great measure, to the absence in him of proper pride.

"He does not care what anyone says or thinks of him," she urged in support of this theory in conversation with Mrs. Enson. "Through mixing in society he has acquired a certain amount of tact; but his good breeding is most superficial, and his sentiments are frequently vulgar in tone, though he does not murder the Queen's English in giving them expression. Everything about him is flippant and shallow; and this is combined with an intense self-appreciation that is most annoying. Altogether, he is the most egotistical, conceited man I have ever met!"

"Ah, Lucy, I don't see how even you can call him conceited!" replied Mrs. Enson. "Though you appear to think poor Edgar Richmond the embodiment of all the vices, you should be just to him; I never saw a man so alive to his own shortcomings; he is always talking about them."

"That is one of my principal reasons for considering him conceited; he thinks his miserable little weaknesses more interesting than the noble deeds of others. What particularly irritates me is his habit of crediting the whole world with every one of his own failings, reserving for himself alone the great virtues of truth and candor; and so, inferring that, instead of being worse, he is very much better than mankind in general."

"You can always beat me at argument, Lucy; but you need not think you have convinced me on that account; and, at any rate, you must allow he is good-tempered, for you say the most outrageously rude things to him sometimes, and he bears it like a lamb."

"I do not respect him for it; I should think far better of him if he turned round on me occasionally, when I tell him unpleasant truths."

"Well, if you are sufficiently unreasonable to object to a man because he is too gentlemanly to contradict or argue with a lady, there is an end of all further discussion, though I must say you do him great injustice. Of course nobody can be perfect; we all have our little faults, and I am sure his are all on the surface. Willie thinks, and I agree with him, that Edgar Richmond will settle down into a capital husband when he marries. I only wish you had more money."

"Why, you don't suppose that I would have him?" cried Lucy, indignantly. "Not if he were a millionaire! You surely must know that I detest him."

"You certainly say so often enough," replied Mrs. Enson, laughing. "Now don't look daggers at me—I believe you; but you might have felt very different if he had seemed to admire you more; and, even now, Willie thinks you admire him much better than you care to admit. He says these violent and unreasonable expressions of dislike are often adopted to conceal the real state of people's feelings, especially in cases where the person may be slightly disappointed. So I should keep my sentiments a little more to myself if I were you, or you may be misunderstood; for, you know, it really is hard to believe you object to him as much as you say; he is a man almost any girl would be glad to marry."

Lucy's outspoken criticisms annoyed her easy-going friend, who did not wish to appear wanting in discrimination, so occasionally she liked to have a little dig at her.

"I think it is shameful of your husband to insinuate such untrue things; I'll never mention Richmond's name again!" cried Lucy, boiling over with wrath and flouncing out of the room.

Mrs. Enson was not deceived by this however; Edgar Richmond's character was a most interesting study to Lucy, and very little encouragement would always start her on the subject.

Miss Hunt, on the other hand, had made herself as unpopular as Richmond had become popular; and, again, for purely social reasons. In this case also Lucy took a singular stand, for she declared that Miss Hunt was by no means disagreeable "when you know her a little," and had many really noble qualities; but she admitted she was a most difficult person to fathom. Her liking for Miss Hunt originated to some extent in a feeling of pity, for hers was a history calculated to arouse the sympaties of a warm-hearted girl; and, little by little, she had admitted Lucy into her confidence, having taken a great liking to her. To the rest of the boarders she had been cold and distant, almost to a repulsive degree. She made a slight exception however in the case of Edgar Richmond; he had been only moderately polite to her, and used to ridicule her peculiarities almost before her face in a low tone; but she had experienced so little attention from gentlemen that very small courtesies assumed in her eyes much more important proportions.

Her father had been a wealthy merchant, with a family of handsome daughters, she being the one exception. She was the eldest, and had been a very beautiful child; but, at the age of twelve, had had an attack of small-pox which had entirely destroyed her beauty and rendered her very deaf.

From this time she was almost completely overlooked and neglected by her very worldly-minded parents. She was sent to an inferior school, and came away at sixteen, having made no friends and with no accomplishments to speak of. Her affliction and the cold treatment of her family had soured her naturally amiable temper, and teachers and pupils found it so difficult to penetrate her barrier of reserve that at last they gave it up in despair, and left her to herself. Probably, had she been a pretty girl, things would have been very different.

When she returned home, the same cruel system was carried on. As they all grew up, her sisters went constantly into society; but she was never taken with the others, and even at their own balls and parties did not appear.

Ultimately her parents were punished for their unnatural conduct; for an epidemic carried off three of her beautiful sisters, and the other died of consumption shortly after. Her father, broken-hearted, retired from business, and bought an estate in the country where he spent the remainder of his days, with his miserable wife and only daughter. There they lived a most unhappy unloving life for fifteen years, showing no hospitality and refusing all invitations. At the end of that time her father died suddenly, and her mother within a month of him, leaving Miss Hunt very rich, but with no friends, except among her servants and the cottagers on the estate, by whom she was much esteemed and commiserated.

For many months she remained alone in the desolate house; but at last a new clergyman came to the place, and his wife, feeling for her lonely position, determined to make her acquaintance, in spite of all opposition. So she called, under pretext of asking for subscriptions for one of her charities. Miss Hunt received her very coldly; but she, good soul, would not be repulsed, but felt it a duty to come again and again, until she succeeded in persuading her to emerge from her retirement and try to interest herself in the outer world. She often thought, in after years, how differently she would have acted, could she have had a glimpse of the future. Far better for the poor woman to have lived and died in her gloomy house.

It must have been a hard struggle to the deaf, middle-aged, self-contained woman to emerge from her seclusion; but she made the effort, and for the last six or seven years had been travelling about with a maid-servant in the vain search of amusement and pleasure.

She was charitable, and gave away a good deal of money; but her manner did not endear her to the recipients, so that her good deeds were seldom spoken of with gratitude, and people were quite unaware of the amount she thus spent. For this reason nobody supposed her to be nearly as rich as she was, for she dressed very plainly—indeed shabbily.

It was a great surprise therefore to Lucy to hear, during one of their conversations together, that Miss Hunt's income amounted to close upon ten thousand a year, and was entirely at her own disposal.

Going into the general sitting-room immediately after, Lucy found Mrs. Enson alone there, as she supposed; and, enjoining secrecy on her—Miss Hunt having said she did not wish her wealth to become a topic of conversation—she told her what she had just learnt. Mrs. Enson was loud in her astonishment, and during this, Mr. Richmond appeared from behind the curtains in the bay-window, and, saying unblushingly—"I could not find it in my heart to interrupt you, Miss Starr. Thank you for a most interesting piece of news"—left the room.

"What a disgraceful thing!" cried Lucy angrily. "The man has actually been listening. He is the meanest creature I've ever seen!"

"My dear, I don't suppose he heard half of what you said. I have no doubt he was asleep when you came in. I've been here for ten minutes, and he never moved."

"Well, I'll never say anything else, I don't want him to hear, without first looking under the sofas and tables to see if he is playing the spy."

The next general assembly of the occupants of the house was at the half-past seven o'clock dinner. The dining-table presented rather a mournful appearance; it was very large, capable of accomodating at least twenty visitors, and was not reducible. Those that remained still retained the seats they had occupied during the season; and in many cases there was a gap of two or three chairs between the diners. Miss Hunt was one of these isolated ones, having three chairs on her right and one on her left vacant. The Ensons, Lucy, and Mr. Richmond were together at the other end, and on the opposite side of the table. Sometimes Lucy gave up her chair, and went and sat by Miss Hunt; but at last she desisted, as her doing so only seemed to confuse and worry the nervous woman, who latterly had eaten her dinner quite unnoticed, and in complete silence.

It was a matter of astonishment therefore to every one, when, on this particular evening, directly they went into the dining-room, Mr. Richmond, smiling in his most winning manner the while, said to Miss Hunt—

"I should like to come and sit by you to-night, if you will allow me."

"Oh, certainly," she said nervously, and blushing high; "but I am afraid it will be rather dull for you! You see I am so much divided from the rest of the table."

"This is the very reason I am coming," he replied, laughing. "That long gap does make the table look so uncomfortable; I have been thinking so for the last week; now I cannot stand it any longer. Don't look tragic at me, Miss Starr," he continued, "for deserting your party. If we can't talk together at this distance quite so comfortably, we can look at each other more, which is something."

Certainly Lucy Starr's expression did call for some remark; it was perfectly unconscious, as all her expressions were; but it would be difficult to imagine a pretty face more full of angry contempt. Recalled to herself in this unpleasant manner, she grew crimson, and had not a word to say. Everybody laughed, Mr. Richmond gaily leading the chorus. All dinner-time he devoted himself to his uninteresting companion; and, his good humor being so infectious, at least he succeeded in making her laugh heartily. Poor thing, she had never before felt so light-hearted!

Once only they came to a standstill. Mr. Richmond made a remark which Miss Hunt could not hear. She asked him to repeat it; he did so in a louder key; still she could not catch his meaning, and became quite flustered and unhappy

"I'm afraid I am dreadfully disagreeable to talk to. Do go back to your friends. I cannot understand what you say."

"No, nor anybody else," thought Lucy indignantly.

That was one of Mr. Richmond's jokes. He had been talking a sort of heathenish gibberish, in order to provide amusement for the rest of the table at his companion's expense. Every one smiled, though several thought it was a little too bad.

Mr. Richmond hastened to reassure his companion, and declared he had not enjoyed a dinner and conversation so much for weeks. She really must not mind asking him to repeat what she did not catch, and he knew he spoke very indistinctly, he had often been told so by a dear friend of his who was slightly deaf; in fact, he had great difficulty in making her hear anything, whereas others had no trouble whatever in doing so.

"It's quite a standing joke just now," he said airily. "Kate and I often laugh about it." Then he added quietly, "Not strictly true, but balm to the afflicted soul"

"Oh, I think you speak very distinctly!" said Miss Hunt earnestly. "Only that once I failed to hear what you said."

After dinner Miss Hunt went at once to her room, looking a rangely happier and brighter; and Richmond lounged into the drawing-room, where were the Enson and Lucy.

"Enson, come and have a stroll and a cigar for half an hour, there's a good fellow. I feel quite hoarse and worn out. Miss Starr can you tell me a good maker of ear-trumpets? I am afraid I shall have to recommend one to our interesting friend in a day or two."

Lucy, thrilling with anger, replied impulsively—

"If I could get poor Miss Hunt a pair of spectacles to enable her to see character more plainly, I would be only too delighted to do so."

"Ah, I suppose that's some sort of a dig at me! I don't understand it; but no doubt it is. Don't be so severe on one of your admirers, Miss Starr; it really is too bad. Come on Enson! Au revoir, ladies. We shall not be long; I am coming back to teach the Enson bezique. I shall go and get some voice-lozenges now.

With this he left the room, laughing gaily. The two men returned in a short time; and the lessons in bezique lasted until it was time for the ladies to retire.

Lucy went into Mrs. Enson's room for a few minutes' chat—an invariable custom—and broke out with—

"Now what do you think of your favorite?"

"I think he is wonderfully good-natured, trying to amuse that poor stupid old woman."

"Doesn't it strike you as being rather strange that his kindness should only have developed since our conversation of this afternoon?"

"I don't see anything peculiar about it; everything must have a beginning. I am sure he acted with the most good-natured intention. Certainly it was a little too bad of him, talking that nonsense to her; but people with such very high spirits do occasionally go rather too far, without meaning to be unkind. And then she is such a disagreeable old thing that I was not at all sorry."

"Well, you are evidently quite blind on the subject of Mr. Richmond. I only hope your eyes will not be opened too suddenly. I'd better say 'good night' now, for I feel too cross to speak pleasantly."

With that, Lucy left the room and proceeded towards her own. She had to pass Miss Hunt's on the way. Usually all was quiet and dark; but to-night Miss Hunt was standing on the threshold waiting for her to pass, and, to her astonishment, invited her to come in for a few minutes.

"I feel so wakeful to-night, my dear, I am sure I shall not sleep, and yet I am not unwell. Will you come in for a little while? I want to ask your advice."

"If I can be of any service to you, Miss Hunt, I shall only be too glad," replied Lucy cordially.

"Well, the fact is," she said, hesitating and looking confused, "I have been thinking for some weeks past that I must replenish my wardrobe. I do not like being so very unfashionable; and I thought perhaps you would be so kind as to come with me to choose some new things."

"Oh, certainly!" agreed Lucy, with an inward start. "But don't you think it would be better to wait a few weeks until we return to London? The season is almost over here, and the shops are decidedly not so good."

Miss Hunt's sensitive nature at once shrank back at this slight rebuff; and, looking cold and hurt, she replied—

"Oh, my dear, if it's any trouble to come, of course I can manage by myself! It was thoughtless of me to propose such an uninteresting task to you."

Lucy, who was genuinely sorry to have clouded her brightness, hastened to declare it would not be the slightest trouble, but a pleasure; and, before she said good night, it was arranged that the next day they would commence their shopping expedition. Miss Hunt pressed her hand warmly, and kissed her for the first time; and Lucy pursued her way, looking very grave and shaking her head.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

INTERESTING ITEMS.

Death from Hiccough—Paper Bottles—Golden Eagle—Royal Authors, &c., &c.

The Medical Times says that the solution of cocoaine is being used by New York dentists to render the filling of teeth a painless operation.

Three deaths from hiccough have occurred within a year at Chattanooga, Tenn., the Times of that city states, and two serious cases more are being attended by physicians. There was no other specific symptom.

The newest rose is the "William Francis Bennett," produced in England. It is said to be of as brilliant a crimson color as the Jacqueminot, the shape of a large photos, the size of a Marechal Neil, and the fragrance of La France. It is very prolific.

The new paper bottles are said to withstand the action of water, wine, and alcohol. It is thought that druggists will be able to furnish them free of charge, just as they provide wrapping paper for dry drugs. The cementing material of the bottles is a mixture of blood, albumen, alum and lime.

Engineering in China has certainly achieved a notable triumph in the bridge at Lagang, over an arm of the China Sea. This structure is five miles long, built entirely of stone, has 300 arches seventy feet high, the roadway is seventy feet wide, and the pillars are seventy-five feet apart.

It is not generally known that nutmegs are poisonous, but Dr. Palmer writes to the American Journal of Pharmacy detailing the case of a lady who nearly died from eating a nutmeg and a half, and he points out the fact that the toxic effects of the drug are described in both the National and United States Dispensatories.

A splendid golden eagle had been hovering over the northern half of the Isle of Wight during the last few weeks. It was about Osborne for several days, and Queen Victoria, observing it from the terrace, gave strict orders that it should not be molested, and expressed the hope that it would not be killed. The bird went away to the eastward, and was shot, near Ryde, by some mischievous idiot.

Dan Rice, the circus clown, is running a ten-cent circus in the French quarter of New Orleans. He talks sadly of the good old days when his Floating Palace was the sensation on the Father of Waters, and thousands upon thousands of people swarmed from far and near to see him. He gave an entertainment a few nights ago when not 300 persons were present, and about one-third of those were professional and other deadheads.

Two Paris schoolboys, one aged 14 and the other 15, fought a duel the other day in the Bois de Boulogne, with sharp foils. The combatants had their seconds on the ground in the orthodox manner, and it only needed the presence of a surgeon to make the affair complete. Unlike most of the duels which nowaday take place in the Bois, this encounter resulted in severe injuries on both sides. One boy was wounded in the thigh and the other under the fifth rib.

In the Alienist and Neurologist Dr. Hughes gives a curious instance of the beneficial effects which brain excitement may sometimes have in warding off disease. He says that "during the week of the great St. Louis fire, in 1849, the ravages of cholera, which up to that event had reached a mortality of over 200 a day out of a population of 50,000, almost entirely ceased, so stimulating and invigorating was the excitement of that week to the brains and nervous systems of the people, and the physical exaltation inseparable from the sudden necessity thrown upon so many business men for repairing the sudden damage and re-establishing their abruptly interrupted business."

Miss Sartorius, in her book on the Soudan and Egypt, says: "Every village has its pigeon houses, looking like great mud cones, and in the evening the owners go out and call them in. But when a man wants to get hold of extra pigeons, instead of calling them he frightens the pigeons away. They do not understand this, keep circling above, and swoop down now and then toward their houses. Other pigeons, seeing this commotion, join them, and as soon as the man sees there are enough he hides. The whole of the birds, old and new, then go into the house, and the man returning shuts them in. This would be a fine business if it were not that all of them do the same thing, and, therefore, each gets caught in his turn. They know this perfectly well, but no Egyptian fellah could resist the temptation of cheating his neighbor."

There are just now an unusual number of royal authors in the world. Among reigning sovereigns and their consorts may be counted Queen Victoria, King Oscar II. of Sweden, Dom Luis of Portugal, the Shah Nasr-ed-Deen of Persia, Queen Elizabeth of Koumani, Prince Nicolas of Montenegro, Don Pedro II. of Brazil, and, so it is said, King Louis II. of Bavaria; and among other literary royalties are the Imperial Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, the Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Albert Victor, and Prince George of Wales, the Princess Christian, the Imperial Crown Princess of Germany, Princess Lucien Bonaparte, and several others. There are also many royal artists, musicians, and priests. There is probably, however, but one royal doctor, Duke Charles Theodore of Bavaria, at Munich, is a surgeon-oculist of high reputation. It must be a strange experience, after consulting this princely Æscu'apius, to press a 20-mark note into his hand; but in these days there are some princes who would not be above receiving an even smaller sum.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

from Hiccough—Paper Bottles—Golden Eagle—Royal Authors, &c., &c.

Medical Times says that the sale of cocoaine is being used by New dentists to render the filling of painless operation.

e deaths from hiccough have occurred thin a year at Chattanooga, Tenn., imes of that city states, and two cases more are being attended by ians. There was no other specific om.

newest rose is the "William Francnett," produced in England. It is be of as brilliant a crimson color Jacqueminot, the shape of a Jacqueminot, the size of a Marechal Neil, and grance of La France. It is very .

new paper bottles are said to withhe action of water, wine, and alcot is thought that druggists will be furnish them free of charge, just provide wrapping paper for dry The cementing material of the is a mixture of blood, albumen, nd lime.

neering in China has certainly ed a notable triumph in the bridge ng, over an arm of the China Sea. ructure is five miles long, built en of stone, has 300 arches seventy igh, the roadway is seventy feet nd the pillars are seventy-five feet not generally known that nutmegs isonous, but Dr. Palmer writes to erican Journal of Pharmacy detail. e case of a lady who nearly died ting a nutmeg and a half, and he out the fact that the toxic effects drug are described in both the Nand United States Dispensatories.

lendid golden eagle had been hover. r the northern half of the Isle of during the last few weeks. It was Osborne for several days, and Victoria, observing it from the terave strict orders that it should not ated, and expressed the hope that ld not be killed. The bird went the eastward, and was shot, near by some mischievous idiot.

Rice, the circus clown, is running ent circus in the French quarter of rleans. He talks sadly of the good s when his Floating Palace was the on on the Father of Waters, and nds upon thousands of people d from far and near to see him. e an entertainment a few nights en not 300 persons were present, out one-third of those were pre- and other deadheads.

Paris schoolboys, one aged 14 and er 15, fought a duel the other day Bois de Boulogne, with sharp foils. mbatants had their seconds on the in the orthodox manner, and it eded the presence of a surgeon to he affair complete. Unlike most duels which nowaday take place in s, this encounter resulted in severe s on both sides. One boy was d in the thigh and the other under h rib.

he Alienist and Neurologist Dr. gives a curious instance of the ial effects which brain excitement metimes have in warding off di. He says that "duringthe week of at St. Louis fire, in 1849, the ravacholera, which up to that event ched a mortality of over 200 a day. a population of 50,000, almost enseased, so stimulating and invigoras the excitement of that week to ins and nervous systems of the and the physical exaltation inspfrom the sudden necessity thrown many business men for repairing lden damage and re establishing ruptly interrupted business."

Sartorius, in her book on the Sou- Egypt, says: "Every village pigeon houses, looking like great nes, and in the evening the ownut and call them in. But when a nts to get hold of extra pigeons, of calling them he frightens the away. They do not understand p circling above, and swoop down then toward their houses. Other seeing this commotion, join d as soon as the man sees there gh he hides. The whole of the d and now, then go into the house, man returning shuts them in. uld be a fine business if it were all of them do the same thing, refore, each gets caught in his They know this perfectly well, but tian fellah could resist the temp- cheating his neighbor."

are just now an unusual number authors in the world. Among sovereigns and their consorts counted Queen Victoria, King of Sweden, Dom Luis of Portu- Shah Nasr-ed-Deen of Persia, Elizabeth of Koumani, Prince of Montenegro, Don Pedro II. of nd, so it is said, King Louis II. ria; and among other literary are the Imperial Crown Prince of Austria, the Duke of Edinrince Albert Victor, and Prince f Wales, the Princess Christian, rial Crown Princess of Germany, Lucien Bonaparte, and several There are also many royal artists, , and priests. There is probably, but one royal doctor, Duke Theodore of Bavaria, at Munich, geon-oculist of high reputation. be a strange experience, after g this princely Æscu'apius, to 0-mark note into his hand; but days there are some princes who ot be above receiving an occa- um.

THE LAND OF THE FALSE PROPHET

Their warlike disposition is nurtured the frequent feuds between neighbortribes, generally arising about water d the theft of cattle. The unwritten of the desert forbids any settlements und the wells, which are common to

But two parties arrive at the same e at a well which is insufficient for h. A dispute arises as to precedence; y come to blows and a man is killed. e murderer flees to his tribe and sends offer the price of blood; for the avengof blood as practised by the ancient brews exists in full force; except that re are no "cities of refuge." If the ily of the dead refuse compensation, r begins, and it may last for years, h murder by one side demanding reiation by the other. Hence it is that en when peace prevails in the desert, two parties meet, both halt and send a man or two to reconnoiter and astain if there is blood between them. hen a caravan arrives unexpectedly in neighborhood of a Bedouin camp, the t impulse of the natives is to vanish tantly, especially if soldiers are seen ng the new-comers. The sheep and ts, driven off by the women and chilen, disappear in a twinkling beyond the t ridge. Having no other encumance than a few skins and gourds, their grations are exceedingly prompt and y. The tents and other baggage are ded upon camels, and in a few min- a whole encampment disappears. ter this precaution is taken, one or two n return, and when they have ascerned the peaceful intentions of the angers, the others approach to trade d to learn news, of which they are very edy.

They are all Mohammedans, but their de of life prevents their giving much ention to the minor practices of their ligion. Their women are much more e than those who live in settled habiions, and in some of the tribes this freem is carried to the most extreme ense, while in others great strictness vails. The customs of marriage and orce differ but little from those preling in all Moslem countries. The douins always go bare-headed, even in e fiercest heat of summer, and, strange say, some tribes, like the Beggaras, ve their heads. The Ababdehs twist ir hair into plaits the size of a quill, own straight back from front to r, while the Bishareens comb all the r from the forehead to the crown of head straight up to the height of five ix inches, the rest hanging in braids rly down to the shoulders. They ter their heads with suet and camel's low, or any other grease they can proe, letting it trickle down upon their ed breasts and shoulders. The tribes distinguished also by the form and ition of gashes cut in the cheeks in icy. The Beggaras who inhabit thern Kordofan, near the Nile, are y warlike, and when beyond the h of Egyptian garrisons are addicted brigandage. They possess great nums of splendid oxen, mounted upon ch both men and women, ricing e, and all armed with four or five es, come in hundreds to the market l Obeid, The great sheikhs of all tribes usually wear the turbans and ing robes of the Egyptians, but the mon people are satisfied with a few is of cotton around the waist, and dals upon their feet.

he Bedouins have a strong feeling of onal dignity, and are quick to resent lts. Duels of a peculiar kind are not ommon, always supervised by the rs of the tribe, who never permit m to come to a fatal termination. metimes the two adversaries, separby two parallel ropes about a yard t, are armed with courbashes (a fearwhip, made of hippopotamus hide, h brings the blood with every cut), they are encouraged to slash each r until their wrath is cooled. In e serious cases the combatants are ed flat on the ground, face to face, as close as they can get. One single e is given to the one who wins the cut, after which he passes it to his ersary, who strikes the second blow, so on alternately. They are forbidto strike at a vital part, and while are slashing each other's arms, legs, s, and shoulders,—not without a of chivalrous courtesy, the judges e combat watch each stroke that is , and when in their opinion enough d has been shed, they rise and separhe adversaries, who proclaim themes satisfied, and return quietly to tents to have their wounds ed.

brief sketch of the foremost Bedouin h of the Soudan will illustrate the cter of those tribes. Mohammed ein Khalifa the great chief of the bdehs and Bishareens, is the patrial yet almost absolute ruler of over ty thousand people. His ancestors princes for generations perhaps bethe days of the Prophet. He is now sixty years of age, nearly six feet and of dignified presence. His is dark chocolate. He has excelfeatures, large black eyes, curved ine nose, thin lips, and a fine beard. s extremely wealthy in silver and jewels and precious arms, camels, s, and slaves. The Khedive re- him to reside on the banks of the where he possesses a princely esof rich alluvial lands, at El Hoar, Berber. He is held responsible for curity of trade and travel through astern deserts, and receives a large y upon the moneys paid his people ides, carriers, and camel-drivers; is one of the privileges claimed by that no one—not even government litions—shall pass through their ry without hiring them and their camels. He escorted me for seven months in my explorations of his deserts, having with him ten or twelve dromedaries of his own, and as many burden camels, a large retinue and five or six large tents furnished for his accommodation. Whenever we came across encampments of his people, they hastened to do him homage as their prince, kissing his hand and the hem of his garment, and submitting their suits for his decision; while he, seated under a tree or at his tent door, administered justice precisely as the kings of Israel are described as doing; and no king or emperor could have a more noble and commanding manner. His father was the Sheikh Kralif. When the Memlooks were exterminated by Mohammed Ali, in 1811, those that escaped the massacre fled to the deserts, and Kralif gave them refuge and hospitality; and when the dreaded Ibrahim Pasha followed in pursuit, Kralif alone was bold enough to avow what he had done, and to vindicate his course. Soon afterward he was murdered by a Turkish governor, and was succeeded by his brother Baraca. The latter waited for an opportunity, and retaliated by assassinating the Turk, and some years later he was murdered by the latter's relatives. Mohammed Khalifa succeeded his uncle, and took up the avenging of blood, and the vendetta did not cease until one or two of the Turks had been killed, and the rest fled the country. When, after seven months' wanderings through the eastern deserts, we reached the banks of the Nile, he gave a great feast at his residence to the entire expedition. Many sheep were slaughtered and numberless fowls. The officers had their banquet apart, fifty or more dishes, in the Arab fashion, a sheep roasted whole crowning the feast. The soldiers, camel-drivers, and servants all had theirs seated on the ground and attended by the sheikh's slaves. He, with a courtesy and grace that any prince might envy, commencing with us, went from group to group, breaking bread and eating just one mouthful with each, accompanying the act with some graceful oriental compliment. He reminded me of Abraham, only he is a much more powerful sheikh than Abraham ever was. He has remained faithful in his allegiance to the Khedive, and he is the present Mudeer of Dongola, so often mentioned in the dispatches. He has been made a pasha and decorated with the order of the Osmanieh, and is spoken of as the future Governor-General of the Soudan. His alliance is worth as much as an army to the British.

When I was in the Soudan the Mahdi was in obscurity, secluded in a cave in the island of Aba, above Duem, transforming himself into a prophet by meditation, prayer, and pretended visions and revelations. What is most striking about him is his pertinacity and his power of holding his followers in spite of defeat. It is nearly four years since he first raised the standard of revolt, and during that time he has suffered nine or ten serious defeats, with barely an equal number of successes. After every defeat he has returned to the attack stronger than before. Three times he was repulsed with heavy losses while besieging El Obeid, but he finally captured it. Hicks Pasha inflicted a terrible defeat upon him, but he subsequently destroyed Hicks Pasha and his entire army. It would be a dangerous mistake to suppose that his power is broken. His inaction during the summer is explained by the fact that his followers, many of whom live in Kordofan, had to go home to plant and secure the scanty crop of dokn (an inferior kind of doura which is the only grain that matures during the brief rainy season from June 15th to September 15th), on which their families depend for the next year. Like all commanders of barbarians, who have no regular commissariat, he may have only a couple of thousand men with him to-day and fifty thousand next month. It is certain that he had fully that number or more when he exterminated Hicks Pasha. If all the Bedouin tribes and the people from Kordofan to Dongola were to unite under his flag, he could muster more than a hundred thousand men. But this is not to be expected, and the British, profiting by the division existing among the tribes, may secure some more or less valuable allies whose fidelity will depend entirely upon success. But in any case the Mahdi is not a foe to be despised.

El Obeid is the present centre of his power. I was forced to remain there for six months, having been disabled in the deserts by insolation produced by excessive heat, and I was transported back to Suakim in the winter, nearly a thousand miles across two deserts, in a litter swung between two camels; but during my convalescence I had time and opportunity to observe everything worthy of note in El Obeid. This city is about four hundred miles from the Nile, two hundred of which are through desolate sahoors. It is built on an immense plain, studded with enormous baobabs, which always grow singly one or two hundred yards apart. It is a place of fifteen or twenty thousand inhabitants, almost hidden in thickets of hegliks and mimosas, which give it a pleasing appearance from a distance. There are a few substantial, well-built houses belonging to Greek and Egyptian merchants. The telegraph, on iron posts brought from England, connecting it with Khartoum and Cairo, was completed while I was there; and before three days, such is the civilizing influence of commerce, the local traders were using it to ascertain the quotations of gum arabic and ostrich feathers at Cairo and Alexandria. The native dwellings are generally circular, with an earthen wall four or five feet high, surmounted with a conical roof made of dokn stalks in regular layers, and quite rain-proof. These habitations, called tokles, about twenty feet in diameter, are comfortable enough. A slender pole projects several feet above the roof, and when ornamented with a glass bottle between two ostrich eggs it is considered the height of architectural luxury. Each family possesses a sufficient number of these tokles for its use, and the group is surrounded with a thornhedge. This enclosure, shaded by heglika, is often planted as a vegetable garden. The sight of the natives seated around their dwellings at sundown, the men chatting and smoking, the women attending to household duties, and the children playing and rolling about in primitive nakedness, is both curious and picturesque. The market of El Obeid is held daily on a spacious square in front of the Governor's quarters—the main building of which, now the Mahdi's residence, is three hundred feet front with a large square tower in the centre. Some three or four thousand people come to this market from the surrounding villages. Cattle, horses, camels, sheep, grain, and the identical peanut of Virginia and Carolina are the staples of trade. Near by are covered bazaars containing European goods, and also large warehouses full of gum arabic, hides, and ostrich feathers.

It is very interesting to watch about sunset the groups returning from market. One sees hundreds of people clad in blue or white cotton robes and turbans, riding on donkeys; men and women on camels' back; Beggaras mounted on bullocks, with their hands full of lances; Kababeesh and Hadendawa Bedouins; soldiers in white uniforms, recruited among the slaves from Central Africa, taken from the traders in order to break up their traffic and drafted into the black Soudanese regiments. Mingled with all these are Greeks and Egyptians in their national costumes, Bashi-bazouks from Albania and Asia Minor, some on foot, others mounted on their Syrian horses, and Catholic priests and Sisters of Charity in their peculiar dress. Last, not least, hundreds of women venders of merissa (native beer), fruits, and vegetables, with jars, hampers, and baskets piled up on their heads, in impossible structures, apparently defying all the laws of gravitation, yet held up by that astonishing gift of equilibrium common to all African women. They go laughing, chatting, running, leaping, without ever touching the burden with their hands, and yet nothing falls to the ground. The crowd gradually disappear; the tropical moon rises above the horizon; the voice of the muezzin calls the faithful to prayer; and the drums and bugles of the garrison (all Central African negroes) perform very creditably the airs of the French retreat. Then everything is quiet for an hour, after which the merry sound of the darabukas and native flutes announces the fantasias, which follows the day's labors. This picture of El Obeid, the capital of Kordofan, would apply with slight variations to all the large towns of Egypt and the Soudan.

One sight, however, I beheld there, the most peculiar and ghastly that ever shocked my senses. It was the burying-ground, situated almost within the town, and some six or eight acres in extent. The gravelly soil was literally covered with shreds of the white and blue cotton robes in which the dead are wrapped for burial. The graves, never more than two feet deep, are lightly covered with stones and thorns. Every night the hyenas come in and dig up the bodies that have been buried during the day, leaving exposed to view the remnants of their feast. No imagination can realize the horror of this Golgotha. It follows of course that the mortality is fearful. During the sickly season (that of the rain) the deaths average ten a day in a garrison of two thousand men, and the proportion was nearly as great among the population.

It is apparently the purpose of the British Government to abandon the Soudan. But if the expedition to bring out Gordon and the garrisons meets with brilliant success, England may determine to occupy Khartoum permanently, as has been so ably and forcibly urged by Sir Samuel Baker. Otherwise, all that country will relapse into barbarism; its vast trade will be lost to the world; and to the comparitively strong and civilized government which enforced good order under Ismail Pasha, will succeed anarchy and the redoubled horrors of unrestrained slave-hunting and slave trading.—[R. E. Colston, in the "Century" for March.]

Pretty Much the Same Thing After All.

"Father," he said, as he came running in from school, "did you ever drill an oil well and make $50,000?"

"No, my son, I never did."

"I was in hopes that you had, for I wanted to brag to the boys."

"Well, you can tell 'em that' although I never drilled an oil well and made $50,000, an oil broker once drilled me and made $75,000. which is about the same thing, I guess."

All His Troubles Ahead of Him

Three year old to crying baby:

"Y'u fink y'u 'ave yots of twubble, don't you, baby?"

"Hu-wah—hu-wah—hu-wah?" replied the baby.

"Well, y'u dis wait till y'u dit bid 'nuff to dit a good 'pankin' once, an' 'en y'u u'll know what twubble is."

The London Sportsman, of Feb. 11, contained the following advertisement: "Wanted—A cultured gentleman, capable of milking goats. A university man preferred. Application, with testimonials as to proficiency, to be addressed, etc."

THE LIMB-FELLY CLUB.

The excitement which has prevailed among certain of the older members of the club came to a climax Saturday evening. What occasioned the excitement was kept a profound secret among a dozen, but it may be stated here that the rumpus was kicked up by Prof. Sunflower Smythe, a local member with a harelip and toes turning in.

For some weeks past the Professor has hankered for an official position, and failing to receive recognition of his merits he organized a conspiracy to dethrone Brother Gardner. By circulating many false statements, and by forging the names of several individuals to false documents, he enlisted the sympathies of Elder Antimony Swift, Deacon Cohort Davis and Judge Out-Off Kemperberry. He approached Huckleberry Tompkins with the plan, and even went so far as to offer him a new fifty-cent door-mat to join the conspiracy, but Brother Tompkins was true blue and gave the whole affair away.

THE MEETING OPEN.

When the meeting was called to order the three conspirators were in their seats, entirely unsuspicious of the sand-club which was hanging over their heads, while the President, Sir Isaac Walpole, Waydown Bebee, and others in the ring, carried very serious countenances. The plot of the conspirators was not yet fully ripe. Prof. Smythe was just settling himself down to sound Elder Toots in the matter, when Brother Gardner rose up and said:

"Envy am de parent of half de wickedness in dis world. One of de fust principles of human natur' am to begrudge some odder pusson's good luck, but de minit common sense am called in fur consultation dis envy disappears—except in isolated cases.

"We envy de rich, while it am p'raps our own fault entirely dat we am not classed among 'em.

"We envy talent, an' yet we am fo'ced to acknowledge to ourselves dat we frew away our opportunities.

"Find me a man who am down on his fellowman on gineral priciples an' I'll show ye a chap who orter be in State Prison by de same rule.

"De Lawd put us heah fur each to make his own way. De field am world-wide, wid plenty of room fur all. If one, by his applicashun, perseverance integrity an' determination, towers above de one who waits fur luck an' feeds his soul on envy, any conspiracy to pull him down should be sot down on by all good men. Brudders Smythe, Swift an' Davis, I should like to see de three of you at de foot of de grand staircase. Dar am a leetle matter dat I wish to discuss in private."

THEY RETIRE.

The trio of conspirators were evidently greatly surprised at the request, but suspected nothing and followed the President down stairs. As no one else was permitted to follow, it may never be known what happened on the landing. What the meeting heard may, however, throw some general light upon the subject.

1. Yells of terror.
2. Sounds of heels striking the walls.
3. Sounds of cloth being ripped and torn, and boot-heels striking the fence on the other side of the alley.
4. Bump—kerchunk—thud—deep silence.
5. The echoes of the toe of a No. 13 boot striking against coat-tails.

HE REAPPEARS.

Soon after these last mentioned sounds had died away Brother Gardner entered the room with a sweet smile on his face, and walked straight to his seat without a word. There was blood on his left ear, the polish was worn off his right boot, and one end of his collar was unbuttoned, but this might have happened to any man who had fallen downstairs.

"Misser President, shall I cross de three names off de book?" asked the Secretary.

"Da Cha'r reckons you may," was the answer, "an' we will now take up de reg'lar bill o' fare."

USE HIM WELL.

Giveadam Jones presented the following card and asked for the endorsement of the club:

U. D. Peters

Was born and raised in the State of Tennessee, from which State he moved to Ohio, where he resided twelve years. For the last twenty years he has been a resident of Canada in the lumbering district, but has resigned all business engagements, and will devote his time and energy in the service of Preparing the People to Meet Their God.

He explained that Mr. Peters had just started out on a lecturing tour which will include the whole world before he knocks off, unless the walking becomes too bad. He knew him to be a man of great moral worth, and had been authorized to present his name for membership.

The application was referred to the usual committee, and Brother Gardner indulged in the hope that Mr. Peters would meet with friends in every town he honored with his presence.

PARALYZED.

Prof. Sarsaparilla Hunter then offered the following resolution:

"Resolved—Dat in dis struggle between England an' de Arabs, de sympathies of dis club go out for de latter."

"You offer dis, do you?" queried the President as he looked from the paper to Sarsaparilla and back.

"Yes, sah.

"You sympathize wid de Arab, do you?"

"Yes, sah."

"Any partickler reason?"

"A werry great reason, sah. De Arab am seeking to abolish slavery in England."

There was a period of silence so deep and painful that Shindig Watkins blistered his heel on the hot stove without realising it. Brother Gardner finally said:

"Giveadam Jones an' Pickles Smith will take de Professor to de anty-room an' rub de back o' his neck with a cold brick. If dat doan't effect a cure we'll send him to de idiot asylum!"

The Professor acted like one who had been knocked down by a brick house, and after the rubbing process above referred to had been completed he explained that the resolution had been drawn up by a tin peddler, who had promised him a new tin pan to present it.

NOT SO FAR AS HEARD FROM.

A communication from Halifax contained the inquiry: "Has any member of your club been fatally injured by that fiendish invention known as the 'Torpedo-Chicken?'"

"I hasn't heard of any sich case," observed Brother Gardner. "De torpedo-chicken was inwented about two years ago. When it fust came out several full men who had failed to keep posted picked it off de roof for a pullet, an' war found dean near by, but dey were not members of dis club. I has incidently learned dat chicken pot-pie has become a total stranger to mos' of you, an' I reckon dat it am just as well to keep on cultivatin' your tastes fur soup-bones an' neck-pieces. We will now blow out de lamps, lock up de stove an' ambulate to our respectable homes."

The Open Fire-Place.

The popular movement that favors a return to the comforts of the roomy houses of the olden time has not only produced ample windows and airy halls, huge mantel-pieces, stately clocks and round tables, but great chimneys and open fire-places, such as our grandfathers enjoyed on winter evenings when the forests were the only supply of fuel.

When coal began to be cheaper than wood, the open fire-place and great mantelpieces almost disappeared. It is now found that coal may so be used in open grates as to give to the room the old time cheerfulness and glow. It has also been discovered of late that the same grate may be made to answer for two rooms, without an extra supply of fuel. A practical reporter thus writes on the subject for his paper:

"I think the time is coming," said a builder, "when houses will be furnished with more grates and open fire-places than they are to-day. Of late years everything has been running to hot-air furnaces and steam-heating apparatus, and the system of warming flats has been reduced to a science.

"But only those who have been brough up in the country can realize the charm of the big, wide fireplace, with its crackling back-logs and its bed of red-hot embers, that form themselves into so many fantastic shapes to fascinate the family gathered round.

"Did you ever notice how earnestly people gaze into a good fire? What do they see there, what thoughts does the fire suggest, that all who gather around it sooner or later find themselves staring vacantly at it, oblivious to all surroundings?

"What good cheer does it cast over the household to see the unsteady flicker of the flame, and watch the dancing shadows on the floor! What is more consoling than to blow out the lamp, or turn out the gas, and sit by the firelight alone, with one's heels perched upon the fender! There's little of that in the city, but I believe there's going to be more of it—not open fire-places, but grates.

"Away down South, where they don't need much fire at any season, a man has invented a grate that heats two rooms at once with one fire. It ought to have been done before, everybody will say, and many of us builders wonder why we didn't think of it ourselves.

"The whole thing consists of setting a peculiarly constructed grate clear through the chimney, so that the front is in one room and the back in another. Of course, one fire will heat both rooms. Simple! And yet it has just been patented. I'm afraid we are getting slow."

The Mission of the Mahdi.

The term "Mahdi" is approximately translated "Messiah." The Mahdi's Heaven-imposed mission is neither national nor political, but religious. The territory which he claims and the people whose allegiance he demands are limited solely by his geographical ignorance. Either he is the looked-for spiritual head of the whole world, who is to unite all nations under an Islam purified of its existing abuses, or he is nothing. He is is either the Messiah which was to come or an imposter. Avoiding a most exact parallel which might seem irreverent, an attempt to negotiate with such a leader might be compared to an offer made by the Mohammedan leader to Peter the Hermit of the crowd of the Franks if he would refrain from prosecuting the Crusades.

The Mahdi's aims, repeated in innumerable proclamations, are to drive those who refuse to recognize his divine mission into the sea, to be proclaimed in the holy city of Mecca, and to destroy the false Caliphate at Stamboul. He is equally hostile to the Senoussi, the Sultan, Arabi, and Mr. Blunt. His only adherents are those who will take the sword and kill all who refuse his faith throughout the world. He is the successor of numerous imposters who, not having the fortune to be opposed by British statesmen, have failed to achieve equal prestige. Defeat alone can destroy that prestige.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

OWEN SOUND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.	Mixed.
Toronto....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orangeville. Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Orangeville. Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Owen Sound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
Chatsworth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orange. Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
ville.. Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto.....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

EUGENIA
Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

A RARE CHANCE.

SAW-MILL FOR SALE.

THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4½ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill; a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.

J. A. DUNCAN,
230 tf Markdale P. O.

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense, on the

Most APPROVED

plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat.

☞ Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS

In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.

Prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $8 per acre. On 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country for securing Good Homes now open for settlement.

FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE—10,818,433 Acres OR MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1883, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific Country, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all kinds of

PUMPS,

Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.

Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's

PATENT LOAD LIFTER

For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.

☞ Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satistaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS, CASKETS, SHROUDS, and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farmers & Threshers

Ask your merchants for

McCOLL BROS.

LARDINE MACHINE OIL.

Burdock Blood Bitters.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

ROBERT S. RAE,
TAILOR,

Sydenham Street.

MARKDALE.

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS.—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,

(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,
199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison.

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,

MARKDALE,

Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,

MARKDALE,

John McAleer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

MARKDALE

HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

122-47

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

124y

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 123-y

COMMERCIAL HOTEL,
PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of

BRICK AND STONE WORK,

Plain Ornamental Plastering.

Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.

126-ly.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given.

All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebrated

CHATHAM WAGONS.

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs.	Flour
" "	61 "	39 "	"
" "	60 "	38 "	"
" "	59 "	37 "	"
" "	58 "	36 "	"
" "	57 "	35 "	"

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED.

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

FARM FOR SALE

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres mostly cleared and under cultivation. This farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE, Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO. NOBLE, Markdale.

VOL. 5.

Spring

COMP

54 Comple

Gold and Silver
Gents sizes, Walt field and Swiss and 15 Jewelled.
Warrants cover and 2 years.

32 FINE

Seth Thomas

WEDDING RIN

3 oz. Coin Cas
Exp. Bal., $12.00
A good Swiss
Silver Case, $9.50

I Advertise Actu

And am in a po terms, time or ca dealer in this sect quotations, comp prove my statem help to sell—ver imitation watches of honest repre article, and give ing 2 years. Cash is worth consider aser.

DIFFICULT WATCH
ALL WORK FUL

W. A. B
Jeweller,

Local and

NOTICES in these c any individual or So cents a line for the cents a line each sub

OWEN SOUND is Office.

THE sidewalks places.

THE B. V. T last week.

PROF. MORGAN family to Meaford

FARM to rent o
Irving, Markdale

THE spring as Sound next Mon

LATEST styles
Spring at Hill B

CONSIDERABLE business now-a-d

DR. SPROULE,
Friday night, fo

FOR Pine and Grant & Co., Ma

THE only real to be had at Mc

WOMENS' solid only $1.50 at M

THE STANDARD
the very best sa

ST. VINCENT place at Meafor

LETTER-HEADS put in pads at t

WELLINGTON on Thursday las ity.

THE revised Testament will May.

WILL RUTLE
Herald gave us
Saturday.

MARKDALE yo to form into a "Clever."

IT was recent Georgian Bay
the Advertiser fully two feet bottom.

Medical.

MARSHALL, D.D.S.
DENTIST,
DUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL
Dentistry, will be at the Markdale arkdale, on the 1st and third Wed-each month and also at Munshaw's Flesherton, the day following the dnesday in each month for the purs profession.
122-67

. C. RICHARDS,
DER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCH-
r, Markdale.
120y

AMUEL WARDELL,
L DIGGER AND DRILLER. All rders promptly attended to. Post nder's Hill Owen Sound 129-95

MERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
and commodious Sample Rooms
d Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder plied with the best the market af od Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

EPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
ntracts taken for all kinds of K AND STONE WORK, in Ornamental Plastering.
ning in all Shades and Colors.
s moderate and satisfaction guar-Orders left at ahe STANDARD office ve prompt attention.
126 ly.

ISAAC STINSON.
der and Contractor
kinds of Brick and Stone work.
ates given.
rk guaranteed.
by mail promptly attended to.
MARKDALE P. O.

HN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
ER'L BLACKSMITH
RSE SHOEING
A SPECIALTY.
so agent for the celebrated THAM WAGONS.

kdale Roller Mills.
subscriber begs leave to announce to ners of the surrounding country that rning out flour equal to any other ill.
ore waiting while the grist is being ollowing is the scale of exchange:—
t Weighing 62 lbs, 40 lbs. Flour.
" 61 " 39 " "
" 60 " 38 " "
" 59 " 37 " "
" 58 " 36 " "
" 57 " 35 " "
al in proportion to amount of flour.
the average weight of new wheat to
s. to the bushel, and the most of it rly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to el.
John W. Ford.

w Butcher Shop.
est meats the country can produce
hand and
ERED TO ALL PARTS OF
TOWN WHERE ORDERED.
re of public patronage respectfully
mber the stand in McNea's block.
W. H. RUTLEDGE.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
ersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of hool Furniture.
g of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS,
ERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest d most approved pattern. Highly nded by School Trustees and Teach-heapness, comfort and compactness tried. An assortment of Farm and ells kept always on hand. Send for to Chatsworth P. O.
ANDREW McGILL.

RM FOR SALE.
22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres stly cleared and under cultivation n is three miles from Markdale, and old on very easy terms. For fur rs apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE,
CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO.
Markdale.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 239. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 9, 1885. {COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.}

Spring Stock
COMPLETE.

54 Complete Watches.

Gold and Silver Cases, Ladies and Gents sizes, Waltham, Elgin, Springfield and Swiss movements, 7, 9, 11 and 15 Jewelled. Close time-keepers. Warrants cover all breakages, for 1 and 2 years.

32 FINE CLOCKS,
Seth Thomas & other makes.

WEDDING RINGS, ACID TEST.

3 oz. Coin Case, Elgin movement, Exp. Bal., $12.00.
A good Swiss Watch, 15 Jewelled, Silver Case, $9.50.

I Advertise Actual Present Stock,

And am in a position to give better terms, time or cash, than any other dealer in this section of Grey Co. Get quotations, compare with mine, and prove my statement. Long warrants help to sell—very often—inferior or imitation watches. I hold to the plan of honest representation of every article, and give no warrants exceeding 2 years. Cash discount 5 per cent. is worth considerable to every purchaser.

DIFFICULT WATCH REPAIRING A Specialty.
ALL WORK FULLY GUARANTEED.

W. A. BROWN,
Jeweller, - Markdale.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

OWEN SOUND is to have a new Post Office.

THE sidewalks are showing up in places.

THE B. V. Times had the blues last week.

PROF. MORGAN has removed with his family to Meaford.

FARM to rent or sell, apply to J. G. Irving, Markdale.

THE spring assizes open at Owen Sound next Monday.

LATEST styles in Gents' Hats for Spring at Hill Bro's.

CONSIDERABLE bustle, but not much business now-a-days.

DR. SPROULE, M. P., returned on Friday night, for Easter.

FOR Pine and Maple Flooring, go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

THE only real original Irish Brogan to be had at McFarland's.

WOMENS' solid Calf High Cut Boots only $1.50 at McFarland's.

THE STANDARD job work is giving the very best satisfaction.

ST. VINCENT spring show takes place at Meaferd on the 29th inst.

LETTER-HEADS neatly printed and put in pads at this office, very cheap.

WELLINGTON carried the Scott Act on Thursday last by 1,208 of a majority.

THE revised version of the Old Testament will be issued on tha 1st May.

WILL RUTLEDGE of the Dundalk Herald gave us a pleasant call on Saturday.

MARKDALE young men are anxious to form into a volunteer company. "Clever."

IT was recently reported that the Georgian Bay was frozen solid; but, the Advertiser affirms that there is fully two feet of water yet in the bottom.

FOR Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

BENSON'S have just opened out the finest stock of cigars ever brought into Markdale.

THE editor celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of his wedding day on Monday last.

OBSTRUCTIONS of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, are promptly removed by National Pills.

FOR Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS destroy and remove worms without injury to adult orinfant.

REDDICK'S carriage works, Mt. Forest, was destroyed by fire last Saturday week.

Seeds.—Field and Garden seeds of all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

EUPHRASIA Agricultural Society spring show will be held at Rocklyn on the 30th April.

MR. HENRY HAMILTON was kicked in the shin by one of his horses last week; but is around again.

Oil Cake, unsurpassed for Horses and Cattle, for sale at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

THE Mercantile Fire Ins. Coy's is steadily increasing in this locality—R. C. Bryden is agent. 139 3-w.

ONE of the Meaford Mirror imp's fell into a hatchway and narrowly escaped breaking his neck last week.

DR. LOW'S PLEASANT WORM SYRUP—An agreeable, safe and effectual remedy to remove all kinds of worms.

DON'T forget J. R. Trimble's great Auction Sale of General Store Goods on Friday and Saturday, April 10th and 11th.

WE. haven't had any new maple syrup yet, but, we were presented with a basket of fresh eggs for Easter: many thanks.

THE choicest lot of Candies, Nuts, Oranges, Lemons, etc., just arrived at Benson's this week ever brought into Markdale.

SOLE agent for Silver Cream, best solution for cleaning, Hollow and plate Silverware. 25 cents a bottle at W. A. Brown's.

THE "small boys" of Markdale have organized a "Literary and Gymnastic Club." They intend giving a grand concert sometime in May.

LADIES' in want of Millinery or Mantles would consult their interest and pockets by calling upon Miss Spence at W. J. McFarland's.

MESS ARTHUR and Arch. Mordock left Markdale on Monday last for British Columbia to take important positions on the C. P. R. construction.

R. O. WHITBY, Markdale, is prepared to do all kinds of house, sign and carriage painting with neatness and dispatch. Special attention to graining.

REV. J. CHISHOLM of Osprey has been appointed to take charge of a mission in British Columbia in the interests of the Presbyterian body, of which he is a faithful worker.

THE Dundalk Post-Office has been removed to Mr. Hanbury's store, and our old friend Thos. Hanbury is now P. M. We have no doubt he will make an efficient and obligingo fficial.

BUSINESS MEN.—Get your envelopes at the STANDARD office and have your business neatly printed on the same. We have taken orders for 2,000 the past week, but ther's plenty more in stock.

THE Snow Plough, under the charge of Mr. E. Leslie was tested at Buffalo on Saturday last. The manner in which it worked gave entire satisfaction to all who saw it. Mr. O. Jull went over to witness the trial and pronounced the Plow a success. It is gratifying to know that our Orangeville men have beaten the Yankee in invention.—Orangeville Advertiser.

GO TO Hill Bro's for your shirtings at 10c. per yd. a splendid line Ashtons prints at 10c.

REJUVENATOR Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of diseases from the system. Sold by Smith, the barber.

THE Beaver Valley Times calls them R. T. T. and the Flesherton Advance R. T. O. T. Both wrong.

HEAD QUARTERS.—For Implements and repairs of all kinds, call on J. H. Hull, agent for Fleury's Sylvester's and Wilkinson's manufacture.

HILL BRO'S have a large variety of Dress Goods; Beautiful shades. See them; they are selling fast.

FOR ROUGH conditions of the Skin, Shampooing the head, Pimples, Eruption, and Skin Diseases, use Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap.

MAC'S new Milliner has arrived. Sam. and Jack comb their hair now some fifteen times per diem.—COM.

REJUVENATOR keeps the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure and nature's channels free; then you have health. Sold by Smith, the barber.

MR. ANDREW KIRKWOOD, 11th line Euphrasia, has sold his farm of 100 acres to Mr. Fred Taylor for $1,650.

WM. LUCAS & Co. have any amount of money to loan on real estate security at 6½ per cent. Call on them before borrowing elsewhere. 238-3m

DON'T forget to call and and see Hill Bro's Millinery Department; it is full of spring novelties, and is managed by Miss Ida E. Love, who is highly recommended as a first-class Milliner and Mantle maker.

"HONESTY is the best policy;" as the farmer said while packing apples, putting the largest ones in the bottom. You know said he, the buyers are so suspicious, they almost invariably open the barrel at the bottom.

A "CLIPPER" Paper cutter just to hand at the STANDARD office. We can now give book, pamphlet and all padded work, such as bill heads, letter heads, &c., &c., the very best finish. Call and get a trial job if you have not had one.

DUNDAS has just received a large lot of Ladies Buttoned Boots at $1.00. This line of boots has been tested and has given entire satisfaction. Dundas is a practical Boot & Shoe man and is giving his whole attention to the Boot & Shoe business.

WE acknowledge receipt, during the past week, of subscription from the following: Joseph McLeod Jr., Iron Mountain, Mich., for '84 and '85; John Devitt, Fort Ellice, N. W. T., for '85, Julia Allan, Huron, Mich., to 1st April '86.

DUNDAS' Custom Boot & Shoe Shop is now running in full blast. Orders promptly executed and repairing in all its branches done with neatness and despatch. It matters not where you have bought your boots, bring your repairing to Dundas'.

IN purchasing Clothing and Boots perhaps more than any other articles, the majority of people want a fairly good article, one that is honestly made of good honest material. McFarland has built up his immense business by keeping honest goods, honestly made, at honest prices.

DUNDAS' is selling No. 1 Prince of Wales Chewing Tobacco at 38 cts. per lb.; Brier 6 s. smoking at 47 cents; Napoleon at 42 cents; XXX White Wine Vinegar, No. 1, at 30 cts. per gallon; 3 lb. can Tomatoes at 7 cents per can. Other lines of Groceries proportionately low.

WORTHY OF MENTION.—On Thursday last Thos. Brown of Berkeley went on the train at Markdale station in a hurry leaving his pocket book where he had purchased his ticket. Mr. Cæsar, the agent, saw the purse and took charge, not knowing to whom it belonged, but afterwards found out the owner, and delivered it, all O. K. Mr. Brown wishes to express his thanks to Mr. Cæsar for his integrity, and trouble.

IF the person who sent us a Postal Card from Flesherton P. O., dated 6th April, wishing us to send them the STANDARD will kindly let us know their name, we will gladly comply with their wishes. As it is, we have no idea who to forward it to, there being no name on the card. Had it been dated April 1st we should have looked upon it as an intended "April fool," as it is we cannot but treat it with due respect.

IT is no wonder the Benson boys take the bun for cheap goods, they are civil obliging and understand the Grocery and Liquor business better than any one in town, being brought up to it from childhood. If you want a gallon or bottle of good whiskey, you can get it as it comes from the distellery at Benson's; they are the only ones in town that buys direct from the distillery; others buy through the Toronto liquor stores. The best flavored cigars in town is at Benson's and it is the only place in town you can get a good one.

THE CANADIAN BEE JOURNAL.—Some of our subscribers have been enquiring of us, if there was a paper or Journal published in Canada devoted to the interest of Bees. The first number of a journal (the only one published in Canada) is now before us. It is printed by D. A. Jones & Co., Beeton; is a very neat little 20 page, got up in pamphlet form, price $1.00 per year. It is well gotten up and cannot fail to be of valuable assistance to those in the bee business. We might here say this industry is fast developing and is destined in the near future to be not only extensive but a profitable industry.

BURGLARY.—The post office here was broken into between 7 and 8 o'clock last night. Thr thief broke a large pain of glass in the rear window and made his way inside and walked off with the cash box. Mr. McVannel, the assistant postmaster, had fortunately taken all the money and registered letters out of the box before six o'clock and placed them in the safe in the store. The box contained about $4.00 worth of stamps. The attempt was a daring one, as the whole Berwick Block was lit up and parties from the store were liable to pass out the backway at any moment. This is the second time the office has been entered during the past year.—Shelburne Free Press.

HORSE KILLED.—On Saturday last while Mr. Thos. Elliott was at the elevator at Markdale station preparing to load up some coarse grain which he had purchased, his team took fright at the train which was then leaving the station, and ran in the direction of their home. Having to cross the track to go that direction of course they headed that way, but suddenly came in contact with the train which was then rapidly moving away striking the off horse and carrying him under in an instant, the beast was literally torn to pieces as also the harness and sleigh. The other horse fortunately escaped without injury. The loss to Mr. Elliott is not less than $200.00. At the same time and place Mr. W. J. Shepherdson's team also made off but stopped within a few inches of the moving train.

GOOD BYE.—A very pleasant time was spent at the Markdale House on the evening of Monday last, on the occasion of Mr. John Hill and family's departure from our midst. The young men, desirous of showing their appreciation and esteem for Mr. Hill, who left for Douglas on Tuesday morning last, assembled together at the above hotel, where a very sumptuous and toothsome spread was provided for the occasion. The efficient chairman, Mr. W. L. Young, made a few introductory remarks, after which, the rest of the company took an active part in "speechifying," complimenting Mr. H. in a deserving manner. The speeches were interspersed with vocal music from the renowned W. J. Benson which served to break the monotony of the evening. The usual toasts were drank, after which the company dispersed for their homes, feeling well pleased with their evening's enjoyment.

If you want an easy shave,
As good as barber ever gave.
Just call on me at my saloon
At morn' or eve' or busy noon.
Comb and curl the hair with grace,
To suit the countenance of the face.
My raisors are both sharp and keen,
And towels are also neat and clean.
T. D. Smith, Markdale.

IMPORTANT NEWS FOR THE LADIES.—Miss McColl respectfully intimates to the Ladies' of Markdale and surrounding country, that she is commencing business in Dress Making in McDougall's Block, third story, where she will be pleased to attend to those requiring anything done in her line. Charges moderate. Fitts guarenteed.

CONCERT.—Will be given in Mr. Rae's Hall on the evening of Wednesday the 15th, when a choice programme will be presented, consisting of singing by the Children and in concert part Songs, Readings, Recitations, &c. We would be glad to have all the parents of the section present who take an interest in the progress of their children. Admission 15 cents; children Free. Proceeds to aid in procuring school furniture.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—To day, Thursday, while working off the News an accident of the most painful nature happened to the publisher's little ten year old son, George. Little Georgie was pulling the paper off the press—a No. 3 Gordon—and while it was running at full speed he got his right hand between the bed and the platen, when it was literally crushed before the press could be stopped. The fore finger had to be amputated at the upper joint, the middle finger was also broken at the upper joint, and the bones in the back of the hand were crushed so that the flesh between the third and little fingers burst and the flesh from the upper joint of the little finger to the wrist joint, leaving a horrible gash nearly two inches long. Surgical aid was procured within five minutes after the accident happened, and the wounds skilfully dressed, Dr. Oldham has hopes of saving the hand. —Chatsworth News.

Don't be Tempted to Speculate.

We spent three hours the other day inspecting the cells and prisons of the Pensylvania State penitentiary, at Philadelphia. "What is that mild, clerical-looking individual confined in prison for?" we said to the physician accompanying us; "he looks like anything but a convict."—"That man is serving out a sentence of nine years for burglary. "If I could only get out of here," he said to me the other day," added the physician, "and could start life fresh what a future I would have. If some one would only lend me ten thousand dollars to start a fair, legitimate business I should be the happiest of men."—"What business are you thinking of?" said the physician. "I thought," responded the convict, "if I could only start faro bank and run it honorably I should be so happy."

"Do you call that ligitimate business?" rejoined the physician. "Why, yes, retorted the convict. Isn't that more ligitimate than selling stocks in Wall Street short, that you have not got?"

One is about as legitimate as the other. Don't be persuaded to sell stocks short for speculation, or to buy them It is the ruin of nine-tenths of our business men who venture into Wall Street. Therefore, when you read in the daily papers, or receive circulars of stock brokers who attempt to allure you with tempting opportunities to operate on small margins. destroy the circulars and avoid the sending as you would a bunko steerer, or a runner for a faro bank.—American Agriculturist for Aprit.

A PRINCELY FORTUNE.

A man may possess the fortune of a prince but can never possess happiness without good health; to secure which the blood must be kept pure and every organ in proper action. Burdock Blood Bitters purify the blood and regulate all organs.

READS LIKE A NOVEL.

The Eventful Career of Gen. Eber, Correspondent of "The London Times."

Gen. Eber, The London Times correspondent at Pesth, who died a few days ago although not so universally known as his Paris colleague, M. de Blowitz, looked back upon a most interesting and adventurous career, which has now found an untimely and inglorious end. The history of his life reads like a railway novel. After having been made a general by Garibaldi on the field of battle, he went to England with the hope of finding some employment for his energies. The handsome young Hungarian was furnished with warm letters of recommendation from Kossuth and Andrassy, which opened the gates of English society to him. He was admitted on almost intimate terms to the house of a noble lord who employed him as a secretary, and whose only daughter, the reigning beauty of the season, with the perversity of English maidens, fell in love with the penniless foreigner, whose riding, fencing, shooting, talking was superior to the performances of all her friends. I do not know if 1852 was a leap year, but certainly Lady —— believed it to be one, for she made advances to Eber, and at last proposed to run away with him. Instead of carrying out this adventurous plan immediately, Eber thought of his duty to warn his employer, telling him at the same time that he was very fond of Lady —— and that he begged the lord to take good care of her and give her into safe keeping. The English nobleman was so much struck by the young man's disinterested conduct, which he seemed to consider the only natural course to take, that he made it his duty to provide for him. He called upon the editor of The Times and begged him to employ the young man upon some foreign mission, promising to refund the salary paid to him. It was the time of the Crimean war, and Gen. Eber was sent as special correspondent of The Times to Russia. When after a couple of months the lord came to ask after his charge the gentleman on the staff of The Times were full of his praises, and as to allowing the lord to repay their expenses they assured him they should ever remain his debtors for having provided the newspaper with such a very able correspondent. Gen. Eber remained true to the English paper until death, and it is a proof of how the editors valued him that they allowed him to be their Vienna correspondent while he lived at Pesth, a circumstance which naturally made important news a day late. He did not escape his fate, however, for his lady-love bore the separation some years only and then left her family and her country to follow him about in the adventurous course of his life.

Poor Eber's brain suffered during the last years of his life, and his friends had of late often expressed the he should die before falling a victim to incurable insanity. He was a member of the Hungarian parliament, and the president, well knowing that he was not responsible for all he said, took no notice of the unparliamentary expressions which escaped him and the epithet with which he honored the Cardinal Haywald. A few nights before his death he was at the Hungarian theatre, and in the dead silence which ensued after a thrilling monologue spoken by a first-rate actor, a stentorian "Old donkey!" sounded through the house. It was Gen. Eber, whose friends persuaded him to leave the theatre after this liberal expression of his private opinion. His death was very tragical. He stood on the top of the stairs, accompanied by a servant, who for the last few months was always at his heel when, suddenly looking over the balustrade, he exclaimed: "I feel very unsteady. I wonder why?" and before the servant could approach he fell head over heels down two stories into the hall below. He was still conscious when taken up but died a few hours later.

New Check Rein Theory.

A Frenchman has tried the experiment of weighing different parts of the horse while alive. He has found practically that in road work the fore legs wear out faster than the hind, and argues that any means by which the weight can be reduced, will be a gain in a pecuniary point of view.

He placed a black mare with her fore-legs and hind-legs on separate weighing machines, and found that, when left to assume her own attitude, she weighed on the fore scales four hundred and sixty pounds, while her hind quarters drew only three hundred and seventy pounds, the total weight of the animal being eight hundred and thirty pounds.

By depressing the head so as to bring the nose on a level with the chest, seventeen pounds additional were added to the front scales, while the raising of that part to the height of the withers, transferred twenty-one pounds to the hindermost scales.

Again, by raising the check rein and drawing back the head in a similar way, seventeen pounds were transferred from the fore to the hind scales. Every practical horseman knows that a horse's fore legs will suffer in proportion to the weight which is thrown on them, while their relife is an additional source of strain to the hind legs. The Frenchman's theory is that the check rein, properly adapted, can equalize the strain and make the hind legs bear their proportion of the weight.

A report made to the French Academy of Medicine by the chief surgeon of the hospital at Caen states a case of the cure of hydrophobia by subcutaneous injections of pilocarpine. There was also administered a draught consisting chiefly of bromide of potassium and hydrate of chloral.

THE POSTAGE STAMP.

The Story of Its Origin—A Brief Sketch of Its Inventor.

Mr., afterward Sir, Rowland Hill, the great postoffice reformer, and inventor of the postage stamp, was born at Kidderminster, England, Dec. 3, 1795. After his education was completed, he assumed the position of teacher in a school conducted by his father, near Birmingham, until 1833, when he joined a company interested in forming a colony in south Australia, and was appointed secretary of the royal commissioners who managed the affairs of the colony. He was also a member of the "Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge." The rates of postage at that time were very high. Postage beyond the limits of London district postoffice varied from 4d. to 1s. 8d. for a single letter, meaning a single piece of paper of less than one ounce weight.

This exorbitant rate of postage was beyond the means of the mass of the people, consequently correspondence was evaded, and this proved very injurious to commerce and the industry of the country. The high rate of postage attracted Hill's attention; he argued that if the price of postage was lowered, so many more letters would pass through the mail that the financial condition of the treasury would not be impaired, while society would derive much additional benefit. He became so much interested in the matter that in 1839 he prepared a low and uniform rate of postage, which he succeeded in bringing before the British government; his plans were much favored, and a committee was appointed to investigate its merits and present a new code of postal laws, which were adopted, making the London direct postage one pence, and a general inland rate of four pence, Jan. 10, 1840, the uniform penny post came into use, which may be considered the birthday of the postage stamp, although they were not actually introduced until the 6th of May following. The experiment was successful beyond his own expectation; during the next ten years it made so great a difference that in 1850 there was sent through the mails 7,239,962 letters, against 1,500,000 in 1840. Hill then accepted a place in the treasury, but a change in government dismissed him. He was generally regarded as a public benefactor, and a subscription was raised for his benefit in London, which amounted to £15,000, or $45,000. This goes to show the approbation with which he was regarded by a grateful nation. In 1846 he was appointed secretary to the postmaster general. In 1860 he was made K. C. B. in recognition of his public services. We reprint the following curious and interesting story, though we do not know its origin. There is a slight probability that it may have been what set Mr. Hill to thinking; it is as follows:

"One day a girl came out of an inn located in the north of England and received from a postman a letter, which she turned over in her hand as she inquired the price of the postage. The man asked a shilling, a sum too large for one so poor as herself to pay, and so she returned the letter to the postman with sadness, although she knew that her brother had sent it.

"But a sympathetic traveller named Rowland Hill stood by, and at this moment interposed, and insisted on paying the shilling himself, although the girl seemed strongly averse to his doing so. When the postman had departed the kind-hearted Mr. Hill was surprised that there was no need for his pity, for the letter contained no written communication, but on its outside were certain marks agreed upon by herself and brother, from which, as she held the letter in her hands, she gathered all the information she desired. 'We are so poor,' she continued 'that we invented this mode of correspondence without paying for letters.'"

Sects Among Mohammedans.

One of the most striking characteristics of the Afghan and Turcoman tribes, which has more than once been very skilfully utilized by Russia in her operations against them, is the extreme bitterness with which they take sides in the great controversy between the Suni and Shiah sects, which may be called the catholics and protestants of Islam. The Shiahs, who are strong in Persia, hold Mohammed's son-in-law, Ali, the fourth caliph to be the prophet's only legitimate successor, denouncing his three forerunner, as usurpers, while the Sunis, who abound in Afghanistan, hold a directly opposite creed. This feeling, which has made the countless Perso-Afghan wars unspeakably ferocious, is carried to such a height that an Englishman who lately begged the life of a wounded Persian was answered by one of his Afghan comrades: "Were he only an unbeliever I would spare him, but, being a Shiah, he must die." A stranger entering an Afghan or Turcoman camp is often met with the challenge, "What say'st thou of the first three caliphs?" and, should he pronounce in their favor, the crucial question follows, "What think'st thou of Ali?" to which, if he value his life, he must reply, "Ali was a kafir" (infidel.)

Orange-peel dried in or on the oven until all the moisture has been expelled will be found very inflammable, and serves admirably either for lighting fires or for resuscitating them when they have nearly gone out.

In order to alleviate the trouble arising from mosquito bites, Mr. Stevenson of the Army Medical Department recommends that the hands should be smeared with a moist cake of soap, and the thin lather be allowed to dry into the skin. This removes all itching and pain in ten or twelve minutes after the soap is applied, and they do not again return.

Put out by First Base.

There was a chase after a dog in a Liverpool church during service the other night. During the sermon the preacher was interrupted by the bark of a dog from that part of the church which is set apart for ladies. The noise was repeated; and as the animal would not be quieted, and refused to be lured out of the pew by its owner, a verger approached to eject the dog. He hunted it about the church, but could neither get hold of it nor induce it to take flight through the door. Several members of the congregation joined in the chase, but for some time all efforts to reach the dog were ineffectual. Ultimately a member of the choir seized the dog by the tail, and in this way carried it to the door and pitched it into the street. The sermon then proceeded.

Is it Really Consumption?

Many a case supposed to be radical lung disease is really one of liver complaint and indigestion, but, unless that diseased liver can be restored to healthy action, it will so clog the lungs with corrupting matter as to bring on their speedy decay, and then indeed we have consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs, in its worst form. Nothing can be more happily calculated to nip this danger in the bud than is Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." By druggists.

A story in a weekly paper bears the ghastly title of "Chased by a Corpse." It must have caught him on a 'dead run.'

* * * * Cancer of the lower bowel sometimes results from neglected or badly treated piles. By our improved methods without knife, caustic or salve, we speedily and permanently cure the worst pile tumors. Pamphlet, references and terms, two letter stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y

A new drama is called "The Skating Rink." The actors are studying their roles and have begun to tumble to the business of the piece.

Roller skating has become so popular in some places that husbands are going out to board in order to give their wives time to attend the rink.

In the Hour of Need.

You do not want to try experiments, but resort to the old and well tested means that afforded relief in the past. When your corns ache don't take the first article offered to you for the purpose viz., to remove the troublesome corns and to do this without pain, and to do it promptly. PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR has been used for many years. It has never been known to fail. Putnam's Extractor makes no deep holes in the flesh, hard to heal and more troublesome than the original discomforts. It works nicely and efficiently.

Professor—"Give me an example of a highly compressible solid." S.—"The—female form."

Ten years ago all our fine manufactured tobacco came from the United States. But month after month and year after year the superior quality of the "Myrtle Navy" brand has been driving the American article out of the Canadian market. The "Myrtle Navy" is now known in every village in the Dominion, and is as familiar to the smokers upon the Atlantic and Pacific coasts as to those of the city in which it is manufactured.

Egyptian mummies are ground up into paint. They probably give it a good deal of body,

Young Men!—Read This

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRO-VOLTAIC BELT and other ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Coal dealers find they can profitably guess at the weight of coal near enough to sell it; but there is no guesswork about the price.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary succes that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

Years of exasperating experience have taught us that nothing closes quite so promptly on the minute as the bank, the post office and the barber.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

To bronze zinc fret-work, coat the metal with very thin gold-size, and when nearly dry rub on a sufficient quantity of red bronze (bronze powder), dry, and burnish.

To break up colds, fevers and inflammatory attacks, use Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart Weed.

A.P. 222.

WE WANT Lady Agents for the BEST and FASTEST selling publication in America. Sanitary Publishing Co., Toronto, Canada.

CASH paid for Endowment Insurance policies. For particulars, address, with description of policy F. G. RUSSELL, Hartford, Conn., Box 453.

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH—HOW IT CAN BE accomplished. Send for particulars, 8c. SANITARY PUB. CO., Canadian Depository, Toronto, Canada.

50 000 Acres farming lands in Northern Michigan for sale. Some improved farms Terms easy. Address MERRITT CHANDLER, Cheboygan, Mich.

FOR SALE CHEAP—20 acres of land, suitable for market garden, just outside the corporation of Bowmanville. Title good. Terms easy. Apply E. M. No. 33 Bellevue Place, Toronto.

DETACHED SOLID BRICK HOUSE.—GOOD SITuation, high and dry part of city, nine rooms, gas, bath and closet. Lot 33x110. Terms easy. Apply on the premises, or Address 33 Davenport Road, Toronto, Ont.

TO BRICK & TILE MAKERS.—If you want engines and boilers, and the latest improved brick and tile, clay-crushing and stone-separating machinery, for steam or horse power, address M. C. FREEK, or C. NORSWORTHY & Co., St. Thomas, Ont.

A NEW PORTABLE SAW MILL FOR SALE or exchange for pine lumber, including a 30-horse locomotive boiler; 25-engine, and a direct action saw mill, to cut any length desired. Also, a 40-horse second-hand saw mill complete for $1,000. Will take lumber. C. NORSWORTHY & Co., St. Thomas, Ont.

REGUT!

Files DON'T WASTE THEM. SHIP OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FILE CO

150 Front St. E., Toronto. Agents wanted.

F. E. DIXON & CO.

Manufacturers of Star Rivet

Leather Belting!

70 King Street, East, Toronto.

Large double Driving Belts a specialty. See our Price Lists and Discounts

W. & F. P. Currie & Co

100 Grey Nun St., Montreal.

Importers of

Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Fine Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay

Manufacturers of

Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair Bed & Spring

FOR PLEASANT SEWING

—USE ONLY—

Clapperton's Spool Cotton!

Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry-Goods Dealers.

LADIES

PILLS OF TANSY are Perfectly Safe and always Effectual. Sealed particulars 2 cts.

Wilcox Specific Medicine Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.

DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY

50 2nd-hand Bicycles and Tricycles.

Send for list.

Send 3c. stamp for largest catalogue ever issued in Canada.

A. T. LANE, Montreal.

CAUTION!

EACH PLUG OF THE

MYRTLE NAVY

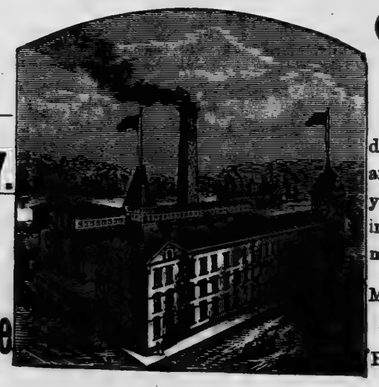
IS MARKED

T. & B.

IN BRONZE LETTERS.

NONE OTHER GENUINE.

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses Cows, Calves, Sheep and pigs. The YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first-class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter It fattens in one-fourth the usual time and saves food Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 200 Feeds.



HUGH MILLER & Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMIST,
167 King St East, Toronto.
For sale by Druggists everywhere.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA COMPANY.

FINEST

Electro Plate

R. W. PRITTIE.

REAL ESTATE AGE

Owned himself, Valuator, Trustee, & Financial Room C, Arcade, Yonge St., Toronto. Mortgages Managed. Properties Exchanged. Money United States lands taken in part payment for city.

SMOKED SAUSAGE

The most convenient meat for farmers in season. These meats are cooked and ready Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send to W. CLARK P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

HE THAT SOWETH

WILLIAM EVANS' SEED

SMALL REAP IN ABUNDANCE

If my seeds are not sold in your town, for my Illustrated and Descriptive Catalogue Mailed free to all applicants.

Wm. Evans, Seedsman, Montreal

[Established 1855.]

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during summer to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. & A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE

SEWING MACHINE

PRICE $25 CASH.

Our new machine is now ready, and is as good as any sold by Agents at $65.00.

SEE TESTIMONIAL!

LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 1883.

Machine arrived all right, and it is certainly well worth the money you ask for it with present improvements. I prefer it to "Singer," "Wanzer," or any other make I have each.

Yours truly,
AARON HAWKINS.

New Attachments, New Furniture, New Stand.

Send stamp for samples of sewing and elegant descriptive photographs of machine before buying from Agents.

MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL.

BONUS:—From now until March 31st, we will give to any person sending us $25 cash in advance for one of our machines a handsome combination table and bracket lamp complete. These lamps are somethings new and the maker wants them introduced. If you or any of your friends want a machine don't delay, but send to

Co-Operative Sewing Machine Co.

26 James St. South, Hamilton, Ont.

Dominion Line of Steamships

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates:

PORTLAND.

Dominion,	March 5	Toronto,	April 2
Montreal,	" 12	Montreal,	" 9
Brooklyn,	" 26

Rates of passage: Ocean, Quebec to Liverpool, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, Steerage lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in rear marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep are carried on them. For particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway local agents of the Company, or to

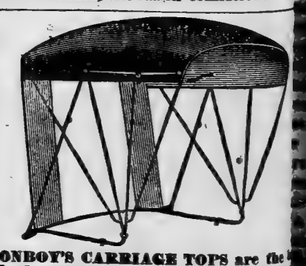
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

TRY PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER

Pure Gold Manufacturing Co., 31 FRONT ST. EAST

STEEL, BRASS AND RUBBER STAMPS

PRESS & WAX SEALS



I. C. FELL & CO., TORONTO.

R. U. AWARE

THAT

Lorillard's Climax Plug Cut, bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

CONBOY'S

CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF

It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating properties of beef, and the only one which has the power to supply nourishment for brain and muscle.

Raising Pigs

A farmer who has had ... ging experience in ... erless young pigs ... gives the following ... as been successful ... be from a moder... and of good quality ... rather than case ... It must always ... d, and to it must ... brown sugar so as ... so a few spots of ... ped desert-spoonful ... teaspoonful of ... this the youngest ... gly, and hardly ... mother. Of course ... lean and warm, and ... d as often as they ... so tell, is rather fre... two hours, or even ... ek, night and day, ... od, and require it ... ust be taken not to ... etc., get sour; an... mount of food sho... e, as if it becomes ... stems are once up... matter to get the ... thrift is for a long ... e or two a teaspoon ... feed with, but in ... ll learn to help the ... or cup; and when ... will all feed to get ... much selfish eage... bray."

Not Grow more ... Farm?

...ly a year has pass... the practice of ... the peach, apple ... at there has not ... of choice grapes ... able seasons the su... the neighbors at ... a pound, the dem... the supply. By ... run at will on the ... e Austrian and Sou... rees having wi... grapes can be ... the hardy sort are ... cultivated and pro... st two or three ye...

R. W. PRITTE
EAL ESTATE AGENT
Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee, &
oom G, Arcade, Yonge St., Toronto
tate Managed. Properties Exchanged. ited States lands taken in part payment
y.

SMOKED SAUSAGE
The most convenient meat for farmers son. These meats are cooked and ready ld by grocers through the Dominion
W. CLARK P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

HE THAT SOWETH
WILLIAM EVANS' SEED
SHALL REAP IN ABUNDANCE.
f my seeds are not sold in your town,
r my Illustrated and Descriptive Catalo ailed free to all applicants.
m. Evans, Seedsman, Montr
[Established 1855.]

lan Line Royal Mail Steamsh Sailing during winter from Portland every d Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and m Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling nderry to land mails and passengers for Scot land. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. J F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer mo e steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during w and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Phil a; and during summer between Glasgow and l, weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and d Philadelphia, fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other inform ply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; nard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. J
F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. lan & Co, Chicago; Love & Alden, rk; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & ebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. an, Portland, Boston. Montreal.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE
EWING MACHIN
PRICE $25 CASH.
ur new machine is now ready, and is d as any sold by Agents at $65.00.
SEE TESTIMONIAL!
LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 18
Machine arrived all right, and it is certain l worth the money you ask for it with sent improvements. I prefer it to nger," "Wanzer," or any other make
n. Yours truly,
AARON HAWKIN
w Attachments, New Furnitur
New Stand.
end stamp for samples of sewing and rant descriptive photographs of chine before buying from Agents.
MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL.
ONUS:—From now until March 31st, 18 will give to any person sending us $35.
n in advance for one of our machines, dsome combination table and bracke p complete. These lamps are somethi and the maker wants them introduced, you or any of your friends want a machi t delay, but send to Operative Sewing Machine Co
2 James St. South, Hamilton, Ont.
minion Line of Steamships nning in connection with the Grand Trunk Ra of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturd g the summer months, and from Portland ev rday during the winter months. Sailing dates POSTLAND.
inion, March 5 | Toronto, April
atreal, " 12 | Montreal, "
oklyn, " 26 |
tes of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $55, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according m and berth. Intermediate $35. Steerage, rates. The saloons and staterooms in steam ted thus: * are amidships, where but little mot lt, and no cattle or sheep are carried on them.
particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Rail local agents of the Company, or to
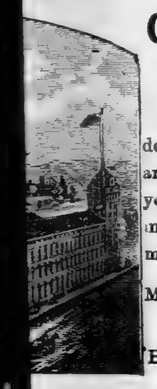
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montr

PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER
Pure Gold
MANUFACTURING CO.,
31 FRONT ST. EAST.



STEEL, BRASS AND RUBBER
STAMPS PRESS & W.AX SEALS
I. C. FELL & CO., TORONTO.

R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Pl
bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard
Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuff est and cheapest, quality considered?

BOYT'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the b cheapest in the Market. Order your Carriage Maker. Take no o

HNSTON'S FLUID BE the only preparation of the kind l the nutritious, together with the stimul ides of beef, and the only one which has o supply nourishment for brain and muscle.

CAUTION
Goods stamped M
den Silver Plate C are not our make.
you want reliable go insist on getting made by the
MERIDEN BRITA
NIA CO.,
HAMILTON,

FOR THE FARMER.

FARM NOTES.

BOHEMIAN OATS.—A correspondent of the Indiana Farmer states that the few lots of these oats that were grown in his neighborhood last year yielded at the rate of 25 to 35 bushels to the acre, for which flat mills were willing to pay fifty cents per bushel. He advices his brothers to "go slow on the $5 and $10 plan," as any quantity of the seed can be purchased from reliable dealers at $1.50 to $2 per bushel.

REMEDY FOR BORERS.—A correspondent of the Rural World states that a mixture of two-thirds soft soap and one-third pine tar, put in water enough to make a thick paint, one pound of flour of sulphur added to each gallon, and the whole boiled together, will make an effective preventive of this pest if applied during the first warm days of spring. Apply with a brush. It is also said to be a preventative of the gnawing of mice and rabbits.

DRAINAGE FOR GRAPES.—I have three rows of grape-vines one hundred feet long and ten feet apart. Under each outside row there is a 5-inch tile drain, two and one half feet deep with good outlet. My grapes ripen two weeks earlier and are more highly flavored than the same varieties in the same neighborhood not drained. They rot much less and the vines do not suffer from excessive cold, as do others near by not drained. The favorable effect of under-draining the canes of raspberries, blackberries and strawberry plants is quite marked, but not to the extent noticeable on grapes. All the benefits derived from underdraining are very much greater in a wet than in a dry season, yet, in my opinion, it pays largely in the latter, especially in stiff clay soil.

Forcing Potatoes Early.

Every owner of farm or garden should endeavor to start a few hills of potatoes for very early use. Old potatoes often get to be very poor for table use the last of June, and the good housewife becomes impatient for the new crop. We have forced the crop by planting in a hot bed early in April, and then transplanting as soon as the weather becomes warm enough for open air culture. The sets can be placed in quite thickly, say two or three inches apart in the bed. This will give from four to nine square inches of surface for each plant. The transplanting should be done before the root growth gets so large as to require much breaking of the roots when separating the sets as they are taken from the hot-bed.

A very much simpler way of hastening early growth is to set a few quarts of small sized potatoes in a warm, light room, a couple of weeks before planting. Spread them out singly, so the light will fall upon the whole of the potatoes, and when they are all set up so the seed end will be uppermost, there will usually be one leading centre bud that will develop in advance of all the other buds. If the potatoes are planted with care, so as to save this centre bud uninjured, the other side buds or eyes will often remain dormant. Buds exposed to the full light, grow short and stout, and when planted will grow out feeding roots immediately. A box two feet square, will hold potatoes enough in a single layer for raising all a large family would use in two or three weeks, and such a box can be set in any sunny window in kitchen or living room.

Raising Pigs by Hand.

A farmer who has had the usual disheartening experience in trying to raise motherless young pigs on ordinary cow's milk, gives the following plan by which he has been successful:—"The milk must be from a moderately-new milch cow, and of good quality—a milk rich in cream rather than caseln is to be preferred. It must always be boiled or well scalded, and to it must be added some fine brown sugar so as to make it sweet, and also a few spots of linseed oil—say, a heaped desert-spoonful of sugar and about a teaspoonful of oil to the quart. Given this the youngsters will thrive amazingly, and hardly miss the care of a mother. Of course they must be kept clean and warm, and be attended to often as they require, which, I need not tell, is rather frequently; about every two hours, or even oftener for the first week, night and day, they are ready for food, and require it. The greatest care must be taken not to let any of the milk, etc., get sour; and only the required amount of food should be prepared at a time, as if it becomes at all sour, and the systems are once upset, it is a most difficult matter to get them right again, and all thrift is for a long time lost. The first time or two a teaspoon is the handiest way to feed with, but in a few lessons they will learn to help themselves out of the pan or cup; and when two or three are fed will all feed together off a plate with as much selfish eagerness as their mother."

Can not Grow more Grapes on the Farm?

Scarcely a year has passed since I have followed the practice of training grape vines on the peach, apple and evergreen trees, that there has not been an ample supply of choice grapes for home use. In favorable seasons the surplus has been sold by the neighbors at from three to four cents a pound, the demand often exceeding the supply. By allowing the vines to run at will on the peach, the red cedar, the Austrian and Scotch pines, and other trees having wide spreading branches, grapes can be had if healthy vines of the hardy sort are planted and well cultivated and properly manured the first two or three years after being set."

The grape crop is by no means an uncertain one. There is no supplementary fruit crop that can take the place of the hardy varieties of grapes. Fifty vines can be planted in vacant spots about the house, garden and outbuildings without occupying any coveted space, but at the same time adding very much to the rural beauty of the country home. A strong young vine planted close to the trunk of an old apple tree will, if the soil about the roots is supplied with finely pounded bones and fresh wood ashes, and the surface covered with well-rotted manure after planting of the vine is completed, soon take possession of that old tree, and if the limbs are sawn off at a point about ten feet from the ground, and the young canes are fastened to the limbs that remain, an unsightly object will at once become both ornamental and useful. No wine need be or should be made where children form a portion of the household. There are plenty of ways of utilizing this excellent fruit without converting an ounce of juice into wine.

CHOICE RECEIPTS.

FEATHER CAKE.—One and one-third cups of flour, one cup of sugar, two eggs, two thirds cup of cream, a little salt and nutmeg.

SQUASH BISCUIT.—Two cupfuls of light bread sponge, one pint of sifted squash, one cupful of shortening, nearly one cupful of sugar. Mix as bread and roll out smooth. Cut into biscuits and raise as bread.

PICKLED APPLES.—Pare, halve, and quarter the fruit. For seven pounds of apples take three pounds of sugar, one quart of vinegar, one ounce of cinnamon, and one ounce of cloves. If ground cinnamon and cloves are used tie in cloth and boil with the vinegar; but if whole cloves and cinnamon bark are used put two cloves in each piece of apple and break the cinnamon in pieces and boil with the apples.

TEA BISCUIT.—One quart of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, one half teaspoonful of sugar, two teaspoonsful of baking-powder, one teaspoonful of lard, and one pint of milk. Sift together flour, salt, sugar, and powder, rub in the lard cold, add milk to form into as soft a dough as can be handled, flour the board and roll out, cut with a small tin cutter, and bake in a good hot oven about twenty minutes.

CUSTARD CAKE.—Two small cups of flour, one cup of sugar, three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of water, and butter the size of an egg. Beat the whites and yelks separately, and bake the cake in layers. For the filling, place one-half pint of milk upon the stove, and when it boils add to it one egg, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half teacup of sugar, and a dessertspoonful of flour, well beaten together. Flavor with lemon or rose.

PLUM PUDDING.—One tablespoonful of soda, one cupful of molasses, one half cupful of sugar, two-thirds cupful of butter, three cupfuls of chopped suet, two cupfuls of raisins, flour enough to make a stiff batter. Tie up in a floured cloth and boil three hours. For gravy, one quart of water thickened with flour or cornstarch and seasoned with nutmeg or lemon, butter and sugar. We had this for Christmas and think it splendid.

BLANC MANGE.—Soak one ounce of gelatine in a quart of milk for two hours, add a small cup of sugar, and place over the fire. When the sugar and gelatine are mixed with the milk, and the mixture is very hot, remove from the fire and add a wineglass of sherry and half a teaspoonful of lemon extract. Stir while cooling to prevent the cream rising to the top. When cool pour into a mold and set on the ice.

HONEY PUDDING.—Three pints thinly sliced apples, one pint honey, one pint flour, one pint cornmeal, small piece of butter, one teaspoonful soda, the juice of two lemons, and three grated lemon rinds. Stir the dry soda into the honey, then add the apples, melted butter and a little salt. Now add the other ingredients and stir in the flour. Bake one hour and serve with sauce.

A Woman's Ingenuity.

A Boston paper tells how an ingenious woman discovered a leak in a waste-pipe in her house. Noticing an offensive odor, she suspected a defect in the waste-pipes, and asked the agent of the house to send a plumber to make an examination. Upon the agent's refusal to comply with her request, she borrowed two cats from a neighbor, purchased some oil of valerian, and stationing the animals in the parlor, went upstairs and poured the valerian into the basin, and then descended to watch the result. Cats are extremely fond of the odor of valerian, and in a short time both of the borrowed animals began to sniff the air and move toward the door of a closet through which the waste-pipe ran. The door was opened for them, when they immediately sprang upon a certain shelf, where they remained purring with satisfaction. The woman again went to the agent, who, though still unbelieving in the leak, consented to send a plumber. On cutting away the plaster so as to expose the pipe, a joint was found completely separated at the place where the cats had indicated.

Because a man happens to be possessed of "a constitution of a horse," it by no means follows that his physician is justified in treating him like an ass.

"Where's Jones?" "Dead." "Dead? Well, I declare! Paid the debt of nature, eh?" "No; compromised at less than fifty per cent." "How so?" "He left his better half behind him."

FUNNYGRAMS.

Eclipse of the sun—A baby daughter.

It is the hardware man who always calls a spade a spade.

Bakers are generous. They never keep all the bread they knead.

Spring lamb reached market ahead of the Spring this year, as usual.

Adam was a roller skater. The fall he got is still well remembered.

The next thing to a funeral procession is to walk behind a love-sick couple going home from a party.

It is said there is a soft side to every man. That's the reason a dude is afraid to stand on his head.

"Girls will be girls," says a contemporary. Oh, no! That's a mistake. If girls' wishes are consulted they will be married women some day.

Yes, everything is faster in this country. In England they say that a man stands for Parliament. In this country they say he runs for Parliment.

A Lesson in Physics: Teacher—"What is velocity?" Pupil—"Velocity is what a man puts a hotplate down with."

"Yes, dear, you see, mamma don't think it's right for me to read French novels in Lent, so I only read translations.

Young lady (innocently to gentleman): "I wish I could get one of those freshmen to plant in my garden. I do want something green."

Lafayette had a great mind, and he knew what he was doing when he assisted the United States. France is now getting large supplies of canned frogs from this country.

"Wal," said Mrs Spriggins, in response to a remonstrance from her husband, "I got tired sittin' up there all alone in solitaire, so I went down and percolated through the crowd."

"If I ain't particular about seein' a show, I'd just as soon go to an opera as a funeral; but when I want to lay right down and enjoy myself, I go to a circus. Ah, there's nothing like a brass horn and a hoss."

"Here's a musical salesman advertised for. Why don't you apply, Ned?' "I? Why, I'm not musical." "Perhaps not, but I notice you can blow your own horn, you're familiar with bars, your remarks are full of slurs, you're always giving notes, and all the rest."

A vender of imitation spiders was dangling one of the bogus insects on Broadway, when an antique female, after uttering a little scream, appealed to a policeman, saying: "Mr. Policeman, can't you make that man quit scaring young girls to death with them spiders."

A California girl has been discovered with two mouths, one in each cheek. It is kind may do in the far West where girls are scarce, and it is convenient to have those who can kiss two fellows at once, but they would never be popular in the East, where there are not enough fellows to go around.

"Mr. Smith, do you know the character of Mr. Jones?" "I rather guess I do, jedge," "Well, what do you say about it?' "He ain't so bad a man, after all." "But, Mr. Smith, what we want to know is, is Mr. Jones of a quarrelsome and dangerous disposition?" "Wall, jedge, I should say that Tom Jones is very vivid in verbal exercise, but when it comes to personal adjustment, he isn't eager for the contest."

They Knew a Dodge.

The Yaqui Indians of Sonora long since used tactics of war that were unknown to civilized troops. In a former uprising, says the San Francisco Call, they were attacked by General Pesqueras, who was much amused to see the savages use blankets as a shield against the soldiers' bullets. Holding up a blanket at both ends, so that the edge just touched the ground, the Indian riflemen marched boldly toward him behind this apparently flimsy protection. The Mexican General was soon alarmed, however, to find that his bullets did not stop the strange advance, and the moving fort of blankets soon came so close to him and poured in such a deadly fire that he was fain to fly the field in confusion and with great loss. The Yaquis had become acquainted with the simple fact that while a bullet will pass through twenty blankets strained over a frame or laid against a firm surface, it will not penetrate a single one if moistened and hung up so as to swing clear of the ground. The bullets which Gen. Perquerias imagined were passing through the Indian blankets and thinning the ranks of the savages were all falling harmlessly on the outside of the woolen bulwarks.

Contraction.

"Save me, doctor, and I'll give you a thousand dollars."

The doctor gave him a remedy that eased him, and he called out:

"Keep at it, doctor, and I will give you a check for five hundred dollars."

In half an hour more he was able to sit up, and he calmly remarked:

"Doctor, I feel like giving you a fifty-dollar bill."

When the doctor was ready to go, the sick man was up and dressed, he followed the doctor to the door, and said:

"Say, doctor, send in your bill the first of the month."

When six months' had been gathered to time's bosom, the doctor sent in a bill amounting to five dollars. He was pressed to cut it down to three, and after so doing he sued to get it, got judgment, and the patient put in a stay of execution.

AN ENGINEER'S STORY.

Hair-Breadth Escapes and Wonderful Experience of an Old Engine-Driver.

"The first time I ever ran an engine" said Engineer Wm. J. Hammett to a reporter who had called upon him, "was in January, 1867, on the Memphis division of the Louisville & Nashville road. Mr. James Gutherie was president at that time. My first accident was in 1877. I was then running on the main stem, and was coming from Nashville to Louisville with a large number of passenger cars attached. Among others there were 150 schoolgirls on board. We were approaching Dudley's switch, twenty-five miles this side of Nashville, when I noticed that the cross-ties just ahead of us had been removed. I did not have time to stop the engine. In an instant I recognized that there was just one thing to do, and that was to jump the track. I told my firemen to leap out, as there was only room for one of us in the cab at such a moment, and it meant certain death to me or him if he remained. He had barely reached the ground when the engine left the track and a stream of boiling water came gushing upon me from the boiler. After that I remembered nothing for several days. When I recovered I was told that the boiler had exploded, and that I had been hit on the head by a piece of flying cylinder; also a spike had pierced my hand."

As proof of this Mr. Hammett exhibited a terrible scar on his right hand. The thoughtful engineer afterward received $384 from the passengers for saving the train.

"The time I made my fastest run," continued Mr. Hammett, his blue eyes lighting up, "and the fastest in the record of the road, was in 1870, when I brought Victor Newcomb, Dr. E. D. Standiford, and Col. De Funiak from Nashville to Louisville. I was oiling the engine when Col. De Funiak told me that the party was due in Louisville at a certain hour, and asked me if I didn't think I could get there. He added that the way was clear, and that if my engine was any account to turn her loose.

"This was as good as I wanted. I ran sixty miles the first hour, and after that they made me go slower until we reached the city."

This was a memorable ride. Afterward Mr. Newcomb said of Dr. Standiford that the latter became so badly frightened while the train was speeding along at lightning motion that he got down on his knees and prayed. The violent motion of the train, as it rounded a sharp curve, threw Mr. De Funiak from his seat and inflicted a deep scar, which he will carry with him through life.

"My last run," resumed Mr. Hammett "was on the night of Nov. 15, 1883. The night was dark as pitch. We had reached Brook's station, and were running at the rate of forty miles an hour, when I saw a train of freight cars on the track just ahead. It was too late to stop the train, and she dashed on; then a deafening smash, and I was thrown through my window and killed for the time. The next day when I recovered I was told that my fireman had been killed with others in the wreck."

A Fly-Haunted Town.

The wall of King-Choo-Foo is crenelated forty feet high on the outside in certain places, but on the inside sloping and covered with a jungle growth of bamboo, banyan, and other shrubs to the very top. At intervals of every few hundred yards along it is a small smooth-bore cannon of remarkably peaceful aspect. No doves were discovered building their nests therein, but in my mile walk along the parapet numerous litters of pacific pigs were seen dosing in the very openings of the crenelles. Not a soldier was observed making the circuit of this ancient and formidable fortification, the draggon guarded yamin of the Taotai had a fly-haunted, somnolent air, in the streets business proceeded lazily, and over all the grovelike openings of the capital city the very spirit of summer peace and quiet seemed to hold its beneficent reign. Our cortage, with which we made the circuit, was composed of scarcely more than a dozen aimless hoodlums and inquisitive urchins, and we left the place impressed with the idea that if the inhabitants thought of danger from the French it was still as an intangible effort of imagination—as something so far off as scarcely to be considered, or if considered, amply provided against.

Beauty Hints.

Every woman who regards beauty understands that she must bestow much care upon her complexion. To remove tan and sunburn, cold cream, mutton tallow and lemon juice may be used; for freckles apply the latter, with a tiny camel's hair brush. The country girl, deprived of many things which her city cousin finds indispensable, discovers that she can remove tan from her face with a wash made of green cucumbers sliced in milk, or failing in this, she makes a decoction of buttermilk and tansy. A well known writer on feminine beauty, recommends the use of finely-ground French charcoal for the complexion. A teaspoonful of this, well mixed with water or honey, should be taken for three successive nights, followed by a simple purgative, to remove it from the system. The aperient must not be omitted or the charcoal will remain in the system, a mass of festering poison, with all the impurities it absorbs. None of these things will bring about the desired result unless the foundation is first laid by proper food, exercise, and bathing; above all things do not neglect the bath. Cleanliness is one of the cardinal virtues, and a woman fresh from the bath feels a good deal like an angel.

QUAKING WITH DREAD.

An Indiana Village Terrorified by the Discovery of Ghostly Apparitions.

The people living in the neighborhood of Castleton, a small village thirteen miles from Indianapolis, are greatly excited over a most extraordinary ghost sensation. Several hundred persons from the surrounding country have been crowded about the haunted spot since last Friday. There is an old log house on the farm of a man named Mart Garrison, which was built half a century ago, and has been uninhabited for several years. Last week Mr. Garrison began tearing the old structure down and hauling away the timber. Between sundown and dark on the evening of his first day's work, while loading his wagon, he says he became conscious of a peculiar feeling, which made his hair stand erect with horror, and as he turned he claims he saw three figures, two of them quite large, flitting around the ruins. He did not stop to investigate, but abandoned his work and fled for home, where he related his experiences to his wife, and was advised to let the old structure alone. He talked about the strange apparition, and then it leaked out that an old citizen living near had often seen the unearthly figures, and so had his family, and he had heard cries and groans, like those of a woman in distress, but he feared to speak of it for fear the people would call him childish and superstitious. Another neighbor testified in much the same strain, and several persons investigated, but were unable to explain the character of the phenomena. They saw shadowy figures, indistinctly resembling two adults and a child, and so did perhaps a half score of others able to muster courage enough to visit the old ruins. Recently the farm was literally overrun with people, and reports say that they found a grave in the cellar, which they proceeded to open, but were stopped in their work by a lady interested in the property. Hundreds of people have visited the haunted house, and there is great excitement over it in the neighborhood.

American Economy.

Americans are not regarded as an economical people, and too many of them are satisfied if at the year's end, income balances expense. But the savings-bank deposits show that they are really a saving people after all. Food is so abundant and cheap that they throw away much which a French or German family would save. They are economical when it seems to be necessary. The sharp eyes of that helper of the helpless, Miss Emily Faithfull, discovered, while making a tour of the States, one form which American economy takes.

She noticed that nearly all the ladies she met in hotels and railroad cars wore black lace around their wrists, instead of white linen.

She thought it rather a singular fashion, and said she could not account for the taste that preferred black to white as a becoming finish to a sleeve, until she received her washing-bills, and then the mystery was explained.

She admired the ingenuity of American women in substituting black lace for white in order to economize while travelling, for never before had she encountered such enormous bills for washing as in this country.

All English travellers are annoyed at this American peculiarity, as the laundry work in England is done thoroughly and well at almost incredibly small prices compared to our exorbitant rates.

Twenty-five cents or an English shilling, pays over there for what we should call quite a large "washing." Why American prices in this respect are so much higher, nobody seems to understand. Yet the poor washerwoman should be well-paid.

English Dinners.

The only fault to be found with the English home-dinner is its unvarying sameness. And in the season one dinner is just like every other dinner, with only the difference of contraction or elongation. One company dinner may have only six courses, and another may have twelve, but in six cases out of twelve the dinner will be essentially the same. The exact fact is that given the same class in society and six times in twelve you can predict what you are going to have for dinner about as well as you can recount what you have had for dinner. The English company dinner is a regulation affair, and no house-wife is so adventuresome as to go far afield from this stereotyped repast, The menu consists of soup, fish, entree, joint and fowl, game, sweets, and dessert. This may be elongated by a number of entrees, or contracted by the elimination of game. At very small dinner companies perhaps the entree would be missing. But this dinner, this same dinner, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever is a good and a wholesome dinner. All in all, and for a steady diet this dinner is better than the dinner of any continental people. The English beef is the best beef I have ever eaten, and as for mutton, there is none to be found outside the united Kingdom. What we call mutton is a wholly different meat. Their beef and mutton are the flesh of animals that have been carefully fed for the butcher, and their meats are never cooked till they have hung in the larder for a week or fortnight, as the case may warrant Everything that goes upon an English table is good. The vegetables, which are limited variety, are fresh and good but being cooked in plain water, they are usually tasteless, or, if they have a flavor, it is of a raw or earthy quality.—[R. L. Collier.

The Standard.

MARKDALE APRIL 9, 1885.

North-West Rebellion.

The Expedition Moves From Qu'Appelle.

NO FURTHER NEWS FROM COL. IRVINE.

Riel's Supporters Said to be Weakening.

SUPPOSITION THAT THE CAMPAIGN WILL BE A HOT ONE.

And that the Indians and Half-Breeds Will Fight.

DEPARTURE OF THE BODY GUARDS—THE FIELD BATTERY OUT—THE VOLUNTEERS HAVE A COLD TRIP, ETC., ETC.

WINNIPEG, April 6.—Advices by mail from Edmonton show that the half-breeds and Indians there are in an excited state, and any rebel success would likely cause them to rise.

Factor Macdonald at Fort Qu'Appelle, says nothing is to be apprehended from the half-breeds or Indians in that vicinity. The McLeod district seems to be all quiet and friendly.

Woubedesca, chief of the Minnesota Sioux near Brandon, is reported as being in a surly mood. He would not allow four of his band who were employed by the government to act as guides to go west. He says two thousand soldiers are not enough to meet the Crees, who will probably all fight.

Advices from the Hudson Bay Company from Prince Albert indicate that the town is well protected from attact, but provisions are short.

Further accounts of Duke Lake fight confirm the report given by Gordon. The rebel were at first beaten off, but the police's ammunition gave out and the enemy rallied, when their fire did the most deadly work. One account says Chief Beardy commenced the encounter, and was shot by a volunteer. But this is regarded as improbable. There is no authentic statement of the rebel loss in the fight.

The Queen's Own will not get in here until two o'clock in the morning.

RIEL GREATLY DISAPPOINTED.

FORT QU'APPELLE, N. W. T., April 6.—From all we can gather here, Riel is greatly disappointed. He had expected a genelal movement of half-breeds and Indians from the American frontier just below Wood Mountain, together with a general Indian uprising. There is no doubt that the Indians in the northern country are with him, but the action of the American authorities has summiraly cut off his hopes of assistance from the south of the line. It is now generally believed therefore, that while he may make a show of resistance at or near Clark's crossing he will not attempt to a stand-up fight with the troops. In all probability he will beat a treat across the North Saskatchewan into the northern forest, and there General Middleton must abandon pursuit. This vast forest consists of beech, poplar, birch, and hazel, with dense underbrush and buffalo grass, and is utterly impassible for troops.

The idea is that the rebel chief will remain in this shelter and endeavor to patch up terms with the Dominion Government, the prime condition being that they shall except the heads of his bill of rights. As the government cannot, of course, treat with a rebel in arms, Reil will doubtless be compelled to spend the summer in the forest. unless he can give the troops the slip and get into American territory, where the lawyers will have to settle the question of his extradiction.

Everything is going on well. The weather is still raw and the grounds saturated with water. It is stated on good authority this afternoon that Biel will plant a large force on the Banks of the South Saskatchewan.

APPLEGARTH NOT KILLED.

SWIFT CURRENT, N. W. T., April 6.—Judge Rouleau and wife arrived here to-day from Battleford. Applegarth, the Indian farm instructor, reported killed, escaped. The Indians and half-breeds are reported congregating at Sounding lake, which is on the trail between Blackfoot crossing and Battleford, and north west of the great plains.

A courier who left Battleford on April 1st reached here to-day. He states that when he left all the white people were still safely secured from attact in the barracks, with ample provision and ammunition until relief comes. The Indians are still in sight of the town, but no further disturbance was anticipated from them. Families which left Battleford on the 30th ult., arrived safely here to-day, and are under escort of Judge Rouleau. They will probably reach Winnipeg to morrow night.

THE SITUATION AT PRINCE ALBERT.

FORT QU'APPELLE, N. W. T., April 6.—The steamer Northcote, now lying at Medicine Hat, is being put in readiness for the transportation of troops to Clark's Crossing. Other boats of the Hudson Bay Company are at Prince albert. A steamer is expected to leave Medicine Hat for the crossing in a day or two with a light load. Communication has not yet been re-established with Battleford. No fears, however, are felt as to the safety of those who, at last advices were ensconced in the barricks, which are strongly fortified and provisioned.

There is considerable anxiety as to the situation in Prince Albert. That an urgent appeal for the immediate dispatch of a large force to the rescue has been made is beyond doubt, and relief was necessary is shewn by the sudden advance of the troops from Qu'Appelle, northward this morning. There is no doubt the situation at Prince Albert is very critical,

THE LATEST REPORT.

FORT QU'APPELLE, N. W. T., April 6.—At 5 o'clock last evening the men "got the route," and at 7 this morning the troops marched out of here along the trail to Touch wood, the enhabitants turned out to give them a send off. After a hasty breakfast the the troops were paraded at 6 a. m., and inspected by General Middleton, who addressed a few stiring words to the men. A few finishing touches were given, and at 7 sharp the advance was begun. The scouts led the way on each side of the trail; then came half a Company of the 90th, as advance guard, with one field piece; then the main body of the troops with the baggage, the other field piece bring up the rear. "A" and "B" Battries arrived at Qu'Appelle station at 10 a. m. The former will push on atonce after the troops, while "B" will remain here until the arrival of the eastern reinforcements. A small portion of the Toronto brigade will hurray after "A" and the Winnipeg troops, but the bulk under Col. Otter will in connection with "B" battery, take the Saskatchewan from Medicine Hat or Swift Current, and go down the river to Clark's crossing, where Gen. Middleton's column will meet them. Clark's crossing is 85 miles from Battleford. The movement of this expidition, however, will depend altogether upon the state of the river and upon the boat service. The route of General Middletons headquarters will be as follows;

From Fort Qu'Appelle to Houghton 24½ miles; Houghton to Touchwood, same distance. Touchwood to Bedson, 20 miles; Bedson to Swinford, 20 miles; Swinford to Wise, 21½ miles; Wise to Humbolt, 21½ miles; Humbolt to Melgund, 22 miles; Melgund to Middleton 20 miles; Middleton to Clark's crossing, 18 miles; Clark's crossing to Stobart, 35 miles—a total of 227 miles. Then to Prince albert.

THE ADVANCE ON THE ENEMY.

CAMP, via Qu'Appelle, April 6.—We have made fifteen miles to-day. Cold and snowing. Complaints are made that there are not sufficient supplies for the present force now in the field. The batteries are expected to overtake us to-morrow.

AT PORT ARTHUR.

PORT ARTHUR, April 6.—The Queen's Own passed through here about 6:30 this morning, making a very brief stop, only enough to enable the engines to take on coal and water. The time of their expected arrival had been variously announced, and people went to and from the station at all hours of night to meet them. When they appeared in the morning quite a crowd was there to give them a passing cheer. A large supply of Prince Albert and Winnipeg papers were here donated to the troops, who eagerly devoured the news they contained. The condition of the men was generally excellent. No complaints were heard, and the roughing they had gone through had no more serious effect than of somewhat disarranging their toilet.

The Royal Grenadiers leave Jackfish bay this morning, and are expected along here to-morrow evening.

DELAY IN REACHING WINNIPEG.

WINNIPEG, April 6, 2 p. m.—The train with the Queen's Own Rifles is making rather slow progress. It was at first expected they would reach here at 3 p. m., and later, that six was the hour at which they would arrive. Now information reaches us that they will not be here till midnight. After supper, which will be waiting for them here, they will proceed west. His worship Mayor Hamilton, upon the suggestion of several aldermen, who felt it was incumbent upon the civic authorities to show some courtesies at least to the volunteers now en route west, telegraphed General Middleton requesting that permission be granted the Queen's Own and Grenadiers to accept an entertainment to be given by the corporation. A reply was received from that officer that permission could not be granted.

The Montreal battalion and the Ottawa sharpshooters arrived this morning at Red Rock, east of this place.

THE LATEST.

The advance guard of the Queen's Own arrived at Winnipeg at 3 a. m. this morning. The boys were terribly used up, and will have a good rest before going on to Qu'Appelle. The remainder of the Q. O. R. and the Grenadiers will arrive at the Prairie City about noon to-day. At Port Arthur the whole body received a great reception. A special committee of citizens had been appointed, and they did everything in their power to make the boys comfortable. It is needless to say they succeeded admirably, and one and all voted it an oasis in the desert. The enthusiasm was terrific. In spite of their fatigue the boys report themselves in good trim. A few suffered severely from the cold, but the main body are in good spirits and eager for the fray. Several of the Queen's Own became delirious during the march across Lake Superior being intensely cold. The Grenadiers have also suffered somewhat from the chilly blasts. The weather has generally been fine.

READY FOR THE START.

WINNIPEG, April 6.—The troops at Qu'Appelle paraded yesterday for Divine service, Rev. M. Lewis officiating.

One hundred and eighty teams went north yesterday with loads. The 90th rifles battalion starts this morning for Touchwood hills, a distance of fifty-six miles from Fort Qu'Appelle.

The batteries which arrive at Qu'Appelle this morning will be pushed forward by forced marches until the 90th is overtaken, when the entire force will advance to the scene of the trouble.

Capt. French will lead the brigade with thirty-four expert scouts.

Gen. Middleton, addressing the 90th, complimented them on their rapidly increasing efficiency. "You will have to go to the front," he said. "Remember you are fighting men who are never caught asleep. You will form the advance guard, and on you will depend largely the safety of the forces."

S. L. Bedson, warden of the Manpenitentiary, has charge of the transport service, and has it now thoroughly organized. There are 350 teams divided into right and left divisions, each of which is sub-divided into sub divisions of ten teams under a head teamster. They pay about $7 per day for the teams, and the drivers find them, food and forage. Mr. Bedson is ably assisted by J. H. E. Secretan, so well-known throughout this country. They estimate that they have to transport for troops now here, including teamsters numbering 650 men, 73,800 pounds of food and 768,000 pounds of forage for teams to last them thirty days.

When the troops reach Touchwood the entire force will be consolidated for the march across the salt plains.

The order of the march will be as follows: Scouts thrown out about a mile each side of the road; a half company as advance guard; one field battery, the main body of troops, baggage, one gun, rear guard; and when they halt they will be formed into a square, surrounded by the wagons, which may be called a zereba.

LOOKS LIKE PETERING OUT.

WINNIPEG, April 6.—Private dispatches from the front this morning would indicate a state of fear among Riel and his adherents at the immense military preparations being made to subjugate him, and the ringleaders are reported as deserting the rebel's standard, being afraid of their necks.

THEY'RE OFF.

KINGSTON, April 6.—Last night the Midland battalion received orders to leave for the Northwest, and about ten this morning left by special train on the K. & P. railway.

AMERICAN INDIANS FLOCKING IN.

ST. PAUL, April 6.—The half-breeds in the Wood Mountain region, just north of the American boundary, having been preparing for a rising for month. Although there are not over three hundred of them, they can easy recruit from the Missouri river country. The Indians, most of them half-breeds, along the frontier between the Rocky Mountains number about 30,000 and they are flocking into the North-west from the American side near the White mountains, intending to rallay and move north to Regina, tear up the Canadian Pacific track there, and attact Gen. Middleton in the rear while he is engaged with Riel in front.

HALIFAX READY.

HALIFAX, April 6.—The battalion of Halifax militia for the Northwest, numbering in all 363 officers and men, have been ordered to leave by special train at eight o'clock Wednesday morning.

THE BODY GUARDS START.

The maddest Lieutenant-Colonel in the Dominion militia yesterday was Police Magestrate G. T. Denison, and it is no wonder he was wrathy, he having been kept on theragged edge of anxiety for several days by the government in being ordered to the front one day and the order being countermanded the next. Last night, however, he and his men forming the Governor General's Body Guard were brightened up by a receipt of a dispatch from the minister of militia, ordering them to start as quickly as possible. At 10 o'clock the men started to move in tow's to the Queen's wharf, where five Michigan Central combination cattle and horse cars were in waiting, and by midnight all the horses and accoutrements were on board. At twenty minutes past one o'clock the train started, the troops being in the greatest spirits.

PRESSING ON.

The 65th of Montreal, under Col. Ouimet, and the Ottawa sharpshooters arrived at Port Arthur at midnight. They complain bitterly of their experience. The York Rangers and Simcoe Foresters are over the Dog lake gap. They are in good trim, but the commissiariat arrangements have not proved so good as they might have been. The Midland battalion (Col. Williams') were at Sudbury junction at 3 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR,—In your paper of last week there is an item headed "A case worth remembering," taken from the Ontario Reformer, in which my name plays a part.

Now, I want to give you the facts of the case: John Roulston was down last June in Luther, introducing a washing machine, and saw Mr. Heffron at his own place, and talked the business to him of handling the machine for that part, and he would take three townships, and told him not to give it to any other person, and that I was to come and wind up the sale. I got word and went the following week. On my arrival we drew up an agreement for three townships at $72 each, amounting to $216 in the agreement, which was read to him, and which he signed, by his daughter writing his name and he making his mark. The order of payment was this, that he was to give three notes of $72 each, payable in three, six and nine months. He then asked for longer time on the notes, which I agreed to give him. He signed the notes in the same way as he did the agreement by his daughter writing his name and he making his mark.

With reference to the lawsuit, I sold one note to Gilchrist & Kent of Orangeville, and when it came due Heffron refused to pay on the plea that he did not know what he was signing, and he was sued. I received a summons to appear, twelve days before the trial came off. I thought I had a right to sixteen days, so I went to my lawyer and he told me I had a right to fifteen days, and he wrote to Orangeville to have the trial put back. That was the last I heard of it until a telegram came to Williamsford the same day as the trial was to come off, and I was away from home, and John Roulston could not go on account of the death of his father-in-law, which had occurred that morning, said John Roulston being witness to the notes, consequently the trial went on without any witness on my side, hence judgment was given in favor of Heffron, on account of his own evidence, swearing he did not know what he was signing.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for so much space in your paper,

I am yours, &c.,

JOSEPH ROULSTON.

As Others See Us.

EDITOR STANDARD.—The prosperity of your town is proverbial, few villages in Ontario possesses the same natural advantages. The fertility of the country surrounding it has few superiors in the Dominion; hence, superlative excellance as a mark of trade and commerce.

Last Saturday I was much astonished at the chests of tea that were exhibited in front of Mr. McFarlands store, but, upon coming further up the street, my astonishment was doubly increased to find that Mr. J.R. Trimble had treble the number of chests of tea in front of his store, with a congregation of customers assembled inside and outside the premises that would have gratified the inmost soul of the most ardent seller. The business transacted during my few moments stay, convinced me that your town had more than its proportionate share of business. A very laughable incident occured during my stay. A gentleman who was flourishing a diminutive fly-sheet, which it appeared emanated from W. J. McFarland, announcing that he did not sell "shoddy" goods. The wielder of the fly-sheet appealed to the multitude to sympathize with him in his sore distress: he had two weeks previously purchased a $10.00 suit from Mack, and at the hour of writing a more tattered mullion, debilitated suit of garments could not be found this side of rag-pickers Eden. The heros of the cheap suit caused considerable merriment, as the garment rents had been patched and darned with various colored cloth and thread which resembled one forcibly of "Jacob's coat of many colours." The assemblage appreciated the joke and expressed the opinion that "Facts are things thot winna ding, Nor dear na' be disputed"—

And that the mere assertion of a would-be truth will not "take" with an intellectual community, and that in future professions of honesty are empty bags of wind to an intellectual community.

Our shoddy friend was comparatively tame until one of J. R. Trimble's clerks drew his attention to a $4.75 Tweed suit, the sight of which so much enraged him that had it not been for the admonition of a friend, a breach of piece would have occurred The fabric referred to has no superior from the loom of any manufactory in the Dominion. Certain political economists desire to make Canada a cheap contry to live in; and, with the consent of my better half I will hereafter make Markdale my place of residence, as I can procure the "necessaries of life" for my wife and nine childeren at a discount of 20 per cent. upon Toronto prices.

ON-LOOKER.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

Monday last (fair day) in this village was quite a lively day. A large number of people astir. A good many cattle on the market, but we don't think that many changed hands. The complaints from those wishing to purchase, that owners held at too high a figure. The sound of the auction sale bell along with the musical voice of the youth, with the purple cap, calling together the motley crowd for the sale of needles and pins, caused us to meditate as we pass by, and think the merchants of our enterprising little town have little to complain of as they had not yet to sell out of a sleigh box, and that business in our neighboring town could not be so booming as to prevent the staff from taking a holiday at a neighboring fair. The excitement over the North West troubles runs at a fair height in this vicinity. Serjeant Field advertising some days ago for a number of young men to join company No. 6. We do not know how many offered themselves, but we understand Mr. Field is taking the rust off himself, and putting a number of young men through their first drill this (Monday evening) in the company's drill shed here.

About 9 p. m. on Monday evening last, opposite the hotel here Mr. James Henry of Markdale, who had got so much spirits in that he could not be pursuaded to keep his hat and coat on, and was making a noise more hedious than the braying of an ——, and using language which was anything but polite. He was going to fight the whole crowd and no body in particular, and was almost going into fits, he was so enraged, at some reflection made on his horse, but as they were intended to apply to himself he became peacified with that explanation, as he claimed he had much more respect for the horse than he had for himself.

Messrs Whitten and Moore, who secured the contract for finishing Dr. Christoe's block, are fast pushing the work to completion.

Messrs. Peitch & Mitchell, Butchers, have removed into their new stand opposite Munshaw's Hotel.

It is said that one and one will make two at house of one of our respected citizen's this week. However we will report a little later.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quaries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON.

...o suit caused considerable ...nt, as the garment rents had ...ched and darned with various ...loth and thread which resem... forcibly of "Jacob's coat of ...lours." The assemblage ap... the joke and expressed the ...hat

...re things thot winna ding,
...aur na' be disputed"—

...t the mere assertion of a ...truth will not "take" with ...icutal community, and that ...e professions of honesty are ...ags of wind to an intellectual ...nity.

...hoddy friend was comparitive... until one of J. R. Trimble's ...rew his attention to a $4.75 ...uit, the sight of which so ...raged him that had it not ... the admonition of a friend, ...n of piece would have occurred ...rie referred to has no superior ...e loom of any manufactory in ...minion. Certain political econ... desire to make Canada a cheap ...to live in; and, with the con... my better half I will hereafter ...Markdale my place of residence, ...procure the "necessaries of ... my wife and nine childern ...count of 20 per cent. upon ... prices.

ON-LOOKER.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

...day last (fair day) in this village ...uite a lively day. A large ...r of people astir. A good many ...n the market, but we don't ...that many changed hands. ...mplaints from those wishing to ...se, that owners held at too ... figure. The sound of the ...sale bell along with the ...l voice of the youth, with the ...cap, calling together the ...crowd for the sale of needles ...ns, caused us to meditate as we ...y, and think the merchants of ...terprising little town have little ...plain of as they had not yet to ...ut of a sleigh box, and that ...ss in our neighboring town ...not be so booming as to prevent ...ff from taking a holiday at a ...oing fair. The excitement ...he North West troubles runs at ...eight in this vicinity. Serjeant ...advertising some days ago for ...ber of young men to join com... No. 6. We do not know how ...offered themselves, but we un... ...and Mr. Field is taking the rust ...mself, and putting a number of ...men through their first drill ...Monday evening) in the com... ...'s drill shed here.

...out 9 p. m. on Monday evening ...opposite the hotel here Mr. James ...y of Markdale, who had got so ...h spirits in that he could not be ...uaded to keep his hat and coat on, ...was making a noise more hedious ...the braying of an ——, and using ...uage which was anything but ...e. He was going to fight the ...le crowd and no body in particular ...was almost going into fits, he ...so enraged, at some reflections ...e on his horse, but as they were ...nded to apply to himself he became ...ified with that explanation, as he ...ned he had much more respect ...the horse than he had for himself. ...essrs Whitten and Moore, who ...red the contract for finishing ...Christoe's block, are fast pushing ...work to completion.

...essrs. Peitch & Mitchell, Butchers, ...e removed into their new stand ...osite Munshaw's Hotel.

...is said that one and one will not ...e two at house of one of our respec... ...citizen's this week. However we ...report a little later.

OWEN SOUND
...ARBLE WORKS
...B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
...NUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.
JUST RECEIVED
Carloads Finest Variegated Marble
☞ Largest stock in the Dominion ...ect from. Personally selected at the ... in Vermont. Will be sold at pr... ...ich defy competition.
...ATISFACTION GUARANTEED
...N. B.—Beware of Monuments and H... ...nes of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered ...her, and oiled and Sandblasted to h... imperfections, and called White B...
H. B. HARRISON.

...n. Grant's Terrible Lesson.

...en. Grant is reported to be slowly ...g of a cancer in the mouth, and ...ic sympathy is everywhere being ...ngly expressed with the brave and ...ent sufferer. For some weeks ...the pain he has endured has been ...ething terrible. It is reported ...all his teeth has been drawn out ...a hope of giving some relief, ...even that has not helped the ...ter to any great extent. In con... ...ence of the terrible condition of ...mouth no kind of food can be taken ...something in a liquid form, and ...much of even that without great ...n. Very little sleep can be obtain... ...and nervous prostration is inevit... ...e from these causes. The brave ...neral is reported to be enduring ...this agony with true fortitude but ...must be evident that the time will ...n arrive, if it has not come already, ...en he will welcome death as an end ...his suffering.

...There seems to be no doubt what... ...r that Gen. Grant's present con... ...on has been brought about in ...sequence of many years' excessive ...acco smoking. During all the ...e that he was prominently in public ...it was well known that he was an ...most constant smoker, but as he was ...man of splendid constitution no ...urious effects appeared to come ...m it. The penalty is now being ...rly paid, however.

Some time ago, when it became ...dent that the General's mouth was ...wing unmistakable evidences of ...ease because of the amount of ...otine absorbed from the cigars ...oked. He quit smoking, but ...fortunately it seems to have ...en too late, and now the ...eadful disease is slowly and surely ...ing its deadly work.

Surely a terrible lesson like this ...ght not to be lost sight of. Every ...bitual tobacco smoker is exposed ...similar dangers, and every one of ...em would do well to sit down an ...e a few minutes' careful consider... ...ion to the important question ...hether all the pleasures of tobacco ...ing are sufficient compensation for ...e terrible risks it is necessary to ...n in order to continue the habit, to ...y nothing of the loss of time and ...s of money in connection with the ...me unnecessary habit. Surely the ...hole subject is well worthy of careful ...ought.

Gen. Grant's unfortunate case is ...ot by any means an isolated one. ...he tobacco habit has far more ...uman victims every year than most ...ersons are aware of. It is a well ...own fact that a very large propor... ...n of the cases of that dreadful ...sease of cancer in the mouth or ...ngue come from tobacco using. It ...well known, too, that a large number ...other diseases—nervous prostr... ...ion, paralysis, dyspepsia and the ...—are either produced, or greatly ...stened by the free use of tobacco. ...undreds of men die in Canada alone ...efore their time each year from ...seases induced by tobacco using. ...view of their undoubted facts surely ...warning voice should be raised by ...e pulpit, by the press, and by the ...edical profession. The wonder is ...at so important a matter is so little ...oken of. Hundreds of young men ...ould avoid tobacco using were they ...well aware as they should be of the ...sks they run of indulging in the ...abit.

Unfortunately it too often occurs ...at the very men from whose mouths ...arning should come are too full of ...bacco smoke, or possibly tobacco ...uids, to say anything on the subject. —Truth.

A GOOD GUARANTEE.

H. B. Cochran, druggist, Lancaster, ...a., writes that he has guaranteed ...ver 300 bottles of Burdock Blood ...itters for dyspepsia, billious attacks ...nd liver and kidney troubles. In no ...ase has it disappointed those who ...sed it. In Canada it gives the same ...eneral satisfaction.

...onthly Report of S. S. No. 5, Glenelg for March.

4th Class—Asa Robson, 295; Hugh ...cNab, 279; Samuel Edwards, 231; ...eter McNab, 231.

3rd Class—Thomas Nelson, 279; ...illie Nelson, 259; Charlie Noble, ...63.

2nd Class—May Robson, 199; Ella ...ook, 194; Willie Jack, 187.

1st Class—Tommie Glencross, 89; ...oseph Firth, 86; Bertie Cook, 80.

AGNES J. WHITE,
Teacher.

SURE TO CONQUER.

The most troublesome cough is sure ...o yield if timely treated with Hagyard's ...Pectoral Balsam. Pleasent to take ...nd safe for young or old.

About Breathing.

The majority of people don't know how to breathe; this may sound rather startling but it is, nevertheless, a fact. People fancy that when they draw in a little air at each inspiration, and then puff it out again they are doing all that is required of them, but, if the lungs could speak, they would tell their owners that they were not half performing their duty. Then again, people will breath through the mouth instead of the nose. This is wrong for the passage of the cold air through the various remifications along which its course would lie when taken in through the nostrils, becomes warmed before it reaches the lungs, whereas that drawn in through the mouth passes directly into them, along with whatever dust and impurities may be floating about and is very injurious to weak chested people, that is to say people whose pulmonary are not in a perfectly sound state. As breathing is about the first thing a person does when he enters this world and the last before he leaves it, it is evidently a very important act, and as such should meet with more attention than it does.

In the first place people does not, as a rule, take half deep enough inspiration; the air cells at the bottom of the lungs do not receive a sufficient amount of air, in many cases scarcely any; and in the next place they persist in ignoring the nostrils as the right channels through which the outer air should be drawn in its passage to the lungs. Although it does not follow that a large chested man is necessarily more sound as to his pulmonary organs than one with a small chest, still his chances of being so are surely greater if his lungs have free room in which to work; and by paying attention to a few simple rules in respect to their breathing people may so materially increase the size of their chests that they will be astonished. These rules are very short, very simple and very few in number. They are, first, breath through your nose; second, fill your lungs to their full extent, if you can, at every breath, and third breathe as much pure air as you can. An excellent plan to strengthen the lungs and to increase the size of the chest at the same time, is to devote fifteen minutes or so daily to breathing as follows: Go out into the open air; stand perfectly erect, and then fill the lungs to their fullest extent through the nose, retain the air till you begin to feel uncomfortable, then expel it and repeat the dose. In six months we will guarantee that you will be able to "hold your breath," as it is commonly termed, for fully two minutes, if your lungs are sound to begin with.

Athletes habitually breathe through their noses, and to this is attributed the fact of their remarkable freedom from colds and such complaints. People will soon become accustomed to keeping their mouths shut, though the difficulty of doing so will of course be greater with some than with others, especially females! But perseverance will do much, and the habit of breathing through the nose will soon become a fixed one.

The receipt for strengthning the lungs by supplying them with warm air, and plenty of it, and by giving them room in which to perform their proper functions is so simple and so effective that those who fail to profit by it are very foolish; and when one reflects how great must be the effect of a wright or a wrong mode of breathing on the general health, and how all important it is that people should breathe properly instead of improperly, it will seem strange that those can be found who will go to work the wrong way when they are told the wright.

Medicinal Value of Lemons.

The way to get the better of the bilious system without blue pills or quinine is to take the juice of one, two, or three lemons, as appitite craves, in as much water as makes it pleasant to drink without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning on rising, at least half an hour before brakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humor and bile with efficiency, without any of the weakening effect of calomel. People should not irritate the stomach by eating lemons clear; the powerful acid of the juice, which is always most corrosive, invariably produces inflammation after a while, but properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its medical work without harm, and, when the stomach is clear of food, has abundant opportunity to work over the system thoroughly.

How to Keep Well and Live Long.

Don't sleep in a draught. Don't go to bed with cold feet. Dont stand over hot-air registers. Don't eat what you do not need, just to save it. Don't try to get cool too quick after exercising. Don't sleep with insecure false teeth in your mouth. Don't start the day's work without a good breakfast. Don't sleep in a room without ventilation of some kind. Don't stuff a cold lest you be next obliged to starve a fever. Don't try to get along without flannel underclothing in winter. Don't use your voice for loud spaking or singing when hoarse. Don't try to get along with more than eight or nine hour's sleep. Don't sleep in the same under garment you wear during the day. Don't toast your feet by the fire, but try sunlight friction instead. Don't try to keep up on coffee and alcohol when you ought to go to bed. Don't eat snow to quench thirst; it brings on inflammation of the throat. Don't strain your eyes by reading or working with insufficient or flickering light. Don't use the eyes for reading or fine work in the twilight or evening or early morn. Don't wear close, heavy fur or rubber caps or hats if your hair is thin or falls out easily. Don't eat anything between meals excepting fruits or a glass of hot milk if you feel faint. Don't take some other persons medicine because you are troubled some what as they were.

WHERE TO KEEP IT.

Keep it in your family. The best remedy for accidents and emergencies, for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness, Sore Throat, Croup, Rheumatism, Chilblains and Pain or Soreness of all kinds, is the marvellous healing remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil.

A Popular Medical Notion.

Among the modern medical whimsies is that of medication by pads. Some external applications are of use, and because they are, quacks find people ready to believe their assertions that their particular pad will perform wonderful cures. This circular of one of these pads shows it to be a reciprocating, back-action affair, as it both draws disease from the body and sends curative influence into the system. Much to the belief in medication by pads, rests upon the fact that a pad which is not medicated is often the real service. Let one apply to any part of the body a piece of rubber cloth, or oiled silk, or other water-proof material and bind it in place. At the end of a few hours he will be surprised to find the material dripping wet, from the confining of the insensible perspiration. The surface thus covered will be in a soft, parboiled condition, while any neuralgic or rhumatic pain that may have been located in the stop thus covered, will be likely to disappear. It is not necessary for a pad, in order to be useful, to contain "liver medicines" or even horseradish. Let those who are tempted to pay a high price for medicated pads, first see what yirtue there is in an unmedicated piece of rubber or similar material.—American Agriculturist for April.

Mrs. Robert Hooper, of Kinloss, county of Bruce, in a letter, says: "I have been troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaints for a number of years, and am glad to say to the public as well as friends that McGregor's Speedy Cure brought me around, and I am now all right, thanks to McGregor's Speedy Cure. Hundreds of like testimonials are frequently received, and are daily proving that this is truly a wonderful remedy, curing Sluggish Liver, Bilious Headache and Costiveness, where all else fails. Sold at Hill Bro's. Trial bottles given free. 4

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Durham

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Hanover—Monday before Durham.

Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

ACCIDENTAL.

A. Chard, of Sterling, in a recent letter, states that he met with an accident some time ago, by which one of his knees was severely injured. A few applications of Hagyard's Yellow Oil afforded immediate and complete relief.

Straight whiskies make crooked roads—Fall River Advance.

Fluid Lightning does not take a day or an hour to remove Neuralgia, Headache, Toothache, Lumbago or Rheumatism, but will do it instantly, and without carrying your head in a poultice for a day or using greasy liniment. Try a 25c. bottle from Hill Bro's. 4

"There's a girl that is fairer than day,
And by Jinks, I can see her afar;
I'd call on that girl right away
If 'twas not for her horrid old pa."

The virtue of Carbolic Acid for healing, cleansing and purifyng is well known; but from the many modes of applying it, the public is uncertain how best to use it. To meet that want, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate is prepared, and may be used with confidence. Do not be misled. Take only McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Sold at Hill Bro's. 4

The daughter of a New York millionaire has applied for a divorce on the ground that her husband deceived her. He assured her that he was a coachman, but since she married him she has discovered that he is only an editor. We didn't suppose there was such a band of heartless villainy abroad in the land.—Norristown Herald.

THE CHEAPEST AND BEST.

On account of its purity and concentrated strength and great power over diseases, Burdock Blood Bitters is the cheapest and best blood cleansing tonic known for all disorderly conditions of the blood.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 73	to	$0 00
Spring Wheat	0 73	to	0 00
Barley	50	to	67
Peas	54	to	56
Oats	34	to
Butter	15	to	00
Eggs	14	to	00
Apples	50	to	75
Potatoes	18	to	20
Hay	0 00	to	14 00
Pork	5 00	to	5 00
Flour	3 75	to	4 25

Fine Farm for Sale.

MR. EDWARD DAVIS offers his farm for sale, being lot N. ½ 21, con. 13, Artemesia, better known as the "Meaford Road." This is a choice clay loam farm of 80 acres, 75 of which is cleared and fit for any machinery to work on, and well fenced with cedar rails; has a fine bearing orchard of three acres; a good large frame barn and out-buildings, and comfortable frame house; the place is well watered with running stream; also a saw-mill in good running order and doing a good trade—run by water-power.

This is a very desirable farm, ½ mile from school, one mile from church, 5 miles from Markdale and 6 from Flesherton, good road either ways; is situated in an excellent locality, and is a good site for cheese factory.

For terms and further particulars, apply to

EDWARD DAVIS,
239-41 Markdale, Ont.

SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT

The subscriber has much pleasure in intimating to the Ladies of Markdale and vicinity that she has commenced the

Dress-Making Business

In all its branches. Having graduated in the ranks of the best seamstress in the Dominion, she feels assured of giving satisfaction to all who may favor her with a call. The latest & best styles of

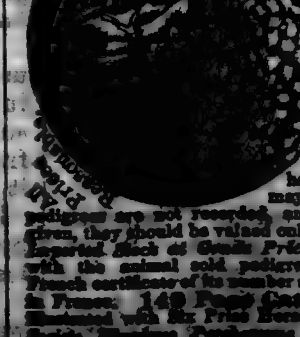
London, Paris & New York Fashions

Strictly adhered to. She has on hand a supply of

FANCY GOODS

And a choice selection of the latest styles of

TRIMMINGS,



Which for beauty and rare design, cannot be surpassed, if even equalled in Markdale.

Respectfully yours,

M. E. BENSON.

Markdale, April 7, 1885.

M. W. DUNHAM
Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,
HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE
Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which includes
75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES
Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE.
EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.

STOCK ON HAND:
150 Imported Brood Mares,
250 Imported Stallions, Old enough for service,
100 COLTS, Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that, however well-bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Société Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884; purchased by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

J. J. IRWIN,
Veterinary Surgeon,

GRADUATE of the Ont. Vet. College, Toronto, has opened business in Markdale, and is ready to attend all calls.

Office and residence opposite the Markdale House, Sydenham St.

☞ CHARGES MODERATE. 223-tf

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERI

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS,
CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES,
PURCES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James G. Russell,
Watchmaker, Jeweller,
217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

Farm for Sale.

160 acres, being lots 42 and 43 second range West of Toronto and Sydenham road, Holland, about 100 acres cleared and in good state of cultivation, ballance well timbered with Maple, Beech and Hemlock, and about 10 acres cedar swamp. Good roughcast house 22x33 with stone cellar, frame barn 40x60 and good out houses, all with stone foundations. Good young orchard bearing. The farm is well watered, two good wells, one at the house, a fine spring creek croses the farm near the rear. Only two miles from the thriving village of Williamsford, a station on the T. G. & B. branch of the C. P. R.

This is a rare chance, and terms will be made very easy. For futher particulars apply on the premises to

FRANCIS McCANN,
230-44 Williamsford P. O.

Farm to Sell or Rent.

North ½. 16 con. 11. Holland, 100 acres, 70 acres cleared. 4½ miles from Williamsford Station and 3 from Berkeley, only 60 rods from School and post office. On the premises there are a good log house with frame kitchen and a woll near the house, and log barn. Will be sold on easy terms, small payment down, and good time given for the balance, or will be rented for five years, and improvement taken for part rent.

Apply to JAMES BRUCE,
136-39 pd. Lily Oak P. O. Ont.

FARM FOR SALE.

5 MILES from Markdale station, on the C. P. R., Lot 9, Con. 11, Glenelg, containing 100 acres, 60 cleared, balance good timber; well watered; stone house and frame barns; soil clay loam; well fenced and in a good state of cultivation. Apply on the premises to

GEO. STODDART,
237-39* Travistston P. O.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the STANDARD office, Mill Street. Has a comfortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,
232-39* Markdale P. O.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Resturant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

An 1885 Spring Poem.

Tude up by Buse, for I ab add to sig
A welcub gead to th dew-bod Sprig;
All hail! oh Sprig, I welcob you at last
With buch rejoicig that the widter's past.
Ah-tishoo-oo!

All hail! odce bore; ye verdal breezes blow,
Drive hedce all be bories of the frost ad drow,
Ye feathered roasters tude your joyous throats,
Ad rig out blithely all your sweetest dotes,
All hal—ahtishoo!

It doth dot seeb like Sprig tho' Barch is here,
The wid biz wa beedly, ad the prospect's drear
It raids, ad rft the grate I heap with fuel,
Ad keep at sibberig poict by pot of gruel.
O! Hadesahtishoo.

Wha' bakes be sdeeze! Why do I blow my dose
So ofted? Ad I could dot bell the rose
If it was blocbid, I ab hoarse ad sig
All flat ad tudeless. It is really sprig?
It's sdowig!—Silcahia!

Brig be a tub of water, let its heat
Be boilig, for I would ibberse ty feet.
Wrap fladdels all around be dridk hot rub water, for at last ethereal Sprig has cub.
I'be goig to bed.

—Swiz in Grip.

A LOCK OF RED HAIR.

CHAPTER II.

The following day the same rule with regard to seats was observed; Miss Hunt evidently enjoyed her breakfast, and started off with Lucy immediately afterwards in high spirits, declining Mr. Richmond's escort, blushing and laughing the while.

"Some other day we shall be only too pleased if you take us for a walk; shall we not, Miss Starr?"

Lucy did not feel bound to reply, so maintained a glum silence. Mr. Richmond laughed, and said he knew Miss Starr preferred tete-a-tete walks, which sent her out in an irritable frame of mind. They lunched at a confectioner's, and came back to afternoon tea, thoroughly tired out. They had had great difficulty in getting what they wanted, as any delay in sending the things home seemed to Miss Hunt to be an insurmountable objection.

"Surely, if the gown is sent in a few days, it will do; there is no desperate hurry, is there?" said Lucy, on one occasion. But Miss Hunt would not hear of it, saying she could not wear her old dresses another day.

"I do not care what I pay; I must have the things at once."

As there is very little that money cannot accomplish, at last they managed to get one or two dresses and bonnets, which the people promised should be sent home the same evening.

"Not in time for dinner, I am sorry to say, my dear. I shall look quite an object in that shabby old thing; at any rate. I could get a nice piece of lace."

"But, dear Miss Hunt," urged Lucy, "you have worn the same dress for three months. I won't say I think it is becoming; but still one day more or less cannot signify."

"I think differently," rejoined Miss Hunt abruptly.

Lucy discontinued her remonstrances, and, when they had driven for some time in silence, remarked—

"By the-bye, there is one thing we have quite forgotten; you want a new head-dress."

"I think I shall leave that for the present, my dear, I shall see how I look without a cap. You know I am not bound to wear one at all."

"But I should think you would be very uncomfortable after having been used to them so long."

"I don't at all see why I should; lots of people don't wear caps at my age, and I have plenty of hair."

Lucy said nothing; but, like the proverbial parrot, thought the more.

At dinner-time Miss Hunt came down without her cap, having done her best to brighten her dress. There was a little hum of amused astonishment, but she did not perceive it; and, when Richmond, his face full of respectful admiration, darted forward and offered his arm, she took it and swept into the dining-room proudly and happily.

After dinner, being tired, she retired to her room, and the others sat in the drawing-room and talked as was their wont. Mr. Enson chaffed Richmond about his attentions to Miss Hunt.

"I say, my boy, don't turn the poor old lady's head."

"What a queer old thing she is!" exclaimed Richmond, laughing pleasantly. "Fancy her believing me when I complimented her on her appearance without her cap, and said the only improvement I could suggest was that she should wear a few curls on her forehead. She means to do so, I believe; and, being able to keep my countenance under any provocation, I quite look forward to seeing her to-morrow."

"You ought to be ashamed of making a butt of an inoffensive afflicted woman. She may be eccentric and easily imposed upon; but she is much too good to be turned into ridicule!" interposed Lucy warmly.

"I am bound to say I cannot see anything good about her. You should have heard old Rogers at the library talking about her. I shouted with laughter. The fellow is a wonderful mimic."

"He is an ungrrteful old wretch, if he has been saying anything disrespectful of Miss Hunt. I happen to know that, but for her, he might have been ruined this spring. She is one of the most generous as well as one of the most unselfish of women."

"Ah, well, you know I am a peculiar kind of fellow! I do not believe in the feeling of gratitude ever existing. I know I detest being under an obligation to any one. If a fellow saved my life, it would worry me to death to be expected to be grateful; I am sure I should hate him. And, as for unselfishness, I quite admit I am dreadfully selfish; but then I believe all people are, only they won't allow it. But I like my friends to know the worst of me; then they won't be disappointed."

"But don't you find letting every one know the worst of you rather interferes with your making friends? I never feel that my best entitles me to any particular estimation."

"No, I have never found it so," he rejoined; "but then, you know, I believe that really and truly we are all alike; only there are not many so candid as I am."

Feeling utterly disgusted, and finding him started on his favorite hobby, Lucy, shortly afterwards, escaped from the room and retired to rest

For a few days nothing eventful occurred; but Mrs. Enson began to have her suspicions aroused; and one evening, when chatting with Lucy, she said in a most mysterious tone—

"Do you know, Lucy, I believe I saw Edgar Richmond take Miss Hunt's hand and press it during their game at cards; I am sure I was not mistaken, though she did not seem in the least surprised—only pleased. And then I think he glances at her in a very strange way; don't you?"

"His looks seem to me perfectly consistent with his behaviour. I know they go out for walks every day."

"Well, I do not think it is right. I shall ask Willie to remonstrate with him. Of course he means nothing but fun and good-nature; but I am sure poor old Miss Hunt is foolish enough to be completely taken in."

"I am not so sure he means nothing," said Lucy, sagaciously shaking her head. "Remember, she has ten thousand a year!"

"Lucy," said Mrs. Enson reproachfully, "how can you say such things? A young, handsome, gentlemanly man like Richmond, to think of a hideous deaf old woman! Why, it would be monstrous! I do not believe a word of it, and I shall certainly get Willie to warn him how open his conduct is to misinterpretation."

Lucy therefore was the only member of the household who was not electrified when the bombshell fell and exploded, and it was known that Mr. Richmond had proposed to, and been accepted by Miss Hunt.

It came out in this way. Lucy had gone into Miss Hunt's room to wish her good-night, as was her usual custom; they had not met during the evening, for she had been with the Ensons to a concert; they expected that Richmond would have accompanied them, as he had secured his seat some time before: but at the last moment he had cried off, saying he preferred his quiet game of bezique. She found Miss Hunt in a strangely excited and emotional condition.

"Shut the door, my dear," she exclaimed. "I have been longing to see you for the last hour. Ah, child, I am so happy! I want to confide it all to you."

"What is it?" asked Lucy, her heart misgiving her. "Tell me. You may be sure I will keep your secret faithfully."

"It is no secret," rejoined Miss Hunt proudly; "I should like all the world to know it, as they will soon. Edgar has asked me to be his wife."

"But you surely have not accepted him?" asked Lucy anxiously.

"Not accepted him?" reiterated Miss Hunt in astonishment. "Would any woman have refused him?"

"Ah, but consider, dear friend—consider," pleaded Lucy, "how little you know of him! Three months ago you were unaware of his very existence; is it safe to trust your future to such a stranger? You are so good and kind; there may be many happy years before you; don't risk your whole life. I have no faith in Mr. Richmond—ah, don't interrupt me; let me speak to you! You think I am prejudiced; but why should I be, unless there is something in him to inspire distrust? I am quite sure he is not a good man. I cannot hope that you will be influenced by my advice; but let me implore you to consult some one in whose judgment you have confidence—that good clergyman's wife you told me of—before you give a final answer."

"My answer is given. Lucy, you pain me very much; you are entirely mistaken in your estimate of Mr. Richmond; I believe him to be good and sincere. I hoped you would rejoice in my happiness—Heaven knows I have not had much in my life; and I am greatly disappointed! Why should I doubt the truth of Edgar's love? Many men have married women older than themselves and been happy; so shall we be. How thankful I am nobody can accuse him of mercenary motives! You are the only soul here who knows I am rich."

Lucy started back with a little cry of dismay. In a moment the harm she had quite unconsciously worked flashed upon her; but for her impulsive communicativeness Richmond would never have suspected Miss Hunt's wealth, and she would have been safe from any sinister designs on his part; she felt that she was to blame for it all. Poor Lucy had often spoken hastily and regretted it afterwards; but never before had she experienced the same overwhelming sensation of responsibility.

"Oh, why," she thought, "am I not more careful? It would have been a joy to me to have made her life happier, and now what mischief I have wrought! I shall never forgive myself. I wish she had impressed more on me that I was to mention it to no one; but I suppose she trusted me implicitly, poor thing, and I have betrayed her."

"Lucy, what is the matter?" inquired Miss Hunt, noticing her agitation. "You surely respected my confidence?"

"Oh, Miss Hunt, how can I tell you! You cannot reproach me more bitterly than I reproach myself; but I should grieve to lose your friendship, for I could love you dearly if you would let me. I must say something that will give you great pain. Promise you will forgive me for the mischief I have done."

"Child, you frighten me; but don't hesitate to speak plainly—you, at least, need not fear me; and I am too happy to be harsh with anyone to-night."

Lucy felt an extra pang at this, but struggled bravely, and continued—

"Then I must tell you. Mr. Richmond knows you have ten thousand pounds a year; he overheard me telling Mrs. Enson so in confidence. I did not understand it was to be such a profound secret. I can never sufficiently regret my thoughtlessness, now I see what it has led to!" Lucy was sobbing in a most contrite spirit.

Miss Hunt looked grave and a degree paler, and waited a minute, watching the weeping girl; then she said—

"My dear, you certainly did wrong to mention what I told you; but you need not feel it so deeply; you have done no real harm. I am a little disappointed that I shall not have the pleasure of telling Edgar when we are married that we are rich; but it would be hard if I could not forgive you—the truest friend I have ever had, I believe—such a slight mistake as that. Ah, you have thought me cold and reserved! You little knew how your attentive consideration soothed the poor lonely woman; you first taught me that I had a heart."

There were tears in her eyes, and she held out her arms lovingly to Lucy.

"Don't—don't speak so kindly to me! How can you say I have done no real harm? You see now his motives are no longer above suspicion."

"Hush, Lucy?" interrupted Miss Hunt, in a voice tremulous with suppressed excitement. "Never dare to say such a thing again! I wish to remain your friend; but I will never speak to you again if this is not the last insinuation of the kind I hear from you. It is too, too cruel," she went on, getting painfully excited, "to suggest such an idea to me! I have had so little love in my hard life, and, now it has come, you want to rob me of my happiness. And how should you be as good a judge of Edgar's character as I am?" she continued more calmly. "I am older and more experienced. We have certainly known him the same length of time; but he has shown his heart to me, and I know him to be good and true. It matters not to me what others may think of him; I love him, and I am sure he loves me."

Her plain face quite lighted up, and looked sweet and womanly in these new circumstances, and her voice had in it a tender ring which Lucy had never heard before.

"May Heaven forgive me if I am wrong!" she thought "But I have not the moral courage to dispel her illusion. I cannot tell her of his cruel jokes at her expense. Nothing else would open her eyes, and I believe it would break her heart. I must let events take their course."

"Now, dear, promise me you will never allude to this conversation, and wish me happiness before we say good night."

"With all my heart I pray that you may be happy. I will never say another word to vex you. Good night, and Heaven bless you!"

They kissed lovingly and parted. Lucy pondered deeply for many hours that night; and, ere she slept, registered a vow to do her utmost to avert danger and trouble from the unsuspecting woman she had so innocently wronged.

CHAPTER III.

The next morning Lucy found that the news had spread throughout their little community. Richmond had told Mr. Enson, and then gone out for a long walk that the excitement might cool down a little before he returned. Miss Hunt breakfasted in her own room for somewhat the same reason; so there was no hindrance to the chorus of indignant surprise as the news became general property.

"I never heard anything so disgraceful!" declared Mrs. Enson, who seemed to feel personally aggrieved at the turn events had taken. "I can hardly believe it now. I shall never care to speak to Edgar Richmond again; and, as for her, she is worse than he. Are you not disgusted, Lucy?"

"I am very sorry," replied Lucy; "but I shall certainly not give up Miss Hunt's friendship on that account."

She was the first to encounter Edgar on his return, and was very glad there was no one present when they met.

"Well, Miss Starr," he began, with malicious glee, "wish me joy I can see you have heard the news. I know how pleased you must be."

Lucy tried hard to keep her temper, and replied—

"I am glad to have this opportunity of speaking to you, Mr Richmond. You would not believe me if I told you I was not sorry to hear of Miss Hunt's engagement. I was sincerely grieved, because I cannot think that you and she are suited to each other; but still I know it is no affair of mine. We have not been very good friends, have we? But, as you are going to marry one for whom I have a great affection, I should like to bury the hatchet, if you will agree."

This speech was not spoken in Lucy's usual candid manner, it having been carefully prepared for the occasion. She felt sure Edgar would wish to interrupt her friendship with Miss Hunt, and thought it wiser to adopt a conciliatory tone.

Richmond was evidently quite nonplussed by this proposal, and for once was at a loss for an answer.

"I am glad to hear you speak in this way," he said, after a moment's reflection—"it makes things so much more pleasant, and dear Sarah is very fond of you."

A couple of days after he left Eastcliffe to transact some important country business, and return at the end of a week. The business proved no be the purchase of a house. He was telling the Ensons—who had treated him very distantly since his engagement—all about it one morning when Lucy joined them.

"It's a charming place," he said. I have wanted to buy it for a long time; but Fernhurst was too big for a bachelor, and I was afraid too it would be quite beyond my means. The rooms and grounds are delightful, and the scenery around is splendid! I've been an awfully lucky fellow to get it."

"I suppose you gave a heavy price for it?" remarked Mr. Enson.

"No; that's just the beauty of it; it was wonderfully cheap!"

"Then there must be something wrong about it," said Enson.

"Not a bit of it. I'll let you all into the secret, provided you will promise not to tell Sarah—Miss Hunt, I mean."

"But perhaps it is something she might like to know," objected Lucy, rather curious at the same time.

"I assure you there is not the slightest reason why she should be told this circumstance; it would be better, in fact, that she should not. I am certain you will agree with me on this points Now will you promise?" Every one complying, he continued—"You must know I was rather in a fix about a house. I am not rich, and at the same time I did not wish to take my wife to some miserable poky little hole. I knew this place had been advertised to be sold at a reasonable figure, and I thought there would be no harm in going down and making inquiries. I must allow I was astonished at the price they asked, and at once thought, as you did, Enson, that there must be something wrong. At last the reason came out. What do you think it was? Most absurd, really! I could not help laughing at the man. Fernhurst has the credit of being haunted! No one has ever seen or heard anything, as far as I can make out; but still it has stood empty for years. The agent thinks the report was first circulated in consequence of a gang of smugglers using the cellars many years ago to conceal contraband goods in, the house being within a very short distance of the seashore. I am not in the very least superstitious, so I settled with the fellow at once; but I don't want to tell Sarah about it, as it might make her nervous. I hope you will not object to staying at a haunted house, Miss Lucy?" he added gaily.

"In some cases I should, but not in this; it seems absurd, from what you say, when there is such a reasonable explanation of anything mysterious—besides, I do not believe in ghosts a bit."

A few days after this the whole party broke up, the Ensons and Lucy going to their respective homes, Miss Hunt to her country estate to make arrangements for her approaching marriage, which was to take place very shortly, and Edgar Richmond to the new house to superintend alterations and furnishing.

Luck took a very loving leave of her friend, and it was arranged that directly they returned from their wedding-tour she was to go to Fernhurst to stay for an indefinite period. The marriage was to be a very quiet one, in the neighborhood of Miss Hunt's estate. Nobody knew the exact date, and it was from the newspaper announcement that Lucy learned that it had actually taken place; up to the last she had indulged in a vain hope that something might happen to prevent it. Some weeks later she received the following letter—

"Dearest Lucy,—We shall be at Fernhurst in a week. We are enjoying ourselves greatly; but Edgar seems very anxious to settle down quietly in our home. I will not tell you any news now, except that I am very, very happy; but will reserve it all until we meet. We arrive at Fernhurst on Wednesday, the 15th inst.; in a fortnight from then I hope you will join us. I am wonderfully well in health, and am delighted to tell you am much less deaf. I consulted Doctor Merlon in Paris, and he has done wonders for me. My dear husband is kindness personified. He sends best regards to you. Good-bye, dear friend.

"Ever yours lovingly,
"SARAH RICHMOND."

In three weeks, in answer to a further invitation, Lucy started for Fernhurst. Little did she think that with this journey the most eventful chapter of her life had commenced. She was met at the station by Edgar, who was driving a splendid pair of roans.

"I dare say you are surprised not to see Sarah," he said, after welcoming her warmly; "but she is not very well this afternoon."

"I am sorry to hear that," replied Lucy; "she wrote me she felt wonderfully better for the change."

"And so she was until we came here."

"I hope you don't think it is anything serious?" inquired Lucy.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Bad news—Pneumonia and neuralgia.

Jones calls his mash at the rink "Truth," because, though crushed to earth, she rises again.

The Boston girl never says "It's a cold day when I get left." She removes her glasses, carefully wipes them with her lace bordered handkerchief and observes. "The day is extremely frigid when I'm abandoned."

It was a dreadful typographical error last week which, in a description of the study of a popular authoress, made the types say that the windows of her room were "tastefully decorated with chaise hanging pants."

NEWS NOTES.

The King of Bavaria can exert h... on occasion. He wrote an autogra... ter to Prof. Doellinger of Munich ... 86th birthday.

Those now in London who were ... during the war say that the excite... and constant extras, cried sometim... to midnight, recall to them vividly l...

Mad dogs recently became so num... in some parts of Alabama that sch... one county were obliged to suspend ... it was considered dangerous to have ... pupils abroad.

In a small tannery at Grass Va... Cal., the leaves and bark of the ma... niti tree are successfully used to ... leather. The tannery is experim... on native bark and trees.

A very prevalent feeling in Engla... that the Prince of Wales's visit in a ... take now, though his frequent visi... Ireland would have been invaluable ... they been made years ago.

The great Catholic family of Von ... nim, which stands at the head of ... aristocracy of Brandenburg, has ... drawn into seclusion since Prince ... marck hounded one of its members ... the grave.

Protracted draught and extensive ir... gation in the neighborhood have redu... Tulare Lake in California from a len... of 42 miles, and breadth of 22 miles, ... a length of 22 miles, and a width of ... miles.

In an address at the Louisville Univ... ity the late Dr. Yandell is quoted as ... commending a habit of cheerfulness, ... wide-spreading, hopeful disposition, ... would say, "is your only true umbre... in this vale of tears."

A bill has been passed by the New ... Assembly imposing a fine of $20 on a ... person who treats another in a salo... The bill does not prevent any number ... persons from going into a saloon ... drinking together, but requires that e... man shall pay for his own drink.

Miss Milner, who married Lord D... ham, comes of a family which have m... money by trade in Leeds, and in t... eighteenth century bought the Fair... estate of Nun Appleton, in Yorksh... The Milners have long had a very hi... social position, and became connec... with the leading families in the coun... A very large proportion of the Yorksh... county families of to-day come from m... cessful local traders.

Among recent inventions is an impro... ed cab, for which various advantages o... other vehicles of the kind are claim... The front is a projecting one, and pr... sents a three-sided figure, the centre le... ing straight and the doors on the sid... opening toward the wheels, the wi... springs being so arranged that the do... may be readily opened wide without ... terference. The springs extend beyo... the hinges of the doors to near the fro... of the wheels, and are supported at th... forward ends by goosenecks attached ... the rocker frame of the carriage. T... vehicle is low hung, and so far forw... on the axle that, with the driver's s... arranged behind, it is finely balanced.

The Paris Temps published a lett... stating that the twenty-five Germans w... were engaged at Berlin by Li Fong-Pa... have all had to take Chinese names up... entering the service of the Celestial e... pire. One of them, who was former... Captain of a corvette, is now called Wan... Li-Triang, which, when turned in... English, means Mr. High Wall. He h... just been promoted to the rank of A... miral, and commands the Chao Yun... Another German officer is now name... Lin Pao, or Mr. Six Cannons. The pa... of these officers must be very high; fo... the common German Gunners receiv... nearly $250 a month, and about $7,500 ... the amount guaranteed to the family ... each man in case he is killed by t... French.

The Population of France.

This subject continues to occupy the at... tention of the Academie de Medicin... M. Rochard stated that, if the rate of in... crease of the population of France co... tinued to diminish in the same proportio... as it had done during the present cen... tury, there would be no increase at all ... the beginning of the twentieth century. ... France does not compare favorably wi... other nations in respect of the rate of a... mentation of the population. In Englan... the population grows at the rate of thi... teen per thousand. In Germany the ... is ten per thousand, while the American ... have increased tenfold since the beginni... of the century. At the present time ... France constitutes the tenth part of th... population of Europe, whilst two cen... turies ago it represented a third. If th... numerical deterioration continues, th... French people will number at the be... ginning of the next century only a fifteen... of the European population, and will fa... into the position of the small states, an... be no longer recognisable as one of th... powers. When the population of a coun... try begins to decrease, we must suppo... either that there is an excessive mortali... or else that the birth rate is diminishe... Now, the death rate in France is asserte... to be even lower than that of the majori... of the European countries or states; co... sequently the comparative depopulati... of France must be due to decrease in th... number of births. In that country th... number of infants in proportion to adu... is less than in any other European nati... excepting Ireland.

Horse car after symphony rehearsal. ... First æsthetic lady: "Was not the m... simply inspiring?" Second æsthetic lad... "Ah, yes, that concerneta Beeth... played was ravishing."

NEWS NOTES.

The King of Bavaria can exert h[is] n occasion. He wrote an autograph l[et] er to Prof. Doellinger o[n] Munich on h[is] 5th birthday.

Those now in London who were h[ere] ring the war say that the exciteme[nt] nd constant extras, cried sometim[es] midnight, recall to them vividly 186[4]

Mad dogs recently became so num[er] some parts of Alabama that school[s] e county were obliged to suspend.
was considered dangerous to have pils abroad.

In a small tannery at Grass Val[ley] al., the leaves and bark of the m[an] ti tree are successfully used to ather. The tannery is experimen[ting] native bark and trees.

A very prevalent feeling in Engl[and] at the Prince of Wales's visit is a p[ro] ke now, though his frequent visits eland would have been invaluable h[ad]
ey been made years ago.

The great Catholic family of Von m, which stands at the head of istocracy of Brandenburg, has with awn into seclusion since Prince B[is] arck hounded one of its members e grave.

Protracted drought and extensive tion in the neighborhood have reduc[ed]
lare Lake in California from a leng[th] 42 miles, and breadth of 22 miles, length of 22 miles, and a width of iles.

In an address at the Louisville Univ[er] y the late Dr. Yandell is quoted as mmending a habit of cheerfulness.
de-spreading, hopeful disposition, w[hich] uld say, "is your only true umbrel[la] this vale of tears."

A bill has been passed by the New sembly imposing a fine of $20 on a rson who treats another in a saloon.
e bill does not prevent any number rsons from going into a saloon a[nd] inking together, but requires that ea[ch]
n shall pay for his own drink.

Miss Milner, who married Lord Du[n] m, comes of a family which have ma[de] oney by trade in Leeds, and in the hteenth century bought the Fairfa[x] ate of Nun Appleton, in Yorkshire.
e Milners have long had a very hig[h] ial position, and became connected h the leading families in the county.
very large proportion of the Yorkshire unty families of to-day come from suc[h] sful local traders.

Among recent inventions is an improv[ed] cab, for which various advantages ov[er] her vehicles of the kind are claimed.
e front is a projecting one, and pr[o] ts a three-sided figure, the centre be[ing] straight and the doors on the sides, ening toward the wheels, the sid[es] ings being so arranged that the doors y be readily opened wide without in[-] ference. The springs extend beyond hinges of the doors to near the front the wheels, and are supported at their ward ends by goosenecks attached t[o] rocker frame of the carriage. The hicle is low hung, and so far forward the axle that, with the driver's seat anged behind, it is finely balanced.

The Paris Temps published a letter ting that the twenty-five Germans who re engaged at Berlin by Li Fong-Pao ve all had to take Chinese names upon tering the service of the Celestial eme. One of them, who was formerly ptain of a corvette, is now called Wang-Triang, which, when turned into glish, means Mr. High Wall. He has t been promoted to the rank of Adral, and commands the Chao Yung.
other German officer is now named n Pao, or Mr. Six Cannons. The pay these officers must be very high; for common German Gunners receive rly $250 a month, and about $7,500 i[s] amount guaranteed to the family o[f] h man in case he is killed by the nch.

The Population of France.

This subject continues to occupy the at-tion of the Academie de Medicine.
Rochard stated that, if the rate of inse of the population of France con-ued to diminish in the same proportion t had done during the present cen-y, there would be no increase at all a[t] beginning of the twentieth century.
nce does not compare favorably with er nations in respect of the rate of augntation of the population. In England population grows at the rate of thirper thousand. In Germany the rate en per thousand, while the American e increased tenfold since the beginning he century. At the present time nce constitutes the tenth part of the ulation of Europe, whilst two cen-es ago it represented a third. If this erical deterioration continues, the nch people will number at the bening of the next century only a fifteenth he European population, and will fall the position of the small states, and o longer recognizable as one of the ers. When the population of a coun-begins to decrease, we must suppose er that there is an excessive mortality lse that the birth rate is diminished.
, the death rate in France is asserted e even lower than that of the majority he European countries or states; coniently the comparative depopulation rance must be due to decrease in the ber of births. In that country the ber of infants in proportion to adults es than in any other European nation, epting Ireland.

orse car after symphony rehearsals.—
t æsthetic lady: "Was not the music ly inspiring?" Second æsthetic lady:
h, yes, that concernata Beethoven
ed was ravishing."

INSANE AT SEA.

The Ship "Sabine's" Mad Captain and His Freaks.

The story of the last trip of the ship "Sabine" is thus related by Mate Griffin of that vessel:—

"I shipped on the "Sabine" from Liverpool," said the mate. "I noticed something queer about the captain until the twentieth day out, and about half way across the Atlantic. I was pacing the deck in the mid watch. It was blowing a lively breeze from the nor' west and the vessel was braced sharp up on the starboard tack, making a good course under three topgallant sails. Of a sudden the captain came booming up the companionway, and, grasping my arm, exclaimed in a coarse whisper:

"'Mr. Griffin, do you believe in spirits?'

"I was so startled that I did not know what answer to make, but the captain continued abruptly:

"'I have just received a communication from my brother George, who has been dead for ten years—lost at sea. He has written to me that this ship will be lost, with all on board, unless I heed his warning.'

"'Written to you?' I exclaimed. 'How is that?'

"'On my slate on the cabin table,' he replied. 'Come and see.'

"Amazed at the behavior and talk of the skipper, I followed him below. Throwing open the state, he said abruptly: 'Read that!' On the slate were half a dozen lines, written in a bold hand. As far as I can recollect, they were about as follows:—

DEAR BROTHER: You are in great danger. Without warning by the fall of the glass or any of the usual signs your vessel will be struck by a cyclone at 4 o'clock this morning, and unless prepared in time you will be wrecked and lost. No time is to be lost. Take the canvass off the ship at once, and get your light spars and yards on deck. Do not neglect the warning of your brother GEORGE.

"I looked up. The captain was standing with one hand on the table, and his face, blazing with excitement, were fixed full on mine. 'Mr. Griffin,' he said, solemnly, 'this is a warning from the spirit world, and must not be disregarded. All on deck at once. Take in the top gallant sails, fore and mizzen-top sails and courses, and put a close reef in the main-top sail. You will need all hands. When that is down, send down the royal yards and strike the top-gallant masts.'

"I went at once on deck and began to shorten in sail. When all was snug, and the vessel, under easy sail, was tumbling over the broken sea, I went down the companion-way into the cabin to look at the glass. The captain pacing the floor of the cabin with short, hasty steps. He turned as I entered the cabin, and said:

"'Well, Mr. Griffin, is everything made snug?'

"I replied that all his orders had been executed and that nothing remained to be done but to wait for the cyclone. I then went on deck till 8 bells, when the second mate came up with a look of astonishment on his face as he glanced aloft and to leeward. I soon put him in possession of the occurrences of the night, and his first question was:

"'Where is the captain?'

"'Below and fast asleep,' I replied.

"He received his orders to keep the ship as she was for half an hour and then call the captain. I went below and threw myself into my bunk to wait further developments. At 1 bell the second officer called the captain, and in a few moments I heard his footstep as he went through the cabin and passed on deck. He had scarcely taken three steps when, with a cry like a wild beast, he yelled to the astonished second officer:

"'Good heavens, sir! What are you doing with this ship? Are you crazy or drunk? Who ordered you to put the ship in this trim?'

"I bounded from my bunk and on coming in time to hear the second officer briefly in reply:

"'The ship is just as she was at eight bells when I came on deck, and sail was ordered by your own orders given to the mate.'

"'You are a liar!' yelled the captain, as, springing upon the second officer, he gripped him by the throat and struck several heavy blows in the face before I was able to drag him away, with the assistance of the man at the wheel. The crew on deck, alarmed by the noise, came running aft and the captain, shaking himself free, pulled a brace of revolvers from his jacket pockets and began firing right and left, at the same time shouting:

"'Fight, by God!'

"In about ten seconds not a man was to be seen about the deck. Fortunately none had been injured. The second mate sprang into one of the quarter boats, while I took refuge in the other. The officers dropped out of sight behind the casks and water-casks. The man at the wheel deserted his post and covered his body behind the mizzen mast. The captain waited for a moment, listening intently with his shooting irons ready, and then, to my surprise turned on his heel and went below. The second mate joined me and the men began to crawl out of their various hiding-places about the deck.

"'The captain is mad,' began the first mate, whose face was swollen and bleeding, from the effect of the captain's fists. I assented to his proposition, and while we consulted as to the best course to be done the men waited patiently for a decision. I ordered the second officer to make sail on the ship and I went below and think it out. I then sat down in the transom and tried to puzzle out the solution of this serious difficulty. At two bells the steward brought me a cup of coffee.

"'Is the captain in his room?'

"'Yes, sir; asleep and snoring like a trooper.'

"My mind was made up. I called the second mate and carpenter, and telling them my plan went below, followed by these officers. We opened the door of the captain's room and entered. He lay on the outside of his swinging cot, with his clothes on, and his heavy breathing indicated that no light noise would awaken him. Rapidly and with as little noise as possible I searched his clothes and the room, removing his revolvers and knife and even his razor. Possessed of these weapons, we had little to fear from our insane captain if we watched him. This was soon arranged, the steward and carpenter agreeing to perform that duty.

"The captain did not appear at the table at breakfast or dinner. In fact, all his meals, until we arrived at the breakwater, were taken to his room by the steward. He took no noon observations, gave no orders, and did not appear on deck again until the pilot came over the side. He then assumed charge of the vessel but neither by word or act showed any remembrance of his crazy freak and his subsequent queer conduct.

Upon the arrival of the "Sabine" at Girard point, physicians were sent for from the city, and upon their recommendation the captain was taken to Norristown."

Sudden White Hair.

When the Emperor Leopold was about to make his grand entry into Vienna, the old sexton of St. Joseph's Cathedral was much troubled in his mind. Upon such occasions it had been his custom to take his stand on the pinnacle of the tower and wave a flag as the imperial pageant passed by; but he felt that age had so weakened his nerve that he dared not again attempt the perilous performance. After thinking the matter over, he came to the conclusion that he must find a substitute; and knowing his pretty daughter had plenty of stalwart suitors, the old fellow publicly announced that the man who could take his place successfully should be his son-in-law. To his intense disgust, the offer was at once accepted by Gabriel Petersheim, his special aversion, and the special favorite of the girl, who saw not with her father's eyes. On the appointed day, Vienna opened its gates to the new-made Emperor; but it was evening, or near upon evening, when the young flag-bearer welcomed the procession from St. Joseph's tower. His task performed, Gabriel would have descended from the airy height, but found his way barred. Two wretches had done the treacherous sexton's bidding, and closed the trap-door of the upper stairway, leaving the brave youth to choose between precipitating himself on the pavement below, or clinging the cold night through to the slender spire, with but ten inches of foothold. In the morning, the young girl for whom this awful sacrifice had been made, rushed frantically about the city until rescue could be afforded, and the poor youth was taken from his perilous position; but when he did descend, his senses were dazzled, his eyes were sunken and dim, his cheeks were yellow and wrinkled, his curly locks as white as snow. Gabriel Petersheim had won his bride at a fearful cost; but marry him she would, and did, and report says he entirely recovered all but the color of his snow-white hair.

A Characteristic Episode.

When Gordon Pasha was taken prisoner by the Abyssinians he completely checkmated King John. The King received his prisoner sitting on his throne or whatever piece of furniture did duty for that exalted seat, a chair being placed for the prisoner considerably lower than the seat on which the King sat. The first thing the Pasha did was to seize this chair, place it alongside of his Majesty, and sit down on it; the next to inform him that he met him as an equal and would only treat him as such. This somewhat disconcerted his sable Majesty, but on recovering himself he said, "Do you know, Gordon Pasha, that I could kill you on the spot if I liked?" "I am perfectly well aware of it, your Majesty," said the Pasha. "Do so at once if it is your Royal pleasure. I am ready." This disconcerted the King still more, and he exclaimed, "What! ready to be killed!" "Certainly, 'rep i d Sl e Pasha; 'I am always ready to die, and so far from fearing your putting me to death, you would confer a favour on me by so doing, for you would be doing for me that which I am precluded by my religious scruples from doing for myself—you would relieve me from all the troubles and misfortunes which the future may have in store for me." This completely staggered King John, who gasped out in despair, "Then my power has no terrors for you!" "None whatever," was the Pasha's laconic reply. His Majesty, it is needless to add, instantly collapsed.

An Honest Critic.

A work of art may be imperfect and yet so life-like as to compel admiration. A specialist will point out its errors in details, but the people pause to gaze at it.

A French sculptor, who had erected an equestrian statue to Peter the Great at St. Petersburg, was once lecturing to a class of students. In criticising works of art, he called attention to the celebrated equestrian statue of Marcus Aurelius at Rome.

He pointed out a great number of anatomical faults in the figure of the horse, all of which, as he called the class to note, were avoided in the horse which he had modelled. His honesty as an artist forced him, however, to exclaim—

"Notwithstanding, this poor beast is alive, while mine is dead!"

The Onion.

Of all the flavoring substances used in cookery, the onion is, after salt, perhaps the most valuable, and, as many a housekeeper can give testimony, when cunningly concealed in the sauce or ragout soup, it yields enjoyment even to those who would carefully pull it from them if they saw it, in their abhorrence of everything pertaining to the garlic tribe. There is no doubt that this latter is a most valuable food in a hot climate, especially when eaten raw. I remember reading in a book called "Angola and the River Congo," that the author never travelled without a supply of garlic, whose beneficial effects on the stomach and system were most marked. "When very much fatigued," he says," I have found nothing to equal a few pieces of raw garlic, eaten with a crust of bread or biscuit, for producing, a few minutes after, a delightful sensation of repose, and that feeling of the stomach being ready to receive food generally absent when excessive emptiness or exhaustion is the case." Very odd contradictions in regard to this vegetable arises; for example, Henry of Navarre had his lips rubbed the moment he was born with a clove of garlic, a time-honored custom in his native place. On the other hand, garlic was forbidden by statue of Alonso the Eleventh to his Knights of LaBanda, and Don Quixote cautioned Sancho Panza to beware of the garlic which the King of France had rubbed upon his infant's gums on his entrance into this world.

To the Canadian taste the pronounced flavor of garlic is unsupportable, and the odor of it, while it has been called the "violet of vegetables," is anything but a delectable perfume. Still people have mourned for it; for example, the Hebrews in their wanderings to the promised land, complained to Moses of the want of the leak and the garlic which they informed him they remembered; or, as the poet says, "The Hebrews gave Moses to understand that the scent of the onion hung round them still."

Niceties of the English Language.

Without grammar, our language would not be available at all. We recently met with this sentence: "If fresh milk does not agree with a child, boil it." Which? The milk or the child? To prevent a stupid, matter-of-fact nurse making a mistake and committing murder, we must be tautological, and write, "If fresh milk does not agree with a child, boil the milk." Carrying out orders too literally is sometimes unpleasant, as a friend of ours once discovered, when, having told her footman, who was a model of obedience, that when Mrs. Brown and her daughter, a grown-up young lady, called, he was to carry them up into the drawing-room. Mrs. Brown's dismay may be imagined when upon asking for her hostess, she was caught up by the stalwart attendant and, despite her remonstrances and kicking, carried safely up stairs and deposited before his astonished mistress. The historian does not relate how the other lady got up. Davidge tells a story of a somewhat obtuse actor who performed the character of a dumb boy. The stage directions are: "Enter Hugo, who advances to the king, shakes his head and kneels." To the horror of the stage-manager, and the amusement of the audience, the actor advanced to the king, caught him by his ears shook the king's head vigorously, and then sank on his knees before assaulted majesty. Which anecdote, by the way, does not say much for the system of conducting rehearsals at that particular theater.

Tribunal Distinctions in Hair-Dressing.

Among the most striking characteristics of the Soudan Arabs is the distinctive fashion of dressing the hair peculiar to each of the great local tribes, the significance of which is as important as the arrangement of the "head feather" once was among the American Indians. The Ababdeh Arabs, who hold the short cut across the Nubian desert from Abu-Hamed northward to Korosko, twist their hair into long spiral curls no thicker than a quill, which, being intertwined with slender skewers of ivory, make the whole head look very much like a monstrous porcupine. The Bishareen, again, who lie a little to the southeast of the Ababdehs, in the desert between Abu-Hamed and Suakim, comb the hair of the crown straight up into the air to a height of several inches, while letting the rest hang down on either side. The great Kabbabish tribe stretching westward through Kordofan into Darfour vary this arrangement by gathering the crown hair into an enormous knot, while the side locks fall down upon the neck to right and left. Their neighbors, the Baggarras, actually shave the head altogether and walk bareheaded under the burning sun, confident in the impenetrable skulls given them by nature. A similar custom prevails among the Yemen Arabs in southwestern Arabia, who shave the fore part of the head while allowing the hind hair to stand out in one great bush nearly half a foot in height.

A prominent clergyman calls the face "the playground of the soul." Then a book agent's cheek must be a prairie.

"Charming girl, that Miss Lucy, Jack." "Think so? I never could bear her. She always treats me as if I was an ass, you know." "Indeed, I didn't know she knew you."

Saleratus mixed up with a little thick cream is excellent for burns. Make into a nice soft poultice, spread it upon a cloth, and bind it upon the scald or burn, and renew as often as it gets dry. This will relieve a burn, almost instantly. It should be kept on until the fire is all drawn out.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"Heah am a petishun from thirty-four col'd people of Niles, Mich.," said Brother Gardner as the echoes of the triangle died away. "It am a petishun axin' dis club to favor de restorahun, of capital punishment in dis State. It am evident dat de signers hadn't read up on our position. If dar' am one thing we favor above anoder it am hangin' fur murder.

"I has attended executahuns, an' I has sot in church an' heard clergymen utter eulogies on murderers. When I cum away from de gallows I felt dat the law had been fully vindicated. I felt dat law was a powerful thing, an' dat justice had an arm strong 'nuff to defend de rights of all. I was awed an' humbled, an' my reverence fur de law war' neber so deep. On de odder han', I cum away from church feelin' dat a red-handed murderer was sunthin' of a hero. De preecher furnished a dozen excuses fur de murder—a dozen excuses fur sendin' de murderer to prison to wait fur pardon or escape—a dozen reasons why de fiend who chops up a hull family wid an ax should have his precious body kept fat at de expense of de State an' his precious soul kept fur a prison chaplain to practice on. I left de church feelin' dat murder wasn't much of a crime after all, an' had I met de man who frew a dead cat in my well bekase I wouldn't lend him $2 I should have broken his skuff wid a club an' depended on de preacher to cry ober me.

"Our thieves get de same aiverage sentences—when they happen to get sentenced at all—as our drunks an' disorderlies. Our burglars git about what am due de thieves. Our murderers sometimes git de full sentence of a burglar, but when dey do de hull people wonder ober it. Find me de dirtiest tramp—de meanest thief—de toughest burglar, or de mos' pitiless murderer, an' I will find you a lawyer to take de case for $25 an' do his lebel best to cl'ar de crimnal. I will find you men an' women to smile ober dat crimnal's wrongs. I will find you clergymen to stan' up in de pulpit an' inveigh agin' his just punishment.

"When the pulpit backs de lawyer you kin bet yer last dollar on a verdict of "not guilty.'

"I tell you dat in dis single Stait of Michigan human life has become so cheap dat de record of murders am appallin'. We hev mo' murders dan either England, France or Germany, wid from twenty to thirty times de populashun. Men tell you dat hangin' doan' less'n de number of murders. Why? Bekase de pulpit makes a martyr of ebery murderer swung off! He am prayed wid an' sung wid an' made de recipient of soft words and costly boquets. He am made to believe dat Heaben's gates yawn to receive him. He am cautioned to die bravely. He am paraded on de scaffold as a man who am gwine to sacrifice his life fur some noble cause.

"Gin' us lawyers who will plead de law an' de facks—juries who will decide accordin' to de evidence—executshuns properly conducted, an' arter three or four hangin's de Stait of Michigan won't hev a case of murder once in five years."

DIDN'T SHOW UP.

The Secretary announced that the Rt. Hon. James Kinley, porter in the Kalamazoo House, in the city by that name in this State, had expected to be present and deliver an address, entitled "Does Wealth Increase Happiness?" He started in time to walk the distance by easy stages in thirteen days, but had been arrested while en route as a suspicious character, and now languished in a county jail.

Giveadam Jones moved that Gov. Alger be petitioned for the gentleman's pardon, but Brother Gardner replied that the Rt. Hon. could probably dig out before the pardon reached him, and the matter was laid on the table.

WHY NOT?

Sometime since Shindig Watkins presented the following resolution:

"Resolved, Dat de Committee on Finance be instructed to investigate and report on de number of culle'd pussons in dis kentry who am engaged in de bankin' bizness, wid the amount of capital invested in de same."

The President so instructed the committee, and at the present meeting the Chairman announced his readiness to report. The committee had paid out ninety-seven cents for postage, consulted numerous authorities, and had failed to find one single colored man in the business mentioned. The committee had not been asked to report why this was thus, but being in a liberal mood would venture the information that the reason was due more to lack of finance than any difficulty about renting a building and wearing a plug hat.

NOT UNDER THAT NAME

Secretary Slowtrack, under the official seal of the lodge he represented, forwarded a communication from the "Natural and Torpedo Chicken Discriminators," of Charleston, W. Va., asking to be incorporated as a branch of the Limekiln Club.

The Rev. Penstock at once objected in such a vigorous manner that he broke his vest-strap twice in two. Chicken! chicken! Why was the name of chicken always being rung in on the colored population? Suppose that a person could discriminate between an innocent pullet on her roost and a torpedo chicken lurking in ambush to destroy human life? Did that constitute statesmanship? Was that a certificate of character? Chicken! chicken!

The President replied that his own personal attitude on the poultry question was well known, and that the lodge could not be made a branch under any such name as sent in.

SHOOK 'EM UP.

"Gen'lem," said the President, as the cash box was about to be passed, "I want to remark a few observashuns. Somebody has bin frowin' buttons, nails, an' punched nickels into de contributhun box. De siverage receipts hev also steadily decreased fur de past three months. I am gwine ter foller dat box wid boaf my eyes to-night, an' de fust button dropped inter it will be de signal fur dis floor to settle three inches. I doan't ax you to rob yourselves, but I want it distinctly understood dat at least a dozen of us kin detect de difference between de chink of a nickel and a quarter."

The box was then passed in a slow and impressive manner by Sir Isaac Walpole and the receipts counted up over $13—being a clear gain of $7 over the previous meeting.

English Fairs.

The provincial fair of England is a survival of an ancient religious custom. In early times, when Englishmen observed saints' days, a crowd of worshippers and pilgrims used to assemble within the precincts of a church or abbey during the festival of a popular saint. To supply the wants of the throng, tents were pitched and stalls for provisions set up in the churchyard. Pedlers and traders found many customers among the worshippers, and in course of time these pious assemblies became marts of trade and were known as "fairs."

Many odd customs associated with English fairs illustrate the social life of Englishmen, centuries ago. The opening of the fair in several English towns was announced by hoisting a large glove in a conspicuous place. When there was a law that no fair could be held without royal permission, the king used to send his glove to a town as a token of his consent.

In Liverpool, a hand was exhibited in front of the town hall, ten days before and after each fair-day, to signify that no person coming to or going from the fair might be arrested for debt, within the town's precincts.

At Paignton Fair, Exeter, an immense plum-pudding was drawn through the town, by four yoke of oxen, and afterwards distributed to the crowd. Its ingredients were four hundred pounds of flour, one hundred and seventy pounds of beef-suet, one hundred and forty pounds of raisins, and two hundred and forty eggs. It was boiled in a brewer's copper, three days and nights.

Milk Diet.

Milk should enter largely into the diet of children. It contains caseine, or flesh-forming material, cream and sugar, which are heat producers; mineral salts, for the bony structure, and water as a solvent for all the other materials necessary in nutrition. It should be used with discretion, however, not drunk immoderately, but taken slowly as food after the pattern given by nature. Milk as taken is a fluid, but as soon as it meets the acid of the gastric juice, it is changed to a soft, curdy, cheese-like substance; and then must be digested, and the stomach is overtasked if too much be taken at once. A large glass of milk swallowed suddenly will form in the stomach a lump of dense, cheesy curd, which may even prove fatal to a weak stomach. Under the action of the stomach this cheesy mass will turn sour and over like a heavy weight, and as the gastric juice can only attack its surface, it digests very slowly. But this same milk, taken slowly, or with dry toast, light rolls, or soft, dry porridge, forms a porous lump through which the gastric juice can easily pass, and which breaks up every time the stomach turns it over. Milk should be slightly salted, and eaten with breadstuffs sipped by the spoonful. Cow's milk produces less heat than the human milk; a child would grow thin upon it unless a little sugar were added. Wheat flour has such an excess of heat-producing material as would fatten a child unduly, and should have cow's milk added to it to reduce its fattening power.

A Tall Bird.

The tallest bird known to ethnologists was found by Professor Herbert in the lower cocene deposits near Paris, France. It was over twelve feet in height, and could have bitten a man's head off as easily as a woodpecker can nip a cherry. We cannot be too thankful that this bird has gone out of fashion and experience. Ladies would have wanted to wear it on their hats, and men who sat behind such bonnets or ornaments in the theatres would be unable to see whether a ballet or a prayer meeting were in progress on the stage.

The Mahdi a Scholar and Theologian.

In the last number of Abou Naddara, the Arab newspaper printed in Paris, M. Sanua states that he saw the Mahdi in 1864. The latter was then on his way to Mecca, and attracted universal attention as a Mussulman devotee. In conversation he proved himself an accomplished Arab scholar and theologian. M. Sanua denies that the Mahdi was ever a slave dealer.

He is of the ordinary Arab type, and has not the flat nose of the Soudanese.

A capital crime—well, kissing is about as good as any of them, if we admit that kissing is a crime.

An exchange wants to know: "What are our young men coming to?" Coming to see our girls, of course.

When you think the world cannot get along without you, pull a hair from your head and see if it makes you baldheaded.

"Does your wife keep a pet?" asked Bigsby of Popinjay. "Well, I guess she does," was the reply. "She's never out of a pet."

Canadian Pacific R. R.

Owen Sound Branch.

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.	Mixed.
Toronto....Leave	7 30am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orange- Arrive..	9 50 "	7 08 "	12 30pm
ville. Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Owen Sound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
Chatsworth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford.....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orange Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
ville.. Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto.....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

A RARE CHANCE.

SAW-MILL FOR SALE.

THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4½ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill: a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.

J. A. DUNCAN,
Markdale P. O.

230 tf

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense, on the

Most APPROVED

plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat.

☞ Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS

In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon

From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.

Prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $8 per acre, 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country for securing Good Homes now open for settlement.

FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE 10,818,433 Acres OR MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1883, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific Country, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all kinds of

PUMPS,

Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.

Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's

PATENT LOAD LIFTER

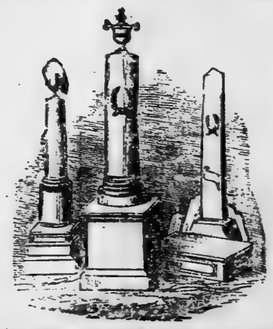
For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.

☞ Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS



The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble Works.

And Granite

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satistaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice. Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS, CASKETS, SHROUDS, and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farmers & Threshers

Ask your merchants for

McCOLL BROS.

LARDINE MACHINE OIL.

Burdock Blood Bitters.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE. ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

ROBERT S. RAE,

TAILOR,

Sydenham Street.

MARKDALE.

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, at the office, Main Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 yr.	6 mo.	3 mo.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDEN & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,
199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,

MARKDALE,

Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,

MARKDALE,

John McAteer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex, to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

MARKDALE

HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO of Dentistry, will be at the House, Markdale, on the 1st and Monday of each month and also at Hotel, Flesherton, the day following third Wednesday in each month for tice of his profession.

W. G. RICHARD

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & TECT, Markdale.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER orders promptly attended to. dence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound

COMMERCIAL HOT

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar well supplied with the best the fords; good Stabling and attentive THOS. ATKINSON, Pro

JOSEPH GIBS

CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of

BRICK AND STONE W

Plain Ornamental Plaster

Calsominina in all Shades and Charges moderate and satisfaction anteed. Orders left at ahe STANDA will receive prompt attention.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contra

In all kinds of Brick and Stone w

Estimates given.

All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended

195-6m MARKDALE

JOHN NOBL

MARKDALE

GENER'L BLACKSM

HORSE SHOE

A SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebra

CHATHAM WAG

Markdale Roller

The subscriber begs leave to an the farmers of the surrounding co he is turning out flour equal to roller mill.

No more waiting while the gri ground.

The following is the scale of exc

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs
" "	61 "	39 "
" "	60 "	38 "
" "	59 "	37 "
" "	58 "	36 "
" "	57 "	35 "

with offal in proportion to amoun

I find the average weight of new be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the if properly cleaned, would weigh the bushel.

John W. F

New Butcher S

The best meats the country kept on hand and.

DELIVERED TO ALL PA

THE TOWN WHERE OR

A share of public patronage solicited.

Remember the stand in McIve

W. H. RUTL

TO SCHOOL TR

The undersigned is manufactu cellent assortment of School Furni

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., design and most approved pat recommended by School Trustees ers, for cheapness, comfort and wherever tried. An assortment School Bells kept always on han catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW

FARM FOR S

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, mostly cleared and under This farm is three miles from will be sold on very easy ter particulars apply to Geo. S. C Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelb NOBLE, Markdale.

Medical.

P. MARSHALL, L.D
DENTIST,
RADUATE OF TORONTO
of Dentistry, will be at the se, Markdale, on the 1st and day of each month and also at el. Flesherton, the day follo d Wednesday in each month for the
of his profession.
122-

W. C. RICHARDS,
UILDER, CONTRACTOR, &
TECT, Markdale.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
VELL DIGGER AND DRILLER
orders promptly attended to.
—Snider's Hill Owen Sound

COMMERCIAL HOTE
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample ed Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and supplied with the best the mark
; good Stabling and attentive Ho
THOS. ATKINSON, Prop

OSEPH GIBS
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
RICK AND STONE WO
Plain Ornamental Plastering alsomining in all Shades and Charges moderate and satisfaction teed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD ll receive prompt attention.
12

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contrac
In all kinds of Brick and Stone wo
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended t
5-6m MARKDALE P

JOHN NOBL
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSM
HORSE SHOEI
A SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrate
CHATHAM WAGO

Markdale Roller M
The subscriber begs leave to anno the farmers of the surrounding co he is turning out flour equal to an roller-mill.
No more waiting while the grist ground.
The following is the scale of excha
Wheat Weighing 62 lbs, 40 lbs. F
" " 61 " 39 "
" " 60 " 38 "
" " 59 " 37 "
" " 58 " 36 "
" " 57 " 35 "
with offal in proportion to amount I find the average weight of new be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the mo if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 the bushel.
John W. Fo

New Butcher Sh
The best meats the country can kept on hand and.
DELIVERED TO ALL PART
THE TOWN WHERE ORDE
A share of public patronage re olicited.
Remember the stand in McNea's
W. H. RUTLE

TO SCHOOL TRUS
The undersigned is manufacturi
cellent assortment of School Furnitu
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS an TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of design and most approved pattern recommended by School Trustees a ers, for cheapness, comfort and co wherever tried. An assortment of School Bells kept always on hand. catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW M

FARM FOR S
LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about mostly cleared and under This farm is three miles from M will be sold on very easy terms particulars apply to Geo. S. C.
Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelbur
NOBLE, Markdale.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 240. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 16, 1885. { COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH. }

Spring Stock
COMPLETE.

54 Complete Watches.

Gold and Silver Cases, Ladies and Gents sizes, Waltham, Elgin, Springfield and Swiss movements, 7, 9, 11 and 15 Jewelled. Close time-keepers. Warrants cover all breakages, for 1 and 2 years.

32 FINE CLOCKS,
Seth Thomas & other makes.

WEDDING RINGS, ACID TEST.

3 oz. Coin Case, Elgin movement, Exp. Bal., $12.00.
A good Swiss Watch, 15 Jewelled, Silver Case, $9.50.

I Advertise Actual Present Stock,

And am in a position to give better terms, time or cash, than any other dealer in this section of Grey Co. Get quotations, compare with mine, and prove my statement. Long warrants help to sell—very often—inferior or imitation watches. I hold to the plan of honest representation of every article, and give no warrants exceeding 2 years. Cash discount 5 per cent. is worth considerable to every purchaser.

DIFFICULT WATCH REPAIRING A Specialty.
ALL WORK FULLY GUARANTEED.
W. A. BROWN,
Jeweller, - Markdale.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

IT continues to snow almost daily.

REMEMBER that Benson has the best cigars in town.

SHELBURNE spring show next Thursday 23rd.

MT. FOREST roller skating rink was opened last week.

FARM to rent or sell, apply to J. G. Irving, Markdale.

WE regret to learn that Miss Maggie Miller is seriously ill.

A GOOD young farm horse for sale; apply to R. O. Whitby.

FLESHERTON Station Stallion Show on Saturday, the 25th.

FOR Pine and Maple Flooring, go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

PURE apple cider (unfermented) at Benson's, 40c. per gallon.

ST. VINCENT spring show takes place at Meaford on the 29th inst.

MANTLES cut, trimmed and finished in latest styles at McFarland's.

WE had a friendly call from Mr. Fawcett of the Advance on Friday last.

GET your Fishing outfit before May 1st from W. A. Brown, Markdale.

IF you are in search of shoddy auction goods, don't call at McFarland's.

FOR Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

HOUSE cleaning, with all its terrors is upon us; let's have a week's holiday.

OBSTRUCTIONS of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, are promptly removed by National Pills.

WIARTON has voted a bonus of $1,200 towards the establishment of a roller mill.

FOR Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

MR. R D. IRVINE was in town two or three days a week ago and returned to his school.

Seeds.—Field and Garden seeds of all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

MRS KNOWLES of Muskoka was to her old home visiting recently and returned last week.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS destroy and remove worms without injury to adult orinfant.

EUPHRASIA Agricultural Society spring show will be held at Rocklyn on the 30th April.

BEAR in mind that by purchasing your Tea from McFarland you get an absolutely pure article.

FOR Dressing Cases, Bureaus, Sideboards, Cupboards, Lounges, &c., go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

MISS SPENCE, McFarland's Milliner, is giving excellent satisfaction, and is turning out some nobby hats.

Oil Cake, unsurpassed for Horses and Cattle, for sale at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

MR. HAMILTON, our enterprising artist, will open a branch photo. gallery in Dundalk next month.

THE Mercantile Fire Ins. Coy's is steadily increasing in this locality—R. C. Bryden is agent. 139 3-w.

CRISP and newsy is the Dufferin Post. That you may have unwavering success is our wish, friend S. G. K.

DR. LOW'S PLEASANT WORM SYRUP—An agreeable, safe and effectual remedy to remove all kinds of worms.

THE Mt. Forest Representative says the thermometer registered below zero forty-three nights during the past winter.

REJUVENATOR Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of diseases from the system. Sold by Smith, the barber.

MR. THOS. NEELY of Holland intends leaving next week for British Columbia on a prospecting tour for two or more months.

THE finest stock of briar pipes ever brought into Markdale is to be had at Benson's, also cheaper than any one in town.

TO-MORROW evening (Friday) is the regular meeting of the Markdale Royal T. of T. A full attendance is requested.

SOLE agent for Silver Cream, best solution for cleaning, Hollow and plate Silverware. 25 cents a bottle at W. A. Brown's.

WANTED a good general purpose or heavy horse; would exchange for it a new reaper or mower. M. Armstrong, Markdale.

BOTH dwelling houses and shops are very scarce in Markdale, every available place being occupied and more wanted.

THIS WEEK—Ladies' and Childrens' Hose, Ladies' Kid Boots and Shoes, Ladies' Gloves and Collars, at McFarland's.

REV. JAS. E. ALLEN and family passed through on Monday en route from Winnipeg home to Owen Sound and Allenford.

ALL kinds of canned goods, fruits, jellies, lemons, oranges, biscuits, confectionary, &c., just opened out at Benson's this week.

FOR ROUGH conditions of the Skin, Shampooing the head, Pimples, Eruption, and Skin Diseases, use Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap.

HEAD QUARTERS.—For Implements and repairs of all kinds, call on J. H. Hull, agent for Fleury's Sylvester's and Wilkinson's manufacture.

GENERAL GRANT is in about the same condition now some length of time, but the end may come, and is looked for, at any moment.

REJUVENATOR keeps the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure and nature's channels free; then you have health. Sold by Smith, the barber.

R. O. WHITBY, Markdale, is prepared to do all kinds of house, sign and carriage painting with neatness and dispatch. Special attention to graining.

MR. Fred Sarjeant and family arrived yesterday, and are now residents of Markdale. Welcome.

MRS. Joseph Lamb left to-day for Cleveland, Ohio, where she intends spending some time with friends.

WM. LUCAS & Co. have any amount of money to loan on real estate security at 6½ per cent. Call on them before borrowing elsewhere. 288-3m PROLIFIC.—James Struthers, Esq., of Euphrasia, has a cow which gave birth to twin heifer calves last week. Both calves and cow are doing well.

W. KOUGH of Owen Sound is about to retire from business, and is offering his large and complete stock of hardware at cost. See his advertisement in this paper.

IF you want to save money go straight to J. R. Trimble's where you can get the best and cheapest goods in the County, and don't forget to take the cash along.

THE abstract statment of the receipts and expenditures of the township of Euphrasia for the year ending 31st December, 1884, may be seen in another column.

EVERY business man should have his envelopes and letter heads printed, just call and see how neat and cheap we do them at the STANDARD office.

REV. MR. CLEMENT, of Parkdale, who preached twice in the Methodist Church Markdale about four weeks since, died at his residence on Saturday the 4th inst.

"FISHING TACKLE."—A full line of Baskets, Lines, Hooks, Bait Cans, Sinkers, Poles, Fly's, &c., also Sewing Machine Needles at W. A. Brown' Watch shop, Markdale.

MELVILLE & Co., of Owen Sound have faith in judicious advertising because they know by practical experience that it has the desired effect. See their adv. in this paper.

J. R. TRIMBLE has this week purchased at the Trade Sales a large line of Boots & Shoes and other seasonable goods. His numerous customers may depend on getting great bargains.

MR. IRWIN, our Veterinary Surgeon, has been kept very busy since he came to Markdale, and has been very successful in his treatment. Hope he may have abundant success.

Horses for Sale.

Two good general purpose Horses. Particulars on application to A. Turner & Co.
240-41

WM. McLEOD, Shoemaker, having secured the services of Hugh Caswell, whose reputation is hard to beat as a good general workman, I am now prepared to turn out new work and repairing on the shortest notice.

J. R. TRIMBLE is taking the lead in every line of goods. His store is crammed with nice new goods of every description, and his large staff of hands are busy from morning till night attending to the wants of customers.

MR. E. E. KNOTT of Toronto has sold the old Homestead at Fairmount to Mr. Wm. Wiggins of the Township Chingacousay for $15000. We believe this property is one of the finest in the Township of Euphrasia.—Meaford Monitor.

A PERSON made the remark the other day that in their opinion Markdale had more than a fair share of Professors (professional dead beats). It strikes us there are quite a number, and they appear, by close attention to professional duties, to succeed wonderfully well.

MARKDALE SPRING SHOW.—The Glenelg Agricultural Society will hold their Spring Show of Stallions and Bulls on Monday April 27th in their grounds Markdale. There will likely be a large turn out and a good exhibit. Every farmer in the district should attend, as they will have an excellent opportunity to judge for themselves the merits of the various entire horses when seen side by side. Admission to the grounds free.

THE Wiarton Echo has secured the contract for the Great Northern Transit Company's printing, this is doubtless an extensive job. Good for the Echo. We expect to do the printing for the various vessels which may be engaged in transportation on "Bell's Lake," A'hem.

MISS McCOLL wishes to intimate that she has opened her Dress and Mantle Making business in Mr. D. J. Shanahan's, near Presbyterian church, instead of McDougall's block as formerly intimated. Miss McC. comes highly recommended as a first-class Dress and Mantle maker.

EVERY person should take a paper (we know some who take none at all) and keep posted on the war news both East and North. See the list in another column for which we are agent. The STANDARD also gives a general synopsis. 25 cents for three months, or $1.00 per year.

BIG LOSS.—A mare owned by Mr. Chris. Pettigrew, of Shelburne, attempted to roll in the stable one night about six weeks ago and got cought, injuring her spane. The veterinary surgeons gave up the case and advised him to shoot the animal, which he did.—Shelburne Free Press.

TO W. H. Rutledge's customers at Berkely and Holland Centre: He purposes to continue his business of supplying his customers twice a week as he has done in the past year; thanking them for their patronage, and wishing a continuance of the same. (Signed) W. H. Rutledge. Butcher, Markdale.

MANY of our subscribers have conveyed to us both by pen and tongue, their high appreciation of the improved appearance and increased value of the STANDARD as a local paper. We assure you we appreciate your expressed appreciation and hope to continue to merit your continued appreciable remarks.

MR. T. GILRAY, Reeve of Euphrasia, dropped in to see us on Friday, part of his business was to enquire if we had yet received the copy of the minutes and auditors report. He was pleasingly astonished to find they had come to hand a week previous, and the job (500 copies with nearly 40 pages) nearly complete.

UNION LINE.—The various hotels here have entered into an agreement not to run omnibusses on their own account, but have sold out to Messrs. Paterson & Stoddart, who will carry passengers to any hotel they may desire, or to any part of the town. The new arrangement commenced on Monday.—O. S. Advertiser.

WE notice in the Peel Banner a report of a large greeting which took place at the residence of Mr. George Steer, on the occasion of his departure for this village. A very highly complimentary address was read, and an easy chair and cruet presented to Mr. and Mrs Steer respectively. We trust they may also find worthy neighbors in this place.

THE SCOTT ACT.—As our readers are aware a petition in favor of the submission of the Scott Act in this county was recently forwarded to the Government, and it was hoped by the friends of the Act that no difficulty would be met with, as the petition contained considerably more than the requisite number of names; however, it looks now as if there had been some serious neglect in having the petition properly prepared, and the work will very likely have to all be done over again. One of the chief objections to the present petition is that instead of asking for its submission for the whole county last Fall, as it should have been, to make it legal, some of the petitions asked for its submission in particular townships, and that the list of names were simply cut off and attached to new ones properly filled up. These and other objections appear to make it likely that the present effort has been in vain, and that while we are surrounded with Scott Act counties our own will continue to be exempt from the provisions of the Act for some time yet.—O. S. Advertiser.

J. McKenna, general blacksmith. opposite the Revere Hotel The very best satisfaction given.

A CONVENIENT CALENDAR.—The Budget, Canada's Insurance Journal, sends us a sample of their calendar for this year. It is a handy little affair done up in book form, and is easily carried in the vest pocket, making a most convenient calendar.

BACKWARD SPRING.—What causes a backward spring? We heard that to present a red-hot poker to a man's nose would have the above effect; others say it is caused by the recent eclipse of the sun, either of which reasons may be traced to scientific principles. We are of opinion, however, that the lateness of the season, is caused by the prolonged winter weather. One thing is certain, feed through the country is becoming very scarce, and should this unseasonable weather continue much longer, many a farmer's stock will suffer severely for want of fodder.

THE adjourn meeting of the Euphrasia Agricultural Society was held at Rocklyn on Saturday evening the 28th ult. Jas. L. Wilson was elected Sec. Treasurer in the room and stead of Thomas Abercrombie resigned. Thursday, April 30th was selected as the day of the Spring Show. Messrs. E. C. Oliver, Jas. Cruickshanks and John Vickers, Veterinary Surgeons. were appointed Judges of Horses and Cattle and Messrs. Edward Froy and Charles Devitt Judges of Farm Implements.

J. D. CRABTREE, President. J. L. WILSON, Sec. Treas.
—Thornbury Standard.

MEN of sterling worth and good social qualities are a valuable addition to a community in whatever sphere they may be engaged. We have now had sufficient acquaintance with Mr. J. E. Marsh, (now of the Markdale House) to set him down as such. Though we do not patronize, or even frequent, hotels more than our business demands, yet we can say there are few as well kept hotels as the Markdale House. The house is large and well furnished, clean and orderly, the dining room requisites are indeed of a superior quality and served in a toothsome manner, the bar is always orderly, and we have no doubt supplied with the best, and the travelling public may rely on finding in Mr. M. an affable, courteous and honorable host.

"WHAT SAY YOU TO A PIECE OF ROAST BEEF AND MUSTARD?"

Well, there is much to be said. The question being asked of the banqueter at the average boarding house, calls up reminiscences of close contiguity to the horns, and beefstake three cuts south thereof. He, of course, will pass unless it occurs to him that he needs a hinge for his trunk. Should there be any suffering, the effects of an indulgence is such sinuous fare, use McGregor's Speedy Cure, a sure and effectual remedy for Dyspepsia, Constipation and all affections of the stomach and liver. Sold by Hill Bro's. Trial bottles free. 5

Important Notice.

Having parted with my stallion, "Sir Colin," I wish to let the farmers of the County of Grey know I have purchased "Young England's Wonder." Young Wonder will be five years old on the 24th May; he is a beautiful bay, with silver main and tail; stands 16½ hands high; weight last fall 18 hundred pounds; was sired by "Old England's Wonder;" imported in 1871 by C. E. Mason was bred by William Warburton Sturton, Nottinghamshire, England; dam heavy draught mare, which has taken first prizes wherever shown. Among others Mr. Jackson's prize of $40.00 in 1881 at S. G. Agricultural Exhibition. Young England's Wonder took first prize as a sucking colt at S. R. Show in 1880, also same year at Normanby and Bentinck Shows; likewise at same Shows following year as a yearling heavy draught stallion, and in 1882 as a two year-old at S. G. Exhibition. He also took first prize at the two last Exhibitions in South Grey last fall, beating the Duke of Edinburgh, along with several other horses in his class.

Persian Bread.

Persian bread is a very peculiar production; it is made in large flaps, in some cases about a yard long—if ever the Persians reach the advanced state of morning newspapers they might have them printed on their bread, so that they could read the news while they eat and swallow everything literally. On seeing these large flaps I have often thought that they must resemble the Blacksmith's Leather Apron which was the old standard of Persia; if the bread is not made after that model they have managed to produce an article very like it, not only in size, but in colour and toughness at the same time. We have had now nearly two months' experience of this material, and it was a delight on coming here to get to our breakfast the first morning bread that was made on a somewhat later model than an old leather apron. The chances of finding a change in this detail of our daily life on reaching the Indian camp had often been discussed on the way, particularly at breakfast, when we were hard at work trying to masticate pieces of the leather kind. One of our party said he knew Major Rind, the commissariat officer of the other camp, and that he was not a man likely to come away without the means of baking good bread; but we had been so long used to that Persian kind that these assurances did not inspire much hope. There had been doubts, but these were dispelled at our first breakfast. Butter actually appeared on the table with the bread. I fear that for the moment we either forgot, or thought lightly of, the splendid pillaws in the breakfast prepared for us by the Governor of Khorasan's cook at Meshed, or the many delicacies Ali Marden Khan treated us with at Sarrakhs. One man while munching a great mouthful of bread and butter—the amount in his mouth slightly interfered with his articulation—but we made out that he meant to say it was almost as good as arriving at Dover; of course he meant to add that it was after having been a long time in the East away from England, but at that moment he had not a moment to spare, and left the sentence in its incomplete form as here recorded.

Ancestral Thirst.

I call your attention to the fact that there are thousands of people born with a thirst for strong drink—a fact too often ignored. Along some ancestral lines there runs the river of temptation. There are children whose swaddling clothes are torn off the shroud of death. Many a father has made a will of this sort. "In the name of God, Amen. I bequeath to my children my houses and lands and estates, share and share shall they alike. Hereto I affix my hand and seal in the presence of witnesses." And yet, perhaps, that man has made another will that the people have never read and that has not been proved in the courts. That will, put in writing, would read something like this: "In the name of disease and appetite and death, Amen. I bequeath to my children my evil habits. My tankard shall be theirs; my wine cup shall be theirs; my destroyed reputation shall be theirs; share and share alike shall they in the infamy. Hereto I affix my hand and seal in the presence of all the applauding harpies of hell." From that quarter, from the multitude of those who have the evil habit born with them, this army is being augmented. And a good many of the drug stores are abetting this evil and alcohol is sold under the name of bitters. It is bitters for this and bitters for that, and bitters for some other thing; and good men, deceived, not knowing there is any thraldom of alcoholism coming from that source, are going down, and some day a man sits with the bottle of black bitters on his table, and the cork flies out, and after it flies a fiend and clutches the man by his throat, and says: "Aha! I have been after you for ten years, I have got you now. Down with you! Down with you! Bitters! Ah, yes! They make a man's family bitter, and his home bitter, and his disposition bitter, and his death bitter, and his hell bitter! And it is as thoroughly organized as any army, with commander in chief, staff officers, infantry, cavalry, batteries, sutlerships and flaming ensigns, and every candidate for office in America will yet have to make himself a friend or foe of the liquor traffic.

The Chinese Passion for Flags.

The military desire for flags in China has developed into a passion. Every fortress, intrenched position, camp, city gate or officers' headquarters, has from one to 100, some of one bright solid color, but most are arranged in stripes, the colors red, white and blue being perferred.

Were but three stripes used the resemblance to the French tricolor would be almost exact, but as they ordinarily use five or six the similarity of color becomes a mere suggestion. When blue is not obtainable, black, and rarely yellow, takes its place. At the camp of the Tso-tsung-tang regiment on a pleasant knoll just outside the walls King chunfoo, more than 100 large flags were displayed, ranged with the precision of the rows in a cornfield, there being one for nearly every white canvas tent, in which the soldiers were comfortable installed.

The material used is Manchester cotton, bought white and colored by the Chinese. As each is about the size of a common bed blanket, and several thousands must be required for the 10,000 troops stationed in and about Holhow and King-chowfoo, the quantity needed is immense and the merchants who deal in the goods were prepared accordingly. There is no doubt but that their number is often unreasonably increased by the mandarins commanding the troops that they may have the squeeze, or difference in price, since they purchase at a fair rate and charge the government double.

Seen in the Kremlin.

I had heard and read a great deal about the Kremlin, but had no distinct idea of what it was like until I saw it. I had no idea of its vast extent; that within its walls were contained palaces, churches, monasteries and arsenals. The walls surrounding all these structures are of vast extent, height and thickness. At frequent intervals are watch towers of fanciful design, and the battlements are all loopholed for the discharge of missiles. Inside is the Red Square, so called from the thousands of judicial murders there committed, and in the centre of it is a group of statuary called "The Prince and Moujik." There are many entrances into the Kremlin, but the principal one is the Redeemer Gate, which is considered a holy place, on account of a certain famous statue which finds lodging in one of its niches. When passing through this portal every one is supposed to take off his hat. The Convent of the Ascension is a strange freak of architectural fancy, but beautiful. Near it is a place where the holy oil is manufactured, with which all Russian children are baptized.

Around the arsenal are hundreds of cannon taken from the French, and there I saw that immense piece of ordnance called the King of Cannon, but which, like the King of Bells, also in the Kremlin, is fit for nothing but show. The Ivan tower and the cathedral, with its numberless costly thrones, are both monuments of human skill. It is in this cathedral that the Czars of Russia crown themselves, no other than their own hands being considered fit for the holy office. The palace, which has an unpretentious appearance outside, being coated with stucco, is of great extent. It contains the St. George's Hall and numberless suits of apartments for the guests of royalty. The throne of the Czar was shown to me, and as I stood looking at it I almost trembled as I thought of the undisputed sway, of the limitless power of life and death over a hundred millions of people, which he who had occupied it a few days before held.

The Buffalo.

An American states that the division of the buffalo herds by the Union Pacific and Kansas Pacific Railroads left two great bands of them, one on the north and the other on the side of the tracks. Those on the south side, in Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona, have long since disappeared from the ranges, their places being taken by the herd of domestic cattle and numerous flocks of sheep. The disappearance of the buffalo from the Northwest dates from the conquest of Sitting Bull. When the military drove that great Indian warrior from the hunting grounds of his tribe the buffalo went with the red man. In the country were thotsands upon thousands of buffaloes that fell beneath the bullets of the soldiers when there were no Indians to shoot at. It was grand sport for the soldiers, but it was death to the buffaloes. Upon the prairies of Dakota and Montana, not a single one is now to be found. The only remnants of these mighty herd that once thronged the Northwest are a few hundred animals scattered in the vicinity of Woody Mountain, across the line in British Manitoba. Last year a herd of about 75 000 coraled in the forks of the Little Missouri, on the south side of the Yellowstone River, but they were rounded up by the Gros Ventres and Crows, who attempted to drive them on their reservations before the white hunters could get a shot at them. In this they were unsuccessful, for the white hunters did get wind of the affair, and by the time both reds and whites got through with them 5,000 of that mighty herd were left to cross the Yellowstone. The remnant which did get over in safety continued their journey into the North, and atlast found a refuge near Woody Mountain, in British territory.

The Death Watch.

The New York newspapers have set on Gen. Grant what they they term the death watch. He may die at any moment, and he may be alive three months hence. But whenever he does die the newspapers must instantly have the news; hence some one must watch the house for the newspapers all the time. The chief papers have therefore hired a convenient room close to the Grant residence, and there all day and all night sits a group of reporters waiting for Gen. Grant to die. They have books and a card-table, and whatever occurs to them may be of aid to help pass away the wearisome hours. They are well paid for their trouble, and among them are some of the most trustworthy newspaper men in the city. It is very responsible work, and men who are of irregular habits are not selected for it. At stated hours in the day and night the Grant mansion is visited, and Col. Fred Grant tells the reporters how the general has passed the preceding hours. Twice a day and just before midnight the physicians are seen, and they tell the reporters the condition of their distinguished patient. The work speedily becomes reduced to a system, and the plan renders both the family and the physicians much more freedom than when the ball was rung twenty-five times a day by the representatives of the press in pursuit of information. The newspaper headquarters in Grant's case has become noted already, and is bound to become more so as time runs on. Probably it will not be kept open so long as was the room in which the reporters waited so long for the death of Commodore Vauderbilt. There the watch was kept up just for seven months, and a jolly time indeed the boys had. The room became a club-room, known to half the newspaper men in the town, and they dropped in and out, and played cards, and had a good time generally.

Where Women Wear Beards.

The Watalta are a queer people who inhabit Talta on the Indian Ocean. The body is disposed to be hairy, but is carefully depilated all over even to the plucking out of eyebrows, eyelashes, beard and mustache. The color of the skin is generally a dull, sooty black. Beards are the adoration of the race, and are worn in immense quantity by men and women. There are but slight traces of religion among them, but they are in great dread of spirits that are believed to inhabit large forest trees. The sun is their true conception of an overruling Deity. Their marriages are first arranged by purchase, the intended husband paying the father of the girl the three or more cows fixed as the price. When these preliminaries are settled the girl runs away and affects to hide. She is sought out by the bridegroom and three or four of his friends and carried off to the hut of her future husband.

I Had a Dreadful Cough, and raised a considerable amount of blood and matter; besides, I was very thin and so weak I could scarcely go about the house. This was the case of a man with consumption arising from liver complaint. He recovered his health completely by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Thousands of others bear similar testimony.

To lower minds are given the sunny slopes, the pleasant harvest, the vine and the olive; light, light alone, on the barren crest of the lofty mountain, with the deep shadow of the passing cloud, is the gift of the prophets of mankind.—Indian Legend.

· · · · Delicate diseases affecting male or female, however induced, speedily and permanently cured. Illustrated book three letter stamps. Consultation free. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

The first ingredient in conversation is truth, the next good sense, the third good humor, and the fourth wit.

The Opinion of All

Who have tried Polson's Nerviline, the great pain remedy is that it is never-failing in pain of every description. Neuralgia, toothache, cramps, pain in the stomach, and kindred complaints are banished as if by magic. Rapid and certain in operation, pleasant to take, Nerviline stands at the very front rank of remedies of this class. A trial bottle may be purchased for 10 cents, a very small amount in any case; but the best expenditure you can make, if a sufferer from any kind of pain, is a 10 or 25 cent bottle of Nerviline at druggists and country dealers.

That which makes all women equally pretty—Putting out the light.

Young Men!—Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt, and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

A Western calf has four ears. This is fortunate for the calf as he will not be mistaken for a dude Imitatators vs. Substitutes.

Good points are worth remembering; for the reason that they assist us in avoiding many discomforts, and protect us against the cupidity of overreaching people. When you learn from friends that Putnam's Corn Extractor is safe, prompt and effectual, don't allow druggists to palm off a worthless and perhaps poisonous substitute. His object is quite patent, He wishes to make a few cents difference between a good article and a cheap imitation or substitute. Putnam's Corn Extractor. Sold everywhere. Beware of dangerous imitations. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

Æsthetic philosophical lecturer to his hearers: "People deride skepticism, Can you tell me what skepticism is?" Unterrified optimist, with idiotic literalness: "I suppose its denying a truth that you don't believe in favor of a lie that you can't believe."

Many a dandy before marriage becomes subdued after it.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the City.

The strike among the weavers at Kensington, Pa., has now lasted for four months, and it is said that in that time they have lost $1,000,000 in wages.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

For the Ladies.

Laughter is the poor man's plaster,
Making every burden light;
Turning sadness into gladness,
Darkest hour to May dawn bright.

'Tis the cheapest and the cheapest Cure for ills of this description,
But for those that woman's heir to Use Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription."

Cures all weaknesses and irregularities, "bearing down" sensations, "internal fever," bloating, displacements, inflammation, morning sickness and tendency to cancerous disease. Price reduced to one dollar. By druggists.

Ex-President Hayes is just now especially engaged in producing a cross between a goose and a guinea fowl. He wants to hear what kind of a voice it will have.

A.P 223

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk, Carpet and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas Ont.

50 000 Acres farming lands in Northern Michigan for sale. Some improved farms. Terms easy. Address MERRITT CHANDLER Cheboygan, Mich.

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH—HOW IT CAN BE accomplished. Sealed particulars 3c. SANITARY PUB. Co., Canadian Depository, Toronto, Canada.

CASH paid for Endowment Insurance policies. For particulars, address, with description of policy, F. G. RUSSELL, Hartford, Conn., Box 423.

TO BRICK & TILE MAKERS.—If you want engines and boilers, and the latest improved brick and tile, clay-crushing, and stone-separating machinery, for steam or horse power, address M. C. FREEK, or C. NORSWORTHY & Co., St Thomas, Ont.

THE BLIND afflicted SEE.—Those are requested to get Williams' Eye Water, it cures all diseases of the Eye that are curable, even for Blindness, ask your druggists for it. Wholesale, Lyman Sons & Co., Montreal. Send for circular to see the marvelous cures effected in Montreal to GEO WILLIAMS, 709 St. Lawrence street, or at GARDNER'S Drug Store, corner McGill and Notre Dame streets.

R. W. PRITTIE.

REAL ESTATE AGENT.

Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee, & Financial Agent Room C. Arcade, Yonge St., Toronto. Money to Loan states managed. Properties Exchanged.

SEEDS WM. EWING & CO., Seed Merchants, 142 McGill St., Montreal, will forward their Illustrated Seed Catalogue free to all Applicants. We give special attention to Seed Grain and Grass Seeds. Our new Early Scotch Bearded Wheat is the Earliest and Heaviest cropping variety of Spring Wheat yet introduced. Correspondence invited.

TREES! TREES! TREES!

Wholesale and Retail.

The filling of orders from dealers specially solicited We have ample stock and facilities for billing out in large or small quantities, on short notice, a general assortment of Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Shrubs, Roses, Russian Mulberry, &c. Railroad to our grounds.

H. H. HURD & SON, Proprietors,

Halton Nurseries, Burlington, Ont.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE

SEWING MACHINE

PRICE $25 CASH.

Our new machine is now ready, and is as good as any sold by Agents at $65.

SEE TESTIMONIAL

LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 1884.

Machine arrived all right, and it is certainly well worth the money you ask for it, with its present improvements. I prefer it to the "Singer," "Wanzer" or any other make at $60 each. Yours truly,

AARON HAWKINS.

New Attachments, New Furniture New Stand.

Send stamp for samples of sewing and our elegant descriptive photographs of the machine before buying from Agents.

MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL.

BONUS:—From now until March 31st, 1885 we will give to any person sending us $25.00 cash in advance for one of our machines, a handsome combination table and bracket lamp complete. These lamps are something new, and the maker wants them introduced.

If you or any of your friends want a machine don't delay, but send to

Co-Operative Sewing Machine Co.

22 James St. South, Hamilton Ont.

ENGRAVERS LETTER CUTTERS
C. FELL & CO. TORONTO
Mfrs. of HAND STAMPS Steel Alphabets kept in stock & cut to order Brass Stamps in any size or style fine RUBBER STAMPS, Type, Copper & Iron BRANDS, Stencils, SEALS, Checks &c. &c.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

TRY PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER
Pure Gold MANUFACTURING CO., 31 FRONT ST. EAST, Toronto.

CLIMAX GRADE Lorillard & Co.
R. U. AWARE THAT Lorillard's Climax Plug bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

SMOKED SAUSAG[E]

The most convenient meat for farmers [this] season. These meats are cooked and read[y]. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. [Send] to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342 Montreal

FOR PLEASANT SEW[ING]
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Co[tton]
Warranted FULL Length, and to run smoo[th on any] sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S [name is on the] label. For sale by all Dry-Goods De[alers].

Files REC[UT] DON'T WASTE THEM OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FI[LE CO.]
150 Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents

Dominion Line of Steamsh[ips]

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday summer months, and from Portland every during the winter months. Sailing dates from

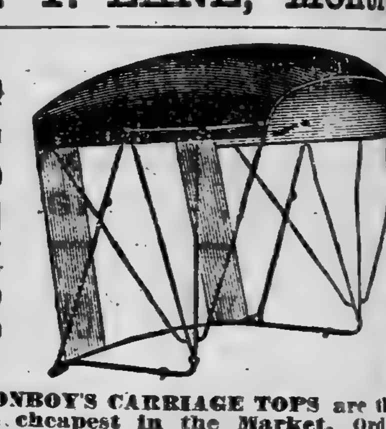
	PORTLAND.
Dominion	March 5	Toronto
Montreal	March 19	Montreal
Brooklyn	March 26

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms marked thus: * are amidships, where but little felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Agent or local agents of the Company or to DAVID TORRANCE & Co. General Agents.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steam[ships]

Sailing during winter from Portland every and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and tr al. weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other inform[ation] apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltim[ore]; Cunard & Co, Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.



LADIES PILLS OF TANSY are Perfectly Safe and always Effectual. Sealed particulars. Wilcox Specific Medicine Co., Philadelphia.

PREMIER. RUDGE. ROYAL CANADIAN. EXPERT. KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd hand Bicycles & Tricycles.
Send for list.
Send 3c. stamp for large catalogue ever issued in Canada.

A. T. LANE, Montre[al]

CONBOY'S

"CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition Cows, Calves, Sheep and Pigs. The Yorkshire CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time and saves Food.

Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 200 Feeds.

HUGH MILLER and Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,
167 King St. East, Toronto.

For Sale by druggists everywhere.

CAUTION

Each Plug of the

MYRTLE NAV[Y]

IS MARKED

T. & B

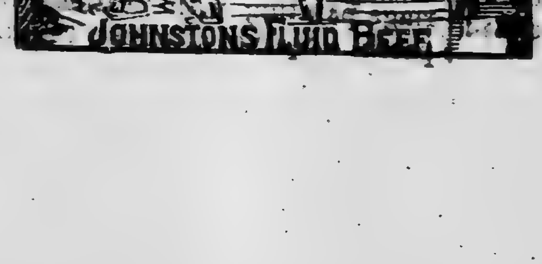
In Bronze Letters.

NONE OTHER GENUINE

The Temperance Colonization Society

LIMITED.

Free Homesteads One Hundred and Sixty Acres of Beautiful Land Free to Actual Settlers



SPECIAL ADVANTAGES

First class land; plenty of pure water; navigable river passing through it; sober, thrifty, moral settlers; healthy climate; no fevers; convenient to coal mines; season longer than in Manitoba; supply store in the colony; located in centre of fertile belt.

FIRST EXCURSION TO THE COLONY, ABOUT APRIL 2ND.
FURTHER EXCURSIONS TO FOLLOW DURING THE SEASON.
Maps of the Colony and City, and all information furnished on application.

HEAD OFFICE, - - 114 King Street West, Toro[nto]

W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Manager.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BE[EF]

It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating, properties of beef, and the only one which has the power to supply nourishment for brain, and bone, and muscle.

[F]OR THE FARM

[Th]e Small Spring G[rains]

OATS.

[To b]e successful with oats, [they must] be got in as early in spr[ing as the land c]an be put in good condit[ion. ...]ts are very liable to rust, [partic]ularly in southern New [England. In] more northern sections, [where the climat]e is cooler, early seedi[ng is less a necess]ity, good oats being often [sown] as the middle or last of S[pring. In] three southern New Engl[and states, oats] intended for a crop of gr[ain should be sow]n as early in April as po[ssible. If sown ea]rly spring, they do well [...], if the ground is dr[y. Many] of the oats now raised i[n the grow]ing sections are cut green [for ha]y. In this case, the se[ed may be sown] later, but the tendency [...] sed by late sowing. We [have known sum]mer sown crop destroye[d ...] time after the rust struck [...]op not being more than [...]rs are often advised to [get seed f]rom the North every yea[r ...] year, as home grown s[eed ...] to be plump and brigh[t ...]nown careful farmers to [...] variety of oats for thirty [years] and get as bright, and h[eavy ...]t year as earlier. It is [...]nding to all details that [...] any undertaking.

SPRING RYE.

[Spri]ng rye is a grain that ma[ny say] has "run out" in many [places, th]e land or the climate ha[ving change]d in ways that make it a [poor gr]ain crop. The same class [...]go found out that wheat [could not] be raised here. But whe[...]theless, and with as ho[...] any previous time in the [co]untry and some farm[ers ...]eful in getting good crops. The requisites for this c[rop a]re, early sowing, good, [cl]ean, sound seed. This cr[op is m]ore for soiling cattle tha[n ... th]e seed is often in good [...] prices, and in limited qu[antities ...]ofiable crop to grow for [...] sown crop in this latitude [...]o blast or rust, so as to [...]less.

BARLEY.

[Bar]ley is getting to be of co[nsiderable impor]tance for feeding green [...]ate in autumn, after the [...]rowing is passed. To ha[ve ...]ing late for fodder, the [...]wn early in the season, as [...], like late sown oats and r[...]ust, or fill very poorly. [...] require cool weather f[...] and for this reason, shoul[d ...]y as the season will per[mit ...]ork. All these crops d[o ...] land that has produced a [...] previous year, yet we ha[ve ...]rops in sod land ploughe[d ...] fall, but the cultivation [...]st thorough manner, s[...] new land, at the time of [...]ed, was as fine and mell[ow as] could be. The fertili[zer ...] on the previous fall, and [...]ked into the soil, so that [...]roots have as good feedi[ng ...] land had been previo[usly] cultivated.

[...] spring grains to be used f[or ...] be cut as soon as the [...]rown, and during the earl[y ...]ming. The fodder will [...]nd tender, and will bear [...] three bushels of rye [...]our to five of oats to the [...] the straw that can be ra[...] favorable hay weather. F[...], considerably less seed [...], and less still if grass is [...] grain. In this case, the [...] better for the grass.

[Th]e Home of the Bliz[zard]

[Dea]rly beloved, if you wa[nt to ...] get up a lecture and bri[...] when the blizzards are [...]y morning I made a drive [...] across the country from [...]en. Now, when it bl[ows ... a]nd it blows It doesn't st[op ...], and it doesn't stop to i[...]. It blows a thousand mil[es ...], and if it finds a snow-dr[ift ...] suit it, it just moves the [...] place and sweeps the o[...]y bare of snow. And o[...]cks froze to our feet, less [...]tled over the rough, fro[...] the ground was bare, [...] plunge into snow-drifts [...] corsets, and all the tim[e ...] wind, sweeping all the [...] Alaska, whirled the ligh[t ...] faces and searched out eve[ry ...] wrinkle in blanket and ulst[er ...] great white bear, but it [...] as far as the eye could re[ach ...] great, white, drifted prairie [...] sweeping, whirling into [...] rising in great, gyrating [...] over like ocean breake[rs ...] wintry mile the arctic da[...] and the ghostly squadro[ns ...] north went charging [...]eless plains, and ever [...] of the sibilant, hissing w[...] no forest here for the [...]r through. Time and [...]turned their heads away [...]set of the snow and the [...] skilful driving of m[...] them in the road and [...]." The only living [...] those twelve miles of [...] three little country [...] to school—two boys a[...] that's Western stock for [...] passed them the boys [...]: "Mister, gimme a ride [...] over."—[Brooklyn Eagle.]

SMOKED SAUSAG

The most convenient meat for farmers ... season. These meats are cooked and ready ... Sold by grocers through the Dominion ... to W. CLARK. P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

FOR PLEASANT SEWI

—USE ONLY—

Clapperton's Spool Cott

Warranted FULL Length, and to ... sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S ... label. For sale by all Dry-Goods Dealers.

Files

DON'T WASTE TIME, OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FIL

... Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents

...inion Line of Steamshi

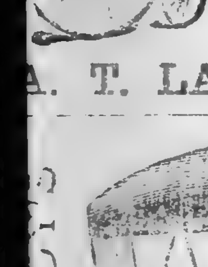
... connection with the Grand Trunk ... Sailing from Quebec every Saturday ... and from Portland every ... winter months. Sailing dates from

PORTLAND.

March 5 | Toronto
March 12 | Montreal
March 26 |

... Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool ... $103, $117, $144, according ... Intermediate $35, Steerage ... The saloons and staterooms in ... amidships, where but little motion ... or sheep is carried on them ... apply to any Grand Trunk ... of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

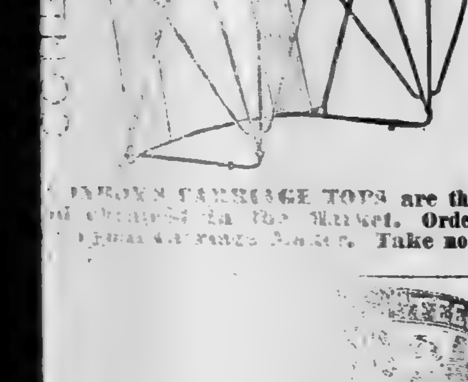


... Royal Mail Steamshi

... winter from Portland every ... to Liverpool, and in ... every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at ... mails and passengers for Scotland ... from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's ... to Liverpool fortnightly during summer ... steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during ... and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Phila... ; and during summer between Glasgow and ... weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; Cunard & Co. Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's; W. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N.B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

LADIES



PILLS OF TANSY are Perfectly ... and always Effectual. Sealed particulars ...
Wilcox Specific Medicine Co., Philadelphia

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY

50 2nd hand Bicycles ... Tricycles.
Send for list.
Send 3c. stamp for largest ... alogue ever issued in Canada

A. T. LANE, Montreal

... CARRIAGE TOPS are the ... in the Market. Order ... Take no ...

CAUTION

Each Plug of the

MYRTLE NAVY

IS MARKED

T. & B.

In Bronze Letters.

NONE OTHER GENUINE.

...onization Society

... Hundred and Sixty Acres of ... Land Free to Actual Settlers

... sing through it; sober, thrifty, moral ... season longer than in Manitoba; ... of fertile belt.

... ONY, ABOUT APRIL 2ND.

... DURING THE SEASON.

... formation furnished on application.

King Street West, Toronto

W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Manager.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF

... is the only preparation of the kind ... contains all the nutritious, together with ... stimulating properties of beef, and ... which has the power to supply ... for brain, and bone, and muscle.

FOR THE FARMER.

The Small Spring Grains.

OATS.

be successful with oats, the seed be got in as early in spring as the can be put in good condition. Late oats are very liable to rust and blight, cularly in southern New England. e more northern sections, where the te is cooler, early seeding is less a sity, good oats being often harvested e as the middle or last of September. e three southern New England States, intended for a crop of grain should wn as early in April as possible. In arly spring, they do well started in h, if the ground is dry enough. of the oats now raised in the milk-cing sections are cut green, and made hay. In this case, the seed may be n later, but the tendency to blast is ased by late sowing. We have had mer sown crop destroyed in three time after the rust struck the field, rop not being more than half grown. ers are often advised to get their from the North every year, or every d year, as home grown seed is less y to be plump and bright, but we known careful farmers to raise the variety of oats for thirty or forty , and get as bright, and heavy crops st year as earlier. It is extra care tending to all details that brings success in any undertaking.

SPRING RYE.

ing rye is a grain that many farmers e has "run out" in many sections ; the land or the climate has somehow el in ways that make it a peculiarly tain crop. The same class of farmers ago found out that wheat could no r be raised here. But wheat is raised, theless, and with as heavy yields any previous time in the history of country and some farmers are still ssful in getting good crops of spring The requisites for this crop, as for are, early sowing, good, mellow soil lean, sound seed. This crop is raised more for soiling cattle than for grain, he seed is often in good demand at prices, and in limited quantities, it rofitable crop to grow for the seed. e sown crop in this latitude, is almost to blast or rust, so as to be nearly less.

BARLEY.

rley is getting to be of considerable rtance for feeding green to dairy late in autumn, after the season for growing is passed. To have barley wing late for fodder, the seed must own early in the season, as late sown y, like late sown oats and rye, is like-rust, or fill very poorly. All these s require cool weather for best re-, and for this reason, should be sown ly as the season will permit of doing work. All these crops do best sown l land that has produced a hoed crop previous year, yet we have grown crops in sod land ploughed the pre-g fall, but the cultivation was done ost thorough manner, so much so he new land, at the time of receiving ed, was as fine and mellow as any rd could be. The fertilizer was al-t on the previous fall, and thorough rked into the soil, so that the young roots have as good feeding ground the land had been previously plant-d cultivated.

spring grains to be used for fodder, d be cut as soon as the heads are grown, and during the earliest stages oming. The fodder will then be and tender, and will be readily eaten. o three bushels of rye or barley, our to five of oats to the acre, will ine straw that can be rapidly cured vorable hay weather. For growing considerably less seed will be re-d, and less still if grass is sown with rain. In this case, the less grain etter for the grass.

The Home of the Blizzard.

arly believed, if you want to have get up a lecture and bring it out when the blizzards are ripe. On y morning I made a drive of twelve across the country from Tabor to ern. Now, when it blows out in and it blows It doesn't stop for the and it doesn't stop to inquire the It blows a thousand miles a min-nd if it finds a snow-drift located suit it, it just moves the drift into place and sweeps the old ground tly bare of snow. And cold? The ks froze to our feet, less or more. ttled over the rough, frozen roads the ground was bare, then we plunge into snow-drifts up to the corsets, and all the time the piti-wind, sweeping all the way down Alaska, whirled the light snow in ces and searched out every crevice rinkle in blanket and ulster. Shade great white bear, but it was cold! far as the eye could reach across eat, white, drifted prairie, the snow sweeping, whirling into fantastic s, rising in great, gyrating columns, ng over like ocean breakers. Mile wintry mile the arctic dance went nd the ghostly squadrons of the north went charging over these reless plains, and ever the fierce of the sibilant, hissing winds, for is no forest here for them to sing oar through. Time and again the turned their heads away from the onset of the snow and the blast, and he skilful driving of my comrade ng them in the road and "laid in ads." The only living souls we those twelve miles of storm and ere three little country children to school—two boys and a little That's Western stock for you. As assed them the boys hailed us ly: "Mister, gimme a ride!" That's l over.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

NEWS NOTES.

Water in the flooded Comstock mines ebbs and flows with the regularity of ocean tides, the Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle says.

A fresh invasion of the rights of the subject is reported from Paris, where the Prefect of Police has drawn up a decree absolutely prohibiting the display of red banners.

The Montpellier Medical thinks that whether or not smoking is an exciting cause of cancer, the use of tobacco often preserves people from contagious disorders.

The practice of persons kissing the Bible when being sworn in as jurors and witnesses has been abolished by Judge Samuel Lumpkin of the Northern Circuit in Georgia.

A prayer book was offered for a drink to a Lowell, Mass, saloon keeper recently by a man who stated that he was out of money and hadn't anything else he could pawn. The offer was refused.

Dr. Flint is reported as having said that many lives are lost by starvation owing to an over estimate of the nutritive value of beef tea and meat juices. In typhus and typhoid fevers, he says, there is no good substitute for milk and eggs.

A New England preacher says that the Chinese students who have returned to the United States after a two years' absence in China have great difficulty in remembering the English language, which they were supposed to have learned so well.

The Medical Era has discovered a report that the University of Pennsylvania is about to start a hospital for dogs and other domestic animals. A "Philadelphia lady" is supposed to be ready to endow a department for cats—literary and otherwise.

In the town of Warwick, in Rhode Island, is a boulder so poised on another rock that a person standing on it can rock it from side to side. When it is rocked a dull booming sound is given out, which which can be heard for miles over the country on a still night. A legend says that in this manner the Indians were accustomed to summon their warriors to council at this place.

All the ladies presented in Dublin to the Princess of Wales were, by a court order, to wear white. Hence many tears. Over thirty-five years had gone by since the last royal drawing room was held in Dublin Castle. Consequently several ladies who had been waiting this long time to be presented to royalty found that their charms had matured somewhat too much for being suitably and becomingly set in white.

Referring to the willingness of the Ojibeway Indians to fight in defence of the British Empire, the Rev. Pahtoh Quahung Chase, hereditary chief of the tribe, and a missionary of the Colonial and Continental Church Society, at a meeting at York, England, spoke of the part the tribe took in the British battles in North America in 1812 and 1814, for which his grand-father, then chief, was presented with a medal. He added that if the tribe were called upon now they would rise, young and old, to a man, and be ready to march at a day's notice.

A Cheap Fence.

Mr. Z. A. Gilbert gives the following plain descripton of a cheap post and rail fence, such as he has had in use for many years upon his farm. Where lumber is cheap, this fence is claimed to be as economical as barbed wire and quite as efficient in holding stock :—

The fence is built with three rails only, for cattle. The posts should be seven feet four inches long, set three feet in the ground, with a piece $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches thick, nailed across the side of the post, at the bottom, with two heavy nails. The dirt being tamped down upon this piece, will prevent the frost from heaving the post out.

The rails should be 13 feet long, the posts set 12 feet 5 inches apart, from centre to centre ; this gives $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches of rail beyond bolt, to prevent splitting. The rails of one length of fence are placed on one side of the post, and the next length on the other side of the same post, and the bolt goes through both rails and the post, with the nut turned up, holding the rails firmly in place. The rails being hung on the side of the post, the water all runs off and prevents the rotting that occurs in any ordinary rail fence, where the rails cross each other. These bolts are 5-16x10 inch carriage bolts, costing, by the 1000, $2\frac{1}{4}$ cents each, or $\frac{1}{4}$ cents per rod. It will be seen that it requires four rails to the rod, and $1\frac{1}{3}$ posts. The cost per rod is, therefore : Rails, 16 ; posts, 16 cents ; bolts, 9 cents, and labor 20 cents, or 61 cents per rod. The writer has built and had in use, for 15 years several hundred rods of this fence, and regards the exemption from repairs as equal to the cost of the fence during the time he has had it in use. The top hole for the bolt is 4 feet 2 inches above the ground, and the holes below 14 inches apart. A board pattern is easily made, each post is marked quickly. And for sheep instead of another rail under, some throw up a ridge on a line with the posts, thus leaving the opening too small for sheep to get through.

"It all comes o' bein' poor," said an old lady, trembling with indignation, to her sick husband. "I jist stepped in a minit at the Rich's to tell 'em as how you wasn't gettin' any better and Mrs. Rich ed she was sorry, and wanted me to bring you a bottle of wine." "Did you bring it?" asked the sick man eagerly. "No; I heard her say it had been layin' down in the cellar ever sence 1855, an' when she offered it to me I jist walked off without sayin' a word."

INTERESTING STATISTICS.

A cod-fish produces 3,686,760 eggs, a mackerel 454,860.

There are only 2,370 miles of railway in Ireland, of which but 568 are double lines.

The number of persons to a square mile in British India is 211 ; Feudatory India, 89 ; all India, 162.

In 1849 the export trade of France amounted to £49,000,000 ; in 1879 it had sunk to £34,000,000 sterling.

The Post-Office now returns 17·4 times as much as it did in 1840, the revenue having risen from £447,665 to £7,790,000.

Out of 1,000,000,000 letters delivered by the General Post-Office the proportion of missing property and non-property letters was only ·04 per cent.

The South Kensington Museum has been open 29 years. The number of visitors during that time has been 22,077,654—viz., morning, 15,676,155, evening, after 5 p.m., 6,401,499.

The manufacture and export of raisins is rapidly increasing in Cyprus. From the sum of £4,800 in 1868, the value of the export of raisins had increased in 1879 to as much as £18,000.

About 3,000,000 acres of land are under cultivation in British Burmah. Of this total, all save 300,000 acres are devoted to the growth of rice. Tobacco, sugar-cane, cotton, and oil-seeds of different kinds form the other crops.

Quicksilver is carried and shipped in wrought-iron flasks of 25 lb. containing 75 lb. of the metal. The consumption of quicksilver in the world was estimated in 1876 to amount to about 80,000 flasks per year; in 1877 it reached 100,000 flasks ; since then it has averaged 133,000 flasks a year.

The United Kingdom annually pays the foreigner a tribute of £10,379,798 for butter, of £2,295,720 for eggs, and £8,880,223 for bacon and ham—in all, £21,555,393 for articles not only perfectly capable of home-production, but actually better and of superior value when produced at home.

WEIGHT CARRIED BY INFANTRY SOLDIERS.—A return has been prepared by order of the Russian Minister of War of the weight actually carried by the infantry soldier in each of the large European armies when in the field in time of war. At the head of the list stands the Russian soldier, with a load of 32 kilogrammes, or between 70 lb. and 71 lb. Next comes the French soldier, who carries 30 kilogrammes, or 66 lb.; and then come the English and Italian soldier, each with a burden of 28 kilogrammes, or between 61 lb. and 63 lb. The Austrian soldier carries only 26 kilogrammes, or 57 lb ; the Swiss 22 kilogrammes, or between 48 lb. and 49 lb ; while the German soldier, finally, is called upon to carry only 21 7 kilogrammes, or $47\frac{1}{2}$ lb. There is thus a difference of 23 lb between the weight of the kit and accoutrements of the Russian and German soldier.

The Mahdi's Military Organization.

An Arab paper contains an interesting description of the organization of the Mahdi's forces, according to which the tactical unit of his army is the "brotherhood," consisting of ten men, who are originally under the orders of their senior in age. Any soldier, however, who especially distinguishes himself may be promoted to the leadership. Ten of these "brotherhood" form a company, at the head of which is a ferik, and ten companies form a regiment, which is commanded by an emir and his lieutenants. Every company has its linen flag, which invariably bears the crossed swords that form the military device of the Mahdi ; but the color of the flag varies, each regiment having its own, and, in fact, being known by its color. Deeds of bravery are rewarded by a present of gold, and any private may by continued gallantry raise himself to the rank of emir. When the Mahdi commands in person he is accompanied by ten emirs, who constitute his staff, by ten officers who act as aids de camp, and by four mounted standard-bearers. These twenty-four immediate companions of the General-in-chief are alone eligible to sit on court martials and councils of war. But the Mahdi has several unofficial councillors, and among these doubtless are the two Frenchmen who, according to Paris papers, have thrown in their lot with him.

The Real Test of a Horse.

Test trials of speed against time to make a record, can never be considered as the correct determination of what constitutes the true value in horse flesh. The true test of a horse is a contest of strength, speed or endurance, surrounded by the conditions met in the contest of everyday life. A horse may exhibit great speed in a trial against time when all the conditions are most favorable, and yet fail entirely when the elements of a hardly contested race are present. However perfect may be the drill of a body, that does not count for more than a preliminary discipline in the contest of battle. Neither does what a horse may do in a race where the speed is merely against time ; and nothing could be more injurious to the interest of breeders than the craze that is made over the performance of some animal owned by an individual to advertise his wealth, or to draw money to his coffers by these hippodrome exhibitions against time. If the law of the turf compelled these phenomenons to enter into contests of actual trial with horses that can trot in a race dangerously near to their time, or disqualify them from holding the championship, some of the flyers might have to be relegated to second place.

Printers' Errors.

The poet who wrote that he had "kissed her under the silent stars" was a little angry when he read in the printed poem that he had "kicked her under the cellar stairs." But the reporter only smiled when he read in his report that "the people rent the air with their ten thousand snouts," for he knew that an n had got into the h box.

A person who knows the method of setting up the type readily explains many of the blunders he sees in print. The various letters are arranged before the compositor, in separate boxes or compartments, and he selects them one by one, with speed and accuracy, as required. But the presence of a wrong letter in a division, or a chance dip into the wrong box, may cause a reader to find "oats" printed "cats,"—"songs," "tongs,"—or poets, "posts." But the blame does not always rest with the type compositor. The incorrect spelling and slovenly writing of authors are a frequent and constant cause of printers' errors. An article in Chambers' Journal illustrates this fact by the following examples :—

Boerhaave becomes "Boreshave ;" and Et tu Brute! "Eh, the Brute!" Authors should remember that the proof-reader is fallible and may be ignorant when he should have knowledge. If a passage reads clearly and gramatically, although conveying any thing but the sense intended, it is not to be wondered at that the error is sometimes undetected by the proof-reader.

Much surprise was occasioned by Sir Archibald Allison, in his History of Europe, including amongst the persons present at the funeral of the Duke of Wellington the name of "Sir Peregrine Pickle." There can be little doubt that the author had made an unconscious slip, intending to name Sir Peregrine Acton.

Sir Thomas Brassey having referred in a speech to the Golden Treasury of Songs and Lyrics, the compositor transformed the title into the "Golden Treasury of Soups and Cynics."

Mistakes in punctuation, such as the omission or misplacing of a comma, may cause serious alteration to the sense of a passage. The contract made for lighting the town of Liverpool by wick lamps, during the year 1819, was rendered void by the misplacing of a comma in the advertisements, thus :

"The lamps at present are about four thousand and fifty, and have in general two spouts each, composed of not less than twenty threads of cotton."

The contractors would have proceeded to furnish each lamp with the said twenty threads ; but this being only half the usual quantity, the Commissioners discovered that the difference arose from the comma following, instead of preceding, the word "each."

In the following instance, it was no doubt a bachelor-compositor who, setting up the toast, "Woman, without her, man would be a savage !" got the comma in the wrong place and made the sentence read, "Woman, without her man, would be a savage !"

The Queen's Speech at the opening of a recent session of Parliament was hurriedly published in a Scotch newspaper without being revised by the press-corrector. Her Majesty, instead of saying that certain negotiations "will, I doubt not, lead to satisfactory results," was reported as saying, "will, I doubt, not lead to satisfactory results."

So much for the misplacing of a comma !

Arab Women as Fighters.

From the earliest period of their history, the women of the desert-tribes were as celebrated for their skill with lance or bow, as for that bronze beauty which the composers of the quasidah or the moallakat were never weary of describing. Before Islam it was the boast of many Arabian tribes, as it was afterwards of certain Tartar hordes, that their women could fight as well as the men ; The Himaryites were among the most famous of these. All through those ancient Arabian poems, to which Mahomet is said to have referred as final authority for the meaning of certain words or phrases in the Koran, one finds legends of Arab girls celebrated for their equestrianism, their dexterity with the scimetar, and even for the number of men they have overcome in single combat. Islam, by subordinating the woman to the man, and destroying the idea of male and female equality, did much to extinguish the warrior-spirit of the fair sex throughout the greater part of the Orient ; but in the deserts of Arabia and Northern Africa, something of those ancient ideas still prevail.

Turkish Proverbs about Women.

The references to woman are as ungallant as they are unjust. She is treated as a child, and as such contemptuously pardoned for her shortcomings. "You should lecture neither child nor woman ;" it would be waste time. Her intelligence, too, is underrated, "Her hair is long, her wits short !" It is she who as a mother "makes the house, and mars it," and she is classed with good wine as "a sweet poison." But it must be admitted that in this want of gallantry the Turk is far surpassed by the Persian, who says "The dog is faithful, woman never."

The lover is regarded as a lunatic unfit for the society of his fellows. "If you are in love fly to the mountains," for "Lover and king brook no companion." He is "blind," and distance is nothing to him ; for him "Bagdad is not far," and the only cures for his malady are "travel and patience."

A word of advice to those about to marry, "Marry below you, but do not marry your daughter above you" ; and "choose cloth by its edge, and a wife by her mother."

The Story of "Auld Robin Gray."

This exquisite ballad was written by Lady Anne Lindsay, daughter of the fifth Earl of Balcarres She was born on November 27, 1750, and at the early age of twenty-one produced the ballad which Sir Walter Scott says "is worth all the dialogues which Corydon and Phyllis have had together, from the days of Theocritus downward." In 1793 Lady A Lindsay married Mr. Andrew Barnard, son of the Bishop of Limerick, with whom she went out to the Cape on his appointment as Colonial Secretary under Lord Macartney. Mr. Barnard dying at the Cape, his widow returned to London, where she enjoyed the friendship of Burke, Windham, and others, until her death, which occurred in the year 1825. It was not until she was in her seventy-third year that Lady Barnard made known the secret of the authorship of this ballad. An amusing story is told in connection, with its production. On Lord Balcarres's estate was a shepherd of the name of Robin Gray, and for some act of his Lady Anne resolved to immortalize his memory. Upon her little sister entering her room one day, Lady Anne said : "I have been writing a ballad, my dear ; and I am oppressing my heroine with many misfortunes. I have already sent her Jamie to sea, broken her father's arm, made her mother fall sick, and given her auld Robin Gray for a lover ; but I wish to load her with a fifth sorrow in the last four lines. Help me to one, I pray." "Steal the cow, sister Anne," said her sister. Accordingly, we are told that the cow was "lifted."

Invention of Gunpowder.

In a paper recently read before the Shanghai branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Dr. Macgowan affirms the claims of the Chinese to be the originators of gunpowder and firearms. This claim was examined in an elaborate paper some years ago by the late Mr. Myers, and decided by him in the negative. Dr. Macgowan admits that gunpowder as now used is a European discovery. Anterior to its granulation by Schwartz it was a crude compound of little use in propelling missles ; this, says the writer, is the article first used in China. The incendiary materials stated by a Greek historian to have been employed by the Hindoo against Alexander's army are stated to have been merely the naphthous or petroleum mixtures of ancient Coreans, and in early times used by the Chinese. The "stink pots," so much used by Chinese pirates, are, it appears, a Cambodian invention. Dr. Macgowan states also that as early as the twelfth or thirteenth century the Chinese attempted submarine warfare, contriving rude torpedoes for that purpose. In the year 1000 an inventor exhibited to the Emperor of China "a fire gun and a fire-bomb." He says that while the Chinese discovered the explosive nature of nitre, sulphur and charcoal in combination, they were laggards in its application, from inability to perfect its manufacture ; so, in the use of firearms, failing to prosecute experiment, they are found behind in the matter of scientific gunnery.—[Scientific American.

The Secret Orders of Islam.

It is a grievous error to suppose, as many do, that these scattered millions have no power of combination. Mohammedanism possesses five secret societies of propagandists. Five great Moslem brotherhoods—viz., the Abd-el-Kader, of Bagdad ; the Darkawy, of Morocco, and the Issawiye, whose headquarters are in Arabia itself—as thoroughly organized and disciplined as any Nihilist association. Every pilgrim caravan to Mecca bears with it the emissaries of one or other of these gloomy brotherhoods, and Mecca itself is, and has long been, as fully recognized a place of meeting for Mussulman plotters as Paris for conspirators of another kind. These stern apostles preach incessantly that Islam is in danger, and that its disciples must rise as one man to defend it, while the formidable "Darkawi society," of Morocco—which, from its savage zeal and persistent advocacy of the most violent measures, may be held to represent the "dynamite party" of Mohammedanism—goes so far as to menace openly the Sultan of Turkey and other Mussulman princes who have allowed themselves to be swayed by the influence of the accursed "... firs of Frangistan," probably meaning France and England. From such a "platform" to the use of daggers and explosives there is but one step.

Effect of English Rule on India.

England has fostered schools and missionary enterprises, and these diffuse what may be called political intelligence rather faster than an obedient Christian spirit. All these influences combined are gradually changing the manners, thoughts and characters of the Hindoos. The Buddhists, Mussulmans and Brahmins retain their peculiar customs and beliefs, but all are affected more or less by the new, restless, questioning spirit let in upon them by their conquerors. This slow dawning new era is not without ground for anxiety as to the future of English supremacy. The character of the Hindoo is a curious anomaly—gentle, dreaming and apathetic, but yet capable of the wildest and most savage outbursts of passion. The safety of English rule lay in the quietness and lack of self-assertion peculiar to this strange people and in this dispersion of their strength, resulting from immemorial religious divisions. It would seem to follow, therefore, that if the influences alluded to have tended to remove these safeguards the resulting condition, although favorable to the spread of civilization, is ominous of future trouble.

The Standard.

MARKDALE APRIL 16, 1885.

BURIED IN RUINS.

On Monday afternoon a terrible crash took place in New York by the falling of a row of eight five-story buildings on 62nd street. There were forty five men at work on the building (which was in course of construction) the greater part of whom were burried in the ruins, many killed and others severely wounded. The buildings were commenced last fall and were to be completed by 1st June, to cost an average of $15,000 each, and to accommodate twenty-five families each. Bad material and poor workmanship caused the collapse of the structure.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

The hopes of a peaceful settlement are well nigh gone. The Russians and Afghans have already had a battle in which the latter were repulsed, loosing five hundred men, while the former are said to have lost but ten. England demanded complete reparation from Russia, but the reply is unsatisfactory, and war is almost certain. Every preparation is being made for a struggle on both sides. Turkey is likely to join hands with England.

The presidency of Bengal has offered £3,500,000 to aid in preserving the integrity of the British empire.

No Scare at Brandon.

BRANDON, April 14.—In spite of the troubles in this province the police here are not excited, and seeding is going on rapidly, and on a larger scale than last season. Farmers are hoping for a plentiful harvest, as a heavy demand is anticipated.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

On Saturday last we noticed a number of the young men of Markdale in town who had come down for a holiday and to witness the volunteer parade, among the number we noticed Mr. Porter, teacher; Mr. Smith, the popular young man from McFarland's, and our genial friend Mr. Jackman of the STANDARD.

The Flesherton company (No. 6) of volunteers were notified to meet at the drill-shed here on Saturday afternoon last, but owidg to the death of Sergt Hamlin of Maxwell, who was a member of this (the 31st) battalion. As many of the company as could be notified had to leave early on Saturday morning to attend the funeral of the deceased to pay their last tribute of respect and military honors at the grave of the departed. The volunteers assembled at the drill-shed here and presented quite a military appearance as they marched through the village, headed by the band playing some popular airs. A few more members gathered through the day, but there was not much drill as it was late in the afternoon before the company returned.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—Mr. John Kerr of the 3rd line Artemesia, met with a sad accident on Monday last while out in the woods chopping, his axe glancing from a small tree near to him and inflicting a terrible gash across his foot, almost severing part of the foot. As Mr. Kerr was alone at the time and about ¾ of a mile from any assistance, the marvel is how he managed to crawl home with such a severe wound. Dr. Christoe was immediately summoned, and skifully dressed the wound, and since we learn the patient is doing well.

Wooed her, won her, and got her. —Mr. James Gadd, blacksmith here, has felt that it was not good for men to live alone, and has taken unto himself a partner in life in the person of Miss Osborn, daughter of our respected citizen, Mr. John Osborn. On Wednesday morning last they were united in wedlock by the Rev. A Wilson, at the residence of the bride's father. We wish them a prosperous and a happy journey through life.

CAN DEAFNESS BE CURED

Mr. John Clark, of Milldridge, Ont., declares it can, and that Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the remedy that cured him. It is also a specific for all inflammation and pain.

GREAT SALE of HARDWARE.

W. KOUGH

Having decided to give up Business, is now offering his his immense stock of

SHELF & HEAVY HARDWARE, PAINTS, OILS, GLASS, &c., AT COST.

This is a genuine Clearing out Sale. Call early and secure Bargains.

W. KOUGH, - - - OWEN SOUND,

SIGN OF THE "BIG AXE." 240-53

THE RIEL REBELLION.

Terrible Massacre at Frog Lake.

The Whole Country in Suspense.

FAVORABE WEATHER.

The Troops at Striking Distance.

ALL SORTS OF REPORTS.

A Most Difficult Situation.

The Troops in Good Spirits.

OTTAWA, April 10.—In the House of Commons to-day Sir John Macdonald said:—I regret to have to announce that there has been a massacre at Frog Lake, which is a matter of forty miles north of Fort Pitt. A telegram has been received from Mr. Dickens, who commands the Montreal Police at Fort Pitt. He says there was

A MASSACRE AT FROG LAKE,

and that the following were killed:—Thomas F. Quinn, Indian Agent, a Half-breed; James Delaney, farm instructor; Mr. Gowanlock, who is a miller, and his wife; Rev. Father Fafard, a priest; Father La Marchand, a priest, and two others not known. I believe they were lay brethren. Mrs. Delaney is prisoner. H. Quinn, a nephew of Quinn who was murdered, escaped and arrived at Fort Pitt yesterday. The late of Cameron, of the Hudson Bay Company, is unknown. There are under Inspector Dickens at Fort Pitt 25 Mounted Police. That is the news which I have received. Hon, A. Mackenzie Are there in refugees at Fort Pitt? Sir John Macdonald—I am not aware. There are very few people at Fort Pitt. It is a mere Police station between Battleford and Edmonton. That is all that I know about it. Whether they will hold out at Fort Pitt or move eastward towards Battleford, which is nearer than Edmonton, I do not know. I expect to hear every moment or very shortly what further has happened, and I shall communicate it from time to time to the House without delay.

THE REBEL PROGRAM.

Orders have been issued instructing the united half-breeds and Indian forces to hold one of the crossings, the exact place to be determined upon as circumstances may direct, against the troops. When General Middleton arrives there (Batoche's Crossing is likely to be the place) Riel will send a flag of truce and submit the bill of rights. If the general declines to treat, but not otherwise, Riel will then fight. He calculates that by the time the troops get to Clarke's Crossing, the situation at Battleford, Fort Pitt, Victoria and Edmonton will be such as to compel General Middleton to send most of his troops to the relief of those places; and that the half-breeds at Batoche's will be able to offer a successful resistance to the remainder. Nolin boasts that before Middleton reaches Clarke's the half-breeds and Indians on the Manitoba frontier will have risen.

RIEL OR DEWDNEY.

The Winnipeg Sun says:—The following resolution was put before a meeting held at Wolseley last week, called two from a home guard. It was moved by a leading Conservative:—"That it is the opinion of the meeting that it is now time for the Government to take decisive action, and that their first shall be that orders be issued to hang Riel to the first tree when he is caught, but if their must be delay that it shall only be long enough to capture Dewdney, and hang the two togather." The chairman refused to put the motion, but as it was seconded he was forced to do so, and it was carried.

RIEL TO PARLEY WITH MIDDLETON.

FORT QU'APPELLE, N. W. T. April 13.—The general impression here is that Riel will attempt to hold a parley with General Middleton at Batoche's or Gabriel's Crossing. The general will no doubt demand an unconditional surrender, and Riel will refuse and make a fight, and then retreat either to the northern forest, or through the Battleford and Pitt districts, which are now greatly disturbed, to the Peace river country. Dumont and other leaders are however bent on fighting to the last. In any event it will be necessary to keep a large force of troops up north for the rest of the year.

IN FRONT OF THE REBELS.

SWIFT CURRENT, April 13.—Col. Otter's brigade, composed of the Queen's Own, half of "C" company of the school of infantry, and "A" battery, have advanced, discovered the rebels, and are within rifle range. A battle is expected at once, and the men are eager for the fray. There is great anxiety to know the result.

TROUBLE IN THE FAR WEST.

WINNIPEG. 13, 10.05 a. m.—Col. O'Brien's regiment, composed of the 12th York Rangers and the 35th Simcoe foresters, received renewed instructions this morning to proceed in haste to Calgary. It is thought here that the government has received bad news from that district.

The reported crossing of hostile bands from the United States continues, and there is no doubt that the condition of affairs in Southern Manitoba is of the gravest possible character.

RIEL WILL FIGHT.

CAMP, via Touchwood Hills, April 13.—General Middleton has successfully crossed the Salt Plains, and it is believed may be attacked at any moment.

A settler has just come in from the infected districts. He reported that the insurgents are in force a short distance in advance, and that Riel has announced his intention of fighting to the bitter end.

THE WINNIPEG BUDGET.

WINNIPEG, April 13, 12.30.—A courier scout who reached Battleford last night from Prince Albert, reports seeing 300 Indians, many of them mounted, at Point Woods, on the Swift Current trail, twenty miles south of Battleford; also of finding a large deposit of supplies on the reserve. Where the troops encamped last night is 180 miles from Battleford, where they expect to reach on Saturday, unless they have a battle with Riel.

The garrison can hold out till then if the Fort Pitt Indians under Big Bear, do not reach there before the troops.

The health of both the citizens and the troops in the barracks is good. The death of one child is announced, and the birth of two since the fort was besieged.

The Hudson baypost east of Frog lake is threatened Twenty-five police and ten settlers with the Hudson Bay men are besieged there but are all well armed and provisioned and may hold out till relief arrives.

AMERICAN FRONTIER FORCE.

PEMBINA, April 13.—There are 1,680 American troops, of which 500 are cavalry on frontier duty at forts Pembina, Totten, Buford, Poplar river, and Assiniboine, with a contingent of faithful Indian scouts, and are in close telegraphic communication with the war department at Washington, and the United States council at Winnipeg. Gen. Terry's department, numbering 2,470 men, of which 1,900 are mounted, are ready to respond promptly to any order from Fort Snelling to move in support of the neutrality laws of the United States. There are other posts further west in Montana that will add to the above force.

HOW WILL THE TROOPS GO NOW?

A telegram from Mr. Ross, of the Construction company, north of Lake Superior, is to the effect that the troops must now be rushed over the line with all possible speed, and that more cannot be sent by this route, as a thaw is approaching, and a displacement of the line is certain. The ice has also broken on Lake Superior, and it will be impossible to get over the gaps for some time. He expects that the men now on the way will get over in safety.

MIDDLETON AWAITING REINFORCEMENTS.

HUMBOLDT, N. W. T., April 13.—Whatever opinion may have been formed of the farcical nature of the expedition was changed to-night by the receipt of news from the north per messengers who have met and conversed with the insurgent half-breeds. They say that the half breeds are now encamped on both sides of the river at Batoche's, the large force being on this side, and that having large quantities of provisions, a number of half-starved Indians have joined them. So far as can be learned, Riel has about 250 Metis and between 300 and 600 Indians, including Sioux from Prince Albert district. The insurgents have 40 Winchesters, besides 20 Sniders, and 500 rounds of Snider ammunition captured in the Duck Lake fight, and a large number of shotguns. They will have the advantage of heavy woods in which to fight unless shelled out by artillery, and with their knowledge of this style of warfare may prove formidable foes. They are determined, it is said, to fight to the bitter end, several of them having expressed themselves to couriers that, as haying only the alternative of being hanged or shot, they prefer the latter. While not hoping to succeed, they anticipate being able to seriously worry the military and prolong the campaign.

This command, after five days' marching, in which over 100 miles have been covered through the mud and water rests here to-morrow, and to await the arrival of reinforcements of 60 cavalry, under Major Boulton, and 250 Toronto Grenadiers under Colonel Grasett. On their arrival the combined force, over 800 strong, divided into 183 artillery men with four nine pounders. 617 infantry men and 85 mounted men, will move forward with all possible speed. It is not probable the Gatling guns will reach the front in time before the action, which cannot take place before the latter part of this week, as we are seventy miles from the rebel fortifications.

Scouts from Prince Albert in to-day say that Col. Irvine has 400 men, including mounted police, and they are guarding the women and children, who are in state abject terror. Non-combatants are on half rations except as to beef. By taking the Carrot river route no difficulty is experienced in reaching Prince Albert from here, the distance being 110 miles. S. L. Bedson, chief transport officer, and one Macdowell, a local millowner, left for Prince Albert to-night by the route named. The Saskatchewan is reported to have risen three feet within the last 24 hours.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 78	to	$0 00
Spring Wheat	0 78	to	0 00
Barley	50	to	67
Peas	58	to	60
Oats	36	to
Butter	15	to	00
Eggs	12	to	00
Apples	50	to	75
Potatoes	18	to	20
Hay	0 00	to	14 00
Pork	5 00	to	5 00
Flour	3 75	to	4 25

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense on the

Most APPROVED plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat.

Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT

The subscriber has much pleasure in intimating to the Ladies of Markdale and vicinity that she has commenced the

Dress-Making Business

In all its branches. Having graduated in the ranks of the best seamstress in the Dominion, she feels assured of giving satisfaction to all who may favor her with a call. The latest & best styles

London, Paris & New York Fashions

Strictly adhered to. She has on hand a supply of

FANCY GOODS

And a choice selection of the latest styles of

TRIMMINGS,

Which for beauty and rare design cannot be surpassed, if even equalled in Markdale.

Respectfully yours,

M. E. BENSON.

Markdale, April 7, 1885.

Canada Short Horn Herd Book.

No. 12527. Vol.

10TH, DUKE OF HILLHURST

RED and White, calved Jan'y 17 18 bred by Hon. M H Cochrane Compton Que., the property of Mr. James Bell Woodburn, Co., Wentlhworth; got by D of Oxford 25th [9893], (26350), dam ma Hillhurst Vol. 24, p. (18654), (A. H. D. Duke of Hillhurst, 12893, g. d. Dairym (imp.), by Royal George (25033), gr. d. Milkmaid, by Knight of the Tyne (30 Young Beauty, by Duke of Richmond (19 Beauty by Kossuth (11646), Rose, by William (8595), Luck Neil, by Roger (13 Snowdrop 2nd, by Studley (623). Snow by young Rockingham (2547), by Wo (2853), by Denton (193), by Ladrone by Henry (301), by Dandy (190).

HENRY WADE,
Sec'y Agricultural and Arts Associa
Office Agriculture and Arts Association,
Toronto Jan'y. 12, 188

TERMS:—$1.00 for season and, to in $1.50.

For further particulars apply on lot 9, 12, Holland, to

GEORGE PTOLEM

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors

Honor Roll.

The following is a list i rit of the pupils of the rkdale Public School w per cent, or over of n at the monthly exa lass V.—Herby Br
ves, R. J. Brown, S. B Class IV, Sen.—Jan
ne Cunningham, John la Cunningham, Willi
n Dundas, Richard
n. Coleman, W. Mc
baudeau.
lass IV, Jun.—Her lie Leslie, Ben Colem son, Henrietta Bens den.
lass III.—Violet F
vens, Hannah Ste
ledge, Willie Mathe
nshaw, Bessie Moffat,
Reynolds, Percill
lie Wilson, Jessie Gra

HAMILTON HAPPEN ere is now being manufac
e for instantly removing external nature, and it perfect cure for Neuralg Chache and the like that
It is called Fluid Light manner in which it acts, ared by McGregor & Pa
rkdale by Hill Bro's.

McGREGOR & PAR
Hamilton, Ont., are the e greatest healing and pu d known for Sores, Burns
Rheum, Frost Bites, etc.
regor & Parke's Carbolic and get the genuine McGr bolic Cerate sold by Hill Br

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Wheat	$0 78	to	$0 80
Wheat	0 78	to	0 80
	50	to	67
	58	to	60
	36	to
	15	to	00
	15	to	00
	50	to	75
	18	to	20
	0 00	to	14 00
	5 00	to	5 00
	3 75	to	4 25

tor Roller Mills,

ARKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

t Process Flouring Mill completed at great expense, on the t APPROVED and with the best ma- y manufactured, mak- in every sense of the

"A Model Mill."

n therefore in a position c the public a Superior e of Flour.

air trial respectfully so- and I have no fear but sult will be eminently actory.

paid for good hard Wheat.

Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, r sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

NG ANNOUNCEMENT

bscriber has much pleasure in nating to the Ladies of Mark- ale and vicinity that she has commenced the

s-Making Business

its branches. Having gradua- n the ranks of the best seam- ress in the Dominion, she els assured of giving satis- ion to all who may favor her call. The latest & best styles of on, Paris & New York Fashions

ly adhered to. She has on hand a supply of

NCY GOODS

a choice selection of the latest styles of

TRIMMINGS,

for beauty and rare design, annot be surpassed, if even equalled in Markdale.

Respectfully yours,

M. E. BENSON.

kdale, April 7, 1885.

ada Short Horn Herd Book.

2537. Vol. 9

H, DUKE OF HILLHURST.

and White, calved Jan'y 17 188 red by Hon. M H Cochrane Compton ne property of Mr. James Bellwood arn, Co., Wentlworth ; got by Duk rd 25th [9893], (26350), dam maid st Vol. 24, p. (18654), (A. H. D.) Hillhurst, 12893, g. d. Dairyman by Royal George (25033), gr. g. d. nd. by Knight of the Tyne (2008 Beauty, by Duke of Richmond (1964 by Kossuth (11646), Rose, by S n (8595), Luck Neil, by Roger (1361 op 2nd, by Studley (623). Snowdro g Rockingham (2547), by woma by Denton (193), by Ladrone (35 ry (301), by Dandy (190).

HENRY WADE,

y's Agricultural and Arts Association Agriculture and Arts Association, Toronto Jan'y. 12, 1885.

s:—$1.00 for season and, to ins further particulars apply on lot 9, c land, to

GEORGE PTOLEMY.

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of s, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, C hooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction. . MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toron nted By Mr. E. Morris From This City.

$35,000.00

AIM AGAINST THE CITY FROM ACROSS E BORDER. A SENSATIONAL LETTER--- WHEN DID ALL THIS OCCUR?---A CRANK EVIDENTLY FOOLS AN ATTORNEY.

rom the Iowa, Council Bluffs Globe.

This morning Mayor Bowman re- ved a letter, post marked Canada, not giving the name of any city own. On its face was the usual ee cent stamp of the Canadian vernment, and a five cent registered mp, both of which were cancelled. e letter was numbered "273," and ressed "To His Worship, the y rof Council Bluffs, Pottawattamie unty, State of Iowa, United States America." In reading the document, ayor Bowman was greatly surprised its contents. It was from an rney named McMillan, demanding the city, the sum of $35,000, for lgence on the part of officials for owing the murderer of his client's other, to escape. That the reader y understand it the letter is given full:

MARKDALE, COUNTY OF GREY, PROV- CE OF ONTARIO, Dec. 7, 1883.—Sir: . Edward Morris, formerly of your y, but now of our town, has placed claim against your city for the rder of his brother, amounting to 5,000, in my hands for collection. is amount he informs me your city omised to pay him—through the lawful and negligent act of your ficers in allowing the murderer of brother—then in their custody to ake his escape—but has not been id. Mr. Morris informs me that e sum of $5,000 has been paid by r city out of this amount, to his If so it is correct. The balance the $35,000, Mr. Morris now mands, under your promise by ter, to be paid to him.

Mr. E Morris, it appears, employed, me few years ago, two parties in is town of the name of Bowes & cFarland to collect the amount for m, but they have not done so,—at ast he (Mr. Morris) cannot get any tisfactory information from them to what they have done, and he w ignores any further act on their rt.

I now, on Mr. Morris' behalf, and his counsel, desires to know from n, as the chief officer of your city w the matter stands. Has any ney been paid to any person, save s. Morris? If so, to whom, and at amount, and under whoes thority? The balance of the $35,- 0 must be paid at once. Please swer by return mail, and let me ow the cause, if any, why the amount not paid. I will await an answer fore moving any further.

I have the honor to be, sir, your edient servant, I B. MCMILLAN.

In conversing with several old citi- ns concerning the matter they all ted that the letter contained infor- ation new to them. The matter en boiled down is probably the rk of a crank who has been "play- g it fine" on some attorney who dently has nothing to do.

McGREGOR & PARKE.

Of Hamilton, Ont., are the manufacturers the greatest healing and purifying com- nd known for Sores, Burns, Cuts, Scalds, lt Rheum, Frost Bites, etc. It is called cGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Be re and get the genuine McGregor & Parke's rbolic Cerate sold by Hill Bro's. at 25c. a x. 5

Honor Roll.

The following is a list in order of erit of the pupils of the 1st Division arkdale Public School who obtained per cent, or over of the marks ven at the monthly examination:

Class V.—Herby Brown, Geo. owes, R. J. Brown, S. B. Douglass.

Class IV, Sen.—Janie Irving, nnie Cunningham, Johnson Wilson, ella Cunningham, Willie McAleer, ohn Dundas, Richard Douglass, m. Coleman, W. McFarland, P. hibaudeau.

Class IV, Jun.—Herbert Hull, illie Leslie, Ben Coleman, Minnie ilson, Henrietta Benson, Frank ryden.

Class III.—Violet Ford. Mary tevens, Hannah Steer, Edgar utledge, Willie Mathews, Lottie unshaw, Bessie Moffat, Bella Ireton, da Reynolds, Percilla Dormer, ellie Wilson, Jessie Grant.

HAMILTON HAPPENINGS.

There is now being manufactured here an ticle for instantly removing pain of any ute external nature, and it is certainly the ost perfect cure for Neuralgia, Headache, othache and the like that has ever been ied. It is called Fluid Lightning from the pid manner in which it acts, and is manu- ctured by McGregor & Parke. Sold in arkdale by Hill Bro's. 5

1885. SPRING. 1885.

Grand Millinery Opening,

Commencing on Wednesday the 5th April, at MELVILLE & CO'S.

We beg to intimate that we have secured the services of MISS McMULLEN as Milliner, who has had large and long experiance with the best Millinery Houses in New York City, Detroit, London and Toronto, and that our SHOW ROOM will be opened for the Season this week.

Wednesday 15th, Thursday 16th, & Friday 17 will be show days

Our Stock is all fresh and new, comprising the most desirable novelties of the Season, in all departments. INSPECTION INVITED.

NEW STORE—Between Molsons Bank and W. B. Stephens, Poulett St., Owen Sound.

MELVILLE & CO.

Euphrasia Council.

The council met persuant to adjournment on the 28th March 1885.

Members all present; minutes of last session of council read and confirmed.

The Reeve was authorized to call upon J. G. Sing Esq, P. L. S. to survey a deviation and estimate the cost of cutting down the rock at lot 30, 11th line. Mr. Shepherdson was appointed to get 21 and 22 side road in 11th concession chopped out. The collector's time was extended until next meeting of council.

The auditors report was finally audited by council and adopted.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows viz:—Messrs. Tyson & Son, 80 cents, lumber for road; W. H. Dodson, $14, salary as auditor; George Crabtree $18, bureau for Treasurer's office; Robert Dunlop, $40, part salary for current year; Agricultural Society, $50, amount of usual annual grant.

The collector was authorized to strike from his roll, $1, charged for statute labor to Messrs. Heming, lot 17, concession 9.

The following named parties were nominated as pathmasters; a By-law will be passed confirming their appointment, at next meeting of council viz:—J. Rawlings, J. Howard, G. Emery, J. McCausland, T. Dookes, J. White, R. Carefoot, W. Pringle, J. Wallace, W. C. Smith, G. Bath, H. Conn, J. Millar, T. Julian, H. Lougheed, W. Dales, J. Dales, J. Devins, J. Gilray, G. Gravatt, A. Way, I. Fawcett, C. Hill, T. Milne, R. Neely, P. Ferry, W. O'Bryan, R. Millar, T. Hortop, H. Hurd, Esq., J. Jones, H. Reid, T. Londry, W. Charters, R. Bowser, R. Lougheed, G. Vickers, T. Wicken, J. Smith, J. Plewis, E. Gilbert, O. Drinkal, R. Ball, W. McConnel, D. Clark, J. Ross, J. Ferris, D. Wallace, W. Baker, J. Merwood, J. Knott, W. Clark, W. J. Lougheed R. Gardner, J. Fa ls, S. Gilmour, J Abercrombie, J Best, J Hutchinson, W, Bielby, J. Gibson, E. E. Hicks, C. Burrill, A. Crabtree, J. Cook, J. Nelson, W. Irwin, J. Lougheed, J. McArthur, J. Ormsby, J. Shaw, W. J. Boyd, J. Manning, R. Clark, J. Davidson, R. H. Stinson, J. Wilson, Mr. Webster, R. Dunlop, J. Paterson, Esq., W. Dookes, W. McCutcheon, N. Laird, D. Silverthorn, J. A. Hawken, J. Breadner, H. Patton, W. Curry, J. Paterson, Jr., W. Marshall, J. Struthers, Esq., J. Stinson Jr., F. Eagles, Joseph Thompson, T. Muxlow, J. Burchill, D. Millar, John Thompson, J. Steer, N. Curry, R. Artley, T. Rennie, J. Irvine, F. Burton, R. Elliott, A. Mordoch, D. Squires, T. King, P. Prior.

Council adjourned until the last Saturday in April next.

R. DUNLOP,
Tp. Clerk.

WATERLOO NEWS.

Walter Linton, Waterloo, writes that Hagyard's Yellow Oil has done great good in his family, his wife being cured of Callouse lamps that other medicines failed to remove, he also states that a neighbor was promptly relieved of Rheumatism by the same remedy.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Resturant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

A GREAT MISTAKE

It is a great mistake to suppose that dyspepsia can't be cured, but must be endured, and life made gloomy and miserable thereby. Alexander Burns, of Coburg, was cured after suffering fifteen years. Burdock Blood Bitters cured him

Honor Roll

Of pupils in School Section No. 6, Holland, for month of March:

Class 1st—Robena Brown.

Part Second—Jennet Martin, John Brown, Minnie David, Mary A. Brown.

Junior 2nd—Annie Smith, Willie Wilson, Willie Montgomery.

Sr. 2nd—James Martin, Emma Brown, Sarah Lyons, Henry David, George David.

Jr. 3rd—Sarah Brown, Lizzie Martin, Lila Wilson, Emma Ewart.

Sr. 3rd—Maggie Smith, George J. McNeely, Lizzie Sanderson, Maggie Montgomery.

Fourth—Albert Walker, Mattie Gillespie, Thomas Rowe, Annie Martin Herbert Ewart.

MRS. J. WATSON,
Teacher.

WELL TO REMEMBER.

A stitch in time saves nine. Serious results oft follow a neglect of constipated bowels and bad blood. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate and purify the stomach, bowels, liver, kidneys and the blood. Take it in time.

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Durham

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Hanover—Monday before Durham.

Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

THE SECRET OUT.

The secret of success of Burdock Blood Bitters is that it acts upon the bowels, the liver, the kidneys, the skin and the blood; removing obstruction and imparting health and vigor.

A GOOD TEST.

For over sixteen years G. M. Everest of Forest, has sold Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, and its sales are steadily increasing. It cures coughs, colds and all lung complaints; is plesant to take and always reliable.

Fine Farm for Sale.

MR. EDWARD DAVIS offers his farm for sale, being lot N. ½ 21, con. 13, Artemesia, better known as the "Meaford Road." This is a choice clay loam farm of 80 acres, 75 of which is cleared and fit for any machinery to work on, and well fenced with cedar rails; has a fine bearing orchard of three acres; a good large frame barn and out-buildings, and comfortable frame house; the place is well watered with running stream; also a saw-mill in good running order and doing a good trade—run by water-power.

This is a very desirable farm, ½ mile from school, one mile from church, 5 miles from Markdale and 6 from Flesherton, good road either ways; is situated in an excellent locality, and is a good site for cheese factory.

For terms and further particulars, apply to

EDWARD DAVIS,
239-41 Markdale, Ont.

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all kinds of

PUMPS,

Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.

Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's

PATENT LOAD LIFTER

For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.

Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

YOU CAN SUBSCRIBE

any of the

FOLLOWING PAPERS

AT THIS OFFICE:

Daily or Weekly Mail,	Toronto.
Daily or Weekly Globe,	Toronto.
Daily or Weekly News,	Toronto.
Daily World	Toronto.
Family Herald and Weekly Star,	Montreal.
American Agriculturist,	Monthly.
Farmers' Advocate,	Monthly.

Subscription can commence at any time.

STANDARD OFFICE,
MARKDALE.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

J. J. IRWIN,

Veterinary Surgeon,

GRADUATE of the Ont. Vet. College, Toronto, has opened business in Markdale, and is ready to attend all calls.

Office and residence opposite the Markdale House, Sydenham St.

CHARGES MODERATE. 238-tf

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS, CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES, PURCES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James G. Russell,

Watchmaker, Jeweller,

217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

Farm for Sale.

160 acres, being lots 42 and 43 second range West of Toronto and Sydenham road, Holland, about 100 acres cleared and in good state of cultivation, ballance well timbered with Maple, Beech and Hemlock, and about 10 acres cedar swamp. Good roughcast house 22x33 with stone cellar, frame barn 40x60 and good out houses, all with stone foundations. Good young orchard bearing. The farm is well watered, two good wells, one at the house, a fine spring creek crosses the farm near the rear. Only two miles from the thriving village of Williamsford, a station on the T. G. & B. branch of the C. P. R.

This is a rare chance, and terms will be made very easy. For futher particulars apply on the premises to

FRANCIS McCANN,
230-44 Williamsford P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

5 MILES from Markdale station, on the C. P. R., Lot 9, Con. 11, Glenelg, containing 100 acres, 60 cleared, balance good timber; well watered; stone house and frame barns; soil clay loam; well fenced and in a good state of cultivation. Apply on the premises to

GEO. STODDART,
238-39* Traverston P. O.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the STANDARD office Mill Street. Has a comfortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,
232-39* Markdale P. O.

OWEN SOUND MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON.

A LOCK OF RED HAIR.

CHAPTER III—(Continued.)

"No, indeed, I trust not," Edgar replied earnestly. "I think it is probable that the air here is a little too strong after the mild climate we have been in for the last few weeks. However, if she does not get better in a short time, I shall consult a doctor, and, if he says the place disagrees with her, we must move. It will be a pity to have to do so, as I am sure you will agree with me that the house is delightfully comfortable and cheerful; but of course her health is the most important consideration. I don't want to look at things gloomily, though, and I hope and believe that in a few weeks, especially now you have come, she will be all right again."

He spoke with so much feeling, and so differently from his usual flippant style, that Lucy was quite surprised, and wondered whether it was possible that she had been doing him an injustice. Certainly marriage seemed to have improved him wonderfully!

They had a pleasant drive; and Lucy delighted her companion with her genuine admiration of his roans.

"Yes, they are beautiful creatures are they not? I cannot tell you what a pleasure they are to me. I am desperately fond of horses; but I have never been able to indulge my hobby for want of means; now I have a stable full, thanks to dear Sarah's generosity. Here we are at last!" he added brightly, "Welcome to Fernhurst!"

Lucy uttered an exclamation of pleasure at the first sight of the house. It was not particularly large, but it was very picturesque. The front was almost completely covered by bright-looking ivy and creepers, and each window was ablaze with flowers, the whole presenting the appearance of an enormous bouquet.

"What a delightful place!" cried Lucy impulsively. "It is quite a flowery bower. I cannot imagine any one feeling dull here."

"I am glad to here you say so," replied Edgar, helping her down from the phaeton. "Come in through the conservatory; we shall find Sarah in her particular snuggery, I expect. Let us give her a pleasant surprise."

After passing through the conservatory and a pretty bright hall, they came to a door which Richmond opened gently. For the first minute Lucy was dazzled by the sudden change from strong sunlight to what seemed to her to be complete darkness.

"Why, my dear," said Edgar cheerfully, his eyes evidently more accustomed to these quick transtions, "you are in darkness here!"

"Yes," replied a weary voice; "my head ached so, I was glad to get in here out of the glare."

"Well, you must let me throw a little light on the subject, or our friend here will be falling over all the furniture; take care, Miss Lucy!"

With this he pulled up a blind, and Mrs. Richmond, with a quick cry of pleasure, started off the sofa where she had been lying.

"Ah, Lucy, my dear, how glad I am to see you! I thought you could not be here for another half-hour. I did not intend receiving you in this gloomy way. Come up-stairs, and let me show you your room."

"We shall meet again at dinner-time," said Edgar. "I know you ladies will have plenty to tell each other, so I will keep out of the way until then."

Although Lucy was to a certain extent prepared by what she had heard from Edgar, she was startled and shocked to find, when they emerged into the full light, the great change a few weeks had effected in her friend's appearance. She was thin and worn, and had dark shadows under her eyes, which were anxious in expression. She had, too, a habit, which Lucy never remembered to have noticed before, of starting painfully at any unexpected noise. Her face, however, was not pale; but, on the contrary, slightly flushed. Lucy saw at once it would be wiser not to notice anything unusual in her appearance, so said, in an ordinary tone of interest, when they were settled in her friend's pretty room—

"I was sorry to hear, dear Mrs. Richmond, that you are not well; your husband seems to think the change of air may have been too sudden for you!"

"Yes, he thinks so; and pray Heaven it may be only that!" she answered excitedly, the flush deepening in her face.

"But you don't feel seriously ill, do you?" inquired Lucy anxiously.

"No, not in any way that I can explain; but I am uneasy and restless, and a cloud seems to have come over my happiness. I know it is perfectly unreasonable; I have everything a woman could have to make her enjoy life, and a devoted, kind husband."

'But can you assign no reason for this feeling of depression?" asked Lucy.

"Well, only one, and that I am almost ashamed to mention even to you. I would not have Edgar know it for the world; he would think he had such a foolish, weak-minded wife; and, besides, he would reproach himself."

"Please tell me what it is," urged Lucy. "I am sure you would feel easier if you had some one to whom you could mention it."

"Well," answered Mrs. Richmond, glancing round nervously, "Edgar let out quite unintentionally, the second day we were here, that this house was supposed to be haunted. We were in the garden, looking at the ivy and window flowers; and I said what a pretty bright place it was. "Yes," he replied, "not at all the conventional idea of a haunted house, is it?" Directly he had spoken, I saw he had made a mistake, for he tried to change the subject at once; but I would not have it, and at last made him explain everything."

Mrs. Richmond then repeated the same story Edgar had told at Eastcliffe.

"At first," she continued, I did not think much of it, as I have never been in the least superstitious; but, somehow or other, for the last week I have been getting more and more uneasy. I cannot account for it in any other way—every night I go to bed tired, but I cannot sleep, I am so nervous and excited. Edgar tries every means to cheer me up, and mixes me the most tempting summer drinks, for I am always thirsty; but nothing seems to do me any good. I hope, Lucy dear, you won't be angry with me for not having told you of this before you came down; but I could not bear the idea of writing anything that might make you stay away."

"It would have to be a very substantial ghost to keep me away," replied Lucy, laughing; "besides I have not the slightest faith in ghosts; but I must admit I should not like to encounter a smuggler unexpectedly, and I vote we thoroughly explore the cellars."

Mrs. Richmond seemed relieved at Lucy's cheerful manner, which, however, was not entirely genuine. On the subject of the ghost she really felt no apprehension; but she was anxious and worried about her friend. Hoping to distract her attention, she asked for news of their travels, and they sat and chatted pleasantly until it was time to dress for dinner.

All the evening Edgar devoted himself to their amusement, and was so kind and thoughtful to his ailing wife, that Lucy's heart quite warmed towards him, and she retired to rest feeling much puzzled and rather out of conceit for herself.

CHAPTER IV.

The next morning Richmond and Lucy breakfasted alone, as his wife was not well enough to come down so early.

"It is a curious thing she is always so much worse in the morning, is it not?" he said anxiously.

"Perhaps it is a bad case of indigestion," suggested Lucy. "I have always heard dyspeptic people do feel worse in the morning, though, thank goodness, I know nothing of it from my own experience; everything agrees with me."

"And with me," he said; "but I should not wonder it you are right. I hope so, because there cannot be much difficulty in curing that. If she is not decidedly better in a day or two, I shall send for the doctor—it is miserable to see her suffer like this. It seems too bad, too, to have invited you to such a dull house," he continued kindly; "but I know you are too unselfish to require an apology, and I am sure your presence will do her more good than any number of doctors. Of course you wouldn't notice it, not having seen her lately; but I assure you she was more cheerful last night than she has been for a week."

"She must have been dismal indeed, poor thing!" thought Lucy.

After breakfast Edgar took her round the grounds, and showed her the stables and dog-kennels, in which she was as much interested as even he could have wished.

That done, they returned to the house that he might prepare an effervescing drink which his wife had every morning about this time, and again before going to bed.

"She enjoys it, and I think it must do good for her, don't you? It is so beautifully refreshing, and she always seems thirsty.

Five minutes afterwards she saw him go up stairs with a tumbler full of some delicious creaming liquid.

"It is awfully tantalizing," thought Lucy. "My walk has made me very hot. I wish he would offer me some; but he seems so absorbed in her wants, I expect he never thought of me."

In a minute or two she heard them coming down together, and hastened out to meet them. Mrs. Richmond looked about the same, though she said she felt a trifle better, and proposed that they all should go for a drive.

"Perhaps a blow by the sea would do me good. I am quite ashamed of being such a wet blanket, Lucy dear, you must try to make yourself as happy as you can in the circumstances, and you must go about with Edgar. I shall not be jealous—you may depend on that," she said, with a feeble smile.

"But we do not mean to rest until we make you well enough to go about with us," persisted Lucy. "We flatter ourselves we have diagnosed your case already; have we not, Mr. Richmond? And we intend to have a consultation with a brother medico in a day or two, if you are not better."

"I ought to get better soon," returned Mrs. Richmond, "with two such loving, cheerful companions."

"And so you will, my dear—rely upon that!" said her husband kindly.

They went for their drive, lunched at a little seaside village some miles off, and came back in time for dinner, passing the evening in the same quiet, dull manner.

"Upon my word," thought Lucy that night in her bedroom, "if this is going to be the usual style of thing, I must set myself some task to get through while I am here; I shall simply stagnate, if I go on in this aimlessly quiet way for two months; it must be something dreadful for poor Edgar Richmond,—really I cannot help pitying him, although he used not to be a favorite of mine."

The next evening a slight circumstance occurred, which, although it caused Lucy a little surprise, she scarcely noticed at the time; afterwards, when every trifling incident connected with her visit became of importance, it came back to her. Richmond brought his wife her effervescing drink as usual, and she asked Lucy if she would not like one as well.

"Yes, I really should," said Lucy; "it looks so very tempting."

"Well, then, Edgar will mix one for you, I am sure; won't you dear?"

He had been so exceedingly polite and attentive that they were not at all prepared for his showing a decided objection to do what they asked.

"Oh, really, I must ask Miss Lucy to excuse me to-night. You know I cannot undertake to provide unlimited iced drinks. You, dear, are privileged as an invalid."

Although this was rather uncivil, he smiled so pleasantly while he spoke it was impossible to take offence.

"Let Lucy have mine to-night, if she would like to taste it."

A look of genuine alarm passed over his face as he interrupted hastily—

"Nonsense, my dear, don't be foolish! Of course Miss Lucy will not take what I have provided for you. To-morrow I will make her one. I would have done so to-night; but the servants have gone to bed, and they only left materials enough for yours."

With that he left the room, slamming the door crossly.

"He must be in a very bad temper to do that," thought Lucy. "He knows how it upsets his wife, and he is generally wonderfully careful."

Mrs. Richmond however did not seem at all impressed with his irritability, and said, when they were alone—

"Now, Lucy, I mean you to have half of this, at any rate; if you don't take it, you will really make me most uncomfortable."

Lucy, seeing she was quite in earnest, and feeling a little piqued with Edgar, needed no further persuasion; and they shared the tumblerful together, and then said good-night.

On the following morning, when Lucy came down a little later than usual, she was astonished to find Mrs. Richmond seated at the breakfast table, decidedly a degree better.

"Why, my dear Lucy, how ill you look! What is the matter?"

"I don't know, I am sure: I did not sleep at all until about six o'clock this morning, and my head was so hot I did not know what to do with myself. It is so curious, because I have never had a bad night in my life before. This morning I fancy I must feel just like men do when they have taken too much to drink over night—dull and cold and heavy."

"How strange!' exclaimed Mrs. Richmond. "You describe my usual sensations exactly, only, oddly enough, this morning I am comparatively free from them. I should think something must have disagreed with you."

"Perhaps it was the effervescing drink?" suggested Lucy incautiously.

Edgar had been deeply immersed in letters, and had not spoken, except to say good-morning; but at this he put his papers down suddenly, and said, in a harsh voice—

"What effervescing drink?"

"Ah, you have let the cat out of the bag, Lucy!"

"What do you mean? Don't talk riddles!" he insisted his face growing pale.

"Dear Edgar there is nothing to annoy you in the matter; Lucy had half my drink last night, that was all. I insisted upon it."

"I am surprised you should have done so," he went on angrily, "when you knew I made it expressly for you, and meant you to drink it. You must have done it on purpose to irritate me."

"Oh, Edgar, how can you say such unkind things? I would not vex you for the world," said his wife showing a strong disposition to cry.

"Ah, well, dear, I spoke hastily," he said, recovering his temper; "you must both forgive me! I have had worrying letters this morning. I am afraid I shall have to go over to the Continent for a week or two, and I cannot bear the idea of leaving you until you are better, even in such good hands as Miss Lucy's. By-the-bye, that decides me—we will have the doctor to-day, and hear what he says. Unless he is reassuring, I shall not go, although I really ought to do so, for my manager has been letting my business over there get into a very queer state. What do you say to driving over to Lulmouth and calling on Dr. Maurice? I hear he is a new man in these parts, and a very clever fellow."

"Don't you think that is decidedly the best thing to do?" said Lucy, appealingly, to Mrs. Richmond.

"Yes, perhaps it is; but I would prefer that he came to to see me here; so do you go with Edgar; and, as I feel a little better this morning, I will go down and have a chat with Mrs. Mitchell, the housekeeper. If I had not reliable servants, I don't know what would have become of us, as I have not been able to look after anything. There is not one of mine however that I cannot trust implicitly. I have known the younger ones since they were children, and all of them were brought up on my father's estate; I believe they are really sincerely attached to me."

Directly the horses could be put to, Lucy and Edgar started; and the brisk invigorating breeze soon dispelled all her uncomfortable sensations. They had to wait a few minutes in Doctor Maurice's little drawing room, the servant telling them he was busy among his poorer patients.

"He attends to them every morning, gratis, for two hours, sir, and he never allows himself to be called away, except for an accident or serious case of illness. He will have finished in five minutes, though; and perhaps you and the young lady will sit down and look at the newspaper until he comes."

"He must be an odd, independent sort of fellow, to run the risk of losing good new patients while he attends to a lot of paupers!" remarked Edgar, when the girl had left them.

"Yes, it certainly is unusual; but it sounds as if he might be a thoroughly nice man; I feel sure I shall like him; and his room is delightful, isn't it? Everything is so refined and pretty. I wonder whether he is married?' speculated Lucy. "You would fancy a woman's hand had been at work here, wouldn't you!" she continued, walking about. "Ah, here are all Caldecott's books! I am so fond of them; are not you?"

"No, I cannot say I see anything to make a fuss about, in them. Some of his horses are well drawn; but his dogs are horrid mongrels."

"But that is just the pleasure of them," argued Lucy; "they are all so beautifully ugly."

"Well, I do not believe you would find any one who really understood the points of a horse or dog care for them," said Edgar conclusively. He certainly had no sense of humor.

They were in the midst of this discussion when Doctor Maurice walked in. He was a gentlemanly, fair, clever-looking young man, not at all learnedly professional in aspect. He apologized politely for keeping them waiting, and inquired in what way he could serve them. After hearing something of the nature of the case, he promised to be at Fernhurst early in the afternoon; and Edgar and Lucy took their leave.

"What do you think of him?" asked Edgar. "Not a particularly impressive-looking person, is he?"

"I don't know about that," replied Lucy. "I think he is decidedly handsome, and there is something about his manner that inspires me with great confidence."

"Upon my word, Miss Lucy, you seem to be rather fetched by our young friend!" said Edgar, laughing.

"Oh, dear no, nothing of the sort!" protested Lucy, with unnecessary eagerness, feeling in her dismay that she was blushing in a most suspicious manner.

Edgar only chuckled in response; and they hardly broke the silence again during their drive home.

Directly they finished their lunch, Doctor Maurice was announced, and Richmond and Lucy left him with his patient. In about a quarter of an hour he re-admitted them.

"Well, doctor, what do you think you will be able to do for my wife?' inquired Edgar anxiously.

"Everything, I hope," he answered, smiling kindly. 'Mrs. Richmond is suffering from a severe attack of nervous indigestion—not at all an uncommon complaint—and I quite expect in a week or two she will be all right again. I will write a prescription, and I have been giving your wife some directions about diet. In the first place, she must not have any more iced effervescing drinks; I believe really and truly they are responsible for most of the mischief in this case."

"How responsible—what do you mean?" asked Edgar in a low constrained voice.

His tone was so peculiar that it attracted Lucy's attention; she was again astonished to see his face agitated and pale. "How strangely sensitive he is on this subject!" she thought. "What can be the meaning of it?"

A slight expression of surprise at this impolite manner appeared on Doctor Maurice's face, and he continued in a more dictatorial style—

'I mean that in any case where there is a disposition to a flow of blood to the head, often a symptom of nervous dyspepsia, it is unadvisable to take any iced beverages, as they distinctly increase the tendency. I think they are unwholesome things at any time, but more especially so at night; altogether, your wife's taking them has been a gigantic mistake."

"But surely a very natural one?" muttered Edgar sulkily.

"Oh, yes, natural enough!" rejoined the Doctor. "It is astonishing how ignorant the most highly-educated people are of the simplest rules of medicine."

"But my husband does know something of medicine," put in Mrs. Richmond, anxious to restore Edgar's equanimity. "He studied for the profession when he was quite a young man."

"Well, my dear, I don't thing you need mention that now; it only makes me appear a greater fool."

"Dear me," thought the Doctor, "he does not seem quite so devoted and tender as I heard he was!" With considerable tact, he took no notice of Edgar's ill-humor and went on—"I should advise your having a little claret with your lunch and dinner, and a small quantity of brandy and water the last thing before settling to sleep. Take the spirit up to your room with you. In case you should still feel no disposition to sleep and be troubled with any of the fanciful excited feelings you mention, in about three hours you may take a further wineglassful of spirit and water. In these obstinate cases of sleeplessness a little stimulant is almost necessary to prevent the wear and tear of strength. I hope and think however," he went on cheerfully, "that the change of diet and my medicine will very quickly restore you to health."

(To be continued.)

Because a man happened to be possessed of "a constitution of a horse," it by no means follows that his physician is justified in treating him like an ass.

LAUGHLETS.

A railroad strike—A collision.

Hailing cabs is a common thing when it is raining pitchforks.

The English policy in Egypt—Rule prophets and quick returns.

A chancery court is one in which justice has an even chance.

Yes, Elfrida, all things must fade, except the railroad fare, which must be paid.

Joking on facts will frequently put closer friends than beer and French mustard.

"What is the dollar of the daddies?" asks some one. It is, briefly, what the dudes exist on.

No man who possesses any legal attainments will ever "take the Will, for the Deed."

We propose that the phrase "money no object" be amended to read "money no objection."

A poet sings: "The jocund spring is here." Yes; we never saw a more jocund spring than this is.

Degrees of comparison in marrying for money: Positive, Cupid; comparative, stupid; superlative, cupidity.

Why is it so difficult for a professional beggar to seek some more reputable livelihood? Because he's a mendicant.

"Only a match box," remarked Fogg at the theatre the other night, referring to the seats where the young lovers sat.

The following is a somewhat equivocal testimonial to the virtues of a patent medicine: "This is to certify that I have taken two bottles of Dr. Blank's blank mixture, and find it all I desire."

True diplomacy is the art of hiding your money where your wife cannot find it, and then to lie in bed pretending to be asleep as you watch her go through your clothes in an unproductive hunt.

According to a florist's magazine, "Jacks are becoming cheap." This may be true, but we know men who would have been willing to pay $10 for one to put with the two already in their hands.

"Sir," said an exasperated Irish judge to a witness who refused to answer the questions put to him—"Sir, this is a contempt of court!" "I know it, my lord, but I was endeavoring to conceal it," was the irresistible reply.

Ducks are said to have colder feet than any other animal. We little thought when we were courting our present wife and slinging such taffy as "ducksy darling" at her that our figure of speech would prove such a stern, cold reality.

A Brooklyn man said to his Presbyterian pastor. "I am going to the Methodist church after this." "Ah, and why so?" asked the minister. "Well, if you don't get your shoes made at my shop I won't get my preaching done at yours."

Little Bertha was presented with a parasol, which pleased her so much that she exclaimed: "Oh, I will carry it all my life!" "What will you do with it the day that you are married?" "I will give it to my children," unhesitatingly replied Bertha.

Humors of War.

It is one of the contrasts of war that no matter how serious the surrounding circumstances, the bravest of the soldiers will fire off their jokes. During a battle before Richmond, a regiment was ordered to charge a battery which was doing fearful execution. The colonel swung his sword and shouted,—

"Men, we are ordered to take that battery, and we must do it!"

"S-s say, c-c-colonel," stammered a sergeant, "w-wouldn't it b-be a g-g-good plan to t-t-take up a c-c-collection and b-buy the pesky thing? I'll p-p-pay my share."

The men burst into peals of laughter, and it was with difficulty that the colonel could so control himself as to shout, "Forward! march! charge!" and the funny sergeant was one of the first in the charge that followed.

One day, during a furious cannonade, a solid shot tore a large hole in the ground near where a regiment of infantry were lying down.

"Lightning never strikes twice in the same place!" shouted a soldier, as he sprang into the hole. In a moment another shot, striking the ground a few feet in advance, covered him with dirt.

"But it comes very near it!" he added as he scrambled back to his place in the ranks.

At Gettysburg, Gen. Lee stood on Seminary Ridge to watch the result of Pickett's famous charge. A little to his left center Longstreet's veterans was leaning over a broken wheel of a gun carriage, chewing tobacco. As Lee saw the brave Virginians rise above the Federal breast-works his face flushed with pride. A moment later he saw them swept back and knew that the charge had failed. He turned pale, and the veteran, anxious to console with his beloved chief, looked up into his face and drawled out,—

"General, we've bit off more'n we can chaw!"

At the battle of Fredericksburg a Dutch colonel led a company of skirmishers, and captured a large brick house in which sharp-shooters had taken refuge. Describing the capture, he said:

"I leads my men aroundt de corner, orders dem to sharge dot 'ouse, but dey shust proke und rundt away like mad scheep.

"I formt dem against, und said, 'Boys, dooks dot 'ouse'. But dey rundts vorse more like some scheep.

"Vonce more I finds dem, und I says, 'I plows out your brains 'less you charge dot 'ouse!' Vad dey schust rundt out de street and into dot 'ouse like fun, I tells you!"

LAUGHLETS.

...d strike—A collision.
...cabs is a common thing wh...
...pitchforks.
...glish policy in Egypt—...
...d quick returns.
...ry court is one in which ju...
...even chance.
...rida, all things must fade. A...
...railroad fare, which must b...
...n facts will frequently p...
...ds than beer and French ma...
...s the dollar of the daddies...
...one. It is, briefly, what th...
...on.
...who possesses any legal attain...
...ever "take the Will, for th...
...ose that the phrase "money ...
...amended to read "money ...
...ings: "The jocund spring ...
...; we never saw a more joakin'...
...this is.
...of comparison in marrying fo...
...ositive, Cupid; comparative,...
...perlative, cupidity.
...so difficult for a professional...
...ek some more reputable live...
...Because he's a mendicant.
...match box," remarked Fogg...
...re the other night, referring...
...where the young lovers sat.
...wing is a somewhat equivocal...
...to the virtues of a patent...
..."This is to certify that I have...
...bottles of Dr. Blank's blank...
...d find it all I desire."
...lomacy is the art of hiding...
...where your wife cannot find...
...to lie in bed pretending to...
...you watch her go through...
...s in an unproductive hunt.
...g to a florist's magazine:...
...becoming cheap." This may...
...we know men who would...
...willing to pay $10 for one to...
...e two already in their hands.
...id an exasperated Irish judge...
...s who refused to answer the...
...at to him—"Sir, this is a con...
...urt!" "I know it, my lord,...
...ndeavoring to conceal it," was...
...ble reply.
...e said to have colder feet than...
...animal. We little thought...
...re courting our present wife...
...g such taffy as "duckey dar-...
...r that our figure of speech...
...e such a stern, cold reality.
...yn man said to his Presby-...
...or. "I am going to the Meth-...
...h after this." "Ah, and why...
...the minister. "Well, if you...
...our shoes made at my shop,...
...my preaching done at yours."
...ertha was presented with a...
...ich pleased her so much that...
...ned: "Oh, I will carry it all...
..."What will you do with it...
...at you are married?" "I will...
...my children," unhesitatingly re-...

Humors of War.

...of the contrasts of war that,...
...serious the surrounding cir-...
...s, the bravest of the soldiers...
...their jokes. During a battle...
...hmond, a regiment was ordered...
...battery which was doing fear-...
...on. The colonel swung his...
...shouted,—
..."We are ordered to take that bat-...
...we must do it!"
...c-c-colonel," stammered a ser-...
...wouldn't it b-be a g-g-good p-...
...take up a c-c-collection and b-buy...
...ing? I'll p-p-pay my share."
...burst into peals of laughter...
...with difficulty that the colonel...
...ntrol himself as to shout...
..."march! charge!" and the...
...ant was one of the first in the...
...followed.
...during a furious cannonade,...
...ore a large hole in the ground...
...a regiment of infantry were ly-...
..."...ng never strikes twice in the...
...shouted a soldier, as he...
...the hole. In a moment...
..., striking the ground a few feet...
...covered him with dirt.
..."...comes very near it!" he added...
...oled back to his place in the...
...sburg, Gen. Lee stood on ...
...to watch the result of Pickett's...
...ge. A little to his left one...
...veterans was leaning over the...
...el of a gun carriage, chew-...
...As Lee saw the brave Virgin-...
...ove the Federal breast-works...
...shed with pride. A moment...
...them swept back and knew...
...harge had failed. He turned...
...he veteran, anxious to condole...
...oved chief, looked up into his...
...awled out,—
..."..., we've bit off more'n we ..."
...ttle of Fredericksburg a D...
...a company of skirmishers...
...large brick house in wh...
...ers had taken refuge. ...
...capture, he said:
..."...my men aroundt de corner, ...
...to sharge dot 'ouse, but ...
...e und rundt away like ...
...dem againt, und said, ...
...ouse'. But dey rundts ...
...me scheep.
...more I finds dem, und I say, ...
...our brains 'less you charge ...
...d dey schust rundt ...
...nto dot 'ouse like fun, I..."

The Blacksmith's Story.

Well, no! My wife ain't dead, sir, but I've lost her all the same;
She left me voluntarily, and neither was to blame.
It's rather a queer story, and I think you will agree—
When you hear the circumstances—'twas rather rough on me.

She was a soldier's widow. He was killed at Malvern Hill;
And when I married her, she seemed to sorrow for him still;
But I brought her here to Kansas, and I never want to see
A better wife than Mary was, for five bright years to me!

The change of scene brought cheerfulness, and soon a rosy glow
Of happiness warmed Mary's cheeks and melted all the snow.
I think she loved me some—I'm bound to think that of her, sir,
And as for me—I can't begin to tell how I loved her!

Three years ago the baby came, our humble home to bless;
And then I reckon I was nigh to perfect happiness;
'Twas hers—'twas mine—; but I've no language to explain to you How that little girl's weak fingers our hearts together drew!

Once we watched it through a fever, and with each gasping breath,
Dumb with an awful, wordless woe, we waited, for its death;
And though I'm not a pious man, our souls together there
For Him to spare our darling, went up in a voiceless prayer.

And when the doctor said 'twould live, our joy what words could tell?
Clasped in each other's arms, our grateful tears together fell
Sometimes, you see, the shadows fell across our little nest,
But it only made the sunshine seem a doubly welcome guest.

Work came to me in plenty, and I kept the anvil ringing,
Early and late you'd find me there a hammering and singing;
Love nerved my arm to labor, and moved my tongue to song,
And though my singing wasn't sweet, it was almighty strong!

One day a one armed stranger stopped to have me nail a shoe,
And while I was at work we passed a compliment or two
I asked him how he lost his arm. He said 'twas shot away
At Malvern Hill. "At Malvern Hill! Did you know Robert May?"

"That's me!" said he. "You, you!" I gasped, choking with horrid doubt;
"If you're a man, just follow me; we'll try this mystery out."
With dizzy steps I led him to Mary. God! 'Twas true!
Then the bitterest pangs of misery unspeakable, I knew.

Frozen with deadly horror, she stared with eyes of stone,
And from her quivering lips there broke one wild despairing moan.
'Twas he! the husband of her youth, now risen from the dead,
But all too late—and with that bitter cry her senses fled.

What could be done? He was reported dead. On his return
He strove in vain some tidings of his absent wife to learn,
'Twas well that he was innocent! Else I'd have killed him too,
So dead he never would have riz, till Gabriel's trumpet blew!

It was agreed that Mary between us should decide,
And each by her decision would sacredly abide.
No sinner at the judgment-seat waiting eternal doom
E'd suffer what I did, while waiting sentence in that room.

Rigid and breathless there we stood, with nerves as tense as steel,
While Mary's eyes sought each white face, in piteous appeal.
God! Could not woman's duty be less hardly reconciled Between her lawful husband and the father of her child?

How my heart was chilled to ice when she knelt down and said,
"Forgive me, John! He is my husband! Here! Alive! not dead!"
I raised her tenderly, and tried to tell her she was right,
But somehow in my aching breast the prisoned words stuck tight!

"But, John, I can't leave baby"— "What! Wife and child!" cried I;
"Must I yield all! Ah, cruel! Better that I should die.
Think of the long, sad, lonely hours waiting in gloom for me—
No wife to cheer me with her love—no babe to climb my knee!

And yet—you are her mother, and the sacred mother-love
Is still the purest, tenderest tie that Heaven ever wove.
Take her, but promise, Mary—for that will bring no shame—
My little girl shall bear, and learn to lisp her father's name!"

It may be in the life to come, I'll meet my child and wife:
But yonder, by my cottage gate, we parted for this life;
One long hand-clasp from Mary, and my dream of love was done!
One long embrace from baby, and my happiness was gone!

The Soudan Butcher Bill.

The wear and tear of human life—not counting Arabs or Egyptians, for that does not cause much trouble to the average Britain—from the date of the English occupation of the Soudan, July, 1882, to March, 1884, has been very great. From other causes than wounds, 776 British troops, 65 sailors and 6 of the Indian soldiers died. There were also invalided home 3,930 soldiers, 417 sailors, 49 East Indians. The total killed were 205 soldiers, 49 sailors, and 5 Indians. The bombardment of Alexandria cost 5 killed and 27 wounded; battle of Kassassin, 16 killed and 152 wounded; Tel-el-Kebir, 57 killed and 387 wounded; at El Teb, 30 killed and 155 wounded; Tamasi, 107 killed and 116 wounded.

This butcher's bill needs extension by adding the cost of the fights at Kerbekan, Abou Klea, Gabut, and the trip to and from Khartoum, and the recent fights under Gens Graham and McNeill, thus adding 250 to the list of killed and 700 wounded; and if the invalided are in like proportion to the figures given above, 1,500 at least must have been sent home as unfit for duty. The havoc made by disease is especially noticeable, and the whole list will be a powerful argument for getting out of the country as fast as possible.

A girl may be a good violin player and not be able to draw a beau.

THE MOST POWERFUL PRINCE IN PERSIA.

Character and Daily Life of the Favorite Son of the Shah.

The Zil-es-Sultan is the eldest son of the King's first love. His Majesty first saw the Prince's mother, a lovely village girl, washing clothes at the side of a stream. Be this as it may, she was of the bas peuple; and the Khan Di (the maternal uncle of his Royal Highness and his Master of Horse, or lord of the manger), recalls, by his rude manners and boorish speech the lowness of the Prince's extraction on the mother's side. But for his birth, the Zil-es-Sultan would ere this have been acknowledged as the Shah's successor. But to be of royal blood on both sides of the house has long been a necessary qualification in the heir to the Persian throne. Still, the reigning monarch generally contrives to leave his kingdom to his favorite son if capable of ruling. That the eldest son of the Shah by a royal princess is a weak-minded nonentity is known to all the subjects of the "King of Kings;" and the Shah will probably take the initiative in declaring the Zil-es-Sultan his successor. The young man himself openly says that he means to succeed his father, and the Shah does not reprove him for saying so.

The room is purposely darkened. There sits the Prince, supported by cushions on a mattress. He is evidently out of sorts; his hakimbashi is feeling his pulse. The Governor of Yezd, formerly his favorite personal attendant, is kneading one knee, the Governor of Bonat is gently rubbing the other. Two attendants are softly pommelling the princely feet, while the chief barber, an important personage, is carefully and scientifically shampooing the back of his neck. Mirza Reza, the Prince's confidential valet, a man who has been Governor of Fussa under his Royal Highness, is reading poetry.

Evidently the Prince is in pain. "Rub, rub," he cries, "ye sons of unspeakable mothers!" "Ah!" with a sigh of relief, "that is good—that is very good!" The chief barber, whose clever shampooing has earned this praise, smiles with pleasure. "Mirza Reza, Mirza Reza Khan!" This is shouted, and the confidential valet stops his monotonous poetry. "Let our chief barber have our fur-lined cloak, the red one." The delighted barber, who is to receive a gift worth thirty pounds, stops to thank the Prince. "Rub, rascal rub!" is the reply.

"May I be your sacrifice, it is my petition, the petition of your slave, that his Excellency the Imam-i-Juma desires the privilege of presenting his salaams," whispers one of the royal attendants, entering the room bowing to the ground, his hands placed upon his knees. "Bismillah! let him come," is the reply. The Prince rises. He is an athletic young man of considerable muscular power, inclined to breadth rather than height, of middle stature, with small hands and feet, of which he is very proud, black curly hair, a fair complexion, a jetty moustache, and a voice exactly like that of the Shah. Mirza Reza hands him his newly fashioned hat of finest cloth. The prince, who affects to lead the ever-changing fashions of Persia, hurriedly buttons his inner paletot of pale blue moire antique, embroidered with tasteful but rather florid designs in gold and colors. He wears an English shirt. He clasps the great circular buckle of diamonds—it is four inches in diameter—which fastens a plain black leather belt around his waist, and then slips into a yellow overcoat of cashmere shawl, lined throughout and trimmed with sable fur. Black trousers with a gold-lace stripe, made in London, complete the sufficiently grand and becoming costume worn by the Governor of the largest portion of Persia. He is at the present moment 33 years of age.

Let us follow him as he passes into the summer room of state audience. This ancient room is probably unique. In the centre is a large tank of running water, three feet deep; from this tank rise stone columns, their basis composed of nude figures about four feet high. Each of the figures spouts from its mouth a tiny stream; all around the tank are various jets, which also add to the noise of falling water. Little light comes in through the colored glass windows and their curtains. Into and over the tank projects a stone bed or throne some three feet over the surface of the water.

Here, when Ispahan was the capital of Persia, was the royal audience chamber of the Shahs. Cool certainly, and picturesque; but, in a country where ague is rife, the man who occupies a damp room cannot be wise. The Zil-es-Sultan is no fool; and he passes on through this extraordinary chamber into a large well-lighted apartment, the walls and ceilings of which are elaborately painted and gilded. The intricately constructed windows of colored glass are raised, a large and empty courtyard is seen beyond them, and just in front of the window is a huge raised hauz of stone, the fountains in which are spouting freely. The Imam-i-Juma, as he enters, is invited to a seat close to his Royal Highness, on his own royal carpet, which is about seven feet by three wide, and is spread on a thin mattress over the luxurious felts, three inches thick, that serve as frame to the magnificent carpet.

As the Prince sits at the open window the head carpet spreader, the chief of the police, enters the courtyard with the two robbers and their guard. Addressing one of them, the Prince says in a loud and angry tone: "Ah! son of a dog, so you, too, levy taxes on my father's subjects?" "May I be your Highness's sacrifice, it isn't my fault," mutters the criminal. The Prince turns to the Imam-i-Juma, a tall descendant of the Prophet in a black turban, and details the crimes of the robber. The high priest nods: "Yes, yes; may I be your sacrifice, he is indeed a merciless one!" "So I think," replies the Prince. "Take him away!" And the Prince whispers something into the ear of the farrash bashi, who is standing close to the open window. "As for you"—the other prisoner bows to the ground—"you are an ass, the father of all asses. You, rascal, may thank our mercy; you are dismissed." The farrash-bashi retires with his prisoners. Their irons are removed. The one walks off a free man; a sullen booming report in a few minutes announces the blowing from a gun of the other.

The Imam-i-Juma takes his leave. The Prince yawns, carelessly saying: "The one dog has gone at last; bring the other four." No sooner said than done. Two fine Dutch mastiffs of tawny hue are led into the courtyard, as well as two small three-quarter-bred bulldogs. They are loosed at the Prince's order, and career wildly about the courtyard. The Prince feeds them with sugar, as he breakfasts in solitary state. Unlike most Persians, he does not smoke. Then he plays perhaps game or two of chess, of which he is very fond—a good player, too, though etiquette, of course, does not allow him to be beaten. Then he sallies forth to ride, and, once in the saddle, the Zil-es-Sultan is happy. He rides wildly but well. He shouts, he smiles, he is in the best of tempers. Perhaps he diamounts to shoot at a mark. Being a fine shot, he is fond of displaying his prowess; he will break bottles, he will hit oranges, eggs, and halfpence flying; he seldom even misses a keran, a silver coin a little bigger than a sixpence, when flung into the air, and all with a bullet from a fowling-piece.

The days of his youth are over—the wild youth of a favored Eastern Prince. Married to the wealthy daughter of a former Prime Minister of Persia (who was strangled by order of the present Shah), the Prince was left a widower about five years ago. His son, the Jalalu-Dowleh, is a promising youth of 15, and the nominal Governor of Shiraz under his father. The Prince has several daughters. He dines about 8, still alone, and at 9 generally retires to his harem, where we cannot follow him even with our invisible cap.

A Governor of vast provinces from his cradle, firm and sometimes, perhaps, unscrupulous, a hard but just master, wily as a Governor in Persia has need to be, unprejudiced, unfanatical, generous, with many virtues and few foibles, such is the Shah's favorite son.

A member of the Zoological Society says: "I once had a cat who always sat up to the dinner-table with me, and had his napkin round his neck, and his plate and some fish. He used his paw, of course, but he was very particular, and behaved with extraordinary decorum. When he had finished his fish I sometimes gave him a piece of mine. One day he was not to be found when the dinner-bell rang, so we commenced without him. Just as the plates were put round for the entree, puss came running upstairs and sprang into his chair, with two mice in his mouth. Before he could be stopped he dropped a mouse on his own plate, and then one on mine. He divided his dinner with me, as I had divided mine with him."

How to Manage a Man.

Nothing on earth fetches a man like a good dinner and a well-dressed wife presiding, says a lady contributor to a San Francisco paper. The husband who can look forward to such a state of things every day of his life will never tire of his home, and the wife who studies his comfort will have but little difficulty in managing him according to her will. Men are gregarious animals, and will wander in spite of all allurements, but they are selfish enough to remain where they are the best treated, and by taking a little trouble for a year or two of married life the years that follow will, as a rule, find the husband always glad to go back to the pretty home where smiles and the dinner I spoke of await him. There are so many women who object to being "bossed," as they call it. My dear ladies, you can always boss if you take the trouble. By giving in you get your own way as you never would by fighting for it. And, after all, it is better to feel you respect your husband so much that to give in to him is not a difficulty. Nine men out of ten are manageable if you go the right way about it, and one great point is to act after marriage just as you did before. Argument and contradiction are vital enemies to married peace. Should you wish for anything particularly, don't insist upon it after refusal. Some women are persistent, and ask: "Why may I not? Why won't you do as I ask you?" and irritate the man. Rather bide your time, and make an extra good dinner of his favorite dishes, put on a bow of the color he likes, make home and yourself sweeter than ever. You will get it sure, even if you have to wait. Also, when you want him to do any particular thing which you know will be for his good, for heaven's sake do not say "Do it." Rather drop a hint that you think so and so would be a good thing to do. Get him interested and then let the subject drop. I venture to say that in a short time that man will do precisely as you wished; he will never permit you to think that he has traded the least on your common sense.

The cloud which darkens a maiden's brow is often no larger than a man's hand.

The New York Tribune says: "Mr. Cox possesses elegant scholarship." What would America do without the word elegant?

"What is an epistle?" asked a Sunday school teacher of her class. "The wife of an apostle," replied a young hopeful.

Progress in Electricity.

Of all the forces of nature, electricity is to-day playing the most striking and important part in the material advancement of the race.

In telling what electricity has done in the past fifty years, the inventor Edison says in a recent article, "It has strengthened the bond of international amity; it has quickened all the methods of trade, and lent ten-fold precision and celerity to the innumerable agencies by which it works.

"It has breathed new vitality into the arts and sciences; it has even warmed and strengthened the social forces, and has been such a universal stimulus as cannot be credited to any other purely physical agency in the world's history."

Edison goes on to show how electricity, mainly in the telegraph and the telephone has effected these results. The system of telegraphy is a far more perfect and efficient one to-day than it was even ten years ago.

Then but one message could be sent over the same wire at the same time. Now, thanks to Edison's invention of the quadruplex system, four messages may be sent simultaneously over the same wire and in opposite directions.

Telegraphy, moreover, has within recent years, been extended in its uses in many ways. The telegraph has been laid beneath the oceans, and now encircles the earth; it is utilized for local business in the cities; it has been brought into domestic service, so in the cities one may at any time summon doctor, marketman fireman, or policeman.

While the telephone is yet in its infancy, it has yet already become a first necessity to the people, both for business and for private purposes There is now no city or large town in the country without its telephone station.

The newest and one of the greatest triumphs of electricity is electric lighting.

The arc light has come into very familiar use in the illumination of open spaces, streets and large buildings; while the incandescent light is gradually being adopted for domestic lighting in many parts of the country.

Besides these uses, electricity has recently come to be employed in electro-plating, electrotyping, in houses for call-bells, protection from burglars, connecting clocks, lighting jets, and many other purposes. But the promise of what electricity is destined to achieve in the future, outstrips even what it has done in the past. In regard to this subtle agency of nature, Edison declares that "we stand to-day only on the threshold of its tremendous probabilities."

In telegraphy he believes that a large number of messages will be sent over a wire at the same time; and that messages will be so sent that the handwriting itself of the sender will be transmitted. The telegraph printing machines will be improved to greater rapidity of action and submarine telegraphy will be brought to a higher efficiency.

The telephone is also destined to be much more highly developed than it is today. The difficulty of telephoning to a great distance remains to be overcome. This arises from "the loss of the current by static induction on the earth and wires in close proximity." If a single wire could be placed so high as to clear all the mountain tops, one could hear a whisper around the world.

But the time is near when the telephone will transmit the voice perfectly clearly for a distance of three hundred miles; and by means of repeating stations, messages will be sent by voice to all parts of the country.

Electric lighting, too, is certain, according to Edison, to be brought to a far greater efficiency in the near future. Electricity can be used safely and economically in lighting; and it can, like gas, be measured and sold by means of metres. It can also be used in houses for driving fans, for running sewing machines, for pumping water, for working dumb waiters and elevators, and for cooling purposes.

The future of electric power, indeed, is not to be measured in its possible varieties and importance. It seems as if the twentieth century would find it the most potent univeral physical agency in operation on the earth.

Oriental Loafers.

The Oriental has the art of loafing down to a very fine point. If I were asked to describe an Arab or a Turk of Damascus (for as we get nearer the Bosphorus, moving north, the Turkish element becomes more and more manifest over the Arabian), I should ask you to picture to yourself a cotton-striped robe reaching to his heels, and a red fez or a turban, squat by the brink of running water. There, hour after hour, men sit on their haunches and let the hours slip by; all days are the same. The women are frequently seen encamped by the water's edge, hidden behind their veils, and you do not at all know whether they are conducting a flirtation with some distant patriarch or saying their prayers.

A Natural Mistake.

A correspondent sends the following account of a mistake made by a little girl in his vicinity: She always joins the family in reading the scriptures during the family devotions, taking her verse in turn. She easily reads the shorter words, but needs some help about the longer, but is always eager to pronounce all the words herself, and sometimes guesses. Recently it came her turn to read the verse, "No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye can not serve God and Mammon." She made a slight variation at the end, and finished the verse, "Ye can not serve God and woman."

The Road Motor is the Coming Wonder.

We shall see next season a very general introduction of steam carriages for use upon our common roads. This thing has been attempted a great many times, but now for the first time most of the practical difficulties have been overcome, and several independent experiments, including at least one prominent bicycle company, are now at work on road motors. The steam wagons that have been made heretofore were heavy, costly, required a competent engineer to run them, could only run short distances from inability to carry sufficient fuel, and would surmount only easy grades on the best roads. Now, with the recent improved ways of combining lightness and strength which the bicycle fever has brought into use, and improvements which have been made in low-power engines and boilers, there is no great difficulty in making, for less than the cost of a fairly good horse and buggy, a steam carriage that will carry four persons over any common road at 10 miles an hour, be run by anybody who has sense enough to run a sewing machine, weight not over 400 or 600 pounds with water and fuel enough aboard for a run of 100 miles, and be run at an expense not exceeding a cent for every two miles.

In the first place, the frame will be of hollow tubing, and the wheels of the skeleton pattern you see on bicyles and tricyles, with rubber tires. The boiler will be about 2 horse-power, kerosene burning; and provided with automatic appliances for keeping itself always supplied with water to a certain height and for putting out the fire when the pressure exceeds a certain limit, and lighting it again automatically when the pressure falls again, and it will require no attention from the driver except the opening and closing of the throttle as more or less power is required. Such a boiler can now be built without difficulty, and is absolutely safe from explosion, is capable of generating 100 pounds of steam from cold water inside five minutes, and will weigh, with engine, water and oil, not over 250 pounds. The engine will be double-piston, reversible, will run at high speed, and will not communicate power directly to the driving-wheels like a locomotive, but indirectly by spur-wheels and chains, with a simple device for exchanging at a second's notice high speed with low power for low speed with high power, so as to overcome steep grades and bad spots of road. It is a matter of demonstration that such an engine can be furnished with steam sufficient to run 10 hours, by the combustion of three or four gallons of kerosene, costing less than 10 cents a gallon.

How Long Ought a Man to Sleep?

The latest authority on this vexed question, Dr. Malins, says that the proper amount of sleep to be taken by a man is eight hours. So far as regards city life the estimate is probably correct. Proverbial wisdom does not apply to modern conditions of social existence. "Five (hours) for a man, seven for a woman, and nine for pig," says one proverb; and a second, quoted by Mr. Hazlitt in his English Proverbs, declares that "Nature requires five; custom gives (? allows) seven; laziness takes nine, and wickedness eleven." These conclusions were, however, drawn from observation of country life. Physical fatigue is more easily overcome than intellectual. Which of us, when traveling in the country or abroad, or in any way separated from the ordinary processes of thought and anxiety, has not found that he could, without difficulty, do with a couple of hours less sleep than he was in the habit of taking? Men, however, who follow any intellectual pursuit are exceptionally fortunate if the processes of restoration occupy less than seven hours. More frequently they extend to eight or nine hours. Goethe owned to requiring nine. Soldiers and sailors, on the other hand, like laborers, do with much less quantity. I am afraid to say how few hours the Duke of Wellington regarded as essential. A schoolmaster under whom at one time I studied, a hard-working man at the acquisition of languages, proclaimed loudly that he never took more than five hours' sleep. The hour at which he rose in the morning gave some color to this assertion. Only in after life did I discover that a two hours' post-prandial siesta was not included in that allowance.

Quackery in India.

A correspondent thus writes: Regarding the native treatment of diseases in India, one of the most curious things I ever witnessed was a half-clad native shouting through the streets of a country town: "Does any one want back his sight?—one rupee only!" as if he were hawking fruits or sweetmeats; and, to my astonishment, a patient soon presented himself to be operated upon for cataract. There and then standing in the bazaar, the itinerant oculist took out his penknife and performed the operation in a few minutes, bound up the man's eyes, telling him to keep in the dark for a fortnight, received his fee of one rupee, and shouted his war-cry for more patients. The operation was almost unvaryingly successful; one instance among my servants being a woman of eighty, who had charge of my fowl-house, and had for many days been sightless, except to distinguish light from darkness, and who in this way was successfully operated upon.

Why should Eve be called a help-mee to Adam? The answer is simple enough Didn't she help-meet the apple?

In these days Miss Flora McFlimsey gets along very well when she has "nothing to wear." She simply wears it.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,
199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERF CT FIT GUARANTEED.

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

MARKDALE
HARNESS EMPORIUM
ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.
THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
124ly

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH
HORSE SHOEING
A SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and
DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF
THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.
Remember the stand in McNea's block.
W. H. RUTLEDGE.

A RARE CHANCE.
SAW-MILL FOR SALE.

THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4½ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill; a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.
J. A. DUNCAN,
230 tf Markdale P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres, mostly cleared and under cultivation. This farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For full particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE, Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO. NOBLE, Markdale. 234

EUGENIA
Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted
9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

For Sale by Walker Bros.

FARMERS,
Reapers & Mowers.
—USE—
McCOLL BROS.
Lardine Machine Oil.
MARKDALE.

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs.	40 lbs. Flour.
" "	61 "	39 " "
" "	60 "	38 " "
" "	59 "	37 " "
" "	58 "	36 " "
" "	57 "	35 " "

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

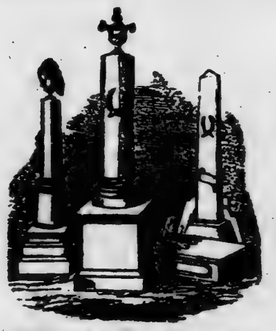
I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it, if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

ABSTRACT STATEMENT
—OF THE—
Treasurer's Receipts and Expenditure
—FOR THE—
TOWSHIP OF EUPHRASIA,
For the Year Ending 31st Dec., 1884.

RECEIPTS.



To balance on hand from 1883	$ 206 46
Assessments	10776 61½
License Fund	103 35
Clergy Reserve Fund	22 65
Drainage money from Government, nil
Land Improvement Fund, " Municipalities Fund, " County Grants, "
Grants for Schools, (Legislative)	439 00
" " (County)	420 00
Fines, Fees, etc.,	10 00
Debenture Account nil
Money Borrowed on Bills Payable and Debentures "
Non-resident Taxes from Co. Treasurer	1190 28
Union Schools, nil
Interests	405 00
Miscellaneous	17 00
	$13590 35½

EXPENDITURES.

By County Rates paid County Treasurer	$1507 72
Roads, Bridges, etc.	2174 95½
Salaries and Commision	938 00
School Sections	6035 83½
Debentures redeemed	132 75
Interest on Coupons Debentures, etc	1410 00
Sinking Fund	888 81
Sheep killed by dogs nil
Election expenses	82 40
Taxes refunded	5 00
Charities	28 15
Printing Postage and Stationery	208 71
Law Fees, etc.	89 25
Public buildings, etc nil Insurance, "
Bills payable redeemed " Drainage, "
Miscellaneous	56 48
	$ 13503 06
Baliance on hand 31st Dec., 1884	87 29½
	$13590 35½
In hands of Treasurer	87 29½
At Credit in Bank	nil

NOTE.—It will be observed that the fact that the totals of Abstract Statement exceed those of Detailed Statement, is caused by the amount of Legislative Grant, ($439) not having being entered in the Treasurer's General Accounts. It was, however, duly entered in the School Account Book.

OFFICE OF THE
Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.
All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.
Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock Blood Bitters
Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH.
TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed
Toronto....Leave	7 30am	4 40pm
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "
Charleston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45
Orangeville { Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 05
Orangeville { Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 35
Orangeville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 15
Shelburne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	1 45
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	2 10
Flesherton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	3 05
Markdale.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 05
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45
Chatsworth.....	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 15
Owen Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 55

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed
Owen Sound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30
Chatsworth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25
Williamsford....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 55
Markdale.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 05
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45
Orangeville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50
Orange { Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15
ville.. { Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 45
Charleston.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 20
Cardwell Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	1 40
Toronto.....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "

ROBT. ASKIN
MARKDALE,
Has opened out a First-Class
UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT
And therefore has supplied a want long felt
COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortest notice.
A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.
—All kinds of—
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

ROBERT S. RAE
TAILOR
Sydenham Street
MARKDALE

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS
In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon
From Lake Superior to Puget Sound
At prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $8 per acre on 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Chance for securing Good Homes now open for settlement
FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOT 16,218,432 Acres OR MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in the U.S. were in the Northern Pacific country. Books, Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific country, the Railroad Lands for sale, the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and convenience wherever tried. An assortment of Furniture, School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW M[illar]

Local and Other Items

Notices in these columns intended to call attention to any individual or Society will be charged 10 cents a line for the first insertion and 5 cents a line each subsequent insertion.

Plowing has commenced.

MR. JOHN REID was in town this week.

FARM to rent or sell, apply to Irving, Markdale.

MR. G. S. BROWN, Sr., left Markdale last week.

MR. CRANE of Owen Sound was in Markdale last week.

FOR Pine and Maple Flooring see Grant & Co., Markdale.

Kimberley council Royal Templars has a membership of 66.

Mr. R. H. Middaugh of Eugenia has gone to Owen Sound to reside.

A large quantity of timber was hauled this week at this station.

Two cows were killed by the train near Williamsford last Thursday.

GET your Fishing outfit before you start from W. A. Brown, Markdale.

A NUMBER of our exchanges have recently been indulging in personalities.

FOR Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

A DESIRABLE village lot for sale in Rocklyn. See advertisement in another paper.

MR. WILSON MATHEWS lost a cow on Monday, caused by difficult calving.

CONSTIPATIONS of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, are promptly removed by Burdock National Pills.

Don't forget Markdale Spring Entertainment Monday. There is likely to be a large turn out.

FOR Bedsteads, Cribs, Cots, Mattresses, and Spring Beds go to Grant & Co.

KEMPARA council will meet on Saturday, 28th, at Rocklyn, for the dispatch of business.

Seeds.—Field and Garden seeds of all kinds at the Medical Hall, R. Turner & Co.

ADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
WEN SOUND BRANCH.
TIME TABLE.
effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.
GOING NORTH.

TIONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed
....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
l Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
ton.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	.....
Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	11 45am
Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 30pm
ille Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	12 55 "
ne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	1 14 "
.....	11 10 "	8 30 "	2 10 "
ton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	3 05 "
le.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 06 "
sford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 33 "
orth.....	12 28 "	9 49 "	4 45 "
ound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 37 "
			6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

TIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed
ound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
orth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
sford.....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
e.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
on	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
.....	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
e	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
ille Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
n.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 20 "
Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

BT. ASKIN
ARKDALE,
as opened out a First-Class
TKING ESTABLISHMENT
ore has supplied a want long f
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
ERAL FURNISHINGS
pplied on the shortes notice.
plendid Hearse
or hire at moderate rates.
—All kinds of—
URE FRAMIN
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

BERT S. RAE
AILOR Fenham Street
RKDALE

THERN PACIFI
R. LANDS
Innssota, North Dakota, Mon-daho, Washington and Oregon ke Superior to Puget Sound ging chiefly from $2 to $6 per a ars' time. This is the Best Co
Good Homes now open for settlem
320 acres of Governm
Land Free under the Homes and Timber Culture Laws. NO
32 Acres ONE MORE TH the Public Lands disposed of in orthern Pacific country. Books
FREE, describing the Northe antry, the Railroad Lands for Sal overnment Lands. Address, CHA and Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, M CHOOL TRUSTE
signed is manufacturing cellent assortment of ool Furniture
f SCHOOL SEATS and DE S' DESKS, etc., of the most approved pattern.
ed by School Trustees and pness, comfort and compa
ied. An assortment of Fa kept always on hand.
Chatsworth P. O.
ANDREW McC

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 241. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 23, 1885. { Copies of the Standard Five cents each. }

Spring Stock COMPLETE.

54 Complete Watches.

Gold and Silver Cases, Ladies and ents sizes, Waltham, Elgin, Spring- ull and Swiss movements, 7, 9, 11 d 15 Jewelled. Close time-keepers. arrants cover all breakages, for 1 d 2 years.

32 FINE CLOCKS,

eth Thomas & other makes.

EDDING RINGS, ACID TEST.

8 oz. Coin Case, Elgin movement, ap. Bal., $12.00.
A good Swiss Watch, 15 Jewelled, ver Case, $9.50.

Advertise Actual Present Stock,

I am in a position to give better me, time or cash, than any other er in this section of Grey Co. Get ces, compare with mine, and e my statement. Long warrants to sell—very often—inferior or mon watches. I hold to the plan honest representation of every e, and give no warrants exceed- e years. Cash discount 5 per cent. ith considerable to every purch-

FFICULT WATCH REPAIRING A Specialty.
ALL WORK FULLY GUARANTEED.
W. A. BROWN,
Jeweller, - Markdale.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

Mowing has commenced.

Mr. John Reid was in town last week.

Farm to rent or sell, apply to J. G. Young, Markdale.

Mr. G. S. Brown, Sr., visited Markdale last week.

Mr. Crane of Owen Sound was in Markdale last week.

For Pine and Maple Flooring, go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

Kimberley council Royal Templars has a membership of 66.

Mr. R. H. Middaugh of Eugenia, has gone to Owen Sound to reside.

A large quantity of timber was loaded this week at this station.

Two cows were killed by the train near Williamsford last Thursday.

Get your Fishing outfit before May 1st from W. A. Brown, Markdale.

A number of our exchanges has recently been indulging in personalities.

For Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

A desirable village lot for sale in Markdale. See advertisement in this paper.

Mr. Thos. Mathews lost a cow on Monday, caused by difficulty in calving.

Obstructions of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, are promptly removed by National Pills.

Don't forget Markdale Spring Show next Monday. There is likely to be a large turn out.

For Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattresses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

Euphrasia council will meet on Saturday, 25th, at Rocklyn, for the dispatch of business.

Seeds.—Field and Garden seeds of all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

From what we can learn from farmers, fall wheat is looking fine.

Freeman's Worm Powders destroy and remove worms without injury to adult orinfant.

Parties wishing ahair cut will please call on Smith, the barber, before Saturday evening.

Farmers that have to buy their flour can get it at Benson's just the same price as at the mill.

Mr. Andrew Kirkwood of the 11th line Euphrasia, left for Deleroane, Manitoba last Tuesday.

All kinds of Candies, Biscuits, and Nuts of all discription at Benson's, only cheap Grocery in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Milne, of Meatord, celebrated their Golden wedding on the 9th inst.

Ed. Rutledge arrived from Fort William on Saturday. He will not return until the boats run.

For Dressing Cases, Bureaus, Sideboards, Cupboards, Lounges, &c., go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

A communication from Holland Centre to hand, without a signature consequently it cannot appear.

Oil Cake, unsurpassed for Horses and Cattle, for sale at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

Eggs.—Wm. McLeod, Markdale, will take in exchange for Boots and Shoes any quantity of eggs.

Mortgage sale of farm property at the Revere House, Markdale, on the 5th May. See adv. in this paper.

The Mercatile Fire Insurance Co's business is steadily increasing in this locality—R. C. Bryden is agent.

Mortgage sale of farm property at the Revere House Thornbury on the 22nd May. See advt. for particulars.

Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup—An agreeable, safe and effectual remedy to remove all kinds of worms.

A number of empty kegs and barrels suitable for holding vinegar or maple syrup, will be sold cheap at Benson's.

Rejuvenator Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of diseases from the system. Sold by Smith, the barber.

The Mt. Forest Index has again enlarged and is now as large as the average local paper. Success friend Stovel.

Sole agent for Silver Cream, best solution for cleaning, Hollow and plate Silverware. 25 cents a bottle at W. A. Brown's.

Most delightful spring weather has set in, and farmers have commenced field work. The roads will be quite dry in a few days.

The sidewalk should be extended on Mill street to the Railroad House and a crossing put in opposite Wellington street as soon as possible.

Head Quarters.—For Implements and repairs of all kinds, call on J. H. Hull, agent for Fleury's Sylvester's and Wilkinson's manufacture.

John McDuffie returned last week and is to proceed to British Columbia about the 1st May, to take a situation on the C. P. R. construction.

Rejuvenator keeps th de kidneys, liver, stomach and bloo pure and nature's channels free; then you have health. Sold by Smith, the barber.

The petition for the passage of the Scott Act in Grey have been pronounced all right, and a vote will be taken in this county on the 22nd June.

Gents, if you want a good fitting, reliable Spring Suit, go straight to Hill Bro's and give your order. Large stock to choose from, and prices right.

Rev. W. H. W. Boyle of Paris will shortly leave for a three months' vacation, which he will spend in the Old Country for the good of his health.

Ladies, remember that Hill Bro's still take the lead in Millinery, Mantles, Flowers, Feathers, &c.; latest styles; lowest prices. Do not fail to call and examine goods and prices before purchasing.

Wm. Lucas & Co. have any amount of money to loan on real estate security at 6½ per cent. Call on them before borrowing elsewhere. 238-3m

Our new designs in Envelopes and Letter Heads taking well; over 2000 of each was turned out last week. Every business man, and even farmers should have them.

"Fishing Tackle."—A full line of Baskets, Lines, Hooks, Bait Cans, Sinkers, Poles, Fly's, &c., also Sewing Machine Needles at W. A. Brown' Watch shop, Markdale.

Miss Spence, in charge of W. J. McFarland's Millinery and Mantle department, extends a cordial invitation to every lady to pay her a visit and inspect the latest styles.

A scrape will take place forthwith in Markdale in which every household er is interested; the village police inspector has said so and it must be done; hope it may be thorough.

We picked up a Dakota paper recently and counted on one page twenty mortgage sales advertised. This does not appear to be a very satisfactory state of affairs in that new country.

Horses for Sale.

Two good general purpose Horses, Particulars on application to A. Turner & Co.
240-41

James Lackey has the Berkeley Saw mill now in good trim and is prepared to supply the public with any quantity of lumber, hard or soft; a quantity of good lumber always on hand.

Timson's brewery at Williamsford station, caught fire on Sunday last. The premises were not very extensive and had to be torn down in order to save the dwelling to which it was attached.

J. R. Trimble's store is packed with nice new goods, having purchased over $3,000 worth of seasonable goods last week at 65c. on the dollar customers can rely on getting great value.

Mr. James Stinson of Euphrasia has secured a situation on one of the C. P. R. Steel Steamers as wheelsman for this season. Mr. S. has had experience at the wheel, and being a steady man of good morals, will doubtless prove an excellent hand.

Notwithstanding all the buffoonery that has been done lately about Teas, Hill Bro's have been quietly selling the Tea. It is not necessary for them to keep blowing about Tea, as a trial will convince any one, that they have, by far, the best value in town.

Farm Purchased.—James Sullivan Esq., of Glenelg has bought Lot 43, con. 3 in that township, from Mr. A. MacDonald. Mr. Sullivan is one of the most successful farmers in South Grey and no one deserves better to succeed than he does.—Chronicle.

We have secured a large stock of wood, sufficient to last a year. There was very little else to be had in lieu of subscriptions the past winter, and we expect next year that money will be so plentiful that wood will be out of the question, consequently a good supply will not be amiss.

Miss McColl wishes to intimate that she has opened her Dress and Mantle Making business in Mr. D. J. Shanahan's, near Presbyterian church, instead of McDougall's block as formerly intimated. Miss McC. comes highly recommended as a first-class Dress and Mantle maker.

The Herald, Philadelphia, aside from its literary character, which is complete and worthy of patronage, has a large space devoted to exposing bilks who defraud the people by means of decoy advertisements. The publisher is fearless in the exposure of fraud and corruption and makes it uncomfortably warm for the evil doers some of whom have endeavored to throw him off their scent by appealing to the courts, but so far he has always came off clear and will continue so to do, as he never makes a mistake and is positive a person is a bilk before he makes the charge against him.

A choice assortment of ladies and misses sunshades just opened out at J. R. Trimble's.

A senior base ball meeting will be held at the Revere Hotel on Friday evening, the 24th, at 8 o'clock.

Bring on your butter eggs and cash to J. R. Trimble's and get some of the great bargains he is offering.

The thermometer has registered from 50 to 70 in the shade the past three days; how is that for high.

Bring on your cash to J. R. Trimble's; he will sell you goods cheaper than any merchant in the county.

Mr. G. S. Brown is to leave this week for Arkansas, he takes with him a car load or more of Holstein, Jersey and Durham bred stock, also a number of Berkshire and Improved Chester white hogs.

Close Call.—On Monday last while loading square timber at Markdale station a stick of timber slipped when nearly on the car and slid back, crushing Jim Ryan under it. Had it not been for a quantity of snow at that particular place Ryan would probably have been killed on the spot; as it was he escaped without serious injury.

Bracebridge, April 17.—Mrs. Bowyer wife of H. Bowyer, saddler of this place, poisoned herself at one o'clock to-day by taking strychnine in mistake which her husband kept in a drawyer up-stairs for safety and used as a medicine for horses, he practising as a horse doctor. She died in half an hour after taking the dose.

Excellent Opening.—The ½ acre lot opposite the Town Hall, Rocklyn, upon which a very comfortable dwelling house and a convenient shoe-shop are erected, can now be bought cheap, and on easy terms of payment. It is an excellent location for a shoe-maker, blacksmith, or other tradesmen. Apply to W. H. Dodson, Rocklyn.

The Glascott parcel of our paper was delayed last week but we know not where. It was mailed on Thursday forenoon here as usual. We have a good list of intelligent subscribers at Glascott who are always anxious to receive the Standard with usual promptitude, and we are just as anxious they should not be disappointed, especially now when there is so much exciting war news.

Markdale Spring Show.—The Glenelg Agricultural Society will hold their Spring Show of Stallions and Bulls on Monday April 27th in their grounds Markdale. There will likely be a large turn out and a good exhibit. Every farmer in the district should attend, as they will have an excellent opportunity to judge for themselves the merits of the various entire horses when seen side by side. Admission to the grounds free.

The inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country will please notice that the stores will close at 7 o'clock p. m. on and after the 1st May. This has been customary for a great many years now; and while thanking the many people who are aware of the great advantage Markdale has over other places to do their business in, we would respectfully invite their attention to the above notice and make it a point to have their trading done between the hours of 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. Signed by 17 of the Clerks.

Mr. Shanahan has purchased the property on which the carriage establishment stood, which was burned in the recent fire, and if collections are satisfactory during the summer he will probably build. We trust those indebeted to Mr. Shanahan will make a determined effort to let him have his money so that he will be in a position to build, and again commence business, as he is not only a first class citizen, but a good mechanic and an enterprising business man. Should circumstances prove favorable and Mr. S. determine to erect new buildings, they will be large and substantial, and will cost from $8,000 to $4,000, so that it is plain to see why those indebted to him will require to come forward with the needful.

Mr. W. H. Rutledge, butcher, had a severe attack of inflammation of the lungs this week, but is now recovering.

A Wrinkle.—An English authority on cooking gives the following as the proper way of boiling eggs:—Put the eggs into a saucepan, cover them with boiling water and let them stand for about ten minutes where the water will keep hot, but not boiling. The proper temperature will be 180°. When they are opened the white will be of a soft jelly-like consistency, and the yolk soft, but not liquid. It will, in fact, be uniformly cooked, no part of the white appearing raw, as is ordinarily the case in soft boiled eggs, but all soft and tender, and yet coagulated.

Day School Entertainment.—The school concert which took place in Rae's hall on Wednesday evening the 15th, was the entertainment of the season. The programme consisted of Readings, Recitations, songs, glees and choruses by the children. The most enjoyable feature of the programme was the Calisthenic exercise. "Cinderella" as a dialogue was well acted and the nursery rhymes evoked applause. Both teachers and pupils deserve credit for the masterly manner in which the programme was rendered. Wm. Brown, Esq., ably filled the chair. The only talent engaged outside the school was Miss Minnie Dundas, who gave "The Painter of Seville" with much feeling, and, W. J. Benson as comic singer who received merited applause. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, and notwithstanding the children were all admitted free, and adults only charged a fee of 15 cents, the receipts amounted to $22, which will be applied to purchasing a dictionary and a bell.

Liquor Licenses.—The following is the result of the meeting of the Ontario License Commissioners, who met at the office of James Brown Esq. on Tuesday last:—Bentinck; Tavern. George Vogt, Guy Chittick, William Winkler, Wm. Reid, granted; John Johnson, laid over; Shop, Peter C. Bye, laid over until next meeting, Samuel Norsworthy, granted.

Glenelg; Tavern Wm. O'Mara, Geo. Ryan, Joseph Gibbons, granted; John McAleer, John C. Caldwell, laid over, Shop R. H. Benson, Wm. Hanbury, laid over.

Normanby; Tavern, Joseph Esbach. Mrs. A. Euler, John Himmler, George Bersche, Wm. Crawford, Carl Rahn, Ferdinand Hinsberger, Edward Taylor Harvey Noble, Henry Ringle, granted; George Klempp, wine and beer license, laid over.

Durham; Tavern, James Lyons, J. T. Heffernan, H. J. Middaugh, W. E. McAllister granted; Shop, Alex. McLachlan, Henry Parker, granted.

Egremont; Tavern, A. Kopschka, John Fitzgerald, granted.

Adjourned until Wednesday 22nd April 1885 to meet at the same place at 2 o'clock p. m.—Chronicle.

WATERLOO NEWS.

Walter Linton, Waterloo, writes that Hagyard's Yellow Oil has done great good in his family, his wife being cured of Callouse lamps that other medicines failed to remove, he also states that a neighbor was promptly relieved of Rheumatism by the same remedy.

Kimberly.

From our own Correspondent.

Fall wheat is coming out all right in this neighborhood. Quite a number are complaining of having potatoes frozen both in cellars and in pits. Hay and straw are getting very scarce.

Richard Howel is erecting a blacksmith shop in Kimberly, and James Thurston is building a large addition to his temperance house.

Revival services were held here for five weeks and much good done Epping Gospel band was in attendance and the meetings were largely attended.

Spratt & Bradly's men are waiting here for the ice to go out of the river so they can run their timber down.

FOR THE FARMER.

Practical Suggestions.

It is time to start egg, tomato, and pepper plants. If but a few are wanted a box set in a sunny window may do for a place in which to sow them ; otherwise a hotbed or greenhouse is needed. In some localities the small gardener can depend on a near-by grower for good plants, but in the majority of cases these purchased plants are neither well-grown nor of the best varieties. It is hardly advisable to throw away the certainty of having just such plants as you want by growing them yourself, for all the plants that may be offered you in the grocery, however cheap they are.

There is no such disease as hollow horn. When cattle are sick their horns are apt to be cold, but we must look elsewhere than to the horn for the disease. Indigestion is quite apt to be the cause, and this is often accompanied with loss of appetite indicated by a refusal to chew the cud. It is a popular mistake to suppose that the cud has been lost and must be replaced. We might as well talk of putting an appetite into a dyspeptic man. Exercise and careful feeding will bring cattle around all right, and men also, for that matter.

The sheep is exceedingly neat and even fastidious about its food and drink, and hence should have clean grass and clear running water. Though they use less water than other animals, often passing some days without it, it is none the less necessary for their comfort and health that it should be accessible.

It is all very well to break the colt and exercise him when 2 years old, but it will be a great mistake to put him at hard work until two years later. Fast road service is more injurious than farm work. While the muscles and bones are yet tender injuries are easily incurred which no after care will remove.

Soundness and Size.

It is very important to the farmer to breed first-class colts, if any, whether of the larger sort designed for city trucks and carts, or heavy farm work, or of moderate size for roadsters, or a gentleman's carriage. The more perfect the horse, the higher the price obtained, which may be easily twice to five times that of an ordinary colt or full-grown animal. According to all well-established principles, in order to breed good horses both parents should be as perfect as possible. However superior sire and dam may be otherwise, if any unsoundness exists they should be rejected, for this will be pretty sure to be inherited by the offspring, and crop out sooner or later after being put to service, especially that of rather a hard kind.

If the female is much smaller than the male, she cannot supply nourishment enough for the offspring, and in consequence it will grow up weak, ill-shaped, and lack endurance. For both male and female to be of nearly the same size is perhaps best on the whole, although some contend, that of the two, it is better to have the female the larger. She has more room for the growth of the fetus, and after the colt is born, she has more milk to continue its growth and nourishment, and to give superior lustiness to it. The chest, heart and lungs of such are better developed forming a superior digestion, and the whole body and limbs stronger and more perfect. The bones of the latter grow up harder, and the muscle and ligaments become of improved texture—firmer and tougher.

Collar Galls and Sweat.

Probably no one item in the long list of abuses to which the horse is subject, says the American Farmer, causes more pain to the animal and annoyance and loss to the owner than galled and sweenied shoulders, those of horses that work to the plow or draw heavy wagons.

It is no uncommon thing to see intelligent and humane farmers working them day by day with great patches of skin rubbed from their shoulders by an ill-fitting collar, the owner vainly trying to push his busy spring work and at the same time heal the refractory sores on the shoulders of his stock.

This is one of the cases where very emphatically the "ounce of prevention is better than the pound of cure ;" and, as the busy season is rapidly approaching, farmers would do well to heed a few hints from one who never has horses with galled or sweenied shoulders. In the first place, then, look to your collars and see that they are of the proper size and right kind of material even though you have to spend a few dollars for new ones to replace some which, though not worn out, humanity, as well as economy, demands tha[t] ou th ow away.

A good collar should be stuffed with curled hair, and lined with ticking, and when new should be just large enough to meet and buckle in the first holes, and when the horse has his head elevated to about the position in which you want him to carry it while at work, there should be about space enough between the collar and neck at the bottom to thrust in the fingers of one hand ; this to prevent choking when pulling hard; more space than this will allow the collar to slip up and down, and cause galls and sweeny.

In purchasing a new collar for a particular horse see that it fits as above directed. Do not take the say-so of the harness-maker or your teamster, because a collar always gets larger as it is used, and will soon become too large to be used with safety.

The hames should fit tightly in their place on the collar, with the hooks working from two to three inches above the "point" of the shoulder, according to the size of the horse and the shape of the upper part of the neck.

And now, having thus fitted collar and hames, see that they are kept so adjusted, for as the warm weather comes on the horse will lose flesh, and the collar need frequently to be taken up accordingly.

Should the collar become too large after having been made as small as possible it may be easily adjusted by placing a pad made of old cloth, carpet, sheepskin, or sack, and put it under the entire collar so that the edges may be doubled up and the hames be placed upon them to keep them in place.

A good plan, as the time draws near to put your horses to plowing, is to bathe their shoulders about twice a week with a decoction of white-oak bark, alum water, or some other astringent wash, toughen the skin ; for, no matter if the horses have been kept at work during the winter, the change to plowing will always render them liable to galls. I might add to the above that while getting well-padded collars for horses, let the farmer not forget to carefully pad the shoulders themselves with healthy flesh by liberal feeding.

A British Admiral on India.

Admiral W. T. Buxton, of the British navy, was recently interviewed in New York. On being asked about India, where he had served for many years, he said :

"India ! What shall I tell you about India ? It is a prodigious country, with a population of about two hundred and forty millions, of which immense number the valley of the Ganges alone supports ninety millions. We have about 50,000 British troops there, rather less than is required to maintain order in Paris. Then there are about 180,000 native troops, a large part of whom, however, are used for police duty."

"What is the character of the inhabitants ?"

"That is such a general question that it is difficult to answer. The population is divided into numerous tribes and religions. The people range from coal black in color to a shade about as dark as the average Spaniard. I think they are as faithful as can be expected of any conquered people, but then they are used to being conquered. From time immemorial they have been ruled by a strong hand ; in fact, that is the only way they can be ruled. Do I think that we will stay there ? Yes, unless the Russians breed such dissensions and revolutions that we will have to go. It is hard to say who or what will succeed us. The Russians will not ; that is certain. The most influential class in India are the Parsees, who originally came from Persia, and are the great merchant princes of the large cities."

"How is the climate ?"

"Deteriorating to the last degree. The English rarely 'breed' after the third generation. That is to say an Englishman and his wife settling there will have children, their children in time will have children, but these latter will either be childless, or have at the most one puny child. The Hindus themselves have physically but little endurance, which is not to be wondered at when we consider that their diet consists of rice, vegetables and salt fish. It is a crime for them to eat meat. Their bullocks and cows they use entirely for draught purposes, though when they die of old age or disease the natives will skin them and sell the hides."

"Is the native population satisfied with British rule ?"

"Yes, I think so, although the home government gives us too much government. It passes too many laws—the compulsory school attendance, for instance. Why, when a little black boy goes to school he thinks he is going to the devil. We must go slow. If no more laws respecting India were to be enacted for fifty years, the country would be better off."

Progress in Bee-Culture.

Among the recent industries of rapid growth in the United States bee-culture stands prominent, says the Popular Science Monthly. Of course, as a homely art, bee keeping is no modern industry, being as old as history, but in its scientific developments it is of recent growth. In these times, when science is properly taking its place at the helm in all departments of human industry and activity, it is not strange that it is promptly assuming the guidance of bee-culture. This is a utilitarian as well as scientific age ; and this is why bee-culture is being so rapidly developed, for its extraordinary growth is only in the ratio of its utility.

Though known to commerce for 2,500 years, hitherto it has been followed and known, in this country at least, principally as a local industry. But bee-culture, from the soundest economic considerations, ought undoubtedly to become a great national industry fostered and protected by the state. Apiculture is naturally a part of, and closely allied with, agriculture, inasmuch as the nectar gathered by the one is immediately derived from the same fields and forests that yield the abundant ingatherings of the other. Indeed the bulk of the honey crop of this country (which is in round numbers, about 100,000,000 pounds annually) comes from the bee-keeping which is in connection, more or less, with farming.

"How many of your parents, children, say grace ?" asked the Sunday-school teacher. "Please mum, what's them ?" asked an overgrown girl in a last year's hat. "Why, Maggie !" exclaimed the teacher, "is it possible you don't know what grace is ? Doesn't your father say something before you begin to eat ?" "Oh!" responded the girl with a glow of intelligence ; yes, mum, he does ; he always says, "Don't make hogs of yourselves; that's all the butter there is in the house."

Somewhat Like Pullman.

The latest experiment in the organization of industry comes from Russia, where the employees at the large engineering works belonging to the firm of Struve & Company have recently been planted in a complete settlement somewhat like Pullman City in the States. The workmen, of whom there are between 3,500 and 4,000, are all lodged in small cottages, most of which are made to accommodate two families only, while the public institutions of the colony include a refectory, a laundry, a hospital, a benefit society, a technical school, and a co-operative store. The employees contribute handsomely to the benefit society, but charity in any other form is quite unknown in the place, and the co-operative society pays a flourishing dividend. It would be curious if Russia, which is a survival of the past in its village communities of an agricultural type, were also to be a pioneer of the future in village communities of an industrial type.

It has long been established that a woman who marries a man of genius has a hard time of it. Mrs. John L. Sullivan is the latest example.

If you hit the mark you must aim a little above it.

Bad treatment of stricture often complicates the disease and makes it difficult of cure. The worst and most inveterate cases speedily yield to our new and improved methods. Pamphlet, references and terms sent for two three cent stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N Y.

One knows the value of pleasure only after he has suffered pain.

A happy combination of best Grape Brandy, Smart-Weed, Jamaica Ginger and Camphor Water, as found in Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, cures cholera morbus, diarrhœa, dysentery or bloody-flux, colic or cramps in stomach, and breaks up colds, fevers and inflammatory attacks.

As to people saying a few idle words about us, we must not mind that any more than the old church steeple minds the rooks cawing about it.

A Certain Remedy for Corns.

This is the universal testimony and expressed by everyone who has used PUTNAM'S CORN EXTRACTOR. Thousands in Canada have used it with gratifying results and if you will take the trouble to ask any druggist he will give you the names of many persons of your acquaintance who have been radically cured of the worst kind of corns. Sold everywhere. Safe, sure, painless, and vegetable in composition. Try it. It never fails. Take no substitute. Many of them are positively dangerous. Use Putnam's Corn Extractor.

The London Standard, in its article on the death of its special correspondent, Mr. Cameron, says : "He lived a hero's life and died a hero's death. He was shot while at luncheon."

Failure Impossible.

When Polson's NERVILINE is used for pain. It matters not of how long standing it may be, or how often other remedies have failed to afford relief, Nerviline, the great pain cure, does its work promptly. Buy a 10 cent sample bottle, and try it for internal and external pains. You will be convinced of its extraordinary power in relieving pain. Ten cent bottles and large bottles 25 cents, at all druggists. Take no substitute.

Field-Marshal Count Von Moltke, "The silent," is spending the spring on the Riviera.

From the beginning of its manufacture until now not a single ounce of any but pure Virginia leaf of the finest quality has been used in the "Myrtle Navy" tobacco. The manufacturers of it have a settled belief that the public cannot be misled on this point, and that any tampering with the quality of the brand would be monetary loss to them. Thousands of dollars a year saved by mixing with an inferior leaf, would not repay them for a doubt on the part of the public as to the quality of their tobacco.

General Fitzhugh Lee's call upon Mr. Cleveland was his second visit to the White House since the rebellion.

Young Men !—Read This.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRO-VOLTAIC BELT and other ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Affliction, like the iron-smith, shapes as it smites.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination ; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy, and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

"There," said the young husband as he placed the paregoric handy before going to bed, "I'm like the prudent sailor, making ready for squalls."

Is There a Cure For Consumption ?

We answer unreservedly, yes ! If the patient commences in time the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," and exercises proper care. If allowed to run its course too long all medicine is powerless to stay it. Dr. Pierce never deceives a patient by holding out a false hope for the sake of pecuniary gain. The "Golden Medical Discovery" has cured thousands of patients when nothing else seemed to avail. Your druggist has it. Send two stamps for Dr. Pierce's complete treatise on consumption with numerous testimonials. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

A. P. 224.

THOS. GALLOWAY & CO., Cotton, Woollen Silk Carpets and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, Ont.

FARMS FOR SALE, CHEAP.— All kinds.—JOHN J. DALEY, Guelph.

PURE BRED AYRSHIRES for sale; two cows, two yearling heifers and one bull. Write for description, price and pedigree to G. F. BAKER, Trafalgar.

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH How it can be accomplished—sealed particulars 3c. Sanitary Pub. Co., Canadian Depository, Toronto, Can.

AGENTS WANTED Male and female—the best thing ever offered to agents—$25 00 per week easily earned, 3c. for circular. Address P. Stevenson, room "H," Arcade, Toronto, Canada.

TO BRICK & TILE MAKERS.—If you want engines and boilers, and the latest improved brick and tile, clay-crushing and stone-separating machinery, for steam or horse power, address M. F. FREEK, or C. NORSWORTHY & Co., St. Thomas, Ont.

Files RECUT! DON'T WASTE THEM. SHIP OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FILE CO

150 Front St. east, Toronto. Agents wanted.

FOR PLEASANT SEWING
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Cotton !

Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry-Goods Dealers.

R. W. PRITTIE,
Real Estate Agent.

Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee & Financial Agent, Room C., Arcade, Yonge St Toronto, Money to loan, Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged. Manitoba and United States lands taken in part payment for city property.

Smoked Sausages.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P.O. Box 342, Montreal.

NEW CO-OPERATIVE
Sewing Machine
PRICE $25 CASH.

Our new machine is now ready, and is as good as any sold by agents at $6 .00.

SEE TESTIMONIAL :

LOWERVILLE, Dec. 17th, 1884.

Machine arrived all right, and it is certainly well worth the money you ask for it with its present improvements. I prefer it to the "Singer," "Wanzer," or any other make at $60 each. Yours truly,

AARON HAWKINS.

New Attachments, New Furniture, New Stand.

Send stamp for samples of sewing and our elegant descriptive photographs of the machine before buying from Agents.

MACHINES SENT ON TRIAL.

BONUS :—From now until March 31st, 1885 we will give to any person sending us $25.00 cash in advance for one of our machines, a handsome combination table and bracket lamp complete. These lamps are something new and the maker wants them introduced.

If you or any of your friends want a machine don't delay, but send to

Co-Operative Sewing Machine Co.

22 James St. South, Hamilton, Ont.

TREES ! TREES ! TREES !
Wolesale and Retail.

The filling of orders from dealers specially solicited. We have ample stock and facilities for billing out in large or small quantities, on short notice, a general assortment of Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Vines, Shrubs, Roses, Russian Mulberry, etc. Railroad to our grounds.

H. H. HURD & SON, Proprietors,
Halton Nurseries, Burlington, Ont.

CAUTION!
EACH PLUG OF THE
MYRTLE NAVY
IS MARKED
T. & B.
IN BRONZE LETTERS.
NONE OTHER GENUINE.

All Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

Dominion Line of Steamships

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates:

PORTLAND.

Dominion,	March 5	Toronto,
Montreal,	" 12	Montreal,
Brooklyn,	" 26

Rates of passage:—Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate, $35. Steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses, Cows, Calves, Sheep and pigs, the YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first-class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time and saves food. Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 200 Feeds.

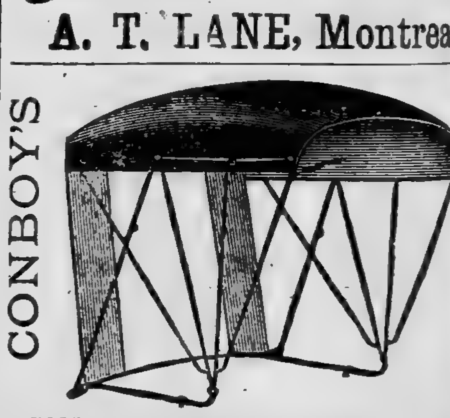
HUGH MILLER & Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,
167 King St East, Toronto.

For sale by Druggists everywhere.

LADIES
PILLS OF TANSY are Perfectly Safe and always Effectual. Sealed particulars
Wilcox Specific Medicine Co., Philadelphia.

ENGRAVERS LETTER CUTTERS
Mfrs. of HAND STAMPS Steel Alphabets kept in stock & cut to order Brass Stamps in any size & style fine RUBBER STAMPS, Type, Copper & Iron BRANDS, Stencils, SEALS, Checks &c.

TRY PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER
Pure Gold MANUFACTURING CO. 31 FRONT ST. EAST



PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.

50 2nd-hand Bicycles & Tricycles.
Send for list.
Send 3c. stamp for largest catalogue ever issued in Canada.

A. T. LANE, Montreal.

CONBOY'S

CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

STEEL, BRASS AND RUBBER
STAMPS PRESS & WAX SEALS
I. C. FELL & CO., TORONTO.

CLIMAX Lorillard's GRADE
R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Plug
bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered ?

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF

It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating, properties of beef, and the only one which has power to supply nourishment for brains, bone, and muscle.

MERIDEN
BRITANNIA
COMPANY.
FINEST Electro Plate

CAUTION

Goods stamped Meriden Silver Plate Co. are not our make. If you want reliable goods insist on getting those made by the

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,
HAMILTON, Ont.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB

If Ancestor Jinkins am in de h[all] he will please step dis way, [Bro]ther Gardner as the meeting [opened and] fourteen kerosene lamps going.

[An]cestor was in, and as soon [as he had] got his feet clear of the bench [he] sidled up the aisle and stood at "[attention"] with his toes turned in.

"Brudder Jinkins," continued [the Pres]ident, "I was told to-day dat [you] was bar'fut an' your chill'en [cryin' fur b]read."

"Well, sah, it's bin hard times."

"I suppose so. I understan' dat [you hain']t done a day's work dis winter."

"Work has bin skeerce, sah."

"Exactly. You had work in a fo[undry last f]all, didn't you ?"

"Yes, sah."

"You was gettin' ten shillings a [day, an' y]ou struck fur twelve ?"

"Yes, sah."

"An' bekase de man didn't figger [dat your] services war' worth twelve shilli[ngs, it struck] to him you frew yerself out of a st[eady job] an' hev come as nigh de poo'-h[ouse as you] kin git widout enterin de doa[h. You] orter had mo' pay, sah."

"Dat may be, but as long as [you could]n't git it you was an idiot to [throw up] de wages you could get. What [p'int hev you gained, Bru]dder [Jinkins?]"

"Well, I let the foundry-man see d[at I had] some independence."

"Sartin—sartin. You let him see [dat] at de Poo'master's office, yer chil[dren beg]gin' of de nayburs, an' a dozen cr[editors] chasin' you up wid bills."

"Hadn't a laborin' man orter hev [his price]?" demanded Brother Jinkins.

"He had. He orter hev five dollars [a day, b]ut he can't get it. He puts [his] muscle up to de highest bidd[er, an' he] mus' stan' by de bid. Brudd[er Jinki]ns, let me make a few remarks [in yer] ear. De man who pounds his thu[mb to] spite de hammer. De condishun [of trade] fixes de rate of wages. You m[ay strike,] but it will simply result in batter[ing yer] own toes. De nex' best thing to wh[at you] want is what you kin git. Bekase [you can't] get a dollar for whitewashin' a ceili[ng, don't] not gwine to frow away de fifty cen[ts. An]d. Brudder Jinkins, what am [de] price fur blackin' stoves ?"

"Two shillins, sah."

"Exactly, but suppose you get de ide[a dat y]ou orter hev thirty cents what wi[ll be de] result ?"

"Reckon I won't git any blackin' t[o do."]

"Just so, sah. Now, den, if stoves a[t twen]ty-five cents am few an' fur between [an' lo]ts doin' at tweety cents, isn't it bet[ter p]olicy to hold a steady job dan to hav[e no wo]rk at all ?"

"Reckon, sah."

"You kin take yer seat, Brudder Jin[kins.] Any principle am all right on a ful[l stom]ach. Any theory am all right if you [hev] a big woodpile at the doah. De [man] who declar's dat you orter hev [two] shillin's a day won't go hungry on [account] of your strike. We like sugar in [our c]offee, but we am idiots to frow away [de co]ffee kase we can't get de sweetnin'."

DEATH TAKES ANOTHER.

[Jud]ge Cadaver handed to the Secretary [a noti]ce of the death of Glucose Jackson, [of M]ontgomery, Ala., and offered a reso[lution] naming him as a bright star whose [remov]al from the firmament would be felt [by th]e nation.

"[De] resolushun will be laid on de [table,]" said the President as he placed it [dar.] "De late lamented was probably [a goo]d man. He was doubtless fa'rly [hones]t in a hoss-trade, an' he paid his [debts] at the rate of 100 cents on de dol[lar, b]ut he doubtless had many little in[firmit]ies as well, same as de rest of us. [Dis b]right star bizness am all bosh. We [will h]ang crape on the door-knob of de [hall] doah fur de space of ten days. An' [we w]ill try to remember all the good [of de] ob de dead, but anythin' furder [would] be hypocritical."

TELL YOU LATER.

[The] Secretary announced a communi[cation] from Liverpool, England, asking if [the Li]me-Kiln Club had ever openly fa[vored] the annexation of Canada to the [Unite]d States. If so, on what grounds ? "[We] doan' remember dat de subjick has [ever a]rose in our midst," said the Presi[dent.] "I doan' reckon dat any of us [memb]ber had de headache puzzlin' ober [the q]uestion. It might be a good thing [for Ca]nada to annex de United States. I [reckon] we am sort o' newtral on the sub[jick, b]ut if we see any particklar reason [fur it] on, why de two kentries should [get] under the same bed quilt we'll let [dem fo]lks know it."

THE LABOR PROBLEM.

[The] Chairman of the Committee on [Finan]ce and Labor made his regular [quarte]rly report. His committee had [been as]ked to investigate and report on [the la]bor problem, and it had discovered: [1.] More laborers than labor. [2.] More labor problem than cash. [The] committee had several theories on [the s]ubject, but would at present recom[mend] a law by which all capitalists would [be obl]iged to lay out their money in fac[tories,] machinery and new buildings, thus [makin']g labor a boom. When all the capi[talists] and all the money were used up [the co]mmittee would suggest some other [plan.]

[The] report was vigorously discussed [pro an]d con, and upon a vote being taken [it was] not accepted. The committee [was in]structed to investigate further and [make] a new report.

NONE HERE.

[A] communication from Halifax asked [for a] list of the socialists, communists and [nihi]lists belonging to the club, and [Broth]er Gardner looked up and down [the h]all and said :

Line Royal Mail Steamships
... during winter from Portland every ... sail ... every Saturday to Liverpool ... Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool ... to land mails and passengers ... A'so from Baltimore, via Halifax ... to Liverpool fortnightly ... steamers of the Glasgow lines ... from Halifax, Portland, Boston ... and during summer between Glasgow and ... weekly; Glasgow and Boston ... Philadelphia, fortnightly.
freight, passage, or other ... to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; ... & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's ...; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N.B. ... & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden ...; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co. ...; Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. ... Portland, Boston, Montreal.

Dominion Line of Steamships
... in connection with the Grand Trunk R... Canada. Sailing from Quebec every ... the summer months, and from Portland ... during the winter months. Sailing dates ...
PORTLAND.
...nion, March 5 | Toronto, ...
...real, " 12 | Montreal, ...
...lyn, " 26
... of passage:—Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool ... $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, ... and berth. Intermediate, $35, Steerage ... The saloons and staterooms in ... thus: are amidships, where but little ... and no cattle or sheep is carried on them ... particulars apply to any Grand Trunk ... or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

...KSHIRE CATTLE FEED...
Fattening and bringing into condition, ... Calves, Sheep and pigs, the YORKSHIRE FEEDER is used and recommended by first-class ... Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter ... in one-fourth the usual time and saves ... 5 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains ...
HUGH MILLER & Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,
167 King St East, Toronto.
... by Druggists everywhere.

LADIES
...LS OF TANSY are Perfectly Safe and always Effectual. Sealed particulars ...
...ox Specific Medicine Co., Philadelphia.

...ENGRAVERS LETTER CUTTERS
...HAND STAMPS Steel Alphabets kept in stock & cut to order Brass Stamps in any size & style fine RUBBER STAMPS, Type, Copper ... BRANDS, Stencils, SEALS, Checks &c.

...GOLD BAKING POWDER
Pure Gold MANUFACTURING CO. 31 FRONT ST. EAST

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd-hand Bicycles & Tricycles.
Send for list.
Send 3c. stamp for largest catalogue ever issued in Canada.
...T. LANE, Montreal.

...'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best in the Market. Order of ... Carriage Maker. Take no other.

... BRASS AND RUBBER ...MPS
...PRESS & WAX SEALS
...ELL & CO., TORONTO.

R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Pl...
...aring a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's ...s, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are ... purest, quality considered?

...TON'S FLUID BEEF
...reparation of the kind which ... nutritious, together with the stimulus ... of beef, and the only one which ... supply nourishment for brains, and ...

CAUTION
Goods stamped Meriden Silver Plate Co. are not our make. If you want reliable goods insist on getting those made by the MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,
HAMILTON, ONT.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"If Ancestor Jinkins am in de hall to-...ht he will please step dis way," said ...other Gardner as the meeting opened ...h fourteen kerosene lamps going at full ...t.

...Ancestor was in, and as soon as he ...ld get his feet clear of the benches he ...ddled up the aisle and stood at "atten-...n" with his toes turned in.

"Brudder Jinkins," continued the ...sident, "I was told to-day dat your ...e was bar'fut an' your chill'en cryin' ...bread."

"Well, sah, it's bin hard times."

"I suppose so. I understan' dat you ...'t done a day's work dis winter."

"Work has bin skeerce, sah."

"Exactly. You had work in a foundry ...fall, didn't you?"

"Yes, sah."

"You was gettin' ten shillings a day, ...you struck fur twelve?"

"Yes, sah."

"An' bekase de man didn't figger dat ...r sarvices war' worth twelve shillins a ...to him you frew yerself out of a steady ..., an' hev come as nigh de poo'-house ...ou kin git widout enterin de doah."

"I orter had mo' pay, sah."

"Dat may be, but as long as you ...din't git it you was an idiot to frow ...y de wages you could get. What per-...ly pint hev you gained, Brudder ...kins?"

"Well, I let the foundry-man see dat I ...some independence."

"Sartin—sartin. You let him see yer ...at de Poo'master's office, yer chill'en ...in' of de nayburs, an' a dozen credi-...chasin' you up wid bills."

"Hadn't a laborin' man orter hev fa'r ...s?" demanded Brother Jinkins.

"He had. He orter hev five dollars a ... but he can't get it. He puts his ...r muscle up to de highest bidder, ...he mus' stan' by de bid. Brudder ...ins, let me make a few remarks in ...ear. De man who pounds his thumb ...spite de hammer. De condishun of ...ess fixes de rate of wages. You may ..., but it will simply result in batterin ...own toes. De nex' best thing to what ...want is what you kin git. Bekase I ...get a dollar for whitewashin' a ceilin' ...not gwine to frow away de fifty cents ... Brudder Jinkins, what am de ...price fur blackin' stoves?"

"Two shillins, sah."

"...ly, but suppose you get de ideah ...ou orter hev thirty cents what will ...e result?"

"Reckon I won't git any blackin' to ...."

"...Jis so, sah. Now, den, if stoves at ...y-five cents am few an' fur between, ...an doin' at twenty cents, isn't it bet-...olicy to hold a steady job dan to have ...ork at all?"

"Reckon, sah."

"You kin take yer seat, Brudder Jin-.... Any principle am all right on a full ...ch. Any theory am all right if you ...a big woodpile at the doah. De ...r who declar's dat you orter hev ...e shillin's a day won't go hungry on ...nt of your strike. We like sugar in ...offee, but we am idiots to frow away ...offee kase we can't get de sweetnin'."

DEATH TAKES ANOTHER.

...dge Cadaver handed to the Secretary ...ice of the death of Glucose Jackson, ...ontgomery, Ala., and offered a reso-...n naming him as a bright star whose ...al from the firmament would be felt ...e nation.

...e resolushun will be laid on de ...," said the President as he placed it .... "De late lamented was probably ...od man. He was doubtless fa'rly ...t in a hoss-trade, an' he paid his ...at the rate of 100 cents on de dol-...ut he doubtless had many little in-...ties as well, same as de rest of us. ...right star bizness am all bosh. We ...hang crape on the door-knob of de ...doah fur de space of ten days. An' ...ll try to remember all the good ...ob de dead, but anythin' furder ...t be hypocritical."

TELL YOU LATER.

...e Secretary announced a communi-...n from Liverpool, England, asking if ...ime-Kiln Club had ever openly fa-... the annexation of Canada to the ...ed States. If so, on what grounds? "I doan' remember dat de subjick has ...arose in our midst," said the Presi-.... "I doan' reckon dat any of us ...ober had de headache puzzlin' ober ...anum. It might be a good thing ...Canada to annex de United States. I ...we am sort o' newtral on the sub-.... If we see any particklar reason ...n, why de two kentries should ...under the same bed quilt we'll let ...ublic know it.

THE LABOR PROBLEM.

...e Chairman of the Committee on ...ce and Labor made his regular ...rly report. His committee had ...asked to investigate and report on ...labor problem, and it had discovered: More laborers than labor. More labor problem than cash. ...e committee had several theories on ...subject, but would at present recom-... a law by which all capitalists would ...obliged to lay out their money in fac-..., machinery and new buildings, thus ...g labor a boom. When all the capi-... and all the money were used up ...committee would suggest some other ....

...e report was vigorously discussed ...and con, and upon a vote being taken ...as not accepted. The committee ...instructed to investigate further and ...a new report.

NONE HERE.

...communication from Halifax asked ...list of the socialists, communists and ...andits belonging to the club, and ...ther Gardiner looked up and down ...hall and said:

"If dar am any sich among us let 'em stand up."

Not a member moved.

"I reckon we hasn't got any," continued the President. "In fack, I war' purty sure we hadn't. Somehow or odder sich doctrines doan' stick to de cull'd man. He doan' hunger fur revolushuns. He doan hanker to kill off legitimate rulers. He doan' sigh fur to blow any-body up. He seems to be gwine right along mindin' his own bizness, an' keepin' up de interest on de mortgage, an' he hasn't de time to run arter new theories and bloodthirsty doctrines.

"We will now turn de reporters out doahs and go on de session on de 134th degree, an' initiate the Hon. Mossback Pilkington."

The Turcoman at Home

Any traveller who has crossed the wild upland region lately occupied by Russia on the border of Afghanistan, and has seen the Turcoman camps and Afghan villages with which it is studded, has surveyed at one glance the past and present of Central Asia. Drawing bridle, on the crest of one of those long, low swells that break at times the gray unending sameness of the vast plains of Central Asia you see below you a tiny stream, sharply outlined against the surrounding desert by the dark belt of undergrowth fringing it. On the bank stand a dozen or more huge, pointed, dark grey objects very much like gigantic "dunce caps," around which a number of sheep and cattle are feeding. The fortress-like Afghan hamlet, with its huge gray mud wall and narrow sinister loopholes, behind which the low, flat roofed earthen hovels huddle so closely together as barely to leave passage room between them, represents the marauding shepherd of the east in his more advanced stage of fixed residence in one spot, but still retaining enough of his guerrilla nature to regard every strangeras an enemy and to build every house like a fort. The light Turcoman tent of felt and saplings, set up or pulled down in a few moments, typifies the same man in his character of a wandering herdsman, flying from his enemy or pouncing upon him with equal suddenness, swooping off with his booty into the desert like one of its own vultures, ever occupied with the duties of finding grass and water for the flocks and herds that formed his whole possession, and of anticipating any foe who wished to cut his throat by cutting the latter's throat first.

A shrill cry from a tall figure among them brings out of the tents half a score of gaunt, sinewy fellows in white tunics and high caps of sheepskin, handling menacingly the spears and guns which they have snatched up.

The Turcoman "Beg" or chief (for such he is) greets you with a gutteral "Kosh amedied" (you are welcome), more reassuring than the short curved sabre within reach of his hand, which shows by its notches that it has once done a thriving business. He kindly offers you a seat on the newly flayed and still bloody sheepskin and hands you an earthen jar of milk and wooden spoon, licking the latter clean as a special compliment. Should you arrive on a day of unwonted plenty, which results from a camel's death by age or disease, you may preface with the blue, stringy meat a bowl of "brick tea," with salt for sugar and rancid fat for cream. But despite all his bandit qualities, the Turcoman at home is not a bad fellow by any means.

A Dynamite Hog.

There has been so much gloomy and depressing news of late that we feel an especial kindness towards those genial fellows who, scattered all over the world, devote their time to the preparation of marvellous or amusing inventions wherewith to fill the ears of correspondents for the press. Looking at the matter in this light, a cordial tribute of thanks is due to the sprightly citizen of Laurinburg, Ga., who has caused it to be announced that a local hog, presumably one with four legs, recently ate heartily of dynamite, entered a lot where a drove of mules was pastured, got himself kicked, and at once exploded, killing twenty of the mules. A neater thing in the way of promiscuous slaughter was never conceived since the world began; and though, of course, the story is merely a genial lie, still the mind is as much delighted with the thought of that pasture immediately after the imaginary explosion as if it had actually occurred. Then there is the merry Nubian who has just tickled the whole world under the fifth rib with his story of how the people threw mud at the Mudir of Dongola, as that resplendent functionary was departing with his staff for Cairo. Naturally such a ridiculous performance as throwing mud at a Mudir could never have occurred except in the imagination of somebody who was crazy to see how the story would look in print. Who he was, or is, or is to be, we know not; but he is a fellow of infinite jest, and we send him greeting across the cataracts.

Good Advice.

A man was being tried for stealing a ham. As he had no counsel to defend him, the Chief Justice called upon one of the barristers present to undertake his defence, and gave him permission to retire with the prisoner for consultation into an adjoining room. In about three-quarters of an hour the lawyer came back into court without his client. "Where is the prisoner?" inquired the judge. With the greatest composure the barrister replied: "He is off. Your lordship desired me to give him the best advice under the circumstances, and, as he candidly owned to his guilt, I could give him no better advice than to betake himself away with all possible speed, which he was only to glad to do."

LOST IN A BALLOON.

Carried Across the Channel Against Their Will.

Some laborers at work in a field near Bromley, England, recently saw a large balloon careering across some fields a short distance from them, striking violently against the fences and bounding from the ground, eventually being brought to a stand-still by the grappling-iron getting entangled in a tree. They went to the assistance of the aeronauts, who proved to be Mr. Fernand Dubois of the Societe Aeronautique of Paris, and a Belgium gentleman named Farenza, and it transpired that they had undergone a perilous balloon adventure, in which they narrowly escaped with their lives, having crossed the channel much against their will, and quite contrary to their original intentions.

The ascent was made a few miles from Antwerp, the aeronauts intending, if possible, to decend somewhere near Brussels. All went well for some time, until, upon Mr. Dubois throwing out ballast, they ascended higher, and, coming in contact with a fresh current of air, were carried in a contrary direction to what they anticipated. After a time they found themselves passing over Ostend, but no alarm was felt, and more ballast was thrown out. As dusk came on, however, they were startled to find themselves being carried in the direction of the sea, and the aeronauts endeavored to decend, and in making the attempt they came in contact with a current, which to their satisfaction, carried them somewhat inland.

Their gratification was brief, however, as they very soon found themselves carried rapidly out to sea. Night had come on, and the aeronauts were naturally much alarmed, and endeavored to attract the attention of some vessels they saw beneath them. Failing in this, however, M. Dubois deemed it prudent to throw out more ballast and secure safety by as high an ascent as was deemed advisable under the circumstances. All the provisions they were provided with were some sandwiches, biscuits, two flasks of brandy, and some water. These they utilized to the best advantage, and when morning dawned they found themselves far away at sea.

M. Dubois was inclined to let out the gas and decend, trusting to the balloon to float and the chances of being picked up by a passing vessel. His companion dissuaded him from doing this, however and for the greater part of one day they were over the sea. As dusk set in they were delighted to find themselves being carried toward the land, but hesitated to decend in the darkness of night. In the morning they found themselves passing rapidly over a town which they believed to be Folkestone, and decended, as has been stated, near Bromley. The two aeronauts, who were very much fatigued, were heartily congratulated on their narrow escape.

How General Sherman Took a Powder.

When General Sherman's army was at Galdsboro, N. C., General Sherman made a visit to the headquarters of General Howard. While there General Sherman felt the need of a small draught of whiskey to drive off the malarial effects of the climate on his system. Now all the officers of the Army know of General Howard's rigid temperance proclivities, and were strict in their respect for them. General Sherman knew there was no whiskey in General Howard's quarters, and therefore did not mention his wants to General Howard. Presently Dr. John Moore, the medical director came in, and after a little conversation with General Sherman gave him the wink and said, "Doctor, have you a seidlitz powder in your quarters?" The Doctor answered that he had. General Howard spoke up and said: "General Sherman it is not necessary to go to the doctor's quarters, I have plenty of seidlitz powders here, and good ones too; I will get you one." If there was anything in General Howard's quarters that General Sherman did not want it was a seidlitz powder, and therefore he said to General Howard: "Never mind. General! Give yourself no trouble." (Howard was then getting the powder and glasses of water ready). "I will be going by Moore's quarters after awhile."

"Dr. Moore was a great wag and quickly took in the situation and became a party to the joke on General Sherman. He said to General Sherman, "By the way, General, I don't think I have a seidlitz powder in my quarters, and you had better take the one General Howard has." By this time General Howard had the powder allready for use and handed the glasses to General Sherman. Rather than offend Howard, by saying he meant whiskey he drank the foaming stuff down much to his own disgust, to the satistaction of General Howard, and to the amusement of the staff officers.

Mrs. Garfield Will Not Marry Again.

Mrs. Garfield has written a letter to her brother-in-law, Mr. C. O. Rockwell, concerning the rumors that have been going about lately of her intention to marry again. She says:

This cruel rumor, which seems to have been afloat for two or three months, did not reach me till three days ago. Nothing that has ever been said about me has so hurt and offended me as this, and the deepest humiliation of it is that so many are ready to believe it. * * * To me it seems just as much an insult to be asked whether it be true as it would be were the dear general still here. That any one can think me capable of being false to his memory seems like being regarded criminal. A dignified denial by my friends, I suppose, can do no harm. Still it hurts me to feel that any denial is needed.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

Common Nuisances—... The Conscription in France—The Prime Minister's New Residence, etc., etc.

Dram shops are defined by the new legislation of Kansas as "common nuisances."

In the "keys" south of Dayton, Fla., there are trees called machineels, which are said to be poisonous to any one standing beneath them when the dew is falling.

A chemical analysis of Alpine air shows that an entirely pure condition is not found until an altitude is reached of from 6,600 to 13,000 feet above the level of the sea—a result by no means in accord with common opinion.

Mrs. Niher of Silver Lake, W. T., died recently of trichinosis, and her daughter, aged 12 years, is critically ill of the same disease. This is the first case of the kind ever reported in Oregon or Washington Territory, and it is supposed the disease was contracted by eating Eastern pork.

Luminous trees are reported to be growing in a valley near Tuscarora, Nevada. At certain seasons the foliage gives out sufficient light to enable any one near at hand to read small print, while the luminous general effect may be perceived some miles distant. The phenomenon is attributed to parasites.

A Chicago man at Plainfield, Ind., desired to leave his travelling bag and overcoat while he walked to a place twenty miles distant. He put them in a field unprotected from thieves except by the sign, "Small-pox, beware!" and when he returned they were still in the field, but twenty feet under ground, buried by health officers.

A united Italy, followed by a united Germany, made sad havoc in the prospects of budding diplomatists. The first swept away Turin, Florence, and other snug posts; the second Dresden, Frankfort, Hanover, etc. The young Third Secretary who enters the English service to-day at 22 is lucky if at 50 he is so much as accredited to a South American republic.

The ex-director of the conscription under the first empire computed the actual loss of men born within the old limits of France, and destroyed in the imperial wars from 1804 to 1815, at 1,700,000. This estimate does not include the wars of the republic, or the loss of men not born in the kingdom of France, and goes far to explain how population in France has kept low.

The Right Hon. Sir Edward Malet is the envy of British diplomatists. In these days of slow diplomatic promotion, to be Ambassador to Berlin—without doubt now the most important of British legations—at 47, and to marry the daughter of almost the wealthiest Duke, is an extraordinary success for the younger son of a second-class diplomatist without powerful political connections.

Alabama, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon, Kansas, Michigan, New York, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Maine have within a year passed laws providing for instruction in physiology in the public schools, with special reference to the effect of alcoholic liquors on bodily health; and there is prospect of similar legislation in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Illinois and some other States. Local option laws have been adopted by three States. Kansas has strengthened her prohibitory law, and Iowa has held through her courts that her prohibitory law is constitutional. Oregon has adopted a bill submitting a constitutional prohibition to the people.

Dover, formerly Melbourne, House, London, which it is proposed to appropriate as the official residence of the Prime Minister, is eminently suited for the purpose. It was built about 1770 for Sir Matthew Featherstonhaugh, and sold at his death to the first Lord Melbourne, who died there in 1828. Lord Melbourne was father of the Prime Minister Melbourne and Lady Palmerston, and during his time it was a head centre of social high life. Byron, who had a very great regard for Lady Melbourne, was a frequent guest here. Pitt, Lord Grey, Lord Beaconsfield, and Mr. Gladstone are the only Prime Ministers who have in this century made a home of the official residence in Downing street, which is quite unworthy of occupants of such position. Mr. Gladstone presumably quitted his beautiful house on Carlton House terrace, in view of having so large a family to provide for.

Wearing the Obi Bow in Japan.

If a Japanese should take an American wife to Japan she would be treated just as the native wife. She would be placed in a harem and bound by the rules of the country. She would also be compelled to adopt the native dress and wear the obi bow behind. The obi is a wide sash which all Japanese women wear around their waists. If they are married the obi is tied in a large bow behind. If unmarried the bow is adjusted in front. The Japanese dude never makes any mistakes as to whether a women is married or single, because the law compels them to always wear theobi. If a single woman breaks the law by tying the obi behind, she is subjected to severe punishment.

Wife—"Don't you think, dear, that you are drinking rather more than we can afford?" Husband—"Let me see. The first year of our married life I didn't drink a drop; second year I may possibly have drank four times, and last year three drinks a day would cover it easily. That would be an average for the three years of but one drink a day. And one drink a day, my dear, is very little."

LAUGHLETS.

A bride's cake is often as heavy as the groom's heart when the bills begin to come in.

The widow of a Hindoo is about the only individual whose career really "ends in smoke."

Grace Greenwood says that "literary women live happier lives than fashionable women." It may be. Most literary women are married to editors.

"Yes," observed the widow, "it was rather a disgrace to have him hanged, but you don't know what a relief it is for me to know where he is at night time."

A Cincinnati girl drowned herself just before she was going to be married. No reason was given for the deed other than that she was engaged to a Cincinnati man.

Doctors say that roller skating will kill off our girls. This seems too bad; but perhaps it will solve the problem of the preponderance of the female sex in Massachusetts.

A Kansas editor, who started a little paper five years ago, is now a millionaire. Nothing is impossible where industry and economy are combined with good luck. He married a rich wife.

Probably the hardest "assignment" a reporter ever got was the one given to a western newspaper man, who was told to go to the theater and write up three-quarters of a column about Mlle. Aimee's stage costume.

When Bacon remarked to "Queen Bess" that she didn't know her own mind, what made the utterance particularly nutritious? Because it would have been rash enough in any one, but it was a little rasher of Bacon.

Bub—"Are you going to be my new papa?" Accepted Suitor—"Yes, my dear child." "Have you got your wig yet?" "Wig? Why, no; I don't need a wig. Why do you ask?" "My other papa always said he was so thankful his hair wasn't fast to him."

"I am sorry, darling, that you are displeased with me, but then you know I can not help it. I am an emotionalist." "Well, then, I certainly can not marry you, George." "Why not?" "Well, you know perfectly well that my parents would never consent to my marrying anyone but a Methodist," and then she cried.

"Pa," asked a Fourth ward hopeful, "is Harrison such a bad man?" Father, who is a strong Republican—"Yes, my son; he is responsible for all the evil now so rampant in Chicago." And then the boy went off and told his sister that she must go to no more revival services, because the preacher was, probably, the wickedest man in the world outside of Jeff Davis.

"John," said a clergyman to his plowman, "wouldn't it be a good plan for you to have a scythe here, and be cutting a few bushes along the fences while the horses are resting for a short time?" "Yes, sir," said John; "and wadn't it be weel for you to take a tub o' taties in the poolpit, and when the folk were singin' peel them awhile to be ready for the pat?"

The Merchant Fleets of the World.

Roughly speaking, one-half of the world's tonnage engaged in carrying the world's commerce on the high seas sails under the flag of Great Britain.

The sea-going merchant fleets of all nationalities aggregate about 56 000 vessels, and about 23,000,000 tons. The tremendous preponderance of England in the carrying trade of the world and the order in which competing nations follow her long lead are shown in this table of approximate figures:

	Vessels.	Tons.
Great Britain	22 500	11,200 000
United States	6 600	2,700 000
Norway	4,200	1,500,00
Germany	3,000	1,400,00
France	2 900	1.100.800
Italy	3,200	1,000,000
Russia	2,300	600,000

England's tonnage on the ocean high ways is between four and five times that of the United States. It is seven times that of Norway, eight times that of Germany, ten times that of France, eleven times that of Italy, and eighteen times that of Russia.

If the comparison is confined to steamships, which now carry so large and so important a part of the commerce of the world, the supremacy of Great Britain is exhibited in a still more striking way:

	Steam Vessels	Tons.
All nations	7,764	9.232,000
Great Britain	4,649	6,9 9,000
France	458	667 000
United States	422	501.000
Germany	429	476,000
Spain	281	306,000
Italy	135	86 000
Holland	127	155,0.9
Russia	191	149,000

England's steam tonnage is almost ten times as great as that of her nearest rival, France. It is ten times greater than the United States, and forty times Russia's. The British flag covers nearly two-thirds of all the ocean steamers afloat.

Nearly three-quarters of England's carrying trade on the ocean is done in English ships. She has trebled the tonnage of her merchant fleet since 1850.

"Papa, do not drink to-night." The words came in soft, pleading, tear-soaked tones from the sweet, golden-haired innocent that grasped his hand beseechingly. A tear welled in the father's eye. "Why not, my child?" he asked. "Because Alphonse will be here to-night, and if you come home blind, blazing, staggering drunk, and smashing everything, you're going to scare him off, and plumbers' sons are not plentiful this season. That's the why."

The Standard.

MARKDALE APRIL 23, 1885.

EASTERN TROUBLE.

Dispatches from the East during the past week have been of a conflicting nature, but the probabilities of a terrible war has assumed an almost certainty. Gigantic preparations are being made on both sides. England is prepared for peace negotiations, but is determined to maintain her dignity, while Russia endeavors to hide her treacherous intentions behind a pacific face.

A war loan of $55,000,000 has been voted without opposition by the English Government. Mr. Gladstone says, the country must be prepared to learn without surprise that the controversy with Russia has been closed.

GENERAL GRANT.

General Grant has made some improvement during the past week, and hopes are now entertained tha he will see some months yet, and possibly recover.

Spring Assizes.

The Spring Assizes for this County commenced on Monday last. Owing to Hon. Justice Galt being detained at the Barrie Assizes, Judge Senkler of the County Court of Lincoln presided. The business of the Court was light, there being only three criminal cases, and nine civil cases, one of which was settled out of Court. Mr. A. Frost conducted the Crown business. The following is a list of the Grand Jurors:—

Wm. Kough, Foreman, Thos. Orchard, R. E. Main, James Struthers, S. Cunningham, Jas. Bowes, jr., Thorp Wright, Hiram Andrews, Geo. Donald, John J. Duncan, Thos. Hill, W. R. Rombough, Hugh Gordon, S. H. Breese, Josiah Sing, Geo. Rorke.

The following cases were disposed of:—

Gardner vs. Kleopfer—The plaintiff was assignee of McKenzie & McKinnon, carriage builders, of Meaford, who had become insolvent. Not withstanding the assignment, and believing it to be invalid, the defendant instructed the Sheriff to seize and close up the establishment for a debt owing to him. Gardner brought the present action against Kleopfer for damages for wrongful seizure. The case occupied the whole day on Monday, and most of Tuesday. Verdict for plaintiff, $500. John Creasor, Q. C., and S. J. Wilson for plaintiff. Mr. Nesbit of Toronto for defendant.

The Grand Jury brought in a true bill against Johanna Ryan for theft.

Queen vs. Johanna Ryan—The prisoner was indicted for stealing a $20 bill from a man named O'Neil on the 8th of January last. It appears that O'Neil met her on that day in a shop on Poulet Street, where they recognized each other as old acquaintances, and she invited him to their house to see her sister. He apparently demurred on the ground that he was not properly dressed, but she overcame his scruples, and they went to her house, calling at the American on the way to have a drink. At the house O'Neil gave money to send for liquor, and when it arrived he testified he only took one glass, when it so affected him that he fell down in a stupor, and was unconscious till next morning, when he found that a $20 bill had been taken from his pocketbook. The witness for the defence contended that he was awake all the afternoon, and took several glasses of liquor, being in fact drunk. It was clear the money was taken from him, and next day the present prisoner and a man named Harrington, who was an inmate of the house, were brought before the Police Magistrate. Harrington pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to two months imprisonment, but Johanna Ryan decided to be tried at the Assizes. There was very little evidence against her except that she was an inmate of the house where the theft took place, and the jury acquitted her. A. Frost for the Crown; J. M. Milbourn for defence.—O. S. Times.

CAN DEAFNESS BE CURED

Mr. John Clark, of Milldridge, Ont., declares it can, and that Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the remedy that cured him. It is also a specific for all inflammation and pain.

GREAT SALE of HARDWARE.

W. KOUGH

Having decided to give up Business, is now offering his his immense stock of

SHELF & HEAVY HARDWARE, PAINTS, OILS, GLASS, &c., AT COST.

This is a genuine Clearing out Sale. Call early and secure Bargains.

W. KOUGH, - - - OWEN SOUND,

SIGN OF THE "BIG AXE." 240-53

NEAR RIEL.

Fair Progress Over Desperate Roads.

Riel Issues a Manifesto-

Three of Riel's Scouts Captured.

THE FROG LAKE AND FORT PITT MASSACRES IN DOUBT.

Riel's force not half what it was Reported.

How General Middleton Will Advance.

Clarke's Crossing, N. W. T., April 18.—The three Wah-Petu Sioux of White Cap's band, captured by a reconnoitering party of fourty mounted men under Lord Melgund, are two sons of White Cap and son in law, but none of them are of importance. The Indians were headed off after an eight miles chase by Captain John French, who, despite their guns—two double-barreled shot guns loaded with buck shot and a Winchester—parleyed with them until the rest of the troops surrounded them, when the Indians surrendered. They were brought to camp and interviewed by Gen. Middleton.

They said they left Riel's camp at Batoche's crossing, east side, five days ago, and that White Cap was there with all his lodges of Sioux refugess from Minesota in 1862. Of half-breeds there were 250 poorly armed. Nine lodges of Tenton Sioux are on the east side with Riel, and five lodges on the west. There are some Cree lodges and indian allies, but they do not number more than one hundred. How many Crees there are between Batoche's and Prince Albert the prisoners did not know. White Cap's band are forced to remain with Riel and do not want to fight with the whites. This tallies with what we have heard on all sides since reaching here. Riel has divided his men into fighting bands of ten each.

Gen. Middleton asked the oldest of the prisoners what he would do if he were allowed to return to Batoche's. He answered that he would go at once to White Cap andtell him not to fight the whites. Gen. Middleton then told him to go. He leaves as soon as darkness comes, and will tell all the Indians that the troops have not come to fight them but to punish the half-breeds who are in insurrection severely and to hang all who have murdered whites, or been accessories to such murders. The general further told the messenger to tell the Indians that they should receive five hundred dollars reward for the rescue of any of the seven prisoners now in Riel's hands, and proportionately for the rescue of all. The Indians will probably act in good faith and may do good.

General Middleton was asked if it was true that he had been ordered from Ottawa not to fire on the half-breeds first. The general replied that it was "infernal rot." He said his only instructions was to quell the rebellion and hang murders and responsible head men, and those orders he would carry out. He thinks the critics may animadvert on his tactics if he divides his force by crossing a portion to the other side of the Saskatchewan, and reckognizes it as not being military, but he fears if he attacks from the west side the breeds will retreat into the Birch Hills, which affords almost perfect cover, and if he attacts from this side they can cross the ferry and hide in the coverts in and around Duke Lake. He has now nearly 900 troops, but if the rebels get into the woods thrice that number would be needed to drive them out. It is thought he will divide his force and attact both sides simultaneously.

RIEL'S MANIFESTO.

Riel has drawn up an elaborate manifesto. He begins by giving an account of the deputations sent by the half-breeds either to Ottawa or the authorities at Winnipeg since 1871, praying for the redress of the grievances which the half-breed commission have come to adjust. A long account is given of the proceedings of a deputation, headed by Father Leduc, which went to Ottawa in 1878 to put before the government the complaints of the half-beeds at St. Albert (8 miles from Edmonton) and of those of the Saskatchewan country at large. He says the appointment of the half breed commission is a confession on the part of the government that the half-breeds had not received justice. He goes on to say that the ministers had repeatedly promised to enquire into subject in answer to the letters sent. Strong representations had also been made by Archbishop Tache, by Mr. Royal, M. P., and by the lower Canadian members, in answer always being that "something would be done." This went on from 1872 until 1876, when Governor Laird took the matter up and advocated a general settlement. His advice was not heeded. In 1876, 1877 and 1878 urgent representations were made to the government officials, and though the invariably reply was that government were considering matters nothing was done. In 1879 when Sir John MacDonald came into power these representations were renewed. Riel says Mr. Dewdney must have misled the government, in which case he is responsible for all this trouble. He says the Dominion surveyors had no sooner ceased to harass the half-breed settlers by threatening to deprive them of portions of their farms than timber inspectors began to persecute them, fining settlers for taking timber off land which they had been cultivating for years, patents had for some reason or other been withheld. Riel appeals to the white settlers to testify to the mismanagement of Saskatchewan and Alberta ever since 1870, and also to the tyranny and dishonesty of most of the officials placed over the people, and says that his people never intended to shed a drop of blood, and did not fire on Crozier until that officer fired first. He asserts that war is being forced upon them, and that they are being hunted to death, although parliament at Ottawa knows that they have been wronged. In conclusion, he says that under these circumstances as death by the public executioner or in battle must be theirs, they must die fighting. This document, together with the bill of rights of September and a new bill of rights will be sent to Gen. Middleton.

Following is an abstract of the bill of rights above referred to:

First, the subdivision into provinces of the Northwest territories; second, the half-breeds to receive the same grants and other advantages as the Manitoba half breeds; third, patents to be issued at once to the colonists in possession; fourth, the sale of half a million acres of Dominion lands; the proceeds to be applied to the establishment, in the half-breed settlements, of schools, hospitals, and such like institutions, and to the equipment of the poorer half-breeds with seed, grain and implements; fifth, the preservation of 100 townships of swamp land for distribution among the children of half breeds during the next 120 years; sixth, a grant of at least $1,000 for the maintenance of an institution, to be conducted by the nuns in each half-breed settlement; and seventh, better provision for the support of the Indians.

LATER.

Clarke's Crossing, N.W.T. 10 a.m. April 21.—The column under Col. Montizambert will cross the river at daylight. It consists of the 10th, the Winnipeg Field Battery, 40 scouts under Captain French, and 30 men of "A" Battery, in all 392 men. The weather is stormy, heavy wind and rain. Forty wagon loads of supplies came in yesterday. Forage is short but just above here in the St. Laurent settlement there are hundreds of haystacks belonging to the half-breeds. These will doubtlesly be used, a fair valuation being put upon the quantity taken from each farm. There are no signs of rebels, though their scouts were seen at daybreak.

General Middleton will not advance with the right column, 470 strong, until to-morrow. Col. Montizambert will feel his way. The water is low. The ferry is not in good working order. The river is 618 feet wide here.

Scouts are going south of this crossing into the woods along the river. A settler says there were bands of halfbreeds there yesterday.

Gen. Middleton does not believe that massacres have taken place at Pitt or Frog lake as reported.

The men are all well. Dr. Codd is medical officer with Col. Montizambert. Dr. Orton is with the troops on this side.

A boat left Prince Albert to-day and will be at a safe distance below Batoche's, near the troops across the river, should it be needed after the fight to-morrow.

Gen. Middleton says if Riel is whipped his defeat will dishearten the Indians.

A number of Cree warriors are determined to make a pitched battle of it between here and Battleford. If they are beaten a general Indian war will be averted.

The steamer Northcote, which left Saskatchewan landing to-day with troops and supplies for here, should reach us in three days.

The roads are in the very worst condition, and this has led to an interference with the transport arrangements. The supply of oats is considerably larger than that of hay.

MORTGAGE SALE

Of valuable farm property in the township of Euphrasia, in the County of Grey, under power of sale contained in a mortgage which will be produced at the time of sale. There will be offered for sale by public auction at the Revere Hotel, Thornbury, on Friday, the

22nd day of May A. D. 1885,

at 2 p. m., all that certain parcel or tract of land situated in the township of Euphrasia, containing one hundred acres more or less, composed of the East half of Lot number nineteen, in the twelfth Concession of the said township. There are said to be upon the premises a log house and barn; the soil clay loam; thirty-three acres said to be cleared, the balance well timbered with hardwood.

This property will be sold subject to a reserve bid.

Terms and conditions made known on day of sale.

For further particulars, apply to

E. M. CHADWICK,
Vendors' Solicitor.

BEATTY, CHADWICK, BLACKSTOCK & GALT,

No. 58 Wellington Street East, Toronto.

Dated this 17th day of April A. D. 1884. 241-44

MORTGAGE SALE.

Of a valuable 50 acre Farm in the Township of Holland, being Lot 68, Range 1 South West of Toronto and Sydenham Road at the Revere Hotel, Markdale, on Tuesday, May 5th, at one o'clock p. m. About 40 acres cleared, fenced and free from stumps, remainder hardwood bush. The soil is a good loam. Close to Berkeley Station, on T. G. & B. R. R. For further particulars see posters, or apply to the Auctioneer, Geo. Noble, Markdale, or to HENDERSON & SMALL, Vendors' Solicitors, Toronto.

Toronto 15th April, 1885. 241-43

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths twenty five cents.

BIRTHS.

Gibson—In Artemesia, on the 19th inst. the wife of Mr. Joseph Gibson, builder & contractor, of a daughter.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 78	to	$0
Spring Wheat	0 78	to	0
Barley	50	to
Peas	58	to
Oats	36	to
Butter	15	to
Eggs	15	to
Apples	50	to
Potatoes	18	to
Hay	0 00	to	14
Pork	5 00	to	5
Flour	3 75	to

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense on the

Most APPROVED

plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat

Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT

The subscriber has much pleasure in intimating to the Ladies of Markdale and vicinity that she has commenced the

Dress-Making Business

In all its branches. Having graduated in the ranks of the best seamstress in the Dominion, she feels assured of giving satisfaction to all who may favor her with a call. The latest & best styles

London, Paris & New York Fashions

Strictly adhered to. She has on hand a supply of

FANCY GOODS

And a choice selection of the latest styles of

TRIMMINGS,

Which for beauty and rare design cannot be surpassed, if even equalled in Markdale.

Respectfully yours,

M. E. BENSON.

Markdale, April 7, 1885.

FOR SALE.

200 acres of land on easy terms, being Lot 10, con. 12, Holland township; 60 acres cleared, balance splendid timber; log house and barn; well watered with never failing spring creek. For terms, apply to MAJOR, Port Perry, Ont., 241-

NOTICE.

In order to put the village in good sanitary condition, householders and property owners of Markdale are requested to forthwith clean their yards, privies, &c., to clear off sidewalk opposite their respective premises and to remove all obstructions off the public streets; and notice is hereby given that on and after the 10th day of May, parties neglecting to comply will be dealt with according to law.

By order of the Police Trustees,

GEO. GRANT,
Insp. Trustees.

Markdale, April 22, '85. 241-

WELL TO REMEMBER.

A stitch in time saves nine. Serious results oft follow a neglect of constipated bowels and bad blood. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate and purify the stomach, bowels, liver, kidneys and the blood. Take it in time.

Poetry.

Spring Poetry.

Has any one seen my fair?
Has any one seen my dear?
Could any one tell me where
And whether she went from

Oh, yes, she is at McFarland's
Purchasing Dresses and Hats
At prices that can't be beat a
And Mc's competitors are tea hair.

Our Volunteers.

BY WILL BRUCE, LILY OAK

Britain has soldiers tried and true,
Has sailors bold and brave,
Undaunted on the battle field,
Fearless upon the wave,
Yet our fair land has sons as brave
Has hearts as firm and true,
As ever fought 'neath Britain's flag
Dear old Red, White and Blue.

On far-off western prairie,
Riel and his rebel band,
The Spirit of rebellion
Have stirred up through the land,
And sad, sad tidings come to us
Of gallant fellows slain,
While burning barns and houses,
At night light up the plain.

A call for volunteers is made,
And quick to obey the call,
Ready to fight as brave men fight,
Or fall as brave men fall;
From desk, from busy workshop,
From many a peaceful home,
Leaving the friends most dear to th
Right willingly they come.

And many a sorrowing mother,
And many a weeping wife,
Clings in a long embrace to those,
She loves as dear as life,
And many a sweetheart's tear-dimm
And sister's anguish tell
How hard it is to say "good bye"
To those they love so well.

Braving all toil and hardship,
The gallant lads have gone,
Hungry and cold and weary oft,
Get eager to press on;
On Lake Superior's ice-bound shore,
While bitter north-winds blow,
Marching o'er hill and valley,
Through darkness and through snow

All honor to the gallant men
Who to the West have gone,
And honor to the lads who stay
And guard our coasts at home;
Should Fenian mob invade, they'll fi
A welcome warm for them,
Our soil shall be their grave; our wi
Shall sing their requiem.

And many a fervent prayer goes up,
And many an earnest word
To God, the King of Battles,
Of Hosts, the Mighty Lord,
That He will guide the soldiers
On that far western plain,
Keep them through every danger,
And bring them back again.

And should they meet in battle fierce,
Riel and his rebel band,
To nerve their arms to strike for right
And for their native land.
God bless our gallant volunteers,
And all who them command,
May they live long, an honor to
Their Queen and native land.

Correspondence.

Notice.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents.

Saugeen Presbytery.

To the Editor of the Standard:

A pro re nata meeting of the Presbytery of Saugeen was held in Durham on the 14th April, Rev. Mr. Wilson, the moderator, presiding. The purpose of the meeting was to take action upon the resignation of the Rev. J. Chisholm, B. A., of the congregation of Osprey.

The General Assembly's Home Mission Committee, at their last meeting in Toronto, unanimously agreed to select Mr. Chisholm to be the Missionary of the Church to Nicola Valley, British Columbia. The committee selected him without any application on his part, and even without the knowledge of his name being before them. The convener then sent him a letter earnestly requesting him to accept the appointment.

Mr. Chisholm decided to leave himself in the hands of the Presbytery and abide by their decision. He therefore sent his resignation to the clerk so that a meeting might be called without delay, as the committee were anxious to send a man to the field at once.

The Presbytery being constituted, Mr. Chisholm was heard on his own behalf. He expressed his willingness to go to British Columbia, but submitted the advice of the Presbytery to enable him to see his way more clearly as to the path of duty, and therefore he had caused the meeting to be called. He was willing to work wherever he could do most good. He would be very sorry to part with his people in Osprey, but if the brethren thought there was more work and more need for him in British Columbia he was ready and willing to go. He would consider the call of the church in this case as the call of the Master.

...ices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, ...y five cents.

BIRTHS.

...x—In Artemesia, on the 19th inst., ... wife of Mr. Joseph Gibson, builder and ...tractor, of a daughter.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

... Wheat.....	90	78	to	$e 80
...ng Wheat.....	0	78	to	0 80
...ey		50	to	67
.....		58	to	60
.....		36	to
...er		15	to	00
.....		15	to	00
...es		50	to	75
...toes		18	to	20
.....	0	00	to	14 00
.....	5	00	to	5 00
.....	3	75	to	4 25

...ctor Roller Mills,

...ARKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

...nt Process Flouring Mill ... completed at great expense ... on the

...t APPROVED ... and with the best ma... ...y manufactured, mak... in every sense of the ...

"A Model Mill."

...n therefore in a position ...e the public a Superior ...e of Flour.

...ir trial respectfully so... ... and I have no fear but ...sult will be eminently ...ctory.

...aid for good hard Wheat ... Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc. ... sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

...G ANNOUNCEMENT

...scriber has much pleasure in ...nting to the Ladies of Mark... ...e and vicinity that she ... has commenced the ...-Making Business ... branches. Having gradua... ...the ranks of the best seam... ...s in the Dominion, she ... assured of giving satis... ... to all who may favor her ... The latest & best styles ...

Paris & New York Fashions ...dhered to. She has on hand ... a supply of

...NCY GOODS ...mplete selection of the latest styles of

...RIMMINGS, ... beauty—and rare design... ...be surpassed, if even ...ualled in Markdale.

...ctfully yours,

M. E. BENSON.

...e. April 7, 1885.

...OR SALE.

...es of land on easy terms, being ...t 19, con. 12, Holland township ...ed, balance splendid timber ... barn; well watered with never ... creek. For terms, apply to ... Perry, Ont.. 241-...

...OTICE.

...put the village in good sanitary ... householders and property ...arkdale are requested to forth... ...city yards, privies, &c., to clean... ...pool in their respective prem... ...removal of obstructions off the ... notice is hereby given ... ...the 15th day of May, par... ...to comply will be dealt with ...law.

...he Police Trustees,

GEO. GRANT,

Insp. Trustees.

...pril 22, '85. 241-...

...L TO REMEMBER.

...time saves nine. Serious ...follow a neglect of con... ...wels and bad blood. ...od Bitters regulate and ...tomach, bowels, liver, ... the blood. Take it in ...

Poetry.

Spring Poetry.

Has any one seen my fair?
Has any one seen my dear?
Could any one tell me where
And whether she went from here?

Oh, yes, she is at McFarland's where,
Purchasing Dresses and Hats so rare,
At prices that can't be beat anywhere,
And Mc's competitors are tearing their hair.

Our Volunteers.

BY WILL BRUCE, LILY OAK.

Britain has soldiers tried and true,
Has sailors bold and brave,
Encamped on the battle field,
Fearless upon the wave,
Yet our fair land has sons as brave,
Has hearts as firm and true,
As ever fought 'neath Britain's flag,
Dear old Red, White and Blue.

On far-off western prairie,
Riel and his rebel band,
The Spirit of rebellion
Have stirred up through the land,
And sad, sad tidings come to us
Of gallant fellows slain,
While burning barns and houses,
At night light up the plain.

A call for volunteers is made,
And quick to obey the call,
Ready to fight as brave men fight,
Or fall as brave men fall;
From desk, from busy workshop,
From many a peaceful home,
Leaving the friends most dear to them,
Right willingly they come.

And many a sorrowing mother,
And many a weeping wife,
Clings in a long embrace to those,
She loves as dear as life,
And many a sweetheart's tear-dimmed eye,
And sister's anguish tell
How hard it is to say "good bye"
To those they love so well.

Braving all toil and hardship,
The gallant lads have gone,
Hungry and cold and weary oft,
Yet eager to press on;
On Lake Superior's ice-bound shore,
While bitter north-winds blow,
Marching o'er hill and valley,
Through darkness and through snow.

All honor to the gallant men
Who to the West have gone,
And honor to the lads who stay
And guard our coasts at home;
Should Fenian mob invade, they'll find
A welcome warm for them.
A sod shall be their grave; our winds
Shall sing their requiem.

And many a fervent prayer goes up,
And many an earnest word
To the King of Battles,
Hosts, the Mighty Lord,
That He will guide the soldiers
On the western plain,
Bring them through every danger,
And bring them back again.

And should they meet in battle fierce,
On Riel's rebel band,
Give their arms to strike for right,
And their native land,
That our gallant volunteers,
With their command,
Will bring home an honor to Queen and native land.

Correspondence.

...—We wish it distinctly understood ... do not hold ourselves responsible for ... opinions expressed by our correspondents

Saugeen Presbytery.

To the Editor of the Standard:

A pro re nata meeting of the Presbytery of Saugeen was held in Durham on the 14th April, Rev. Mr. Wilson, ... moderator, presiding. The purpose of the meeting was to take action ... the resignation of the Rev. John ...sholm, B. A., of the congregation ... Osprey.

The General Assembly's Home Mission Committee, at their last meeting ... Toronto, unanimously agreed to ...sect Mr. Chisholm to be the Missionary of the Church to Nicola Valley, British Columbia. The committee ...elected him without any application ... his part, and even without any ...owledge of his name being before ...em. The convener then sent him a ...tter earnestly requesting him to ac... the appointment.

Mr. Chisholm decided to leave himself in the hands of the Presbytery ... abide by their decision. He therefore sent his resignation to the clerk ... that a meeting might be called ...without delay, as the committee were ...xious to send a man to the field at ...ce.

The Presbytery being constituted, ... Chisholm was heard on his own ...ehalf. He expressed his willingness ... go to British Columbia, but sought ... advice of the Presbytery to enable ... to see his way more clearly as to ... path of duty, and therefore he had ...pposed the meeting to be called. He ... willing to work wherever he could ... most good. He would be very ...orry to part with his people in Osprey, ...nd if the brethren thought there was ...ore work and more need for him in ...ritish Columbia he was ready and ...illing to go. He would consider the ...all of the church in this case as the ...all of the Master.

Delegates from the congregation—representing the three stations, Maxwell, Feversham and McIntyre's Corners—were next heard. They pleaded very earnestly—even with much feeling and deep emotion—that the Presbytery might not dissolve the pastoral tie. They testified to the great and good work that Mr. Chisholm had done among them; to his untiring and persevering energies; to his abundant labors in season and out of season; to his faithfulness and great success in gathering together the scattered elements of the congregation into a well organized and prosperous charge.

When the Presbytery proceeded to deliberate, it was recognized by all that Mr. Chisholm had done a great work during the four years of his pastorate. Few men were suited to such a field as Osprey was when he took charge of it. Nothing but the most persevering energies, and patient and cheerful labors could master the difficulties to be overcome. Strong in body, vigorous and well cultured in mind, most cheerful in disposition, and full of faith and hope, Mr. Chisholm was the man for such work. When he was ordained (Aug. 3rd, 1881) the congregation was depending upon the Home Mission Fund for some support, but in one year it became self-sustaining. Now the people give a salary of $800, and last year they raised $225 for the schemes of the church. At McIntyre's Corners they built a substantial and comfortable brick church, which is almost free from debt, the balance being provided for when due. A large number has been added to the Communion Roll. In short the congregation has prospered beyond the expectation of the most sanguine. It is not therefore surprising that the people of Osprey should be attached to Mr. Chisholm and most unwilling to part with him.

The Presbytery recognizing all these facts, and taking all the circumstances of the case into consideration, took the view that Mr. Chisholm, in doing a great work in Osprey, had laid a foundation upon which another man might build; and that he is now called to do a somewhat similar kind of work in a more extensive and difficult field. His fitness for undertaking such a work with great prospect of success, and his abilities as a worker and organizer—qualities which are not often so happily combined in one person—render him eminently suitable for the service of the church in the far west. The Presbytery therefore decided to accept his resignation, being persuaded that the Master had called him to labor in a more needy and important field.

Mr. Chisholm's connection with the congregation ceases on the 26th April; and he expects to leave for British Columbia about the 1st of May.

D. McLEOD.

Priceville, Ont., April 21, 1885.

THE SECRET OUT.

The secret of success of Burdock Blood Bitters is that it acts upon the bowels, the liver, the kidneys, the skin and the blood; removing obstruction and imparting health and vigor.

Dundalk.

From our own correspondent.

Mud, slush, in quantities, and to spare. Nevertheless every one welcomes the advent of spring, more especially as the winter has been unusually long and severe.

A. G. Hunter was absent from his office all last week on account of illness. Glad to see him about again.

Our new postmaster is rapidly acquainting himself with the duties of the office.

G. R. Middleton, our J. P., gives general satisfaction in his rulings on the cases brought before him. To the credit of our village be it said the majority of the cases so far, have included outsiders chiefly Building operations have not yet commenced. The only ones now known of are, the school house, Dr. McWilliams' residence, and a house for C. A. McMillan.

What makes G. W. P. look so forlorn, is what some are asking.

T. W. Rutledge makes frequent visits to the little tailor's shop; some attraction no doubt.

Miss Turnbull and Miss McLean of Orangeville have taken up their residence among us, so also have Miss Carter of Toronto, Mr. Stewart of Innistoge, and Mr. J. McCullough of Proton.

Business is almost at a standstill owing to the almost impassable state of the roads

Mr. R. G. Hector expects to remove to Toronto shortly.

Agricultural operations are as yet only talked of; farmers anxiously awaiting the fitness o the ground.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

BUSINESS CHANGE.—Mr. W. Wright, who has been in business in this village for a number of years, has retired from the cares and anxieties of the mercantile life. Mr. D. L. Munroe, his successor, takes possession this week. We understand Mr. Munroe has leased the premises for a number of years.

Mr. C. Sproule, who has been in charge of the post-office here for a short time, has been engaged as head teacher in the Flesherton public school and entered upon his duties there on Monday, the 20th inst.

Mr. Suggett, who has been tax collector in Osprey for a number of years, now takes possession as assistant postmaster here.

Mr. Frank McDowell, son of the Rev. D. C. McDowell, who resided with his parents for some time here, and who went some months ago to reside in the town of Bowmanville, returned home on a visit on Thursday evening last with his bride on their wedding tour. On the evening of their arrival a number of the choral class serenaded the bridal party at the parsonage.

An intellectual treat is looked for by the people of Flesherton upon the visit of Bishop Carman here next Sabbath who will preach morning and evening in the Methodist church, and on the evening following deliver his popular lecture "Trade and get rich" in the same place.

I had for years been a miserable sufferer from Dyspepsia, and tried all known remedies and the best medical skill of my acquaintance, but still grew worse, until unable to eat anything without great suffering, or do any kind of work. I began to think there was no hope for me, and that I must surely die; when, like a drowning man catching at a straw, I determined to give McGregor's Speedy Cure a trial, I at once began to Improve so rapidly that in two months I was as well as I had ever been in my life.—WM. EVERS LEAMINGTON. Sold by Hill Bro's. Free trial bottles 6

Important Notice.

Having parted with my stallion, "Sir Colin," I wish to let the farmers of the County of Grey know I have purchased "Young England's Wonder." Young Wonder will be five years old on the 24th May; he is a beautiful bay, with silver main and tail; stands 16½ hands high; weight last fall 18 hundred pounds; was sired by "Old England's Wonder," imported in 1871 by C. E. Mason was bred by William Warburton Sturton, Nottinghamshire, England; dam heavy draught mare, which has taken first prizes wherever shown. Among others Mr. Jackson's prize of $40.00 in 1881 at S. G. Agricultural Exhibition, Young England's Wonder took first prize as a sucking colt at S. R. Show in 1880, also same year at Normanby and Bentinck Shows; likewise at same Shows following year as a yearling heavy draught stallion, and in 1882 as a two year-old at S. G. Exhibition. He also took first prize at the two last Exhibitions in South Grey last fall, beating the Duke of Edinburgh, along with several other horses in his class.

ROBT. FREEBORN,
Holland.

A GOOD TEST.

For over sixteen years G. M. Everest of Forest, has sold Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, and its sales are steadily increasing. It cures coughs, colds and all lung complaints; is plesant to take and always reliable.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Resturant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

Chatsworth Correspondence.

Fine weather. Farmers busy plowing.

Our fair on Monday was fairly attended, and a good number of cattle sold, as were also a goodly number who purchased shoddy goods from a street auctioneer who hails from Markdale. Business must be very poor down there when your merchants resort to street auctioneering in order to dispose of their wares.

Years of experience and successful trial have proved McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate the most complete and satisfactory compound for healing Old Sores, Festering Ulcers, Cuts, Wounds, Burns, Frost Bites or Felons, and for keeping out the cold and to cleanse or prevent proud flesh, sloughing or decay. Insist on having McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate, sold at 25c. by Hill Bro's. 6

I'M A GREAT MISTAKE

It is a great mistake to suppose that dyspepsia can't be cured, but must be endured, and life made gloomy and miserable thereby. Alexander Burns, of Coburg, was cured after suffering fifteen years. Burdock Blood Bitters cured him

Fluid Lightning is simply a marvellous Rheumatic Remedy. I was for two months a cripple, unable to get out of the house from Sciatica. One bottle gave me instant relief, and placed me on my feet again. I have driven fourteen miles to-day (something I could not possibly have done were it not for Fluid Lightning) for the express purpose of procuring another bottle. So says Wm. Dixon, Gananoque. Only 25 cents per bottle at Hill Bro's. 6

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS,
CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES,
PURCES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James C. Russell,
Watchmaker, Jeweller,
217-269 Flesherton.

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,
Drugstore, - DURHAM.

Fine Farm for Sale.

MR. EDWARD DAVIS offers his farm for sale, being lot N. ½ 21, con. 13, Artemesia, better known as the "Meaford Road." This is a choice clay loam farm of 80 acres, 75 of which is cleared and fit for any machinery to work on, and well fenced with cedar rails; has a fine bearing orchard of three acres; a good large frame barn and out-buildings, and comfortable frame house; the place is well watered with running stream; also a saw-mill in good running order and doing a good trade—run by water-power.

This is a very desirable farm, ¼ mile from school, one mile from church, 5 miles from Markdale and 6 from Flesherton, good road either ways; is situated in an excellent locality, and is a good site for cheese factory.

For terms and further particulars, apply to

EDWARD DAVIS,
239-41 Markdale, Ont.

Burdock Blood Bitters.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA, DROPSY,
INDIGESTION, FLUTTERING
JAUNDICE. OF THE HEART,
ERYSIPELAS, ACIDITY OF SALT RHEUM, THE STOMACH,
HEARTBURN, DRYNESS
HEADACHE, OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

M. W. DUNHAM

Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,

HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE

Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which includes

75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES

Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE.

EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.

STOCK ON HAND:
150 Imported Brood Mares,
250 Imported Stallions, Old enough for service,
100 COLTS, Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that, however well-bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Société Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884, purchased by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by Rosa Bonheur, the most famous of all animal painters.

J. J. IRWIN,

Veterinary Surgeon,

GRADUATE of the Ont. Vet. College, Toronto, has opened business in Markdale, and is ready to attend all calls.

Office and residence opposite the Markdale House, Sydenham St.

☞ CHARGES MODERATE. 238-tf

Canada Short Horn Herd Book

No. 12537. Vol. 9.

10TH, DUKE OF HILLHURST.

RED and White, calved Jan'y 17 1883, bred by Hon. M H Cochrane Compton, Que., the property of Mr. James Bellwood, Woodburn, Co., Wentworth; got by Duke of Oxford 25th [9893], (26350), dam maid of Hillhurst Vol. 24, p. (18654), (A. H. D.), by Duke of Hillhurst, 12893, g. d. Dairymaid (imp.), by Royal George (25033), gr. g. d. Milkmaid, by Knight of the Tyne (20037), Young Beauty, by Duke of Richmond (19640) Beauty by Kossuth (11646), Rose, by Sir William (8595), Luck Neil, by Roger (13615) Snowdrop 2nd, by Studley (623), Snowdrop, by young Rockingham (2547), by wonder (2853), by Denton (193), by Ladrone (353), by Henry (301), by Dandy (190).

HENRY WADE,
Sec'y Agricultural and Arts Association.

Office Agriculture and Arts Association, Toronto Jan'y. 12, 1885.

TERMS:—$1.00 for season and, to insure $1.50.

For further particulars apply on lot 9, con. 12, Holland, to

GEORGE PTOLEMY.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the STANDARD office, Mill Street. Has a comfortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,
232-39* Markdale P. O.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRANITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON.

J. T. QUINN,

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all kinds of

PUMPS,

Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.

Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's

PATENT LOAD LIFTER

For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.

☞ Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction. T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

INCIDENTS OF THE FIGHT AT HASHEEN.

A BRAVE CHAPLAIN.

Outside the squares a number of men on fatigue duties, such as cutting bush for the zareba makers, were cut off from the main body. Undaunted and resourceful, they quickly improvised a square hard by the field kitchens. Their promptness saved their lives. Conspicuous amongst them were to be seen Major Alston and the Rev. Mr. Collins, one of our chaplains, fighting back to back; the reverend combatant having seized the nearest available weapon, which he wielded vigorously as if to the manner born. The reverend gentleman subsequently performed a valorous feat. In their excitement the 17th Indian regiment was so unsteady and the firing so reckless that at one time the little square under Alston was in danger from it. Bugle-calls to cease firing being ineffective to stop their fire, the Rev. Mr. Collins volunteered to cross the bullet-swept ground intervening and convey the orders to cease firing. Stepping forth, calm and collected in his demeanour, the chaplain walked, his life in his hands, across to the Indians to whom he gave the necessary orders, and then returned as calmly to the little square which he had just left. His reception must have been some compensation for the risks he had run. The men, struck with his heroism, raised cheer after cheer, and sticking their helmets on their bayonets, frantically waved them in their enthusiasm.

NARROW ESCAPE OF GENERAL M'NEILL.

Double as many rebels managed to get inside the Berkshire square as was the case at the Marines' square, and there was some desperate hand-to-hand fighting, but the result was the same, and that afternoon, after the fight was over, we found 120 corpses on the ground enclosed by the flimsy brushwood parapets. The Berkshire men deserve, and have reason to be proud of, the praise unstintingly lavished upon them for their splendid courage and steadiness. They fought directly under the eye of General M'Neill, who himself had the narrowest possible escape from death. When the alarm was first raised he was on horseback, just outside the zareba. As soon as he saw the enemy he gave the necessary orders, and then attempted to jump the brushwood barrier—an easy enough feat; but his horse shied and backed from the zareba. It was a critical moment, for the rebels were rushing down at full speed and were close upon him. Fortunately the general's aide de-camp, Lieutenant Charteris, saw the peril of his chief, and gallantly rushed to his rescue, and not a moment too soon, for the rebels were at close quarters. One Arab had his gun pointed straight at the general; but Charteris turned the shot, and then, quickly turning, cut down another assailant with his sabre. As Charteris was thus engaged he was attacked with the greatest fury by a lithe young Arab—a mere boy—in fact, not more than ten years old. The youngster fought like a tiger, and succeeded in spearing Charteris through the arm before he himself was shot. He was a gallant little fellow; he fought with all the courage of a man, and suffered a man's fate. I fancy Lieutenant Charteris will hear more of that little incident, for he saved his general's life.

CORRESPONDENT'S RISKS.

It is impossible to disguise the fact (says the correspondent) that we were most completely surprised, and that only the superb courage of our troops saved us from an overwhelming disaster. Not a man of us had any idea that thousands of rebels were quietly stretched amongst the scrub and behind boulders and hillocks quietly watching us as we innocently and jovially worked at our zarebas. A few pickets were out, and a squadron of cavalry scouts as well—I believe 18 all told—so we were content. Suddenly there was a great cry of alarm rising loud above the din of the fatigue parties and the accompanying bustle of a great camp, and then hoarse cries from the officers, "Stand to your arms, men." Never was a word of command more promptly obeyed. But the men were scattered, many of them a considerable distance from their arms. The brave fellows did their best, however, to get into their alloted positions. As the squares formed the eighteen cavalry scouts came rushing in—crashing through our own lines—and then we saw and heard the leaping, roaring, fantastic, yet terrible looking wave of black forms, which we knew was the enemy in strong—in overwhelming—force. Then came that awful stampede of baggage animals—horses, camels, mules, in one struggling, screeching, helpless, confused mass. The uproar was terrible, and must have been demoralizing to any but highly-trained troops. An incident which was of some personal interest to myself was that two special correspondents, both of them fortunately mounted, were cut off from the main body in the first rush. They made the best of their misfortune, and made their way to Suakim through a country swarming with rebels. Fortunatly they reached their destination, though scores of camp followers were slaughtered as they were endeavouring to escape to Suakim. The effect of this untoward incident was to leave the correspondent of The Times and myself the only representatives of the press on the field. I was just on the edge of the Marine square, and was caught in the storm, my horse being swept bodily to the ground pinning me to the earth. As I lay with other prostrate animals above and round, struggling frantically to rise, I received a nasty kick on the head, which, however, caused me only temporary inconvenience. Regaining my feet, I found myself inside the Marines' square. Panic even in those few moments seemed to have disappeared, and the brave fellows were firing steadily and well.

A BROKEN-HEARTED CANARY.

A Pathetic Story About a Songster That Couldn't Live Alone.

A correspondent writes to Chambers's Journal: Nearly twenty years ago I owned a pair of beautiful canaries—the male being a fine fellow, with a rich musical note. Having furnished them with the outside rough form of a nest of straw, leaving them to complete its comfort with bits of soft wool, down, and small feathers, they were shortly in the happy possession of four eggs. In due course four young ones presented themselves, to the evident delight of the parents, who fed them from daylight to dark, their favorite food being the yelk of hard-boiled eggs. Time brought round the period when, instead of raw, naked, helpless creatures, always "asking for more," four full fledged young birds frisked about the cage like so many pretty yellow balls of fine, soft wool. They grew to be very fine birds; and first one friend and then another coveted them until all had gone but one little youngling, which remained as the only solace of the parents. This last of the family was the delight of their hearts, they fondled it and played with it as we have seen an affectionate mother do with her child, and seemed to exert themselves to amuse it in every way their fancy prompted. Probably a happier little family never existed. But, alas! the spoiler came. Another friend coveted the last of the flock, and it was taken away. And from that moment the joyous song of the male bird gave place to a painful, feeble little chirp. He sat on the perch with a drooping, heart-broken, spiritless aspect; his wings hung down as if all power and vitality had left him; and within twenty-four hours from the time of his bereavement he fell dead from the perch. The affectionate creature had evidently died of grief for the loss of his "one ewe lamb." The cage was given away with the remaining bird, and no inducement could tempt me again to run the risk of perhaps unconsciously being the cause of so much unhappiness and misery.

Sagacious Dogs.

The following is a very extraordinary instance of the sagacity of dogs. A gentleman in the County of Fife possessed a fine mastiff, which he was in the practice of sending every morning with a basket in his teeth to a neighbouring village, with a letter addressed to his tradesman, who executed the commission contained in the note, and returned the basket by the faithful messenger filled with provisions. As "Pompey" was one morning leaving the village, his basket loaded with warm rolls and a nice leg of mutton, he was set upon by a host of little curs, who, after a desperate engagement, forced him, like his celebrated namesake of old, to seek his safety in ignoble flight, leaving the well-contested basket a prey to his victors. Full of conscious shame "Pompey," in place of returning to his master, made straight to the house of a farmer at some distance, where he in silence brooded over his misfortune, turning in his mind schemes of revenge. "Pompey" had long been the mortal foe of "Cæsar," a hero of the same race, attached to a neighboring gentleman. Many a bloody encounter increased their deadly hate; yet victory still remained in suspense. On the morning subsequent to the defeat of "Pompey" that hero was seen taking his way to "Cæsar's" abode. "Cæsar" appeared on the lawn, eager to meet his foe, when, to the amazement of the spectators, "Pompey," as he approached his rival, held out an olive branch, by every means in his power imploring a reconciliation. "Cæsar" met his advance. From that moment their animosity ceased. "Pompey" had previously provided for his friend a feast of carrion. After a hearty repast, he led him against the assembled host of little curs, and before the champions left the village, every foe had bit the dust. After many mutual congratulations, no doubt, and exchanging vows of eternal friendship, the conquerors separated, and "Pompey" now returned in triumph to his master's house.

He was Sorry.

The other morning a tramp walked up to one of our prominent citizens on the street and, shivering with cold, begged him for a quarter with which to buy something to eat. The prominent citizen stopped and looked at his trampship pityingly, then replied:

"My good man, how long is it since you had a meal?"

"Two days," said the tramp, as his knees shook and his teeth chattered.

"I am very sorry, my friend, but I have not had a dinner for two weeks."

The tramp opened his eyes and looked wild, and his teeth ceased chattering and his knees no longer quaked as he drew his breath with difficulty and sadly said:

"Here is a quarter, poor fellow. Take it and go and get some grub."

"But I am not a beggar!" cried the prominent citizen.

"I know, I know," the tramp replied; "but you are the champion liar of the country. You were picking your teeth when I met you."

"How can I find out all about the young lady to whom I am engaged?" asked a prospective benedict. Has she a younger brother? If so, consult him.

"Brother A., how does it happen that you need two horses? Brother C., of the Methodist church, has only one horse, and Brother D., of the Baptist church, drives only one horse, and I drive only one. Why do you need two horses?" Brother A. — Because I am not a one-horse preacher."

CURIOUS FACTS.

Guideposts were formerly embellished with maxims upon which the traveller could meditate, provided that he possessed the not too common accomplishment of reading.

Lombard St London, was named for certain usurers who came to England in 1299 to lend money to convents, communities and private persons who were not able to pay their tenths, which were collected very carefully that year.

During the earthquake of Lisbon in 1755, the keystones of all the arches in the Carmo Church sprang from their places simultaneously, while the arches themselves, too solid to fall even then, were left standing gapped and broken, in which condition they are still to be seen.

Bavaria has enacted a law forbidding the marriage of couples who do not possess sufficient means to maintain themselves, or who, during the previous three years, have received help from the public funds or who have not paid their quota of taxes, or regarding whom there is reason to suspect that trouble will result to the household from the want of sobriety, economy, or love of work.

The native races of the Congo are born mimics, and when listening to a missionary sermon simulate an air of devotion so admirably that it is difficulty to believe that their deep "Amens" means nothing whatever. A recent traveller, speaking of one of these sermons, says: The king constantly took up the end of some phrase and repeated it with patronizing interest after the missionary just to show how he was attending, throwing meanwhile a furtive glance at his wives, who were not pursuing their avocation outside with sufficient diligence. A short prayer concluded the services, and when the king arose from his knees he promptly demanded the loan of a hand screw to effect some alteration in his new canoe."

While Samuel McDamers was trudging along behind his plough on his farm at Island Shoals, Ga., he turned up a jug which had evidently been buried a great many years. He pried the stopple out and found some rare old brandy. An hour later Samuel lay on his back on the ploughed field, with the jug in one hand, his hat in the other, and a serene smile upon his face. Not a drop of brandy remained in the jug. His mother, observing that the horses had stood in one place for a long while, went out into the field and gazed with anger at her son. Then in a rage, she seized a huge stone which lay hard by, and with it shattered the jug. It proved to be a double-decked jug. The upper half had held some of the brandy for which the lamented grandfather of Samuel had been famed, and the lower half was packed solid with rows of musty $5 gold pieces. It had been buried by the grandfather. He was killed suddenly by an accident, and no one knew of the buried treasure.

Beecher's Tribute to Irving.

At the farewell banquet to Henry Irving the actor, the other night, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher made a stirring oration, and told how he was taught to regard theatres as houses of the devil and actors as totally unredeemable; and now at the age of 70 years he thought it safe to taste the forbidden fruit and see what it was like. "I have heard Mr. Irving with delight thirteen times," he cried, "and if all theatres were such and all actors such I would recommend them to my people as means of grace. I have been a reader of Shakespeare all my life but I never read him till I heard him. Shakespeare in literature is like carved statues in cathedrals, and the man who can touch them and make them walk and talk puts life into hearts of marble. I shall read Ophelia and see Miss Terry as long as I live. The flowers are sweet and white by the brooks where she lost her life, but the passion flower that hung on the bough of Beatrice was far more wondrous and beautiful in its fragrance than the flower that grew at the deathside. I can hardly say what I would like to say of the obligation I feel to Mr. Irving for his inimitable acting. It has touched some of the deepest chords of my life, and when he goes away in some sense I shall feel as I feel in autumn, as it is gradually growing sober, though beautiful. As the birds have left their houses and do not sing any more every day, I feel something has gone until there is no more singing in the air. When he has been blown across the great sea, I shall feel and say, 'The birds have gone.'"

Centrifugal Force.

Artemus Ward did not claim to be a scientist but rather an artist in wax. He once gave his thoughts, however, to one of the great problems of science with this result:

The earth moves round the sun from west to east in a year, and turns on its axis in a day.

Supposing the earth to be suddenly arrested on its axis, we all—men, women, children, horses, cattle and sheep, donkeys, editors, and members of Congress—with all our goods and chattles, would be thrown off into the air at a speed of one hundred and seventy-three miles a minute, every mother's son of us describing the arc of a parabola, which is probably the only description we should ever be able to give of the affair.

This catastrophe, to one sufficiently collected to enjoy it, would doubtless be exceedingly amusing, but as there would probably be no time for laughing, we pray that it may not occur until after our demise, when, should it take place, our monument will probably accompany us.

The Afghan Army.

Although Afghanistan is essentially a military nation, every able bodied male being an expert swordsman and a good shot, there is no such thing as a regular army, as we view it from our western standpoint. The only European parallel is Montenegro. The standing army, as it existed before 1871 under Shere Ali, consisted of 17 or 18 regiments of infantry, clothed, equipped, and, as far as possible, trained on the English model, of which, needless to say, is fell wonderfully short. Three or four regiments of dragoons, and a small number of artillerymen, with, roughly speaking, a total of 100 guns, completed the force. On the forts a few old iron guns were mounted, but they were so utterly worthless that their discharge would have been attended with quite as much danger to the gunners serving them as to the enemy. The Ameer holds supreme command, each regiment being under a prince of the blood, or provincial governor. Discipline is at a low ebb. Arms and uniforms are provided by Government at a fixed rate, the amount being deducted from the soldiers' pay. As a rule, the soldiers of the regular force receive payment in cash, but in many cases grants of land are made in lieu. The infantry is mostly composed of Afghans, though there is in this branch a considerable number of Tajiks and Persians. The latter and Tartars contribute the majority of cavalry and artillerymen, while in all arms there is a small percentage of men who have deserted from the Indian Native Army. The first effort to raise a disciplined force in Afghanistan must be placed to the credit of Shere Ali. During the period of his intimate relations with the Government of India—before he sought Russian protection—he formed the project of equipping a small army on the British system. The first opportunity for carrying this idea into effect occured in 1869, when among other valuable presents of the Viceroy, he carried back to Cabul a siege train of four 18-pounder guns and two 8-inch howitzers, a mountain battery of six guns, 5,000 Snider, 15,000 Enfields and 100,000 rounds of small ammunition. This was the nucleus of the armament he set himself to the task of producing, upon which he fondly hoped to be able to depend for the safety of his kingdom should the English desert him when threatened by the great Northern Power, whose approach he even then dreaded. To an ordinary person the task would have appeared superhuman, as Afghanistan was destitute of workmen and machinery. But Shere Ali was a man of unbounded energy, and he speedily set to work to remedy the short-comings of his Ordnance Department. After a vain effort to produce guns like those obtained from India, by the workmen on the spot, he selected gun-smiths, and sent them to Peshawur to be trained in the arsenal. These men returned to Cabul with detailed drawings of the guns, and complete models in wood. With such scanty materials and only the limited experience to be gained by a few visits to the arsenal, it is highly to the credit of Afghan workmen that their guns were well made, and only deficient in the comparatively trifling matter of appearance, some of the Armstrong breech-loaders being exceedingly well turned out. Gun-carriages and limbers were made, partly on the model of those presented by the Viceroy, and partly on that of the guns captured in 1839-41. The manufacture of small arms did not turn out so successfully, but their ammunition, made solely by hand, was really excellent. Percussion caps, which long presented difficulty, were at last managed by the invention of a machine capable of turning out 5,000 a day. Thus, after years of persistent efforts, the Ameer of Afghanistan was able to place in the field during the late war a fairly-armed and well equipped force of, roughly speaking, 45000 infantry, 5,000 cavalry, and over 300 guns. This total does not include the countless masses of irregulars, who, though ineffective in open combat, would have proved exceedingly troublesome had our armies been worsted and compelled to retreat. The sudden collapse of Shere Ali's army cannot therefore be attributed to mere want of fighting material; his source of weakness lay in the want of discipline among his troops and the gross incapacity of their leaders. There is reason to believe that the present Ameer is endowed with sufficient perspicacity to note the errors of his predecessor, and by avoiding them to place the army on a better footing than obtained six years ago.

Confessing to Eleven Murders.

William Stover, who was arrested and placed in the Butler county jail a few days ago for killing James Duncan, has confessed that Duncan makes the eleventh man he has killed. Stover was formerly a cowboy on the plains. He gives no details of his alleged murders, but says he is wanted in Kansas, Colorado, and Texas for the crimes. Duncan, the man he killed in Butler county, was an old deaf man. He was sitting in Harper's dry goods store in North Washington. Stover went into the store and offered to trade the clerk a bunch of keys for a cigar. The clerk refused. Stover drew a dirk knife and made a plunge at the clerk, who knocked the knife out of his hand. Stover then took a revolver from his pocket and fired two shots at the clerk, who fled from the store. Stover then turned, and, seeing Duncan sitting by the stove, deliberately shot him twice, both balls passing through his lung. The desperado was not captured until he had emptied his revolver into various articles about the store.

Canadian girls run away, not with the coachman, but with the schoolmaster. The feminine heart, somehow, turns easily to a rod or whip.

STORIES ABOUT ANIMALS.

In a fox chase in England the exercise killed five horses, and the fox finally fell dead from the same cause in front of the Bicester hounds.

Two young red foxes are being raised with a litter of pups in McCracken county, Ky. The mother, puppies, and foxes are all on the most intimate terms.

A number of fox hunters in East Bradford township, Pa., stopped in sight of a sunny bank covered with tall dead grass, after an unsuccessful search for a fox. Suddenly a large red-tailed hawk made a descent from the air. It had hardly touched the grass on the bank when up jumped Reynard, and the bird again soared away. A fine chase was the result.

A farmer lent his dog to a man to whom he had sold a flock of sheep to drive them home, a distance of thirty miles. The drover found the dog so useful that, instead of sending him home, he locked him up. The dog escaped, and, concluding the drover had no more right to keep the sheep than to lock him up, he collected all that had belonged to his master and drove them home again.

Our Dumb Animals says a dog belonging to the Salem Lead Company broke a pane of glass in his kennel and went at once to the kitchen, and by "dog signs" tried to point out the mischief. Then he undertook the job himself. Picking from the ground with his teeth the piece of glass which had fallen out, he made several attempts to put it in place, but, having no experience as a glazier, he gave up trying, and calmly awaited the return of his master. The damage was then repaired, and Hero was happy.

A new bird is said to have appeared in Oregon City in flocks of about seventy. The bird is a trifle smaller than a robin, and the male is decked out in beautiful colors, his back, head, and neck being golden peacock green, whereas these parts on the female are of a sombre drab color. Both are snow white under the wings and on the back is a curved ribbon of white forming a crescent, each of the two arms of which commences at the front part of the wing—supposing the bird is at rest—and meets the other on the posterior part of the back.

Arab Armor.

Coats of mail are still in use among some of the Soudanese Arab tribes. Whether original or a copy, says Col. Colbourne, in speaking of one of these coats of armor, it was undoubtedly the dress of the crusaders. The hauberk of mail was fastened round the body by the baltan, and formed a complete covering from head to foot. The long, two-handed double-edged sword was borne between the leg and the saddle. The wearer of this mediæval garb was Sheik Mohammed Sebekh, of the Halawin tribe of Bagara Arabs. His armor had been in his family 310 years. The horse's head was encased in steel, and its body covered with a quilt thick enough to turn a spear. It was shaped like the armor one reads of in Froissart.

It has been asserted in connection with this curious subject that the practice survives in the Soudan alone. It may, therefore, be well to state that it is also found among the Khevsur people of the central Caucasus, who still habitually wear chain-armor, shields, and helmets, like mediæval knights. In fact, it was formerly general among all the Caucasian tribes, and the Chechenzes of Daghestan still wore coats of mail down to the beginning of the present century.

The armor dies not appear to have been forged by these people themselves, but was handed down, as among the Soudanese Arabs, as an heirloom from generation to generation in the families of the chiefs. Hence the inference that this armor dates everywhere from the times of the crusades, of which it may be regarded as a remarkable reminiscene.—[London Athenæum.

The Post Office at Rome.

The postoffice at Rome is the most beautiful in the world. There is nothing like it elsewhere. It is a palace with a garden in the centre. It faces the piazza San Silvestro and has also an entrance on the Via Della Vite. From the outside it is nothing to look at but an ordinary Roman building, but inside it is a postal paradise. On each side of the entrance arches are lovely frescoes, typical of the use to which the building is put. There is a picture of a bird with a letter in its beak, swooping down to the blue waves to deliver it to a fish. A nymph in another picture has around her the entangled skein of myriads of telegraph wires. The fleet Mercury with his winged feet and with the modern addition of a letter sack speeds through the air. Jove hurls his lightenings along the telegraph lines, and thus the frescoes go. Inside there is a large garden with a fountain in the centre. Around the four sides of this garden is a marble corridor and in this corridor the people transact their business with the Roman postoffice. To the right, entering from the piazza is a row of windows, lettered. You go to the window that attends to your inital and the clerk hands out your letter to you. The whole thing has a sort of picnic effect. The letter-carriers receive their mail at other windows and they sort the letters into handy packages on marble shelves attached to the pillars right beside the garden. Nobody needs to enter the building except the clerks. All buisness is transacted on the curb, as our board of trade friends say. In the arcade that surrounds the garden you can post or receive letters, buy stamps, or send telegrams, and there is a special window for growlers who want to know why on earth that letter that they know was posted week before last hasn't come yet.

RIES ABOUT ANIMALS.

ox chase in England the position ve horses, and the fox finally fell m the same cause in front of the hounds.

young red foxes are being raised tter of pups in McCracken county, e mother, puppies, and foxes are e most intimate terms.

ber of fox hunters in East Bendnship, Pa., stopped in sight of a nk covered with tall dead grass, unsuccessful search for a fox.
a large red-tailed hawk made a from the air. It had hardly the grass on the bank when up
Raynard, and the bird again soar-
A fine chase was the result.

er lent his dog to a man to whose ld a flock of sheep to drive them distance of thirty miles. The und the dog so useful that, in-ending him home, he locked him dog escaped, and, concluding had no more right to keep the n to lock him up, he collected all belonged to his master and drove e again.

mb Animals says a dog belong-Salem Lead Company broke a lass in his kennel and went at e kitchen, and by "dog signs" oint out the mischief. Then ook the job himself. Picking ground with his teeth the piece hich had fallen out, he made empts to put it in place, but, experience as a glazier, he gave and calmly awaited the return er. The damage was then re-Hero was happy.

ird is said to have appeared in y in flocks of about seventy.
a trifle smaller than a robin, le is decked out in beautiful back, head, and neck being ock green, whereas these parts ale are of a sombre drab color.
now white under the wings back is a curved ribbon of ming a crescent, each wo arms of which commen-front part of the wing—he bird is at rest—and meets on the posterior part of the Arab Armor.

mail are still in use among he Soudanese Arab tribes.
riginal or a copy, says Col.
in speaking of one of these or, it was undoubtedly the crusaders. The hauberk of tened round the body by the formed a complete covering foot. The long, two-handed d sword was borne between the saddle. The wearer of l garb was Sheik Mohammed he Halawin tribe of Bagarra armor had been in his ears. The horse's head was eel, and its body covered hick enough to turn a spear.
d like the armor one reads of n asserted in connection with subject that the practice sur-Soudan alone. It may, thereto state that it is also found hevsur people of the central o still habitually wear chains, and helmets, like medi-

In fact, it was formerly g all the Caucasian tribes, chenzes of Daghestan still mail down to the beginning century.

dies not appear to have been se people themselves, but own, as among the Soudanan heirloom from generation in the families of the chiefs.
erence that this armor dates rom the times of the cru-h it may be regarded as a miniscene.—[London Athest Office at Rome.

ce at Rome is the most e world. There is nothing
re. It is a palace with a entre. It faces the piazza nd has also an entrance on Vite. From the outside it k at but an ordinary Rout inside it is a postal par-side of the entrance arcasecoes, typical of the use ilding is put. There is a with a letter in its beak, to the blue waves to de-
A nymph in another nd her the entangled skein legraph wires. The fleet winged feet and with the
of a letter sack speeds
Jove hurls his lightenlegraph lines, and thus Inside there is a large fountain in the centre.
sides of this garden is a and in this corridor the their buisness with the
To the right, entering a row of windows, letter-he window that attends to he clerk hands out your he whole thing has a sort
The letter-carriers receive er windows and they sort andy packages on marble to the pillars right beside body needs to enter the he clerks. All buisness he curb, as our board of
In the arcade that suryou can post or receive ps, or send telegrams, cial window for growlers
w why on earth that let-w was posted week be-me yet.

Britannia's Big Sons.

BY JESSIE M. E. SAXBY.

Britannia's grey was on her dead,
Her head upon her sword;
The pain of loss had calmed her soul,
And hushed each angry word.
Alone she stood with stedfast mien,
Alone she stood at bay;
While round her paths a myriad host
Of lurking traitors lay.
One jealous rival held aloof,
Another mocked her plight;
She stood serene before a world
That marvelled at the sight.
The voice of carping Envy said,
"Thy day of doom is now"—
Britannia smiled and faced her foes
With proud and steadfast brow.

Then spake a sturdy backwoodsman.
Of speech and courage strong—
"This is no time to bandy words
About the right and wrong;
I only know her savage foe
Is mine, and must be fought.
The rights of sonship are my own,
These knotted thews of mine were bred
Beside her parent knee,
And northern snows and pinewood airs
Have formed them large and free,
From her I drew this strength of arm,
This name that is my pride;
My place, by right of birth, is there—
Close to Britania's side."

Oh, then from banyan shaded bower
Out stepped a stalwart knight,
With flashing eye, and lofty crest,
A Titan armed for fight.
"I stand not idly by," quoth he,
"To wonder or to blame,
When hostile arrows seek for mark
The breast that nursed this frame.
For I know from her did flow
This rusty life of mine,
That burns to aid her and avenge
Her wrongs, by right divine,
I kneel to thee, my mother fair,
I lay before thy feet
The homage of a loyal heart,
The reverence that is meet."

With that there sprang from sultry plain
A brawny youth and brave,
With eager haste, before the world
He drew his ready glaive;
He drew his glaive, he stood erect,
As one who can command,
And loud he cried—"I give my heart,
I give this good right hand.
To thy know to her I owe
My best and dearest gains"—
The sun of fervid skies had warmed
The blood within his veins.
The free life of a land renewed
Had fostered well in him
The courage of his Saxon sires
The strength that swelled each limb.
He stretched the able hand that held
That weapon bright and keen—
"Now take," he said, "this service given,
My mother and my queen."

"Are these my boys?" Britannia asked;
"It seems but yesterday
When they were children in my home—
Mere children at their play.
Are these my boys?—those manly forms?
Those giants young and bold,
Who come as came in hour of need
My valiant sons of old?
Now God be thanked the race I bred
Keeps its heroic mould.
Let German bear and tiger Frank
Growl by the lion's den;
Let Ukase wolf and Fenian snake
Crawl round my camp of men;
Let Moslem fox and Arab hound
Bark forth where warton spite—
My sons! my sons against the world,
God guard my men of might!"

A LOCK OF RED HAIR.

(CHAPTER IV.—CONTINUED.)

"Ah, I should be thankful to feel myself again, Doctor!" said Mrs Richmond looking gratefully at him. "It makes me so miserable to think what a wretched depressing person I must be to those about me."

"My dear, that is the very last thing you need worry yourself about," said Edgar kindly. "Doctor, my wife is the most unselfish woman in the world, and, if you can cure her, we shall all feel deeply grateful to you."

"Yes, indeed we shall, Doctor," broke in Lucy warmly; "it makes us all unhappy to see her suffer so."

Doctor Maurice turned quickly toward her as she spoke, and smiled at her with an approval. He thought he had never seen so sweet and earnest a face; the blush which spread over it as he spoke made it still more attractive to him.

"You may be sure I will do my best, and I quite believe I shall be rewarded," he said. "I will send you some medicine, Mrs. Richmond, directly I get home, and will call again to-morrow at about the same time."

"Don't be late, Doctor; I shall be anxiously looking forward to your visit," returned Mrs. Richmond.

He laughed, and, having said good-bye, went out with Richmond, and, a minute afterwards, they saw him driving down the avenue.

"Well, Sarah, how do you like him?" inquired Edgar, when he returned to the room.

"Very much," she answered warmly. "I have never been so pleasantly impressed with a stranger. I feel better already. He has given me fresh life and hope."

"I think he seems a very jolly fellow; don't you, Miss Lucy?" he added slyly.

"Yes, I think so," agreed Lucy, trying to make her voice sound very indifferent, and succeeding very badly.

"Oh, you appear to have cooled down quickly! You spoke of him much more cordially this morning," he continued, the merry spirit of mischief in his dark brown eyes.

"I wonder whether he is married?" said Mrs. Richmond musingly.

"Ah, that is just what Miss Lucy was wondering! That seems to be the first thing you ladies think of; it would never have occurred to me to wonder on the subject. However, I can make your mind easy on that score. I hear he is a bachelor."

Almost before he had finished, Lucy had fled from the room.

"Why, Edgar, what is the matter with Lucy? What are you teasing her for?"

"Oh, only for fun!" he answered, laughing. "Sarah, that is a case of must love at first sight."

"Edgar, you cannot mean it—why, they have never met until to-day! I am sure Lucy is not at all the sort of girl to make such a hasty choice."

"Well, events will show; I am certain I am not mistaken."

The conversation terminated at this point, and Edgar, with his customary devoted attention, went down to the cellar to select a bottle of brandy for his wife to commence. He brought it ready decanted.

"Now that is to be for your special use," he said to her. "That decanter holds exactly a bottle, so you will be able to allowance yourself. I have put another bottle of this particular brand, which is much better than the rest, in a certain bin in the cellar, and shown it to Mrs. Mitchell. So, if you want any more before I am back—if he lets me go, that is; I forgot to ask him to-day—she will know where to find it."

"Thank you, dear; you are always so good and thoughtful."

"I need do something to atone for my idiotic mistake about those confounded effervescing drinks. To think that I, of all people in the world, should have been doing the very thing to make you worse! When Doctor Maurice said that they were at the root of the mischief, it quite upset me. I am afraid I seemed dreadfully ill-tempered."

The next morning they were disappointed not to see any improvement in Mrs. Richmond's condition; she was, in fact, feeling weaker than usual; but she herself was the first to suggest that she could not expect to be cured in a day; and, after Doctor Maurice had seen her, Edgar asked if it would be right for him to leave home for a short time.

"Certainly," replied Doctor Maurice; "I do not consider Mrs. Richmond's state of health at all alarming; you may make yourself perfectly comfortable in going, and I hope by the time you return you will find a decided change for the better in your wife."

"Thank you, Doctor; then I shall make up my mind to go. I shall feel quite safe in leaving my wife in your hands, and I hope you will not confine your visits to purely professional ones while I am away, for I am sure your cheerful society would be quite a blessing to the ladies."

"I shall be delighted to come in occasionally, as you ask me so kindly," replied John Maurice brightly.

Preparations for Edgar's departure kept them all busily occupied on the following morning. Evans, their only indoor man-servant, was to accompany him. This man had been in his service for many years, and appeared much attached to him.

"Now, dear," said Edgar to his wife, when the time for starting had arrived, "you must remember to write to me very often, as I shall be most anxious to hear how you get on under the new treatment. You know where to address my letters; I shall make Bologne my headquarters; but you must not be surprised if a few days elapse before you receive my answers. I shall be moving about constantly for the next fortnight, and letters may have to be forwarded. You are sure you have the address safe?"

"I think it is on the library table," replied his wife tearfully.

"Oh, never mind looking! I had better write another, in case you lose that one. I have a card and pencil here. By-the-bye, Miss Lucy, I don't think I ever showed you my pencil-case; Sarah bought it for me in Florence, and I am very proud of it."

It was a beautiful little thing, with a small, finely-cut cameo at the end.

"I always wear it on this chain; I would not lose it for the world!"

"Then you must buy a new ring for it," said Lucy, who had taken it in her hand, and was admiring it. "See—this one is almost worn through!"

"So it is, by Jove! I am so glad that you called my attention to it; I must get a new one at once. It will be safe for the present so;" and he carefully put the pencil, with the chain still attached, into his waistcoat pocket.

The last adieux were then spoken.

"Wish me luck in my undertaking," he said, pausing at the door.

Lucy had an uncomfortable impression that his smile, when they had done so, was slightly sardonic in character; but she banished the idea at once, and set about comforting her friend, who was very depressed at her husband's departure.

CHAPTER V.

In the afternoon Doctor Maurice called, and was disappointed to find no abatement in Mrs. Richmond's unpleasant syptoms; she complained of a still greater sensation of uneasiness and depression.

"Perhaps Mr. Richmond's leaving has upset you a little. At any rate we will not alter the treatment for a day or two; it is not well to decide too hastily in these cases."

"Don't forget to come again to-morrow, Doctor. Lucy and I will be dreadfully dull now my husband has gone."

"Well, may I pay my visit to-morrow in the evening, instead of in the afternoon? Mrs. Richmond was kind enough to ask me to do so occasionally during his absence; and then I could stay for an hour or two, if it would be agreeable to you."

"It is the very thing I would have asked you; I only hesitated because I thought I should be such a very dull companion. Will you dine with us? Honestly, Doctor, I should be grateful to you if you would. I cannot bear the idea of Lucy's being shut up for a fortnight with no other society than mine; I am afraid her spirits would suffer severely."

"I will come with much pleasure; but I do not think you need worry about Miss Starr. What a beautiful happy face she has!" he added warmly.

Mrs. Richmond looked at the young man with a pleased attentive expression before she answered.

"Yes, and she is as good as she is beautiful. I love her very dearly."

"I don't mention society," he went on impulsively; and then, feeling that he had said a good deal in the circumstances, he wished her good-bye hastily, and went away without seeing Lucy, who, coming in a minute or two afterwards from a walk in the village, found Mrs. Richmond laughing softly to herself as she lay upon the sofa.

"Why, dear, you look quite cheerful! Who has been amusing you?"

"Oh, Doctor Maurice has just left! I don't know that he was particularly funny, and yet he amused me."

"But how?" asked Lucy coaxingly. "Do tell me; I should like to know."

"I have no doubt you would; but I shall not gratify your curiosity, as I doubt whether you would see the point of the joke. Never mind, dear," she added, actually laughing again at Lucy's disappointed face; "you will have an opportunity to-morrow of asking him yourself, if you like, for he is—now prepare for a thunder-bolt—he is going to dine with us."

"No!" exclaimed Lucy incredulously. "Why, you surely never asked him?"

"Well, he certainly did not invite himself! But have you any objection to his coming, dear?" she continued, the slightest indication of a twinkle in her gray eyes. "Because, if you have, I can easily put him off till another day."

"Oh, no; don't do that," said Lucy. "What objections could I possibly have? I shall be very glad to have him come on your account, as his society certainly seems to do you good."

"Very well, then, dear; you will have to exert yourself to amuse him. You know I am a poor thing in company at the best of times; I shall depend entirely on you, remember."

"Oh, I don't think he will be at all difficult to entertain!" returned Lucy cheerfully.

The next morning when she awoke, her mind was filled with the anticipation of something pleasant.

"What can be going to happen?" she thought. "I feel just as I used to do when I was a child, and awoke upon the morning of our Christmas holiday-treat to the pantomime. Good gracious"—as a sudden light broke through her reflections—"it must be that Doctor Maurice is coming to dinner." For an instant she looked grave and almost startled; but the next moment she sprang out of bed and commenced her toilette, singing a gay song the while, and looking the embodiment of health and happiness.

She went into Mrs. Richmond's room, which adjoined hers, on her way down to breakfast. She was feeling better; but was relieved at having received a letter from Edgar dated from Boulogne. He was well, and was starting for Paris that afternoon. The letter was so affectionate and kind that poor Mrs. Richmond almost shed tears over it.

"Now, Lucy dear, I must get you to arrange everything with Mrs. Mitchell about the dinner, for I am quite unequal to the task this morning. I am beginning to fear that this medicine of Doctor Maurice's does not suit me; I have slept worse than ever the last two nights. Tell Mrs. Mitchell to have everything as nice as posible, and, Lucy dear, go and talk to the gardener about the fruit and flowers. How bright and fresh you are, dear child! It does one good even to look at you," continued Mrs. Richmond, kissing her. "Now have your breakfast and then go out into the sunshine—I cannot have you shutting yourself up with me this fine weather."

Lucy enjoyed the little bustle of preparing for their visitor, and good old Mrs. Mitchell gladly seconded her efforts.

"Ah, miss, I should be glad if missus would keep a little company. It would do her all the good in the world. But there—you can't wonder at her. She had an awful time of it with her parents, poor thing! I was with her, you know miss, when they both died, and I have been at her house ever since. I can tell you I was surprised when I heard she was going to be married, and to such a young gentleman too! But there—I daresay its all for the best. He seems very fond of her—though, between you and me, miss, I don't think he's quite so sweet-tempered as missus thinks. I heard him speak awful sharp to Tom the other morning, about one of the horses; and, when he passed me a minute afterwards, his face was like a demon's. In fact, none of us down in the kitchen like him, except Evans, and he seems very confidential-like with his master. I am sure I hope he will be kind to her, for she is a good woman if ever there was one—though her manner is peculiar to people as she don't take a fancy to. Many and many a poor soul she has saved from want on her father's estate. And how do you think she is, miss? Do you think the new doctor seems to be understanding her complaint?"

Mrs. Mitchell was a dear garrulous old woman, with whom Lucy liked to have a chat. She was beloved by every one in the house, and, unlike housekeepers in general, filled a most motherly position towards all the younger servants.

In due course Doctor Maurice arrived, and dinner was announced almost immediately. They had a very pleasant sociable meal, Mrs. Mitchell insisting on being in the room to superintend Fanny, the young parlor-maid, who was not used to waiting; her face beaming with approval of the proceedings.

After dinner, Doctor Maurice accompanied the ladies at once into the drawing-room, where Lucy poured out coffee. They soon found that he could sing very well, and he and Lucy tried some duets together, their voices blending delightfully, Mrs. Richmond declared.

"Ah, you like music, Mrs. Richmond! Are you equally fond of painting?"

"Quite, I think," she replied.

"I suppose you have seen all the celebrated old masters during your travels?" he continued, trying to draw her into conversation. "My knowledge of them is confined to our National Gallery and the Louvre."

"And so is mine," said Lucy.

"Then you both have a great pleasure in store."

It would be difficult to say what there was in this speech that mad Doctor Maurice and Lucy blush consciously; but they did. Doctor Maurice, quickly recovering his usual self-possession, went on,—

"Now tell me, did you ever see anywhere a picture that struck you as being finer in treatment of sentiment than that dead Christ of Francia's at our National Gallery? It always seems to me that that picture breathes the very spirit of religious feeling, and is absolutely perfect."

Lucy agreed with Doctor Maurice in his admiration of Francia's master-piece; but Mrs. Richmond said, with some hesitation—

"No doubt you will think me very eccentric, but I cannot feel any pleasure in looking at that picture—in fact it inspires me with a sensation of repulsion almost. My reason, I know, would sound a very foolish one; but I cannot get over it."

"Have you any objection to telling us what it is?" asked Doctor Maurice in an interested tone. "I must own to being curious on the subject."

"No; I will tell you, though I fear I will suffer in your respect. I have, and have had as long as I can remember, a positive horror of intensely red hair. When I see it in a picture, it makes me shudder; and I recollect once, when I was a child, sitting in a room with a man that had that blood-red hair until I felt quite faint, and had to be taken out into the air. This peculiarity interfered with my enjoyment in many of the galleries abroad. Edgar was quite annoyed with me one day because I begged him not to buy a very fine copy of a Magdalen with red hair, which he had previously made up his mind to purchase; however, he gave way when he understood my strong feeling on the subject; I could not have endured a room with it on the walls." She was getting excited and agitated. "Please let us talk of something else," she added; "to think of these things makes me quite uncomfortable;" and she shuddered as she spoke.

Doctor Maurice regretting his curiosity sincerely, did his best to lead the conversation into healthier channels; but it flagged, and, seeing that his hostess looked very tired and worn, he proposed going earlier than he had intended.

"Lucy dear, perhaps you would not mind letting Doctor Maurice out yourself."

"Not at all," she replied.

"Good night, Doctor; I am afraid I have quite shocked you with my silly antipathies."

"Oh, not at all! Do not think of it again to-night. We have all antipathies of one sort or other, and, thank goodness people with the offensive color are not very common. Thank you for a very pleasant evening. I shall come again to-morrow, and will bring some fresh medicine with me, as I intend altering the treatment a little. Good night."

"While he was getting his hat and coat in the hall, he said to Lucy:

"Don't let her go to bed yet; try to get her into some other train of thought first. I am awfully sorry I started that red-hair subject; I am afraid it has quite upset her. I managed just to feel her pulse as I was shaking hands, and it is much too feverish and quick. I am sorry to make you anxious, Miss Starr; but I thought it was right to mention it to you. Good night; I have had such a very pleasant evening, I shall want to come again very soon."

"I am sure we shall both be delighted to see you," Lucy responded sweetly; and then he went, and she stood and watched his tall, manly figure until it was no longer visible.

She went back to the drawing-room with a sigh. He had made her very uneasy, for she too had noticed that Mrs. Richmond seemed singularly distressed during the conversation leading to her peculiar antipathy. She was still racking her brains in search of an interesting topic, when she opened the door. She had no need however to have troubled herself.

Mrs. Richmond was walking up and down the room restlessly, and directly Lucy appeared, astonished her with the question—

"Lucy, what fortune have you?"

She was a person of most sensitive delicacy with regard to other people's affairs, so Lucy's surprise was not to be wondered at; she answered at once however—

"A hundred a year. It was left to me by my godmother, two years ago."

"And is that all you will have?" persisted Mrs. Richmond. "Shall you not inherit anything from your father?"

"No, indeed," replied Lucy cheerfully. "I am quite provided for, thanks to my godmother. Dear old dad will leave anything he has, which is not much, bless him, to my sisters."

"Well, child, it is not much; is it? But it it is enough to keep you from want; and I daresay you will marry some day."

"Oh, I don't expect so!" said Lucy hastily. "I am quite content and happy as I am."

"That I quite believe, dear," agreed her friend, who then relapsed into quiet thought.

After a short time, she said she was tired, and would like to go to bed; and Lucy, seeing she was so much quieter, ceased her objections, and led the way upstairs. She waited with Mrs. Richmond until she was in bed, and then bent over her to kiss her and say good-night.

"Heaven bless you, dear child!" said Mrs. Richmond. "How good you are to me! I wish I could do as much for your happiness as you are doing for mine. Good night, and pleasant dreams!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Sunny Rooms.

Those who build houses do so for the income they may yield. They are not especially interested in the welfare of those who may inhabit them. As a matter of observation we must insist that shaded houses are unhealthy, that every dwelling in which the young and growing live should have sunlight pouring into some of its rooms during every hour of the day. The importance of admitting the sunny rays in dwellings can not be too highly estimated. These rays promote health and strength. We are apt to feel that good health depends upon pure air more than on the influence of the sun. They both have so great an influence on life and growth that they should be allowed to fill every room occupied by animals or plants. Light may be so direct and brilliant as to be injurious to the eyes, then let its penetrating rays be softened, but let them enter in such a way as to do good and no harm.

Much has been said in recent times about the value of a sun bath. No doubt it does produce and retain a healthy condition of the body. It costs nothing but the means of exposing the nude body to the sunny rays in such a way as to exclude prying eyes. A few aged persons, we have known, who built a small room upon the top of their dwelling in such a way as to admit freely the sunny rays but exclude all eyes but His who lives in the space far above. These men lived to see their ninetieth year and more. They did not hesitate to proclaim the great influence of sunlight upon health and life. Others will find, if they search, that sunlight is worth more than gold—and pure water, fresh air, proper food well digested and a sunny house, always dry, will secure health and strength. Any one who has eyes and uses them may see that those who live in the open air and under the sunny rays are healthier and stronger than those whose days are chiefly spent in the shade. The feeble should seek the sunny rays; many become feeble by excluding from their homes the life-giving sun. They do all they can to exclude the source of all strength and health. Let all pale, weakly women court the sunny rays, and become robust and strong.

The London Post Office.

The London postoffice is a great institution. A street divides the two departments, one occupied by the business of letters and papers, the other with telegraphing. In Britain telegraphing is part of the regular postoffice system. The general postoffice building is an imposing edifice of the Ionic order. It is 400 feet long, 130 wide, and 64 feet high. The best time to see the outside rush is just before 6 p. m., at which hour the night mail closes. The rush is something tremendous. Errand boys, hatless clerks, business men, everybody jams forward to get his bundle of letters into the long zinc-edged or copper-faced opening before the hour strikes. Exactly at the minute the office closes, and all letters that are in haste must have an extra stamp on them if they are to go that night. The extra stamp business lasts for an hour. It is a sight to see the stampers at work. The stamper counts the letters, and when he has stamped fifty he hits his stamp on a long sheet of paper at his right hand, and thus the number of letters is estimated. A stamper in the London office can stamp about 6,000 letters an hour. The telegraph building is smaller and higher than the government postoffice. It is 286 by 144 feet and 84 feet from pavement to cornice. On the first floor are the offices of the postmaster general and the accountant general. On the next floor are the secretaries and staff, and in the two upper stories is the telegraph department. The instrument room is 125 by 80 feet. Fifteen million messages a year pass through it. The building is connected with the district telegraph offices of London by pneumatic tubes, and messages come through literally with the speed of the wind. Four engines in the basement furnish the wind.

An Amazonian Paradise.

In the Island of Java, between the cities of Batavia and Samarang, is the kingdom of Rantam, which, although tributary to Holland, is an independent State. The sovereign is, indeed, a man, but all the rest of the government belongs to the fair sex. The king is entirely dependent upon his State Council. The highest authorities, military commanders and soldiers are, without exception, of the female sex. The Amazons ride in the masculine style, wearing sharp steel points instead of spurs. They carry a pointed lance, which they swing very gracefully, and also a musket, which is discharged at full gallop. The capital of this little State lies in the most picturesque part of the island, in a fruitful plain, and is defended by two well-kept fortresses.

"I trust the current of my discourse last Sunday was not sufficiently formidable to hopelessly ingulf you," jocosely remarked a young Detroit clergyman to a lady member of his congregation the other evening. "Oh, no! It was quite shallow enough for comfortable wading, thank you."

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,

(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,

199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,

MARKDALE,

Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,

MARKDALE,

John McAlcer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

A PERF CT FIT GUARANTEED.

A PRIZE. Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine 187-239

MARKDALE

HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Monshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession. 122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale. 124ly

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.

PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON

CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of

BRICK AND STONE WORK,

Plain Ornamental Plastering.

Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention. 126-ly.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given.

All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

A SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebrated

CHATHAM WAGONS.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

A RARE CHANCE.

SAW-MILL FOR SALE.

THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4¼ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill; a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.

J. A. DUNCAN,
230 tf Markdale P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 22, con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres, mostly cleared and under cultivation. This farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For full particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE, Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO. NOBLE, Markdale. 234

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

For Sale by Walker Bros.

FARMERS, Headquarters for Manufacturers' Lardine Machine Oil. McCOLL BROS.

MARKDALE.

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing 60 lbs.	30 lbs. Flour,
" " 62 "	32 " "
" " 60 "	30 " "
" " 59 "	29 " "
" " 58 "	28 " "
" " 57 "	27 " "

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it, if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

YOU CAN SUBSCRIBE

For any of the

FOLLOWING PAPERS

AT THIS OFFICE:

Daily or Weekly Mail,	Toronto.
Daily os Weekly Globe,	Toronto.
Daily er Weekly News,	Toronto.
Daily World	Toronto.
Family Herald and Weekly Star,	Montreal.
American Agriculturist,	Monthly.
Farmers' Advocate,	Monthly.

☞ Subscription can commence at any time.

STANDARD OFFICE,
MARKDALE.

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select

STOCK OF

Teas,
Sugars,
Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

ABSTRACT STATEMENT

—OF THE—

Treasurer's Receipts and Expenditure

—FOR THE—

TOWSHIP OF OSPREY,

For the Year Ending 31st Dec., 1884.

1884. RECEIPTS.

Feb. 12	To balance on hand from 1883	$315 19
	" Assessments	7158 64
	" License Fund	156 54
	" Land Improvement Fund	58 05
	" Clergy Reserve Fund	22 26
	" Fines	17 00
	" Appeal re County	100 00
	" Non-Resident Tax	621 89
		$8449 57

1884. EXPENDITURES.

By County Rates	$2221 89
" Roads and Bridges	809 26
" Municipal Government	616 00
" Schools	4076 98
" Election Expenses	45 00
" Charities	93 00
" Printing, Postage, &c.	179 56
" Miscellaneous	45 21
" Appeal re County Valuation	258 25
" Board of Health	32 85
	$8378 00
Balance on hand	71 57
	$8449 57

M. CURTS.
C. McLEAN. } Auditors.
THOMAS GAMEY, REEVE.

Dated this 6th day of Feb., 1885.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleised Slate, &c., &c,

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock Blood Bitters Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. L.

OWEN SOUND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed.
Toronto....Leave	9 20am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orange- Arrive	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
ville Leave	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun.	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford	12 08pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Owen Sound	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30pm
Chatsworth	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun.	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orange Arrive	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
ville Leave	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto.....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

ROBERT S. RAE,

TAILOR,

Sydenham Street.

MARKDALE.

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS

In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon

From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.

At prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $6 per acre, on 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country for securing Good Homes now open for settlement.

FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE—10,218,433 Acres 49% MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1883, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific Country, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

AN PACIFIC R. R.
V SOUND BRANCH ME TABLE.
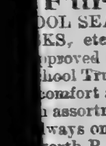
Monday, November 24th, 1884.
GOING NORTH.



S.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed
Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
ction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
ve...	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
ve...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
un...	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
...	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
....	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 35 "
....	12 08pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
....	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

S.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed
....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
....	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
....	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
....	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
n...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
e...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
....	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
ion..	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 20 "
rive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

T. ASKIN, RKDALE,
ened out a First-Class
NG ESTABLISHMENT,
has supplied a want long felt.
ASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
FURNISHINGS
on the shortest notice.
ndid Hearse
at moderate rates.
All kinds of—
RE FRAMING
on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

RT S. RAE,
LOR,
ham Street.
KDALE.

RN PACIFIC
LANDS
North Dakota, Montana, Washington and Oregon
erior to Puget Sound.
ly from $2 to $6 per acre.
s. This is the Best Country nes now open for settlement.
0 acres of Government d Free under the Homestead Timber Culture Laws. NOTE res OR MORE THAN
e lands disposed of in 1883, Pacific country. Books and describing the Northern e Railroad Lands for Sale and st Lands. Address, CHAS. B. r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Min.

OL TRUSTEES.
s manufacturing an ex-assortment of Furniture.
OOL SEATS and DESKS,
KS, etc., of the latest pproved pattern. Highly hool Trustees and Teach-comfort and compactness.
h assortment of Farm and lways on hand. Send for orth P. O.
ANDREW McGILL.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 242. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 30, 1885. {COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.}

Spring Stock
COMPLETE.

4 Complete Watches.

Gold and Silver Cases, Ladies and nts sizes, Waltham, Elgin, Springll and Swiss movements, 7, 9, 11 l 15 Jewelled. Close time-keepers. rrants cover all breakages, for 1 l years.

32 FINE CLOCKS,

Thomas & other makes.

EDDING RINGS, ACID TEST.

Coin Case, Elgin movement, ial., $12.00.
ood Swiss Watch, 15 Jewelled, r Case, $9.50.

dvertise Actual Present Stock,

l am in a position to give better ms, time or cash, than any other se in this section of Grey Co. Get ations, compare with mine, and e my statement. Long warrants to sell—very often—inferior or ation watches. I hold to the plan honest representation of every le, and give no warrants exceedyears. Cash discount 5 per cent. orth considerable to every purch-

FICULT WATCH REPAIRING A Specialty.
L WORK FULLY GUARANTEED.
W. A. BROWN,
weller, - Markdale.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

Another young winter on Tuesday.

Look for taffy pulls now.

Lively weather again.

Mr. Whitby finished assessing last week.

The Afghan difficulty is still unsettled.

Epitaph for a collector—"His work is done."

Markdale cattle fair is next Saturday 9th May.

Farm to rent or sell, apply to J. G. Long, Markdale.

Pleased to learn that Miss Maggie Weir is recovering.

Special quotations to cash customers at J. R. Trimble's.

For Pine and Maple Flooring, go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

Glad to see W. H. Rutledge about town after his recent illness.

Get your Fishing outfit before May 1st from W. A. Brown, Markdale.

For Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

Miss McColl wishes to get two or three smart girls to learn Mantle and Dress making.

J. R. Trimble has the largest and cheapest lot of Boots & Shoes ever shown in Markdale.

Mr. C. Crowe lost one of his horses last week, death caused by eating frozen wheat chop.

Obstructions of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, are promptly removed by Dr. Pierce's Pellets.

McFarland's store looks much improved by recent painting and whitening in the interior.

Seeds.—Field and Garden Seeds of all kinds at the Medical Hall, Turner & Co.

Freeman's Worm Powders destroy and remove worms without injury to the most infant.

For Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

Parties wanting Shingles had better see Weber at Vandeleur before purchasing elsewhere.

For Dressing Cases, Bureaus, Sideboards, Cupboards, Lounges, &c., go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

A council of Royal Templars of Temperance has been organised at Rocklyn with 25 members.

A large assortment of Ladies, Misses and Childrens' Hosiery for half price at J. R. Trimble's.

Subscriptions received from Miss Annie Millsap, Lefroy, and Mr. John Porter, Tehkummah. Thanks.

Hill Bro's are giving bargains in Parasols, Gloves, Hosiery, Corsets, etc. Don't forget to call and see.

Oil Cake, unsurpassed for Horses and Cattle, for sale at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

A first-class new waggon for sale, very cheap for cash, or easy terms to responsible party. Apply at this office.

The Mercatile Fire Insurance Co's business is steadily increasing in this locality—R. C. Bryden is agent.

A genius has invented steel knives which will cut cold iron. Now boarding-house beefsteak must yield.

Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup —An agreeable, safe and effectual remedy to remove all kinds of worms.

Mr. A. H. Watson, formerly proprietor of the Meaford Monitor, has purchased the Port Elgin Free Press.

The hotel at Primrose was burned last week, together with nearly all the furniture. It was partially insured.

The Pullman Car Co's repair shops at Philadelphia were burned last Wednesday, 22nd inst. Loss $15,000.

Mr. Bell, Glenelg Assessor, was in Markdale this week. He is painstaking and endeavoring to do his work well.

The Ontario Franchise Act, adopted at the late session of the Legislature, will not affect the Voters' List of this year.

J. R. Trimble takes the lead in Markdale for first-class goods at lower prices than you can buy poor trash in other stores.

Eggs.—Mamoth Light Brahmas, pure, for sale, one dozen for $2 or two dozen for $3. R. Montgomery, Markdale. 242 44

For a nobby Felt or Straw Hat, Tie Scarf or Shirt, go to J. R. Trimble's: he has the largest assortment ever seen in Markdale.

A woman in Markdale asked her three-year-old child, who she loved best? she gave the pertinent answer, God and Santa Claus.

'Tis very easily telling Hats that are made by Miss Love (Hill Bro's Milliner) as they are the most stylish and neatest in town.

Warren Tobey & Co's tannery in Collingwood was destroyed by fire last week. Loss from $40,000 to $50,000. Insured for $27,000.

The gaps on the C. P. R. north of Lake Superior are being rapidly closed so that Montreal and Winnipeg will be connected by rail by the 15th of May.

The nobbiest Suits, Hats, Ties, &c., in town come from Hill Bro's.—"So say the boys."—And it is a fact too, judging from the number they are selling.

A large advertisement appeared in the Dundalk Herald last week which was indeed creditable to both Graham & Co., the advertiser, and the Herald office.

The American Agriculturist is a first-class agricultural paper, we believe the best on the American Continent. Sample copies may be seen at this office. Subscription $1.50 per year, or clubbed with the Standard both for $2.00.

Wm. Lucas & Co. have any amount of money to loan on real estate security at 6½ per cent. Call on them before borrowing elsewhere. 238-3m

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

Mr. Edward Burnett, a Markdale citizen, has purchased the farm recently occupied by John Saunders, 11th con., Glenelg. Mr. B. will remove to it this week.

Shiloh's Cough and Consumption Cure is Sold by A. Turner & Co. on a guarantee. It cures consumption. z

Oxen for Sale.—A well matched pair of oxen rising four years old, well trained. For particulars apply to Geo. Ireton, one mile from Barrhead Mills. 142-44

Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

To those who have not an opportunity of reading the daily papers, the Standard is well worth $1.00 for three months for war news alone, and you can have it for 25 cents.

That Hacking Cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

"Fishing Tackle."—A full line of Baskets, Lines Hooks, Bait Cans, Sinkers, Poles, Fly's, &c., also Sewing Machine Needles at W. A. Brown' Watch shop, Markdale.

Will You Suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

The Montreal Herald and Weekly Star an excellent family paper, being in our opinion the best family paper published in America for $1 per year. Subscriptions taken at this office.

Sleepless Nights, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the remedy for you. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

See Miss Burch's Spring Millinery, choice goods, Wools and Fancy Goods, Dress and Mantle making as usual receives special attention. Eggs taken in exchange. 242-43

Catarrh Cured, health and sweet breath secured, by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. Nasal Injector free. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

Horses for Sale.

Two good general purpose Horses. Particulars on application to A. Turner & Co. 240-41

Shiloh's Vitalizer is what you need for Consumption, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness, and all symptoms of Dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents per bottle. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

James Lackey has the Berkeley Saw mill now in good trim and is prepared to supply the public with any quantity of lumber, hard or soft; a quantity of good lumber always on hand.

About Time.—A number of our exchanges are getting tired of publishing school reports. Teachers who wish to have their reports published, should at least, subscribe for the paper that publishes them.—Shelburne Free Press. Correct brother.

Credit Sale.—Mr. Wm. Bielby will sell by auction on his premises lot 4, con. 6, Euphrasia, on Monday next, 4th May, his stock, implements and household furniture. Terms—Seven months on good paper for sums over $5. Geo. Noble, auctioneer.

Sad Death.—We learn with regret the accidental death of Mr. John Black of Glenelg, brother of J. S. Black, Esq., township clerk. It appears he was in conversation with a companion at Paris station when a "shunting" engine struck him with above result. His brother and brother-in-law, Mr. D. McDonald of Priceville, brought the remains to Glenelg where they were interred.

Excellent Opening.—The ¼ acre lot opposite the Town Hall, Rocklyn, upon which a very comfortable dwelling house and a convenient shoe-shop are erected, can now be bought cheap, and on easy terms of payment. It is an excellent location for a shoe-maker, blacksmith, or other tradesmen. Apply to W. H. Dodson, Rocklyn.

Mr. S. Little Sen. has resided for 16 years or more in Osprey and has reached the advanced age of 105. Last week he left on a journey of nearly two hundred miles to visit his daughter. The old gentleman is remarkably active for his age.—Dundalk Herald.

We give this week a map of the probable seat of war between England and Russia, together with an outline or brief explanation of the cause of the present trouble. Next week we purpose giving a large map of the North-West territories with a synopsis of the history of the same.

Capt. Madill of the Benevolent Army of Jesus, commenced operations in this village last Thursday, and has held meetings in Reynolds' vacant store every evening since. The captain is thoroughly in earnest, and the services well attended. There is abundance of room for a good work.

Married.—Mr. E. D. Wilcox formerly of this place but now of Uxbridge, has entered into partnership "for better for worse" with Miss Emma, daughter of Rev. G. T. Richardson of Campbell's Cross, and sister of Mrs. Rev. J. Galloway, formerly of this village. We extend to the happy couple our best wishes.

An Act has been passed in the Local Legislature giving township councils power to aid individuals to build wire fences on the public highway. We hope this matter will receive the attention which it demands, both by individuals who own farms where heavy drifts of snow are prevalent on the public road, and councils.

Magistrates Court.—The winding up of the recent field fight, which was briefly noticed in these columns, took place on Tuesday last before a full bench of magistrates, with Squire Brown presiding, and terminated in both parties being fined. At the conclusion Mr. Brown addressed the parties concerned in an able and forcible manner.

At a hotel a short time since a girl inquired of a gentleman at the table if his cup was out. "No," said he, "but my coffee is." The girl was considerably confused, but determined to pay him in his own coin. While at dinner the stage drove up, and several coming in, the gentleman asked, "Does the stage dine here?" "No, sir," exclaimed the girl, in a sarcastic tone, "but the passengers do."

Carried Away.—Owing to the rapid thaw which has swollen all the streams in this vicinity to such an extent lately that the pressure of the Pottawatamie river was so great as to carry away the dam of Mr J. Wright, and also the foundation of the engine house, on Tuesday night. Mr. Wright made extensive improvements to the mill dam last summer, and the loss will be a severe one.—O. S. Advertiser.

Messrs. Legate & Carson have opened an agricultural implement show room in Kay's old stand opposite the Standard printing office where they keep on hand for sale implements and machinery of the following manufacture, L. D. Sawyer & Co. Hamilton; A. McGill, Chatsworth; Brantford Binder; Mann's Broadcast seeder and harrow combined; Wisner's Springtooth Harrow, and also agents for Walker's Patent Rack Elevator and Lucas Lock Block. These gentlemen are pushing their business and their implements can be relied on. Call and examine for yourselves.

CAN DEAFNESS BE CURED

Mr. John Clark, of Milldridge, Ont., declares it can, and that Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the remedy that cured him. It is also a specific for all inflammation and pain.

The inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country will please notice that the stores will close at 7 o'clock p. m. on and after the 1st May. This has been customary for a great many years now; and while thanking the many people who are aware of the great advantage Markdale has over other places to do their business in, we would respectfully invite their attention to the above notice and make it a point to have their trading done between the hours of 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. Signed by 17 of the Clerks.

Provincial Licenses.—The License Commissioner for South Grey met at Mr. J. Brown's office, Durham, pursuant to adjournment. All the members present on Wednesday. The following applications for Licenses were considered. Normanby:—Geo. Klempp, wine and beer license, granted. Bentinck:—Peter C. Bye, Shop License granted. Glenelg:—Wm. Hanbury, shop license, granted. R. H. Benson, shop license, granted. John McAleer, tavern license, granted. J. C. Caldwell, tavern license, granted. The application of J. J. Johnson of Bentinck was held over.—Chronicle.

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Durham

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Hanover—Monday before Durham.

Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

WATERLOO NEWS.

Walter Linton, Waterloo, writes that Hagyard's Yellow Oil has done great good in his family, his wife being cured of Callouse lumps that other medicines failed to remove, he also states that a neighbor was promptly relieved of Rheumatism by the same remedy.

Ably Edited Newspapers.

The frauds and humbugs seem to be gathering in Chicago. After having fleeced and swindled the public in the East, they go West to start anew, and as one of them modestly says, "to make a living for themselves and those who are dear to them." They say nothing about how "dear" they have made themselves to the victims they left behind them. Among them are some "able editors." One of these frauds claims to "manage" the "ablest edited paper in the country." Some of them are already in the Sheriff's hands, and more are in danger of making a close acquaintance with this official. We have already referred to two or three of them. One is call the "Chicago Post and Courier"; another is the "Illinois Agriculturist." The able editor who controls these two papers is G. S. Mayo. This scamp was arrested a few days ago by the U. S. Marshal and held in bonds for two thousand dollars on complaint of the Post Office Inspector. The Inspectors say that ten thousand dollars a day is taken in by similar frauds in Chicago alone. These papers are lottery concerns, which offer prizes to every subscriber, varying in amount according to the number of the subscriptions.—American Agriculturist for May.

FLUID LIGHTNING.

All sufferers from the terrible torment, Neuralgia, can be made happy in one moment by a single application of Fluid Lightning briskly rubbed on painful parts, and without using any disgusting medicine day after day with little or no result. Fluid Lightning also cures as effectually Toothache, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Headache, and is only 25 cents per bottle at Hill Bro's.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

Brother Gardner announced that the following rules and regulations would be in force from May 1:

No member allowed to remove his boots or shoes during a session on account of chilblains.

"Any member removing a book from the library without giving his name will be fined not less than $3,000, nor more than $7,000, according to the value of the work.

"Members will not be permitted to discuss politics or religion in the hall, but may freely talk horse and lay the foundation for dog-fights.

"The presiding officer is to be addressed as 'Misser Presfdent,' and not as 'Speaker' or 'Chairman,' his rank being the same as the President of the State Senate.

"While members are not prohibited from eating onions for supper on the night of the club, their attention is called to the fact that Limburger cheese is a good thing to break in on a monotony.

"A fraternal feeling is expected to prevail between members, but any member lending another money must take his chances on repayment. In case of a horse trade they are to forget for the time being that they ever saw each other before or will ever meet again.

"All dogs are to be left in charge of the outer guard, who will not be held financially responsible for any accidents.

"The members wearing clean shirts and having oil on their hair will take the front row of benches.

"No member will be excused from serving on a committee unless he can prove that insanity has always run in the family.

"In case the roof of Paradise Hall falls in each member will have license to get out as speedily as possible, but in case of a fire it is expected that the officers will take precedence in getting down stairs.

"All razors left in the hall after a meeting will be carefully laid away by the janitor, and once in three months there shall be a public sale, the proceeds of which shall go towards the founding of a Home for Superannuated Colored Scientists.

AN EMPTY HAT.

The Secretary announced a communication from Mrs. Matilda Eveleen Banks, of Columbus, Ga., who signed herself: "The only colored lady in the world who lectures on the future of the colored man at fifteen cents a head children free doors open at the usual hour please assist a good work." She didn't want to lecture before the Lime-Kiln Club, but she appealed in the name of all that was sacred for the club to take up a collection to assist her in publishing a book of poems she had dashed off at odd times.

"Jess so," said Brother Gardner as her scratched the back of his neck. "Brudden Walpole will circumlate de hat, an' ae opportunity will be offered fur each on o' you to contribute to de good cause."

The hat cam back as empty as a political promise and as dry as a last year's halibut, and the President peered into it and observed:

"Dis club am either savin' up itchange for de fust run o' watermellyons or else it believes de kentry isn't hankerin' arter mo' poems. De Seckretary will kindly notify the poetess of the result."

NOT THIS SEASON.

The following communication, dated from Montreal, was then announced:

The Handel-Mozart Jewett Club of Jubilee Singers (colored) of this city are about to take the road upon a grand musical tour, and request to be allowed the privilege of adding to our advertisements which will likely appear from Halifax, N. S., to Victoria, B. C., the phrase: "Under the distinguished patronage of Brother Gardner, President of the world-renowed Lime-Kiln Club." In exchange we would give our services gratis at a grand concert before the elite of your city upon our arrival there some time during the summer of 1887, which would, no doubt net you a sufficient sum to warrant the erection of a new Paradise Hall.

By order,
PROF. ADAM DARLING ESAW JONES,
Honorable Secretary.

"Permishun cannot be granted replied the President. "Ebery tub should stan' on its own bottom, an' if de show spoken of has any real merit it will run on its own reputashun. If it am a bad crowd an' poor show we doan' want to help advertise it.

REJECTED.

A social club at Olympia, W. T., sent in an application to be made a branch lodge, but it was discovered that one of their members was a defaulting church treasurer from Ohio, and the application was at once rejected. The motto of the far Westerners was also objected to: "Never approach a smoke-house door without looking for a spring gun." As Elder Toots observed:

"Why does any member of de Lime-Kiln Club desiah to approach a smoke-house? What possible objick could he have? What am de use of approachin' a smoke-house when you kin approach de pig pen?"

A PROSPECTIVE BANQUET.

The Hon. Stepback Smith secured the floor to offer a suggestion. The watermelon and the colored race had come to be one and and inseparable. The only drawback was the fact that the colored man was good for twelve months in the year, while the watermelon played out in three. His idea was that, upon the receipt of the first melon of the season, the club should hold a special meeting in recognition of the fact, and all speeches, orations, poems and statistics on the luscious fruit would be enthusiastically received and carefully reassured. At the close of the meeting the members would sit down to watermelon served up in fourteen different ways.

Giveadam Jones, Waydown Bebee, Pickles Smith and others spoke in favor of the idea, and as no one opposed it Brother Gardner appointed a committee of three to arrange the details and perfect the plans.

The lights were then blown out, and the meeting went home.

An Immortal Cat.

It has cost a certain household this week 48 cents to kill a black cat with about life enough, in her best days, to crawl to a breakfast of warm milk. It has also cost four square meals to four members of the housenold, caused by the untimely discussion of the subject, not counting three meals belonging to the cat, during the time her execution was pending, and one night's sleep lost to the hired girl during which she was haunted by the ghost of a black cat with a back arched to the very skies, with fire streaming from her nostrils, and a can labeled "dynamite" tied to her tail—the ghost appearing to her by walking on the headboard of the bed, waiting for her to go to sleep in order to complete the destruction of the household.

The cat still lived Tuesday morning, and at last accounts was disappearing down Lisbon street in a basket lugged by a boy with red mittens and a fur cap.

The death of the cat was decided upon Sunday. Monday she was chloroformed with ten cents' worth of chloroform, and a wash tub for sea room. Monday night the tub was lifted and in ten minutes the cat was in the front yard, and in four rounds had cleaned out a brindle cow who had strolled in over the garden wall during her enforced vacation. She came in at tea-time hungry and laboring under great excitement and was captured. A double dose of chloroform for supper enabled her to rest well during the night and to get up, somewbat hungry but not discouraged, Tuesday morning. Tuesday morning she came out for breakfast. She was fed on chloroform again, the man of the house remarking that it was expensive, but that if there was anything he lid like it was to make his home comfortable. At breakfast the reappearance of the cat caused the hired girl to drop a china platter under the impression that it was her ghostly friend, the dynamite cat. At noon the wash-tub was heard to give out animated sounds, and so the boy with red mittens and the fur cap was called in, and bribed with a dime to bring relief, by a hole in the ice, to the cat and the household. The cat is now supposed to have been decapitated, but, like the cat of the story, she may turn up on the front door steps crying for admittance, and bring her own head in her mouth.

Singularities of Eminent Men.

Luther and Verulam believed in witches, Dr. Johnson objected to going under a ladder. Byron was a victim of shyness. His biographer relates that, while on a visit to Mrs. Pigot, of Southwell, when he saw visitors approaching he would jump out of the window on to the lawn to avoid them. Shadwell, De Quincy, Coleridge, and the imposter, Psalmanazar, were addicted to the use of opium. Fuseli and Dryden ate raw meat to inspire vivid dreams. Byron seems to have found poetical inspiration in the prosaic tipple of gin and water. Shelley, while composing, was continually eating bread. Scott wrote best when children were playing about him. Boyse wrote his poems lying in bed, whith two holes in the blanket for his hands. Few people can read or write well while music is being played in the room; yet Alfieri found it necessary for the composition of his tragedies. He was also possessed with the strange ambition, not of being the first poet, but the first runner in Italy. Handel could never bear to hear the tuning of of the orchestra. Blackstone never penned a line without a bottle of old port at his elbow. Melancthon is reported to have frequently studied the gravest points of theology with his book in one hand and in the other the edge of a candle, which he continually rocked. Paley used to go without stockings. Adam Smith was fond of nibbling lump sugar on the sly. Spinoza used to laugh till he cried at spiders fighting. Perhaps it is not very singular, considering the cruelty of the man, that Ivan the Terrible used to go and see prisoners tortured before breakfast.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of Catarrh Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star.

The rage for tinsel is on the increase.

Important

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage, Expressage and Carriage Hire and stop at GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 450 elegant rooms, fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced to $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

"All Men are Liars," said David of old. He was probably prompted to make the above remark after trying some unreliable catarrh remedy. Had he been permitted to live until the present day, and tried Dr. Sage's Remedy, he might have had a better opinion of mankind. We claim that no case of catarrh can withstand the magic effects of this wonderful medicine. One trial of it will convince you of its efficacy. By druggists; fifty cents.

It requires your enthusiastic Wagnerite to distinguish between opera and uproar.

A Prize in the Lottery of life which is usually unappreciated until it is lost, perhaps never to return, is health. What a priceless boon it is, and how we ought to cherish it, that life may not be a worthless blank to us. Many of the diseases that flesh is heir to, and which make life burdensome, such as consumption (scrofula of the lungs) and other scrofulous and blood diseases, find a complete cure in Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" when all other remedies have failed. Dr. Pierce's pamphlet on consumption mailed for two stamps. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Man wants but little here bill owe, but wants that little paid.

.˙. .˙. .˙. Delicate diseases of either sex, however induced, speedily and permanently cured. Consultation free. Book three (3ct.) stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

The inventor of a flying machine is scarly to be pitied.

Sure Pop.

Polson's NERVILINE, the great pain cure, is sure pop every time. No need to spend a large sum to get prompt relief from every kind of pain, for 10 cents will purchase a trial bottle. Go to any drug store for it. Large bottles only 25 cents, at all druggists. Neviline the pain king, cures cramps, headache, neuralgia. An aching tooth, filled with batting saturated with Nerviline, will cease aching within five minutes. Try Nerviline for all kinds of pain. Ten and 25 cents a bottle.

The boy whose hair is cut by his mother seldom takes off his hat when there are ny girls around.

Few people have any idea of the care with which tobacco has to be attended after it is grown. It will imbibe odors of almost any kind if placed near the source of them. A pig stye, for instance, near the place where the planter stores his crops will impart a disagreeable flavor, which no care afterwards will divest it of. Among the many precautions taken to obtain a faultless leaf for the "Myrtle Navy" brand, is to ascertain carefully the methods which every farmer adopts with his crops in the sections of Virginia where the "Myrtle Navy" is grown.

A man is often called a bartender when in reality he is a bar tough.

What an Englishman Wants.

LEEDS,
25 Norwood Crescent,
Victoria Road, Leeds.
21 January, 1884.

Gents: Kindly send me the price of PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR. I have tried it and found it an admirable remedy. I call every three months upon the best boot dealers in the north of England. I will, if I can profitably, buy and sell it.

Yours truly,
S. DUNN.

Use only Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, propre.

A hen-pecked husband is not always shrewd.

Young Men! Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Volatic Belt and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

A. P. 225

FARMS FOR SALE.—All kinds.—Send for list. JOHN J. DALEY, Guelph.

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk, Carpet, and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, On.

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR
IMPERIAL FRENCH SHOE BLACKING

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH. How it can be accomplished—sealed particulars 3c. Sanitary Pub. Co., Canadian Depository, Toronto Can.

YOUNG MARRIED Persons, or those about to marry, will be greatly benefited by sending 3c for sealed particulars of this advertisement. J. W. SOUTHWICK, Toronto, Canada, PURE SEED AYRSHIRES for sale, two cows, two yearling heifers and one bull. Write for description, price and pedigree to G. F. BAKER, Trafalgar.

CLACHMHOR HERD.—FOR SALE.—A number of pure-bred short-horn Bates Bulls; catalogues on application JAMES COWAN & SONS, Galt.

TO BRICK & TILE MAKERS.—If you want engines and boilers, and the latest improved brick and tile, clay-crushing, and stone separating machinery for steam or horse power, address M. C. FARRAR or NORSWORTHY & Co. St. Thomas, Ont.

THE BLIND SEE.—Those afflicted are requested to get Williams' Eye Water, it cures all diseases of the Eye that are curable, even Color Blindness, ask your druggists for it. Wholesale by Lyman Sons & Co., Montreal. Send for circular to see the marvelous cures effected in Montreal to GEO. WILLIAMS, 709 St. Lawrence street, or at GARDNER'S Drug Store, corner McGill and Notre Dame streets.

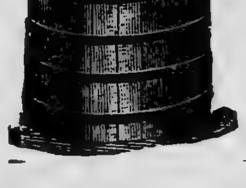
SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for prices to W. CLARK P. O. Box 342 Montreal

TRY PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER
PURE GOLD MANUFACTURING CO.
31 FRONT ST. EAST Toronto.

AGENTS WANTED Male and female—best thing ever offered to agents—$25.00 per week easily earned, 30c. for circular. Address P. Stevenson, Room "H," Arcade, Toronto, Canada.

R. W. PRITTIE,
REAL ESTATE AGENT.
Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee, & Financial Agent Room C, Arcade, Yonge St. Toronto. Money to loan Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged. Manitoba and United States lands taken in part exchange for city property.



Files
REOUT! DON'T WASTE THEM. SHIP OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FILE CO.
130 Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents Wanted.

FOR PLEASANT SEWING
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Cotton!
Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry Goods Dealers.

F. E. DIXON & CO
Manufacturers of Star Rivet
LEATHER BELTING,
King Street, East, Toronto
Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

CUT THIS OUT!
The New Co-Operative
Sewing Machine!
—IS THE—
BEST IN THE MARKET.
NEW STAND! NEW FURNITURE!
Latest Improved Attachments
Agents price for similar machine $60
Our price only $25 each.
Before buying send us stamp for our elegant photograph and sample sewing.
Machines guaranteed for 3 years and sent on trial.
Any lady wanting a machine will do well to write to
THE CO-OPERATIVE
Sewing Machine Co.
22 JAMES ST. SOUTH, HAMILTON.

ONTARIO PUMP CO.
(Limited.)
OFFICE AND FACTORY COR. SPADINA AVE. AND CECIL STS., TORONTO, ONT.

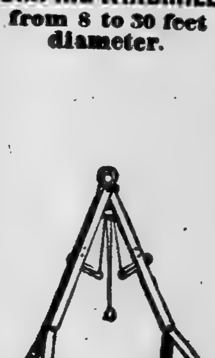
TANKS
from the smallest up to 2,855 bbls.

I X L FEED MILL
guaranteed to grind from 10 to 25 bushels per hour, according to size. These Mills are the most durable, perfect and cheapest Iron Feed Mill yet invented.



Eleven Sizes

GEARED WINDMILLS
from 1 to 40 h. p., for Pumping Water, running Grain Crushers, Straw Cutters, Root Pulpers, or any other machinery up to a 40 h. p. grist mill.

PUMPING WINDMILLS
from 8 to 30 feet diameter.

HAYING TOOLS.
A full line of the Best.

PUMPS.
Iron and Wood.
Force or Lift.
Deep Well Pumps a Specialty.

Pipe & Pipe Fittings
In fact a full line of Water Supply Material.

Send us your address on a post card and we will send you 104 page illustrated catalogue free.
Mention this Paper.

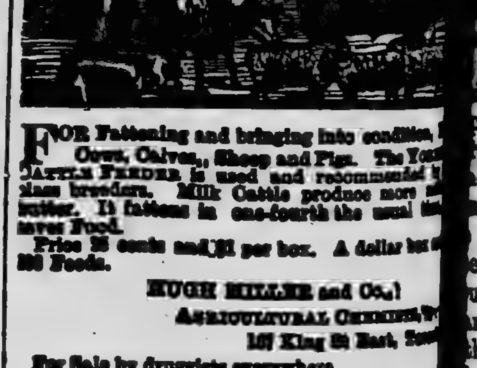
Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan, Proprietor Boston Montreal.

Dominion Line of Steamships
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from QUEBEC
SARNIA.—May 16, June 27, Aug. 8, Sept. 19.
VANCOUVER.—May 30, July 11, Aug. 22, ...
OREGON.—June 13, July 25, Sep. 5, Oct. 17.
Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool, $50, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate, $35, steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

LADIES
PILLS OF TANSY are Perfectly Safe and always Effectual. Sealed particulars ...
Wilcox Specific Medicine Co., Philadelphia.

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFE...
50 2nd-hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for List.
Send 3c. stamp for largest catalogue ever issued in C...
A. T. LANE, Montreal.

C. FELL & Co. 21 ADELAIDE ST. E. TORONTO ENGRAVERS LETT...
Mfrs. of HAND STAMPS Steel Alphabets ... stock & cut to order Brass Stamps in any ... style fine RUBBER STAMPS, Type, ... Iron BRANDS, Stencils SEALS, Checks ...



CONSUMPTION
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New ...

CLIMAX Lorillard&Co GRADE
R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax ... bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

CONBOY'S

CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition Horses, Cows, Calves, Sheep and Pigs. The Yorkshire CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time and saves Food.
Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 200 Feeds.
HUGH MILLER and Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,
167 King St East, Toronto.
For Sale by druggists everywhere.

CAUTION
Each Plug of the
MYRTLE NAVY
IS MARKED
T. & B.
In Bronze Letters.
NONE OTHER GENUINE.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating, properties of beef, and the only one which has power to supply nourishment for brains, nerves, and muscle.

The Temperance Colonization Society
LIMITED.
Free Homesteads. One Hundred and Sixty Acres of Beautiful Land Free to Actual Settlers.
SPECIAL ADVANTAGES:
First are lar ; plenty o' pure water; navigable river passing through it; sober, thrifty, moral ... healthy climate; no fevers; convenient to coal mines; season longer than in Manitoba; ... supply store in the colony; located in centre of fertile belt.
FIRST EXCURSION TO THE COLONY, ABOUT APRIL 2ND.
FURTHER EXCURSIONS TO FOLLOW DURING THE SEASON.
Maps of the Colony and City, and all information furnished on application.
HEAD OFFICE, 114 King Street West, Toronto.
W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Manager.

"Let Sleeping Dogs Lie."

(OLD PROVERB.)

England's grown too English, yet,
England's heart is strong;
...tid she wears the coronet,
...me with sword and song.

...their pride our fathers died,
...eed be, so die we;
...wield we still, gainsay who will,
...sceptre of the sea.

...d, stand fast! let heart and hand
...steady;
...first word thy last—Ready, aye ready!

...say we've made of Trade our king,
...e say our blood is cold;
...from our lips no longer rings
...trumpet notes of old,

...jibe and jeer they gather near
...sleeping lion's den,
...uton fair, O Russ beware,
...these "shopkeeping" men;

...d, stand fast! let heart and hand
...steady;
...first word thy last—Ready, aye ready!

...Raleighs still for Raleigh's part,
...d Nelsons yet unknown;
...pulses of the Lion-heart
...at on through Wellington.

...Briton, hold thy creed of old—
...rong foe and steadfast friend;
...still until thy motto true,
...y act, but defend!

...d, stand fast! let heart and hand
...steady
...first word thy last—Ready, aye ready!

...t not, nor fall, ye sons of those,
...e bravest born of men;
...nearest friends may be our foes
...en turns the wheel again.

...while we pray, in Heaven's good day
...e reign of saints may come,
...l its dawn, with weapons drawn,
...wait the tuck of drum!

...d, stand fast! let heart and hand
...steady;
...first word thy last—Ready, aye ready!

DEFENCELESS LONDON.

A Well-Known General Says Upon the Matter.

...ybody who has touched on the question of the defence of England has insisted on the necessity of rendering London by means independent of the armies in the field. The capital is so near the points of our coast (one vulnerable point is about 30 miles from London, others hardly more than 40) that ... of an enemy's army which might ...ed in any way, whether by force or ...rise, in moving inland faster than the ...nders could intervene, might lay ...s on it. Vain would then be any ...ries of ours elsewhere; the foe ...d have us by the throat. Therefore ...y schemes have been devised for the ...ce of London. The problem has ...ed one of quite unique difficulty, owing to the vast and constantly increasing ...of the metropolis. Only a military ..., absolute in power and energy, ...d face the task of making of it a fortress, that is of inclosing the town with ...parts to secure it from assault, and ...ounding these with an outer circle of ... to shelter it from bombardment. A ...promise has been more than once attempted by abandoning the idea of the ramparts and proposing to surround the ...tal with detached forts, permanently ...t and armed. But besides the objection of locking up in these forts the great ... necessary to man them, the value of ...land would render it vain to think of ...chasing sites so extensive. Moreover ... imply the ability to stand a siege, ... London is never victualled for that ...ngency, and never could be if the ...mand of the sea were lost. What it ...s is the ability to protect itself from ...t, and to relieve the field army from ...ecessity of always directly covering ... condition which must be embarrassing and would perhaps lead to a fatal ex...on of our forces. I would therefore ...pose the practicable and, to my mind, ...y way preferable course of designing ...e of positions round London. Taking at first the most vulnerable sides, this ... might start from Claybury Hill, in ...ex-on-the-Roding, to the Thames ...ut Barking; thence south of the ...mes, following either the line marked ...he heights of Plumstead and Shuter's ..., to Bromley, or if it were judged necessary to preserve Woolwich from the ...nces of fire, the more forward front of ...th, Bexley, Chiselhurst, Bromley, and by Beckenham, Upper Norwood, and ...mbledon to Kingston Hill, from ...nce the Thames would be the front ...efence to Kew; thence north of the ...er by Acton, Willesden, Muswell Hill, ...tenham, Woodford, to the completion of the circuit at Claybury. Within ... circuit, of some 50 miles in extent, ...itions must be chosen, each including ...roup of roads leading upon the capital ...n a possible landing place.

The Detective Won.

A despatch was received to arrest a ...ng man, 28 years old, light hair, sandy ...ustache, with "Burnside" whiskers, ... of strong English accent. Detective Ressler arrested him at a Penn street ...el. He gave the name of Smythe. ... the next train there arrived from Philadelphia John Byrne, who was a friend of ... young man arrested. Both are residents of Liverpool, England, Byrne being ...old Dublin detective. Several months ... their conversation turned on the stupidity of our modern detectives, when Smythe said that he would lay a wager ...t if given a fair start, the same as the ...rage criminal, he could escape his pursuers and lead them around the world, and ...t back to England before they could. A number of friends helped to swell the bet, ...d Smythe was given ten days' start. ...e travelled from city to city after coming to America, and registered under many aliases. His friend Byrne had as his assistants some of the best detectives in the country to help run down the criminal, they supposed.

There are two things in this world nobody is ever prepared for—Twins.

Line Royal Mail Steam...
A. Schumacher & Co., Balti...
Co., Halifax; Shea ...
m. Thomson & Co., St. John...
Co., Chicago; Love & Alden...
B. uclier, Toronto; Allans, Rae...
Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H... oprietor Boston Montreal.

nion Line of Steamsh... in connection with the Grand Trunk R...
Sailing from Quebec every Saturday ... r months, and from Portland every ...
the winter months. Sailing dates ...
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.
General Agents, Mo...

LADIES
OF TANSY are Perfectly Sa... and always Effectual. Sealed particulars ... pecific Medicine Co., Philadelphia ...

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY
50 2nd-hand Bicycles
Tricycles.
Send for List.
Send 3c. stamp for large ...
alogue ever issued in Ca...
LANE, Montre...

NGRAVERS LETTE...
s. of HAND STAMPS Steel Alphabets ... ck&cut to order BrassStamps in any st... le fine RUBBER STAMPS, Type, Copp... n BRANDS. Stencils. SEALS, Checks ...

NSUMPTION
ositive remedy for the above disease; ...
A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New Y...

R. U. AWAR...
THAT Lorillard's Climax P... bearing a red tin tag; that Lori...
Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lori... pings, and that Lorillard's Snuf... cheapest, quality considered?

S CARRIAGE TOPS are the ...
est in the Market. Order ...
Carriage Maker. Take no ...

RE CATTLE FEED

UGH MILLER and Co.
Agricultural Chemists, ...
167 King St. East, Toron... uggists everywhere.

UTION
ach Plug of the TLE NAVY
S MARKED
& B Bronze Letters.
OTHER GENUINE
N'S FLUID BE...

tion Society
d and Sixty Acres of L...
Free to Actual Settle...
OUT APRIL 2ND.
THE SEASON.
treet West, Toro...
RTON PAGE, Manager.

"Let Sleeping Dogs Lie."

(OLD PROVERB.)

England's sons are English yet,
...d England's heart is strong;
...till she wears the coro.et,
...ame with sword and song.

...n their pride our fathers died,
...need be, so die we;
...wield we still, gainsay who will,
...he sceptre of the sea,

...nd, stand fast! let heart and hand be steady;
...y first word thy last—Ready, aye ready

...e say we've made of Trade our king;
...ome say our blood is cold;
...t from our lips no longer rings
...he trumpet notes of old,

...h jibe and jeer they gather near
...he sleeping lion's den,
...euton fair. O Russ beware,
...these "shopkeeping" men;

...nd, stand fast! let heart and hand be steady
...y first word thy last—Ready, aye ready.

...e Raleighs still for Raleigh's part,
...d Nelson's yet unknown;
...pulses of the Lion-heart
...eat on through Wellington.

...d, Briton, hold thy creed of old—
...trong foe and steadfast friend;
...still until thy motto true,
...defy not, but defend!

...and, stand fast! let heart and hand be steady
...y first word thy last—Ready, aye ready!

...t not, nor fall, ye sons of those,
...he bravest born of men;
...nearest friends may be our foes
...hen turns the wheel again.

...while we pray, in Heaven's good day,
...he reign of saints may come,
...il its dawn, with weapons drawn,
...e wait the tuck of drum!

...nd, stand fast! let heart and hand be steady;
...y first word thy last—Ready, aye ready

DEFENCELESS LONDON.

...s Well-Known General Says Upon the Matter.

...verybody who has touched on the question of the defence of England has insist... on the necessity of rendering London ...by means independent of the armies ...he field. The capital is so near to ...y points of our coast (one vulnera... point is about 30 miles from London ...others hardly more than 40) that a ... of an enemy's army which might ...ed in any way, whether by force or ...prise, in moving inland faster than the ...nders could intervene, might lay ...s on it. Vain would then be any ...ories of ours elsewhere; the foe ...ld have us by the throat. Therefore ...y schemes have been devised for the ...ence of London. The problem has ...ved one of quite unique difficulty, owing to the vast and constantly increasing ...of the metropolis. Only a military ...r, absolute in power and energy, ...d face the task of making of it a fortress, that is of inclosing the town with ...parts to secure it from assault, and ...ounding these with an outer circle of ...s to shelter it from bombardment. A ...promise has been more than once attempted by abandoning the idea of the ...ramparts and proposing to surround the ...ital with detached forts, permanently ...lt and armed. But besides the objection of locking up in these forts the great ...e necessary to man them, the value of land would render it vain to think of ...rchasing sites so extensive. Moreover ...s imply the ability to stand a siege, ...London is never victualled for that ...tingency, and never could be if the ...mand of the sea were lost. What it ...ds is the ability to protect itself from ...ult, and to relieve the field army from ...necessity of always directly covering ...a condition which must be embarrassing, and would perhaps lead to a fatal ex...sion of our forces. I would therefore ...pose the practicable and, to my mind, ...ry way preferable course of designing ...ne of positions round London. Taking at first the most vulnerable sides, this ...e might start from Claybury Hill, in ...sex-on-the-Roding, to the Thames ...at Barking; thence south of the ...mes, following either the line marked ...the heights of Plumstead and Shuter's ..., to Bromley, or if it were judged necessary to preserve Woolwich from the ...nces of fire, the more forward front of ...th, Bexley, Chiselhurst, Bromley, and ...by Beckenham, Upper Norwood, and ...mbledon to Kingston Hill, from ...hence the Thames would be the front ...defence to Kew; thence north of the ...er by Acton, Willesden, Muswell Hill, ...tenham, Woodford, to the comple...n of the circuit at Claybury. Within ...s circuit, of some 50 miles in extent, ...itions must be chosen, each including ...group of roads leading upon the capital ...m a possible landing place.

The Detective Won.

A despatch was received to arrest a ...ung man, 28 years old, light hair, sandy ...oustache, with "Burnside" whiskers, ...d of strong English accent. Detect...e Ressler arrested him at a Penn street ...otel. He gave the name of Smythe. ...n the next train there arrived from Philadelphia John Byrne, who was a friend of ...e young man arrested. Both are res...ents of Liverpool, England, Byrne being ...n old Dublin detective. Several months ...go their conversation turned on the stu...idity of our modern detectives, when ...mythe said that he would lay a wager ...at if given a fair start, the same as the ...verage criminal, he could escape his pur...ers and lead them around the world, and ...et back to England before they could. A ...umber of friends helped to swell the bet, ...nd Smythe was given ten days' start. He travelled from city to city after coming to America, and registered under many ali...ses. His friend Byrne had as his assist...ants some of the best detectives in the ...ountry to help run down the criminal, ...s they supposed.

There are two things in this world no...body is ever prepared for—Twins.

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY

There will not be a total eclipse of the sun until 1999. [partly illegible]

An Australian naturalist has discovered the nervous system of sponges.

A German chemist is making a substance which he claims will supersede gutta-percha.

A new rifle, capable of discharging three projectiles at a time, has been made in France.

A cord of stone, three bushels of lime and a cubic yard of sand will lay 100 cubic feet of wall.

Describing the cranial differences observable in men and women, M. Manouvrier considers that while the parietal is less developed in women, the occipital is generally larger in them than in men.

There is less blood in cold-blooded than in warm-blooded animals. The larger the animal the greater is the proportion of blood to the body. Man has about a gallon and a half of blood, equal to one-thirteenth of his weight.

Cork, when carbonized, produces 62.80 per cent. pure charcoal, the greatest per cent. of any known wood. Willow, wheat straw and oak rank next in the order named, while maple and poplar are 33.75 and 31.12, or at the very foot of the list.

Five courses of brick will lay one foot in height on a chimney. Nine bricks in a course will make a flue eight inches wide and twenty inches long, and eight bricks in a course will make a flue eight inches wide and sixteen inches long.

Dr. J. R. Irwin, in the North Carolina Medical Journal, recommends chewing cinnamon bark as an almost immediate cure for toothache, and much more agreeable to use than creosote, carbolic acid, etc. The bark must be of good quality.

The toad, frog and chameleon capture insects by darting out the tongue, which is tipped with glutinous saliva. The boa constricting serpents crush their prey in their coils before swallowing, and the venomous snakes have a poison fang.

If a four-inch and a two-inch shaft are both solid and each makes one hundred or any other given number of turns in one minute or other specified time, six times as much power will be consumed in turning the larger as in turning the smaller shaft.

A German invention, it is said, will protect iron from rust. Ordinary oil paint, mixed with 10 per cent. of burned magnesia, baryta or strontia, as well as mineral oil, neutralizes the free acid of the paint, and the alkaline action protects the iron from rust.

The organ of hearing is generally double, but not always located in the head. In the clam it is found at the base of the foot; some grasshoppers have it in the fore legs, and in many insects it is on the wing. Lobsters and crabs have the auditory sacs at the base of the antennæ.

The Bartholdi statue is composed of an inner skeleton of steel and an outer coating of copper. There was danger that electric currents would be established, which would before many years cause the copper to disappear. This danger, it is said, has been overcome by General Stone.

Dr. Tyndall states that of the radiant energy set up by a gas flame only the 1-25 part is luminous; the hot products of combustion carry off at least four times as much energy as is radiated, so that not more than one-hundredth part of the heat evolved in combustion is converted into light.

The Lancet says that appetite is a most misleading sensation, only remotely related to the actual demands of the organism. If we only ate more deliberately we should find half our accustomed quantity of food sufficient to satisfy the most eager cravings of hunger, and hence save ourselves from the evils of dyspepsia, or, on the other hand, a tendency to over increase in weight.

Defective hearing is growing more prevalent in the United States, so says Dr. Sexton. It produces in children first the appearance of stupidity and then the reality. They do not hear sounds distinctly, and, of course, they cannot imitate sounds accurately. Defects in the teeth are a great cause of this lamentable calamity in the young, and this is a fresh reason for avoiding quack applications of so-called dentists and keeping to pure soap and water in cleansing the teeth.

Found in the Heart of an Oak Tree.

Abram Reed, a farmer living on the Kiskominitis Creek, Pa., cut down a large oak tree on his farm a few days ago and in cutting it up he found embedded in the trunk, seven or eight feet from the ground, a small glass bottle and what had the appearance of a lock of hair. The bottle had been inserted in a hole in the tree made by an auger. Then a pine plug was driven in the hole over the bottle, the hair being held in the hole also by the plug. The bottle was corked, and contained a colorless liquid. Over the plug had grown six solid rings of wood, besides the thick bark. There was a superstition among the early settlers, and it is held by many of their descendants, that asthma and other affections could be cured by the victim standing against the trunk of a tree and having a lock of his hair plugged in it while the hair was still attached to his head. It must then be cut off close to the head and the afflicted person walk away without looking at it or ever passing by the tree again. While the use of a bottle of any liquid was not included in this treatment, it is believed that the one discovered with the hair in the heart of the oak tree by Farmer Reed was put there in the early days of the settlement by some believer in the superstition, to cure an ailment of some kind.

A Practical Girl.

Helen Burdett's father was an Illinois farmer with a good farm of, perhaps 200 acres, but without [illegible] labors or inherit his estate. He accordingly brought up his daughter Helen very much as he would have brought up a boy. She was a strong and healthy, very intelligent, and with a decided taste for outdoor life, and she very soon attained a reputation for "judgment" and for knowledge second to that of no farmer or stock-raiser in the vicinity. When she was eighteen years old her father died, and it seemed necessary that she should carry on the place for at least a year to come, a task to which she was fully equal. The crops were accordingly planted under her direction, and she went out to buy steers, as her father usually went at that season. She purchased sixty-five head of steers, pastured them during the summer, and sold them at the end of the season at a clear profit of exactly $1.066. She knew every kind of land on the farm, "every inch of the ground," as the saying is, and just what should be done with it. Every man in the vicinity understood that she was thoroughly intelligent in her business, and that it would be useless to try and overreach her. One man, when questioned about her, remarked in the vernacular of the country, "There ain't a man in the state can size up a herd of steers as close as she can, and our droveyer says she beats him at a bargain every time." Yet Miss Helen Burdett is as modest and lady-like as any girl in the United States. The drover did not mean that she "beat him down," or "beat him out," but simply that she understood cattle and could tell their "points" better than he could.

When Helen was fourteen years old, her father gave her permission to go and buy a cow for herself. She went forth alone and independent, bought her cow, and came home leading it by the rope.

Her cow proved to be an excellent investment. "I knew," said her father triumphantly, "that she could pick out a better one than I could myself, and I believe she has done it."

A picture of Miss Helen Burdett stands before me as I write. But she is Helen Burdette no longer. A wealthy young farmer from the far West came to know and love her, and appreciated her value. When she married, her father's house and farm were sold at auction. She managed the sale and it was completed most admirably. The picture is taken in her wedding dress, and the quiet, regular, thoughtful face would indicate to the uninitiated a student, possibly an artist or a writer. No one would suspect this elegantly attired and self possessed young woman of being a thorough farmer and expert stock-raiser "I tell you," said a keen old man, who has watched her progress from early girlhood, "it's a lucky man that gets Helen Burdett for a wife. She'll double his property, in plain dollars and cents, if he'll only take her advice, inside of five years.

Gold and Silver.

Gold in its relative value to silver has varied greatly at different periods. In the days of the patriarch Abraham it was one to eight; B C. 1000, it was one to twelve; B.C. 500, it was one to thirteen; at the commencement of the Christian era, it was one to nine; A D. 500, it was one to eighteen; in 1100, it was one to eight; in 1400 it was one, to eleven; in 1545, it was one to six; in 1551, it was one to two; in 1600, it was one to ten; in 1627, it was one to thirteen; in 1700, it was one to fifteen and one-half; it held the latter ratio, with but slight variation, until 1872, when it began to rise, and in 1876 it rose to one to twenty; it soon gradually declined, and now stands one to nineteen and one-half.

Gold to the amount of $1,081,000,000 is estimated to have been in existence at the commencement of the Christian era. At the period of the discovery of America it had diminished to $125,000,000. After that event it gradually increased, and in 1600 it attained to $154,000,000; in 1700 it reached $398,000,000; in 1800 it amounted to $1 156,000,000; in 1853 it attained to $3,332,000,000, and at the present time the amount of gold in existence is estimated to be $8,166,000,000, which, if melted into one mass, could be contained in the basement of the Bunker Hill monument, which is a cube of thirty feet. Of the amount of gold in existence $6,000,000,000 is estimated to be in coin and bullion, $1,000,000,000 in watches, and the remainder in plate, jewelry, and ornaments. Of the amount of gold in existence $2,374,000,000 is estimated to have been obtained from North America, $1,739,000,000 from South America, $1,858,000,000 from Asia (including Australia, New Zealand, and Oceanica), $945,000,000 from Europe, and $1,250,000,000 from Africa. The amount of the precious metals now in existence is estimated to be $13,670,000,000.

The Human Pulse.

The human pulse has rather a wide range, but the general average may be put about as follows: At birth, 140; at two years, 100; at from sixteen to nineteen years, 80; at manhood, 75; old age, 60. There are, however, great variations consistent with health. Napoleon's pulse is said to have been only 44 in the minute. A case is also related of a healthy man of eighty-seven whose pulse was seldom over 30 during the last two years of his life, and sometimes not over 26. Another man of eighty-seven years enjoyed good health and spirits with a pulse of 29, and there is also on record the curious instance of a man whose pulse in health was never more than 45, and to be consistent in his inconsistency, when he had fever his pulse fell to 40 instead of rising, as is usual.

LAUGHLETS.

A new magazine is called [illegible]'s [illegible]. It won't be given away.

Recipe for a delicious saucer of Southern strawberries: One decorated saucer, one gill of rich cream, one pound of pure sugar, one strawberry.

The elephant and turtle may occasionally live to be a hundred years old, but the skunk is the recognized scentenarian of natural history.

Good Mrs. L. I. Teral: "I see they are serving refreshments on roller skates in some of the restaurants," the husband said, as he laid down his paper. "Good gracious!" exclaimed the wife, "have they no plates?"

An Austin Sunday-school teacher asked her class: "For what purpose did God give man his different senses? Why are we given eyes?" "To shut 'em when we go to sleep," said the dull boy at the foot of the class.

First Dude—"Why do you hesitate about getting mawied, Algernon?" Second Dude—"Aw! I've my weasons, my boy." F. D.—"Afwaid you can't support a wife?" S. D.—"Na, me boy, I'm afwaid she can't support me."

Sharp claws in velvet sheath: "I don't know as I can make you understand just what I mean, Clara," said Margaret, "but I'll try to make it plain." "You kind creature," cried Clara, effusively; "just like you, I'm sure."

"When I want my children to mind," said Popinjay, "I don't stop to explain the reasons to 'em. I just put my foot down, and that's the end of it." "Oh, well," responded Blobson, absent-mindedly, "that covers the ground, of course; there is no need of explanation."

"Go in there, El Mahdi," said the doctor who lived opposite the roller skating-rink as he placed a $2 bill in his wallet which he had just received from a skater for dressing his scalp. "El Mahdi!" exclaimed the patient; "why do you call the bill El Mahdi?" "Because it is the fall's profit, you know," replied the doctor as he smilingly showed the patient out.

The New London Day, which has twice recently erred in announcing the death of people, the last victim being the son of Captain Emmons, announces that hereafter any young man bringing news of a death at an hour so late as to make verification impracticable must be accompanied by the remains, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

A gentleman went into a crowded store to buy some stockings for his wife. "I want striped ones," he said to the clerk. "We have very few stripes," the clerk replied, "they are not much worn now." "Are you sure?" "Oh, yes, quite sure. I will demonstrate the fact to you." Then he leaned over the counter and shouted: "Rats!" "See?" he asked. "Yes, give me plain colors."

Dreadful talk: "I am positively opposed to having a choir in the church," said old Mrs. Piety to her husband, after listening to the half-operatic airs of the service. "We have no account of choirs in the days of the apostles." "No," growled Mr. Piety sadly, "but you know they had other methods of torture that were almost as bad."

"When does a woman begin to grow old?" was lately asked in an assembly of French women, who are said to be even more afraid of vieillir than the women of other countries. "With the first gray hair," suggested one of the ladies, and, "when she ceases to inspire love," thought another. The decision was finally put to a charming white-haired matron of some 70 years, who at once replied: "What do I know about it! You must ask an old woman to answer you such a question."

Turned to Stone.

Twenty-one years ago the mother of Mr. A. D Newland, of B. C., died, and was buried in the old family graveyard. Desiring to have the body placed in the new cemetery, Mr. Newland had it disinterred, when it was found that it had been turned to stone. Those who saw it state that it had changed to a brownish hue, was almost life-like in its naturalness. The features were good, and even the hair on the face could be plainly seen. The hands were perfect and had not changed color. The case was a metallic one, and inside the lining appeared fresh and clean. The grave-clothes were all in a good state of preservation, and the ribbons and laces looked like they had just been placed there. An effort to get Mr. Newland to place the remains in the vault proved unavailing, and so fearful was he that the remains would be sought by scientific men that he placed huge stones on the coffin, and rammed the earth around with heavy mauls. The case was very heavy, requiring several men to handle it.

How He Murders the English.

In a late edition of O'Donovan Rossa's paper, that distinguished mental and moral vacuum says: "We ourselves saw that prince of Wales visiting Ireland a couple of times. We don't know will it be believed that we sat in a ten-feet-square room with him for a time with no one in the room but the two of us." It is no trouble to believe it. The fact that the prince was not blown up or otherwise killed in that room is ample proof that Rossa was there and had a good an opportunity as any man ever had to kill a prince. The fact is, Rossa murders the English only with his tongue and pen, and, judging by the sentence quoted from his paper, we must confess he does it "to the queen's taste."

CHOICE RECIPES.

CHARLOTTE RUSSE PUDDING.—Heat one and one-half pints of milk to near boiling, stir into it the beaten yolks of four eggs, one half a tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a little cold milk, one-half cup of white sugar; flavor with vanilla; let it thicken like custard; lay slices of sponge cake in a deep pudding dish and pour over them the custard; when cool beat the four whites of eggs, sweeten with one-half a cup of powdered sugar and spread over the pudding, and set in the oven to brown.

TOMATO SOUP.—Chop fine half a turnip, one carrot, two small onions, one stalk of celery, and three sprigs of parsley; mix with one can of tomatoes and one quart of water, seasoning with one teaspoonful each of salt and sugar, and a little pepper. Boil gently for one hour. As the water boils away add more so that the quantity may not be diminished. Mix two heaping tablespoonfuls of flour thoroughly with one of butter, and thin the mixture with some of the soup. Then mix the thickening with the soup and boil for five minutes. Strain the soup and serve.

JUMBLES.—One cupful of sweet milk, two cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of soda.

MOLASSES COOKIES.—One pint of New Orleans molasses, one cupful of sour cream, one-half cupful of shortening, one tablespoonful and a half of soda, yelks of three eggs.

CORNSTARCH CAKE.—One cupful of white sugar, two eggs, one-half cupful of butter, one-fourth cupful of cornstarch, one-half cupful of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one cupful and a half of flour.

SIX MONTHS' CAKE.—Two eggs, two cupfuls of flour, one-half pound of raisins, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of molasses, three-fourths cupful of butter, one-half cupful of new milk, one-half teaspoonful of soda. Spice as you like; we use a teaspoonful of all kinds.

CAKE WITHOUT EGGS.—One cupful of sugar, two-thirds cupful of buttermilk and then fill up the cup with butter, one-half teaspoonful of soda, and season to taste.

FRUIT PUFFS.—One pint flour, two teaspoonfuls baking-powder, half a teaspoonful salt, sift all together then stir in sweet milk till a thick batter is formed. Put a tablespoonful of batter into teacups till half the batter is used, place on it a spoonful of any kind of canned fruit, of preserve, or of stewed apples, without the juice; put a spoonful of batter on top of the fruit in each cup; set the cups in a steamer and steam twenty minutes. For sauce, take one-half cup of sugar, two spoonfuls butter, stir to a cream, add the fruit juice and a little grated nutmeg; or the sweet cream with sugar and a little nutmeg.

India's Protection Against Russia

An English paper, commenting on the difficulties Russia would encounter in an attempt to invade India, says: There are only three entrances into Hindoostan from Afghanistan—the Khyber pass, the Khoorum valley, and the Bolan pass. The former guards the end of the road from Cabul to Peshawur, the whole length of which from the Jugdulluck pass to the north of the Khyber is a series of passes of the most rugged nature. The road passes between gigantic precipices and through dangerous mountain streams, and is covered with immense boulders torn from the mountains. It is infested, moreover, by the Ghilzais, the most murderous tribe in Afghanistan. The Khoorum valley route is not so difficult, but it contains the terrible Shuturgurdun (Camel's Neck) pass, which is 13,000 feet high, the Hazardarakht defile, the pass of the Paiwar Kotul, the deep Khoorum river, which must be frequently forded, the narrow Durwazi pass, and other obstacles which would form terrible impediments to an army. The Bolan pass is of much the same character as the Khyber, the road from Candahar to the Indus through it being strewn with boulders, narrow, and blocked by streams and precipices. The heat also in it is terrible. A very small force could, in any of these gateways to India, successfully oppose an enormous army.

Cast up by the Sea.

A romance came to light the other day connected with the ill-fated steamship Daniel Steinman, which was wrecked at Sambro, a year ago, when 124 lives were lost. Previous to leaving home, Peter Andreas Michelsen, one of the passengers, deposited $3,970 and some valuables for safekeeping with one Herschird, of Haale, Denmark, and took a receipt therefor. Probably imagining that no legal evidence would ever be forthcoming that he had the money, Herschird refused to return it to the dead man's relations. Thereupon the Danish Foreign Minister communicated with Stephen Tobin, the Danish Consul at Halifax, to spare no efforts to find the receipt. Bodies and wreckage washed ashore from time to time have been carefully searched and divers who have been working on the wreck for the past year have kept a sharp lookout for the missing document, but all without success. Recently a small trunk was washed ashore containing a number of letters and papers. These were turned over to the Consul. They were water soaked, and the writing was almost obliterated. But among them was the long looked-for receipt, which after much difficulty Consul Tobin deciphered and translated. He has cabled the good news to Copenhagen.

The Standard.

MARKDALE APRIL 30, 1885.

MARKDALE SPRING SHOW.

On Monday last Glenelg Agricultural Society held their first Spring Show on their grounds here. There were fourteen entries of entire horses, and a very good class of horses they were. We have so much space taken up with the all absorbing question, the rebellion, that our report of the show will have to be cut short. Following is the list of prizes awarded :

Heavy Draught—1st, "Garfield," owned by Trimble & Pickle; 2nd, "Lord Dufferin," owned by Trimble & Pickle.

Roadster—1st, "Clear Grit," J. R. Trimble; 2nd, "Fox Hunter," Wm. Galbraith.

Blood—1st. R. Freeborn.

Agricultural—1st, W. W. Trimble, "Black Prince"; 2nd, S. Martin, "Young Duke."

Canadian Draught—1st, R. T. McGirr; 2nd, R. Freeborn, "Young Wonder."

BULLS.

Durham—1st, James Bell, "Solway"

Grade—1st, F. Taylor; 2nd, Thos. Brady.

There was a large display of agricultural implements also on the fair ground, exhibited by Legate & Carson and others.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

CONFLAGRATION.—On Thursday afternoon last, about 1 p. m., the alarm of fire was given in our village when it was found the residence of Mr. H. Wilkinson, on Collingwood St., was on fire. Soon a large number of willing hands were on hand, and a vigorous attempt was made to save the building, but the fire had made considerable headway before being noticed and the flames were already bursting through the roof. Finding it impossible to save the building, it was soon cleared of most of its contents. The contents of one bedroom in the vicinity of where the fire originated was destroyed. The village hand fire engine was not got to the scene of action until the fire had got pretty well ahead or it is thought the building might have been saved. However, as this is the first time there has been occasion to use the engine at a fire since she was brought here, she done good service in preserving W. W. Trimble's dwelling, which, for some time, stood in great danger. It is pretty heavy work to run the engine, but every man stood to his post and worked with a will, determined to conquer. Mr. John Gordon, who is a capital man in an emergency, had been ill for some days, forgot his rheumatics in the excitement, and as branch man, stood the fire and smoke like a brick, and applied the stream upon the roaring flames. Many others we might mention who spared not their own strength in order to save the goods and subdue the flames. The origin of the fire is a mystery, as the family were all away from home, and there had been no fire in the building from early morning. No insurance.

RIBS BROKEN AND OTHERWISE BADLY USED.—On Thursday last, while Mr. Robert Clark was engaged in shoeing a horse in his shop, the animal viciously kicked, thowing Mr. C. a distance breaking three of his ribs and giving him some severe bruises.

Mr. A. Cairns had the misfortune to loose his valuable Ayrshire cow this week. She was valued at $100.

I have at this time to notice the visit, instructive sermons and lecture by Dr. Carman on Sunday and Monday last in the Methodist church here. The Sabbath morning subject, "Perfect Holiness," was handled with ease by a well cultured mind, making his discourse simple and effective and greatly incentive to a higher and purer life. In the evening the subject, "Tithes giving," was a masterly effort, and for over one hour the Dr. held the attention of the large audience present. The lecture on Monday evening, "Trade and get rich," was an intellectual treat for almost two hours. The speaker commanded the close attention of his audience, at times following him in solemn thought and again at intervals bursts of laughter and applause was occasioned. The Dr. is very ready, quick in perception and witty. The tea served by the ladies was good; the lecture more than good, of which space here will not permit me to give your readers a synopsis. The only discouragirg part of the whole exercises was the comparatively small audience present on Monday evening.

GREAT SALE of HARDWARE.

W. KOUGH

Having decided to give up Business, is now offering his his immense stock of

SHELF & HEAVY HARDWARE, PAINTS, OILS, GLASS, &c., AT COST.

This is a genuine Clearing out Sale. Call early and secure Bargains.

W. KOUGH, - - - OWEN SOUND,

SIGN OF THE "BIG AXE." 240-53

HOT FIGHT.

The Rebels Attack Middleton's Force.

And Fight in Indian Style for Five Hours.

Shelled Out of the Ravines by the Battery.

OUR TROOPS MAKE A FIRM STAND,

And Act Like Veterans Under Fire.

GENERAL MIDDLETON GETS A BULLET THROUGH HIS HAT.

And the Horse Is Shot From Under His Alde.

The Queen's Own Relieve Battleford.

THE BATTLE.

FIFTEEN MILES SOUTH OF BATOCHE'S, April 24, 1 p. m. (sent by courier to Clarke's Crossing)—The right column on the east bank of the river encountered the rebels at 9 15 o'clock. The rebels advanced from the ravine, and fired on Major Boulton's scouts. The fire was at once returned, and the rebels, mounting their horses, backed into a ravine in which they lay concealed, only rising to fire on the troops. The troops immediately advanced in skirmishing order. The enemy were attacked from both flanks, but so well chozen was their battle ground that they were appearently out of any possible danger from the volunteers' rifles.

"A" battery could not at first reach them, but at length they secured a favorable location and shelled the ravine, having previously demolished two houses in the distance at which reinforcements for the rebels were waiting.

In a few minutes, however, the rebels retired to a small post in the woods, but they soon returned and, avoiding "A" battery, moved towards our regiment, the 9th. Our left had in the meantime made another body of the enemy retire. Then came fighting at close quarters, the combatants being only thirty or forty yards apart. The fight throughout was a bush one, the half-breeds and Indians lying concealed in the bluffs or hidden behind the trees, and keeping up a hot fire with deadly effect. The whistle of the bullets could be heard, and the balls from the enemy's shotguns rattled in all directions. The first under fire at this stage were the men of Major Boulton's corps, but No. 6 company of the 90th soon advanced to their aid, "C" company of the school of infantry taking their right flank. A hot combat ensued, nearly all firing while in a prostrate position. A number of gallant volunteers fell here, pierced by rebel balls. The warwhoops of the Indians were heard now and then as they rallied to the fight. A desperate fire was kept up for over an hour, and then, as if they had run short of ammunition, only occasional bullets came from Riel's men. After a short cessation, however, the enemy recommenced firing.

At one o'clock the prairie was on fire. This, however, was soon extinguished by the rain. The half-breeds fought in the old Indian style, and the large number of casualties shows that they are not a foe to be disposed.

One party of the rebels has just (1 p. m.) been dislodged from the ravine, but the firing is still very hot.

This is sent by messengers to Clarke's Crossing.

Gen. Middleton's hat has been shot through, but he himself is uninjured. Capt. Wise, Gen. Middleton's adjutant, has had his horse shot under him.

The Grenadiers have just arrived from the west bank of the river.

There were eight volunteers killed and fifty wounded and the loss among the rebels is variously estimated from seven to twenty-five.

THE GRENADIERS UNDER FIRE.

4 p. m.—The Grenadiers arrived in good form and at once opened fire upon one of the ravines. There were three ravines in a string heavy wooded and full off big boulders; and the rebels skipped from one to the other. The rain stopped at 1.30 o'clock, but there was a mist, and this, with the clouds of smoke, rendered it next to impossible for the troops to see what they were firing at.

Gabriel Dumas commanded the rebels, and did it with wonderful skill.

At 1.40 the rebels had been dislodged from two of the ravines, but they still held out in the center one. "A" battery could not get their shells in here, but the Grenadiers and the 90th poured in a hot fire, which did not do much execution, however, owing to the dense brush. A body of rebels now appeared in the rear of the troops, and fears were entertained that we should be caught in a trap. Gen. Middleton had provided for this, however, and Boulton's scouts, with a nine pounder, soon dispersed them, though they hovered in bands on our flanks and sent in an occasional volley, which fell short. It was evident at this juncture that if the rebels had been all well armed or had had artillery, the day would have gone hard with us.

THE RELIEF OF BATTLEFORD.

BATTLEFORD, N. W. T., April 24.—Our long imprisonment came to an end to-day. The Indians had been gathering for some days for a general attack. On Wednesday night a party of them burned Judge Rouleau's house and two Hudson's Bay warehouses, having first carried off everything of value. On Thursday morning Mahaffy & Clinskill's general store in the southern part of the town was burned. The indians used fire arrows and coal oil. All day yesterday bands of mounted Indians were riding excitedly around. Our scouts had several skirmishes with them at long range. Col. Morris had built a trench along the front to serve as a rifle pit, and all hands were under arms, an onslaught being momentarily expected. The whole country to the northwest was full of fire and smoke.

Yesterday evening, however, news came that Col. Herchmer was at hand. He camped for the night on the Battle river. The scouts who brought in the news also stated that Col. Otter was only a couple of days off. This created intense enthusiasm, many a strong man who had been tortured by anxiety for the fate of the women and children crying for joy. Col. Morris, nevertheless, ordered the entire garrison to keep under arms during the night. He also dispatched a small force to the ferry, and shots were exchanged with the Indians. At daylight Herchmer's men were seen by this detachment. The Indians had by this time become aware that the game was up, and their bands were seen moving on hastily. They have gone south-west in the direction of Sounding Lake.

It is estimated that farm and store property of the value of $800,000 has been destroyed in the Battleford district and along the river as far as Pitt.

THE HEROIC QUEEN'S OWN.

BATTLEFORD, April 24.—At 8 a. m. Herchmer and his men rode into the town, the police band escorting them from the ferry. They were received with indescribable enthusiasm. Herchmer, with Captain Neale, Major Short, Dr. Leslie, and 30 police, had scoured the valleys in order to clear the way for Col. Otter's brigade, but not an Indian could be found. From the fires visible from here it is evident that some have gone to Sounding lake and others to Pitt. At 3.30 p. m. Col. Otter's advance force aarived having made an extraordinary march. We did not expect them until Tuesday. They were greeted with extraordinary warmth, the little garrison turning out to honor them. Col. Otter arrived at the Saskatchewan on April 15th. Two days were spent in crossing, and he started for here on Saturday, April 18th, so that he covered the 170 miles of broken country in six days.

BIG BEAR'S ATTACK ON FORT PITT.

BATTLEFORD, N. W. T., April 24.—The fact concerning the attack on Fort Pitt are as follows:—On April 15th Big Bear and his band approached the fort and sending a message demanded arms and ammunition from the police. Inspector Dickene answered that that could never be. The scouts returning from Frog lake were at this time fired on, one policeman named Cowan being killed and Constable Lonsby wounded. The latter ran to the fort and was pursued. The police then opened fire from the bar racks, killing four Indians and wounding others and driving them back. The Indians numbered 240. Just before the firing commenced Mr. McLean, of the Hudson's Bay company, had a parley with Big Bear, who told him that it was intended to kill only the police, and that if the civilians would leave the fort they would be safe. Mr. McLean, for the safety of the women and children, then left with the civilians, and are now with the Indians. They reduced the garrison to twenty-two police, and this number being insufficient to defend the fort they left the same afternoon on a scow which they had previously built, bringing all the ammunition and arms. Before leaving the police received word from McLean that the Indians had coal oil and fire arrows ready to fire the fort if the police remained.

The conduct of the police was most gallant on every respect. On their arrival Col. Morris sent the police band to meet them and they marched into the barracks amid the enthusiastic cheers of the whole population. Mrs. Gowanlock, reported killed is a prisoner with Mrs. Delaney and is being well treated.

Deep anxiety is felt as to the ultimate safety of the prisoners, as the Indians are, it is feared, likely to take revenge upon them for the death of their worriors who fell in the fight.

NO INDIAN SIGNS AT TURTLE MOUNTAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 24.—The following has been received from the Turtle Mountain district:—"Very few Indians or half-breeds in this district have crossed the boundry for the past week. Everything is very quiet here at present. Those items referring to 100 Indians raiding the settlers of Turtle Mountain, killing sheep, and entering Mr. Coulter's house in the middle of the night, have no foundation whatever. Such reports are surely started by those who are strongly opposed to the present government, as they enjoy making as much excitement as possible. I have been travelling up and down constantly since the rebellion and have not seen any prospects of a disturbance or uprising of Indians and half-breeds in the city.

LATEST.

Nothing very important has transpired since Friday's battle. Gen. Middleton was to move forward towards Riel's entrenchment yesterday (Wednesday.)

Notices of Births, Marriages, and D... twenty five cents.

MARRIAGES.

WILCOX — RICHARDSON — At the M... parsonage, Campbell's Cross, on the... April, by the father of the bride, ... Wilcox, Jeweller, Uxbridge, and ... daughter of the Rev. G. T. Richardson.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 78	to $...
Spring Wheat	0 78	to ...
Barley	50	to ...
Peas	58	to ...
Oats	36	to ...
Butter	10	to ...
Eggs	10	to ...
Apples	50	to ...
Potatoes	18	to ...
Hay	0 00	to ...
Pork	5 00	to ...
Flour	3 75	to ...

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring M...

Is now completed at great expe... on the Most APPROVE... plans, and with the best m... chinery manufactured, m... ing it, in every sense of t... term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a positi... to give the public a Superi... Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully s... licited and I have no fear b... the result will be eminent... satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Whe...

☞ Flour, Bran, Shorts, et... etc, for sale wholesale & reta...

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

SPRING ANNOUNCEMEN...

The subscriber has much pleasure in intimating to the Ladies of Markdale and vicinity that she has commenced the Dress-Making Busines...

In all its branches. Having gradu... ted in the ranks of the best seamstress in the Dominion, she feels assured of giving satisfaction to all who may favor her with a call. The latest & best styles

London, Paris & New York Fashion...

Strictly adhered to. She has on han... a supply of

FANCY GOODS

And a choice selection of the late... styles of

TRIMMINGS,

Which for beauty and rare desig... cannot be surpassed, if even equalled in Markdale.

Respectfully yours,

M. E. BENSON.

Markdale, April 7, 1885.

FOR SALE.

200 acres of land on easy terms, being Lot 10, con. 12, Holland township 60 acres cleared, balance splendid timber log house and barn; well watered with never failing spring creek. For terms, apply to MAJOR, Port Perry, Ont., 241-6

NOTICE.

IN order to put the village in good sanitary condition, householders and property owners of Markdale are requested to forthwith clean their yards, privies, &c., to clear off sidewalk opposite their respective premises and to remove all obstructions off the public streets; and notice is hereby given that on and after the 10th day of May, parties neglecting to comply will be dealt with according to law.

By order of the Police Trustees,

GEO. GRANT,
Insp. Trustees.

Markdale, April 22, '85. 241-6

HORSEMEN, ATTENTION!

When your horse is galled, scratched or cut, or has an ugly sore, bathe twice daily and apply McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. It is undoubtedly the finest healing and cleansing application for it. Be sure you get McGregor & Parke's. Sold for 25c. per box, at Hill Bro's.

tices of Births, Marriages, and D ty five cents.

MARRIAGES.

ox — Richardson — At the Meth rsonage, Campbell's Cross, on the 8 ril, by the father of the bride, R.
llcox, Jeweller, Uxbridge, and Ma ughter of the Rev. G. T. Rich esq.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

l Wheat	$0 78	to	$
ring Wheat	0 78	to	0
ley	50	to
	58	to
	36	to ter	10	to
s	10	to les	50	to
atoes	18	to
	0 00	to	14
	5 00	to	5
r	3 75	to	4

ctor Roller Mills,

ARKDALE

—THIS NEW—

nt Process Flouring Mi
y completed at great expens on the st APPROVE

, and with the best ma ry manufactured, mak in every sense of th
"A Model Mill."
n therefore in a positio
e the public a Superio
e of Flour.
air trial respectfully so and I have no fear bu
sult will be eminentl ctory.
aid for good hard Wheat Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc
r sale wholesale & retail
ANGUS PLEWES.

G ANNOUNCEMENT

scriber has much pleasure i tting to the Ladies of Mark e and vicinity that she has commenced the
-Making Business
branches. Having gradua he ranks of the best seam s in the Dominion, she assured of giving satis
to all who may favor her
. The latest & best styles
Paris & New York Fashions
Rhered to. She has on hand a supply of ICY GOODS
oice selection of the latest styles of IMMINGS, beauty and rare design be surpassed, if even alled in Markdale.
tfully yours,
M. E. BENSON.
, April 7, 1885.

OR SALE.

s of land on easy terms, being 10, con. 12, Holland township
d, balance splendid timber barn; well watered with never creek. For terms, apply to E.
Perry, Ont., 241-50

OTICE.

ut the village in good sanitary householders and property kdale are requested to forth yards, privies, &c., to clea posite their respective prem ove all obstructions off the and notice is hereby given er the 10th day of May, par to comply will be dealt with e Police Trustees,

GEO. GRANT,
Insp. Trustees.
il 22, '85. 241-4

MEN, ATTENTION!
rse is galled, scratched or ly sore, bathe twice daily,
regor & Parke's Carbolic doubtedly the finest healing plication for it. Be sure r & Parke's. Sold for 25c.
Bro's.

North-West Trouble.

As the Rebellion in the N. W. T. is now the all important question, and anything in the shape of reliable information in the papers is eagerly sought for, we give the following.

Rev. Egerton Ryerson Young, who has been engaged in Methodist mission work in the North-West for many years, gave an interesting lecture in the Central (Bloor-street) Methodist Church, 23rd inst., the subject being "Reminiscences, incidents, and experiences in the North-West, and of Riel." Before the lecture was introduced to the audience by Rev. Manly Benson, the choir sang a couple of hymns and Rev. Mr. Wolseley led in prayer.

After paying a high tribute to the soil, climate and general conditions of our great North-West, Mr. Young said the Indians in the North-West were comparatively speaking, small in number. He did not suppose there were more than 30,000 Indians in the North-West, and they were wretchedly poor. He did not wish to offend any politicians, and he did no wish to be severe on any who were in power or had been in power, but he wished to say that were in a deplorable position; they were starving to death almost. Some time ago the Saskatchewan Valley was like a large butcher shop, where the Indians could go among the buffalo herds and get all the food they needed and also clothes. When the white men came into the land the old Indian game customs were disregarded, and the buffalo gradually became very scarce. What had the Government given them instead? The Government had given the Indians $5 a head, and in some reserves small quantities of rations were served out to them. He supposed the Government had tried to do right, but they had not sent out the right sort of men. Those men who had been sent out to deal with the Indians had tried to make as good a thing out of it as possible for themselves while there. The lecturer related an incident of an Indian living hundreds of miles west of Winnipeg with his wife and six children, who had commissioned him to draw from the Indian Commissioner in Winnipeg $40, which was the regular allowance at $5 per head, and which the Government officials had promised should be paid on his order. The Indian Commissioner, when asked for this money, had said that he could not pay it as the money was all gone. When the Commissioner had treated several influential clergymen who had called on him about the matter in a very discourteous manner, Mr. Young said he felt that the Government would chisel the Indians. These were reasons why the Indians had been listening to Riel and had forgotten their loyalty for the time being. Within the past few years the country had spent over a million dollars on the Indians. Knowing that there were 33,000 Indians in the North-West this amounted to about $30 per head, and the country had been paying $30 a head per Indian to the officials who pocketed this allowance.

THE INDIANS TO DAY

THE HALFBREEDS WERE NEVER LOYAL.

Riel went out to the North West immediately after the battle of the Plains of Abraham, smarting under the humiliation that France had received at the hands of England. Some of the Roman Catholic missionaries who had been sent out to them were from France, and were not loyal British subjects, and did not preach British loyalty to the Half-breeds. The lecturer said he thought that it was a combination of egotism and cardiac. He was a man who had been in an asylum for several years. He imagined himself a great Napoleon, and thought he should be Emperor of the country. He had no doubt Riel would make a desperate struggle to get into the woods or get into the land of the stars and stripes. Speaking of the grievances of the Half-breeds, the lecturer said some who had sold their scrip in Manitoba for next to nothing and had afterwards settled at Duck Lake and other places further west, were not entitled to their patents for the lands taken up. But there were many who had just claims which they had presented time and again, and which had been ignored by the Government. Then large quantities of land had been given to the Canadian Pacific Railway and to colonization companies by the Government, and French Half-breeds who had settled upon these lands had been turned away.

NOT TO BE MUCH FIGHTING.

He did not think there would be much of a battle. He was in Winnipeg at the time of the former uprising, and then Riel had his scouts out and the rebels were aware of every mile the forces advanced, and fled in twos and threes. He hoped that the Half-breeds and Indians would see that Riel had got them into this scrape and would take means to prevent his escape. All the Half breeds together were not worth a dozen of the gallant Toronto volunteers. Of the ten thousand Indians under Methodist training in the North-West, there had not been the slightest suspicion of disloyalty shown by one of them.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE INDIANS.

The Indians could not stand contact with unprincipled whites without being demoralized. His idea was to take all the Indians in the North-West and make a new Indian province north of Lake Winnipeg, where the furbearing animals of the country were plentiful, and where the Indians could be happy and contented, and could be looked after by less than 200 Mounted Police. This scheme, if carried out, would encourage immigration to the western part of the country.

A gentleman in the audience asked the lecturer what he proposed to do with the Half breeds after disposing of the Indians in the manner proposed.

Mr. Young said he intended to leave the Half-breeds to the volunteers and the Government.

Another gentleman in the audience asked: "And what will we do with the Government?"

"Leave them to those who have votes," said Mr. Young.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the lecturer, and the audience was dismissed with the benediction by the Rev. Manly Benson.

Synopsis of a Letter From Jas. Black, Formerly of Glenelg.

Morrison, Iowa, April 25, '85.

Seeding is finished here with the exception of corn.

Weather fine. Had a very cold, hard winter, but see you are worse off than we are.

Things are livening up some now.

All the Canada folk are well.

Father and brother John has bought 320 acres in Minnesota, and have started to break it up this week, and think it is an improvement on the bush farms.

A GOOD TEST.

For over sixteen years G. M. Everest of Forest, has sold Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, and its sales are steadily increasing. It cures coughs, colds and all lung complaints; is plesant to take and always reliable.

Truth Stranger than Fiction!

ONE OF OUR CITIZENS IN LUCK.

Many of our citizens will remember W. J. Woods, a lumberman, who formerly lived on the St. Vincent road near the railway track, and twelve or fifteen years ago deserted his wife and family. It now turns out that he found his way to Colorado, where he married again without the formality of a divorce. In 1880 he was one of the three discoverers of the celebrated Emma Mine. He died in October of that year, and his supposed widow there sold her own-third interest in the mine to Macky & Co. of New York. The mine was afterwards found to be immensely rich, the profits for some time past, over all expenses, $100,000 per month. Recently, Mr. Moody of Colorado, who acted as solicitor for the supposed Mrs. Woods there, discovered that she had no claim, as Mr. Wood had left a widow in Canada, somewhere in the vicinity of Collingwood or Owen Sound. He immediately started for Canada, and when he got to Collingwood discovered that he was shadowed by Pinkerton detectives in the interest of Macky & Co. From there he telegraphed to Owen Sound, and discovered that the person he wanted resided here, getting an answer from the former Mrs. Woods, who in 1882 was married again to Mr. Wm. Billings of this town. He took the train for Meaford and stage for Owen Sound; but the detectives in some way discovered his telegram, were on the train with him, and taking a special rig from Meaford were here ahead of him. As soon as he got here, he went to the telegraph office, and paid the message boy to show him where the lady lived who sent the telegram to Collingwood. As they were on the way, when they turned a corner the boy pointed to a man coming the other way, and said, "There's a man who got me a few minutes ago to show him the same place." The wily detective had got ahead, and showing Mrs. Billings his badge as a Pinkerton detective, warned her that there was a man coming to try and cheat her, but to have nothing to do with him! Thus perplexed between the two, Mrs. Billings was puzzled what to do, but the result was that the detective came out triumphant for the time, and got a quit claim deed made to Macky & Co. for a comparatively trifling amount. However, there is likely to be a big law-suit growing out of the affair, and it is to be hoped Mrs. Billings will get the fortune which of right belongs to her. There are several children of Mr. Woods, who have moved away from town, and they will be entitled to an equal share with their mother.—Owen Sound Times.

THE SECRET OUT.

The secret of success of Burdock Blood Bitters is that it acts upon the bowels, the liver, the kidneys, the skin and the blood; removing obstruction and imparting health and vigor.

Honor Roll.

The following is the Honor Roll of S. S. No. 4, Holland, for March, 1885, the names being arranged in order of merit:

4th Book, Senior—James Farley, Francis Troughton, Thos. J. Troughton.

4th Book, Junior—Maggie C. Farley, Wm. J. Lambert, Eddie Troughton.

3rd Book—Annie Hannah, Sarah Troughton, Jane McAuley.

2nd Book—Minnie Shute, Thomas Farley, Adam Wice.

Junior Division—Lena Wice, Samuel Hannah, James Givens.

ALEPA U. HORTON,
Teacher.

A GREAT MISTAKE

It is a great mistake to suppose that dyspepsia can't be cured, but must be endured, and life made gloomy and miserable thereby. Alexander Burns, of Coburg, was cured after suffering fifteen years. Burdock Blood Bitters cured him

It Sounded Funny.

Scotch Highlanders have the habit when talking their English of interspersing the personal pronoun "he" when not required, such as "The king he has come." Often in consequence a sentence is rendered extremely ludicrous. A gentleman says he lately listened to the Rev. Mr. ———, who began his discourse thus:

My friends you will find my text in the first epistle general of Peter, fifth chapter and eight verse.

"The devil he goweth about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour."

Now, my brethern, for our instruction I have divided my text into four heads. Firstly, we shall endeavor to ascertain who the devil he was? Secondly, we shall enquire into his geographical position, namely, where the devil he was going? Thirdly, who the devil he was seeking? And fourthly, and lastly, we shall endeavor to solve a question which has never yet been solved, what the devil he was "roaring about."

CHOLERA PREVENTATIVE.

In order to withstand Cholera and such like epidemics a perfect purity of blood, and the proper action of the stomach are required. To insure that end, in the cheapest, most available and complete manner, use McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia, and Impure Blood. There is no purer, safer or more reliable remedy in existence for indigestion, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, etc. Ask your neighbor or any person who has used it. Sold by Hilt Bro's. Trial bottle given free. 1

The Gatling Gun.

It weighs about 1,500 lbs., and is precisely of the same design as the ordinary cannon. There are ten chambers that revolve in the barrel proper, and each chamber has an independent lock. The main barrel is eight inches in diameter. The size of cartridge used is that of the ordinary 45 government rifle calibre Each feed drum contains 240 rounds. The firing is done by operating a crank; the cartridge is exploded by a hammer which works with such great rapidity that 120 cartridges are fired in a minute. The movement of the gun can be so adjusted as to make it either stationary or oscillating, so that the gun practice can become either scattered or centrifugal in its execution. At 700 yards the gatling gun has been known to hit a 12x15 ft. target 396 out of 400 shots. At 1,200 yards 413 out of 600 shots have struck a 9x25 ft. target. To show the rapidity with which the guns can be worked, it might be explained that the time occupied in coming to action front from trot and firing is 10 seconds; limber rear, mount and off, 13 seconds.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

WELL TO REMEMBER.

A stitch in time saves nine. Serious results oft follow a neglect of constipated bowels and bad blood. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate and purify the stomach, bowels, liver, kidneys and the blood. Take it in time.

Newspapers of To-Day.

People generally, and even those who may be termed steady readers and close observers, have but a faint conception of the magnitude and influence the press of this country has attained. From a careful examination of the advance pages of the 1885 edition of the American Newspaper Directory, issued May 1st, by Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, it appears that there are 14,147 newspapers and periodicals published in the United States and Canada; of these the United States has 12,973, an average of one paper for every 3,667 persons. In 1884 the total number of newspapers was less by 823 than at present. and while the gain this year is not so marked as in some previous years, it is still considerable. Kansas shows the greatest increase, the number being 78, while Illinois with a grain of 77. It is curious to notice that New York, the scene of so much political activity during the last campaign, should have only about one-third as many new papers as the State of Pennsylvania. As an index to the comparative growth and prosperity of different sections of the country, especially the territories, the number of new papers forms an interesting study, and may well occupy the attention of the curious.

SHINGLES FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber wishes to inform the public that he has a large quantity of Cedar Shingles of the best quality at Sparling's Mill, near Vandeleur, for Sale

JOHN WEBER,
Vandeleur.

Orders by mail promptly attended to. 242-49

NOTE LOST.

A NOTE of $24.00, drawn by F. Kempt of Holland Centre, in favor of R. A. Scott, due about next June. Any person finding same will please leave it at the Standard office, Markdale. All parties are hereby warned against purchasing said note, as payment has been stopped.

242-44 MRS. R. A. SCOTT.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Farmers will save money by buying their Agricultural Implements from

Legate & Carson,

—AGENTS FOR—

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton.
A. McGILL, Chatsworth.
BRANTFORD BINDER.
MANN'S BROADCAST SEEDER AND HARROW COMBINED.
Wisner's Spring Tooth Harrow.

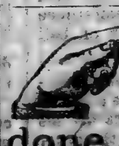
Show Room—Kay's old stand, opposite the Standard printing office.

J. H. CARSON. T. LEGATE.

Also agents for the Walker Patent Rack Elevator and Lucas Lock Block.

MORTGAGE SALE.

OF a valuable 50 acre Farm in the Township of Holland, being Lot 68, Range 1 South West of Toronto and Sydenham Road at the Revere Hotel, Markdale, on Tuesday, May 5th, at one o'clock p. m. About 40 acres cleared, fenced and free from stumps, remainder hardwood bush. The soil is a good loam. Close to Berkeley Station, on T. G. & B. R. R. For further particulars see posters, or apply to the Auctioneer, Geo. Noble, Markdale, or to HENDERSON & SMALL, Vendors' Solicitors, Toronto.



Toronto 16th April, 1885. 241-42

M. W. DUNHAM
Wayne, Du Page Co., Illinois,
HAS IMPORTED FROM FRANCE
Percheron Horses valued at $3,000,000, which includes
75 PER CENT OF ALL HORSES
Whose purity of blood is established by their pedigrees recorded in the STUD BOOKS OF FRANCE.
EVER IMPORTED TO AMERICA.

STOCK ON HAND:
150 Imported Brood Mares,
250 Imported Stallions, Old enough for service,
100 COLTS, Two years old and younger.

Recognizing the principle accepted by all intelligent breeders that, however well-bred animals may be said to be, if their pedigrees are not recorded, and cannot be authentically given, they should be valued only as grades, I will sell all Imported Stock at Grade Prices when I cannot furnish with the animal sold pedigree verified by the original French certificate of its number and record in the Stud Book in France. 140 Page Catalogue sent free. It is illustrated with Six Prize Horses of the Exhibition of the Société Hippique Percheronne of France, 1884; purchased by M. W. Dunham, and drawn from life by Mons. Rosbour, the most famous of all animal painters.

HORSE BILLS done on short notice at this office.

FINE

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

New goods arriving every week, consisting of:

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS, CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PINS, PURSES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James C. Russell,
Watchmaker, Jeweller;
217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

A RARE CHANCE.

A CHOICE VILLAGE LOT in Markdale for sale, opposite the Standard office, Mill Street. Has a comfortable dwelling house, shop and stable and good well. A small payment will be taken down and balance to suit purchaser at a low rate of interest. For further particulars apply at this office, or to

WM. WALKER,
232-39* Markdale P. O.

Fine Farm for Sale.

MR. EDWARD DAVIS offers his farm for sale, being lot N. ½ 21, con. 13, Artemesia, better known as the "Meaford Road." This is a choice clay loam farm of 80 acres, 75 of which is cleared and fit for any machinery to work on, and well fenced with cedar rails; has a fine bearing orchard of three acres; a good large frame barn and out-buildings, and comfortable frame house; the place is well watered with running stream; also a saw-mill in good running order and doing a good trade—run by water-power.

This is a very desirable farm, ¼ mile from school, one mile from church, 5 miles from Markdale and 6 from Flesherton, good road either ways; is situated in an excellent locality, and is a good site for cheese factory.

For terms and further particulars, apply to

EDWARD DAVIS,
239-41 Markdale, Ont.

MORTGAGE SALE

OF valuable farm property in the township of Euphrasia, in the County of Grey, under power of sale contained in a mortgage which will be produced at the time of sale. There will be offered for sale by public auction at the Revere Hotel, Thornbury, on Friday, the

22nd day of May A. D. 1885,

at 2 p. m., all that certain parcel or tract of land situated in the township of Euphrasia, containing one hundred acres more or less, composed of the East half of Lot number nineteen, in the twelfth Concession of the said township. There are said to be upon the premises a log house and barn; the soil clay loam; thirty-three acres said to be cleared, the balance well timbered with hardwood.

This property will be sold subject to a reserve bid.

Terms and conditions made known on day of sale.

For further particulars, apply to

E. M. CHADWICK,
Vendors' Solicitor.

BEATTY, CHADWICK BLACKSTOCK & GALT

No. 58 Wellington Street East, Toronto.

Dated this 17th day of April
A. D. 1884. 241-44

Strayed or Stolen.

A RED and white cow in calf, 5 years old, from lot four, con. 6, Euphrasia, about Saturday, the 25th of April, was last seen on lot 3, con. 6. Any person giving such information as will lead to her recovery will be suitably rewarded.

W. BILBY,
242-44 Vandeleur P. O.

HAGYARDS PECTORAL BALSAM

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

FOR THE FARMER.

More Poultry.

We must raise more poultry on our farms. The policy of exporting grain to be fed to fowls in foreign countries, and having it sent back to us again in the form of eggs and flesh, is certainly anything but an economical one. We must learn to avail ourselves of all possible means for feeding out our grain at home, and thus realize the profits of feeding as well as those of producing.

Our farmers seem to appreciate the necessity of stocking up with cattle, hogs, sheep and horses; but the poultry business is apparently altogether too small for consideration. If a few stray chicks are found about the place, the farmers carelessly or sorrowfully alludes to the "wimmen's doin's," and in nine cases out of ten, proceeds to declare that "he would not bother with them," "destroy more than they are worth," "eat their heads off every winter," etc.

There is not a particle of reason or common sense in such talk. Men who talk in that way want their lop-sided ideas (?) shaken up and pumped about a little, and in the words of the Arakansas Traveller, "I'd like to be the one to do it."

The farmer who failed to provide a fence for his pasture and then killed off his cows because they fed through his fields, and "did more damage than they were worth, would be called an idiotic brute; yet that is precisely what the majority of our farmers are doing with their poultry.

You cannot expect fowls to roam about the garden and fields, at all seasons, without doing some damage. If you have a patch of wheat near the barn, they will scratch the seed out in the spring and trample down the stalks in the summer. They will strip the currants off the bushes, eat the ripening peas and nip off the young cabbages. They will do all this, and more, especially where they are not fed—a weakness that few farmers are guilty off in the summer season.

Nor can you realize full and regular returns from them if they are allowed to run at large. They will steal their nests in all manner of out-of-the-way places, where hens, eggs and chicks will be exposed to vermin of all kinds. If by chance you find a nest full of eggs they are as likely to turn out half-bloom chicks as anything else. They degenerate from well-bred, hard-working hens, into scampering, scratching scavengers, that are of but little more use to their owners than so many wild fowls.

Like other farm stock, they must be kept where they belong; they must have a good, generous pasture in summer, and be confined therein. It takes a very high fence to confine fowls if the space given them is small; but if given a large pasture a fence of moderate height will do. A five-foot picket or lath fence will stop any ordinary lot of hens. If they are particularly unruly clip their wings.

They must have plenty of feed and water; good roosts and secluded nests for laying and setting. With such care, fowls are profitable, and it is a pleasure to keep them.

Early Planting.

To the wide awake farmer who is observant of passing events, each revolving year brings its lessons of instruction. The wise profit therefrom, but the careless and indigent continue to flounder along in the old ruts. When visited by drought, or when crops are injured by early frosts, lessons of instruction are brought home to the husbandman if he will but heed them. Some of the past seasons have been replete with warnings and suggestions for the future guidance of the farmer. Early frosts have drawn the dividing line very distinctly between early and late planted crops, while the long summer droughts that are so common of late years point out the necessity of getting crops matured as early in the season as possible.

Early planting, followed by thorough tillage, is the best means to avoid trouble from early frosts or summer drought. In the minds of some there is an undue fear of getting seeds into the ground too early, lest it be caught by late frosts. The rule of the pioneer farmer was to plant corn when the dogwood blossomed. The soil was then new and fresh and pushed crops forward to maturity faster than it does now, and it is hardly safe to delay planting as late as was formerly the practice. Some who plant late put in the plea that the land is wet and heavy, and unfit to receive seed early. This is hardly tenable, because such a state of things is never necessary in good farming, for all such land should be thoroughly drained so that it can be worked in due season. It is time for farmers to become aware of the fact that the old routine way of raising crops, which was followed with success fifty years ago, cannot longer be depended upon. The changed conditions of the times and variable seasons demand more intelligent thought and action. The wise farmer is not slow to adapt himself to the situation.

Corn may be safely planted as soon as the ground will vegetate it. This it will do as soon as the temperature of the soil is 48° Fahrenheit, or above. While it makes but little growth above the ground it is rooting and preparing for future growth. And if frosts come and cut down the blades they start again vigorously after a few warm days and come out all right. We have planted as early as the first week in April, and never had a crop of corn that made a short yield on account of being nipped by late frosts in the spring. It is highly important that corn designed for fodder should be planted on well-drained land, as early as the land can be made fit to receive seed. The yield will far exceed the crop that is delayed after the regular planting and seeding of spring crops have been done.

Oats is another crop that should go into the ground just as soon as it can possibly be worked. Some of the most successful growers of this crop that we know of seldom wait for the ground to get in condition to work well. They mud it in almost as soon as the frost is out of the ground. We cannot recommend this premature method of getting in crops, as it exhausts the fertility of the soil too rapidly to cultivate it when not in proper tilth. In breaking ground too early in spring the bottom of the plow compacts the clay subsoil, pressing it in a smooth surface, which hardens during the summer and becomes almost impervious to water.

The potato should also be planted just as early as the ground is in proper condition, so as to secure a good yield before the summer drought sets in. With crops thus covering the ground early in the season the sun's rays will not parch it up, as is frequently the case with late sown crops. Again, such crops will be driven forward to early maturity, thus clearing early frosts in the fall. Proper cultivation is another important point to secure early maturity and the development of maximum crops. If farmers would only make a note of the lessons which the passing seasons teach, and govern themselves accordingly, they would find it much to their advantage.

How to Buy a Farm.

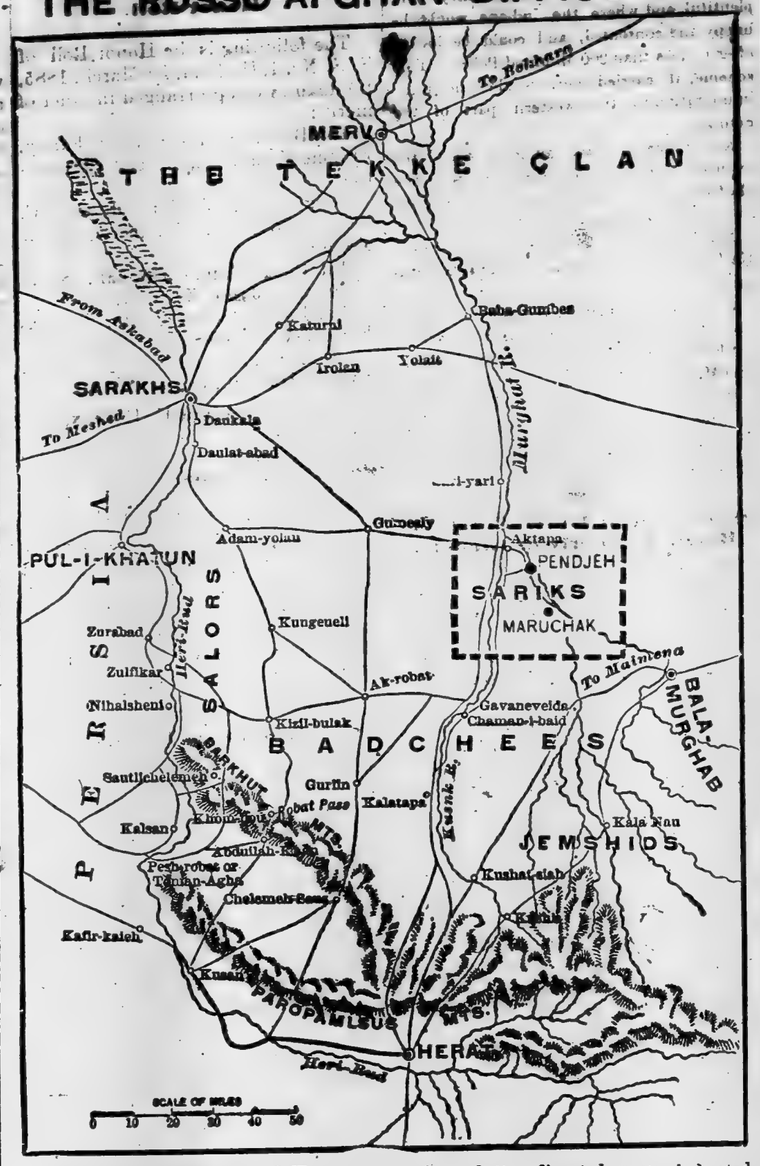
I have known the most experienced men to be deceived in buying farms, and to be much dissatisfied with their purchase. I have in mind a man of the largest experience, who had been brought up on a farm and was a careful observer, now an editor of a prominent journal, who searched a long time for a farm. He appreciated the risk he was liable to in buying. He searched far and wide, and engaged the best counsel, and at last selected a farm which proved to be entirely different from what he supposed. He found it unproductive and undesirable, and disposed of it at the earliest possible moment in disgust.

The best information in regard to a farm can be gotten from the neighbors surrounding it. Every farm has a reputation as marked as that of an individual. People know the past records of farms, what they have produced, how the occupants in the past year have succeeded on them, and how the crops have succeeded. The danger lies in the neighbors fearing to tell a stranger the truth in regard to land that their neighbor, and very likely their friend, is desirous of selling, therefore I have known of poor farms being sold to parties, to those who sought advice concerning them of neighbors who preferred not to tell their honest opinion for fear of giving offence to the party desiring to sell.

The best time to look at a farm with a view to buying is in July or August, when the crops are growing upon it. This is the season when few are buying farms. Generally if a man is possessed with the idea he wants to buy a farm, he goes out to explore them in winter when everything is covered with snow, or in spring when vegetation is not yet started. This is a very hazardous time to select a farm. It is best to proceed with careful deliberation, and if necessary to spend a whole year in looking around. It is far better to lie idle one year than to be loaded down with a poor farm, than which there is nothing worse, unless it be a poor wife.

The condition of the buildings on a farm should be closely scrutinized. I should hesitate to buy a farm on which the buildings were run down and in poor condition. It would cost more to repair them than can be estimated. In looking at such buildings it might be thought that $500 or $1,000 would put them in good shape, according to your best judgment, yet very likely it would take three times that amount. Then if the buildings are dilapidated everything else is liable to be in the same condition—no fences, and no conveniences whatever in any department. If conveniences are desired such as cisterns, wells, granaries, stables, cellars, and a thousand other things that cannot be thought of, they must be built. Good buildings with convenient arrangements are greatly to be desired.

The question of the condition of the farm fences is an important one, but not nearly so important as that of the buildings. In fact, I oppose extensive fencing of farms, and in buying a farm would not be shocked were I to find no fences at all, excepting those on the boundaries and along the sides of the road. The time is coming when it will not require an investment of $1,000 to fence in 150 acres of land. When the country spends more money for fences to confine its stock than the sum total of the entire value of stock it is time some new method were adopted. I should hesitate to buy a farm that had been rented for a long term of years. Such a farm has been exhausted largely of its fertility, and cannot be enriched again without great outlay. I would not buy a large farm; I believe in little forms well tilled.



When is a poem like a newspaper oath? When it is just dashed off.

"What is it that makes a spring," queries a poet. We always supposed the cake-taker in this line was the flea.

What is the difference between Tom Ochiltree's birth and the circumference of the earth? This is the girth of ball and that was the birth of gall.

There doesn't seem to be much difference between a butcher's license and the implement with which he cuts up his wares. One is a meat tax, and the other is a meat ax, too.

THE RUSSO-AFGHAN DIFFICULTY.

Map of the probable Seat of War.

A glance at the district outlined around Penjdeh will show the relative positions of Russians and Afghans before the late engagement. Komaroff's attack on Penjdeh may possibly have been provoked by the Afghan garrison. But it is in suspicious consonance with the spirit that has animated the eastern movement of the Czar's armies. When Russia began her eastward march from the Caspian Sea it was known that she would not stop until she reached the gate of India. Khiva, Bokhara, Balkh, Merv fell into her hands, and her troops went southward from Merv toward Herat. Herat was admittedly Afghan, and therefore under British protection. But just to the north of Herat, in the valley of the Rivers Murghab and Heri-Rud, there were many places which, as some said, belonged to Afghanistan, and as others said, belonged to Turkestan. If they belonged to Afghanistan, then England claimed their protectorate. If they belonged to Turkestan, then Russia claimed their possession. A commission was appointed to determine the ownership of these places, and Sir Peter Lumsden, an Anglo-Indian official, represented English interests in this body. While it was preparing to survey the ground the Afghans seized and occupied Penjdeh, one of the disputed posts, and the Russians seized and occupied Pul-i-Khatun, another of the disputed posts indicated on the map. A loud cry was raised in England concerning the actions of the Russians, and just when it reached its loudest pitch General Komaroff, the Russian commander, fought an engagement with the Afghans. Whereupon England demanded that General Komaroff should make an explanation and that his troops should withdraw from the debatable region. The objective point of both English and Russians will be Herat, the "Key to India." The topographical features of the district surrounding this city show that the appellation "Hill Throned Herat" is not unmerited. The Robat Pass between the Barkheet mountains to the south-east of Pendjeh, is a narrow defile through which the Russian armies must reach Herat. The latest cables announce that Sir Peter Lumsden is actively engaged fortifying this point. If this be true there is little danger of a Russian coup de main, as this defile walled in by unscalable precipices could be held against an army by a handful of men. If the Afghans are as friendly to England as Abdurrahman, their Ameer, asserts, then Sir Peter Lumsden, the British Commissioner, will have no difficulty in occupying this strong position and preparing to stand a siege within its walls. He will then wait for reinforcements from India.

Wild Game in Afghanistan.

In the valley of the Kushk Rud we saw deer of various kinds, wild boar, and the goorkal, or wild ass. A large drove of them passed our line of march one morning, but we saw little of them except the great cloud of dust they turned up as they hurried off to higher ground. I understand that there is little difference between the goorkal and the kyang, or wild horse of Tibet. Marmots are also very plentiful, they have burrowed their holes into the ground everywhere, and it is dangerous to horses, as their feet sink into the honeycombed earth. These marmots may be said to be now the real possessors of the land, for there is scarce a yard of it which is not occupied by them.

Partridges are also in considerable numbers, and in the Kushk Valley some of our party found pheasants plentiful, and wild pigs are still more numerous there than on the higher ground. There are large spaces on the side of the stream covered with tall reeds, and the pigs find cover in them. One morning on the march I saw a drove of about thirty pigs, led by a large boar, walking up the side of the hill. They had been disturbed by the baggage animals passing. They went up the hill side, and about half a mile to the north they descended again into another bed of reeds. They came down in Indian file

German "Bulls."

Irish bulls are much more famous than German blunders of the same sort, but some of the latter are very amusing. A German newspaper has collected a few of them.

"After the door was closed a soft female foot slipped into the room, and with her own hand extinguished the taper."

"The chariot of revolution is rolling onward and gnashing its teeth as it rolls, is what a Berlin revolutionist told the students, in 1848, in a speech.

"The Ladies' Benefit Association has distributed twenty pairs of shoes among the poor, which will dry up many a tear."

I was sitting at the table enjoying a cup of coffee, when a gentle voice tapped me on the shoulder. I looked around and saw my old friend once more."

The Latest Electricity Story.

An unusual and very interesting phenomenon occurred near Frankfort, Dak., recently, in the form of an atmospheric electric current of considerable power. As observed here, the current did not reach the ground, but varied in distance from four to six feet from it. It was first noticed by the peculiar effect it had on horses and cattle. A buzzing sound was heard from around the ears of the animals—similar to that made by the swarming of bees—distinctly audible at a distance of several feet. Horses and mules threw their heads around in a very excited manner, acting as though their ears were full of flies. The snapping of electric sparks was also heard. Horses which kept their heads close to the ground were not troubled, as the current did not seem to reach down to them. Many teams became frantic and uncontrollable. One horse was so frightened that it fell and tried to creep under its mate for protection. Oxen also behaved in a very unreasonable and sprightly manner. Farmers were frightened, and hurried to the barn with all possible speed. One man thought his horse had the blind staggers. He accordingly bled the animal, and resolved "to keep dark about it" until he could make a trade. The amount of tricky stock in the market about that time was alarming, but there never was so much innocence among Spink County farmers before. Finally a brief thunder shower came up, and the first flash of lightning afforded immediate relief. The current flowed from west to east and was six or seven miles in width.

To incarcerate a man as a lunatic in Denmark nothing is required but a certificate from a competent medical practitioner stating that the individual in question is insane. Any one in Denmark is entitled to keep a private asylum without license, and the patients in such an asylum are not under State control. Denmark has an excess of lunacies, due chiefly to the Scandinavian habit of constant dram-drinking. They are well cared for in spite of the defect of the lunacy law.

PROOF OF A DARK DEED.

The Dead Body of an Unknown Man Found in a Trunk.

On March 31 there arrived at the Southern hotel in St. Louis a young man who registered as "Walter H. Maxwell, M. D., London, England." On the same day and before his arrival, a telegram was received at the hotel from C. Arthur Preller, Rochester, N. Y., inquiring if Maxwell had arrived there. The answer was held for awhile by Clerk Noble, and after Maxwell came and registered a reply that he was at the hotel was sent Preller. Maxwell was given room 144, and had his baggage, two trunks and two valises, taken there. Preller arrived April 3, and was given room 385, where his five trunks were placed. The men occupied Preller's room in common a considerable portion of time, seeming to be good friends and old acquaintances. Both were much remarked for their dandified appearance, Maxwell carrying his effeminate behavior so far as to walk with short mincing steps like a woman. A week ago Maxwell left the hotel suddenly, leaving his baggage in the room he had occupied, but as he had paid his bill it was supposed he would return shortly.

Yesterday the chambermaid, in visiting the room of Maxwell, was greeted by a horribly offensive odor, which came from one of the trunks, and reported the fact at the office. This morning both trunks were brought down into the rotunda of the hotel by the porters, blood dripping from one of them, and an almost insupportable smell issuing from it. It was taken out in front of the 4th street entrance of the hotel and opened. Within lay the bloated body of a man apparently about 30 years of age, dressed in shirt and drawers only. On the side of the trunk just over the head of the corpse, were printed in large letters the words "So perish traitors to the great cause." The trunk and its ghastly contents were at once sent to the morgue.

It is thought by many that the body found is that of Preller, and that he was murdered by Maxwell, although a photograph found and identified as that of Preller shows little if any resemblance to the bloated corpse. The head of the dead man was bent to one side and crushed in to the flesh of the shoulders, the feet being bent under and sunk into the thighs.

The coroner made an autopsy of the remains this afternoon, and it was found that the stomach contained poison, but of what particular kind was not determined.

The baggage of Preller remains in the room lately occupied by him. His trunks are of much better quality than those of Maxwell, being of fine leather, and the personal effects in them indicate that the owner is a man of means and culture. They have the labels of the Cunard steamship company, of the Rossin house, Toronto, and of the Continental hotel, Philadelphia. Neither money nor letters of credit were found. A telegram from Maxwell, dated at Boston, indicated that the two men meant to go to New Zealand together. Preller apparently left England Jan. 21 for a commercial tour of this country, and seems from home letters that he invited Maxwell to accompany him. Among the letters found in Preller's trunk was the following:

No. 9 Clinton Place, New York City, March 27, 1885.—I have great pleasure in introducing to you by this note our dear brother, Mr. C. A. Preller, of London, England., known to us by several visits he has paid to New York. Hoping you may be mutually benefited by this friendship during his stay in your city, I am yours,

RICHD. N. OWENS.

This friendship was awakened by his bringing him to a tea meeting for young men at which dear H. G. Grunners spoke from "Where withal shall a young man cleanse his way." Dora Olson, 842 Valencia street, San Francisco, well known to Brother Moyse.

It has been learned that Maxwell after leaving the barber-shop had his beard shaven off, thus totally changing his appearance. He was about 5 feet 8 inches in height, weighing about 140 pounds, well proportioned, and of good figure. His hair which was of a light sandy color, was worn without any part being "banged" like a girl's. A druggist at the corner of 5th and Market streets says Maxwell came to his store on Easter Sunday and got six ounces of chloroform. A bottle with some of this drug was found in one of the missing man's trunks. Detectives are of the opinion that the words printed on the inside of the trunk were put there to make it appear that the murder was a political assassination, while in reality it was for money. An envelope found in Maxwell's trunk, gives his address as 14 Paper Buildings, Temple, London.

He Wouldn't Give In.

A good story is told of an old farmer in New Hampshire, who would always come out ahead of his antagonist, in one way if not in another, no matter what the character of the competition might be. One day, he and his were engaged in getting hay, when, the old man having found much fault from the mow with the slowness with which his assistants were pitching the hay up to him, the boys concluded they would satisfy him. "They began rapidly forking it up, and continued until the mow was so dusty as to be fairly suffocating, and the old man was almost buried in the mass. After a little, they heard not a word of complaint and in a few minutes down to the floor, covered with hay and almost choked, came Uncle Silas. As he dropped, the boys cried out, "What are you down here for?" to which the irrepressible Uncle Silas made answer, "Consarn yer hay pieters! I'm down here for more hay!"

ROOF OF A DARK DEED.

Dead Body of an Unknown Man Found in a Trunk.

n March 31 there arrived at the South- notel in St. Louis a young man who tered as "Walter H. Maxwell, M. D., lon, England." On the same day, before his arrival, a telegram was re- d at the hotel from C. Arthur Preller, ester, N. Y., inquiring if Maxwell arrived there. The answer was held while by Clerk Noble, and after Max- came and registered a reply that he t the hotel was sent Preller. Max- was given room 144, and had his ge, two trunks and two valises, take- ere. Preller arrived April 3, and iven room 385, where his five trunks placed. The men occupied Preller's in common a considerable portion ne, seeming to be good friends and quaintances. Both were much re- d for their dandified appearance, ell carrying his effeminate behavior as to walk with short mincing steps, woman. A week ago Maxwell left tel suddenly, leaving his baggage room he had occupied, but as he id his bill it was supposed he would shortly.

terday the chambermaid, in visiting om of Maxwell, was greeted by a y offensive odor, which came from the trunks, and reported the fact ffice. This morning both trunks rought down into the rotunda of tel by the porters, blood dripping ne of them, and an almost insup- le smell issuing from it. It was ut in front of the 4th street en- of the hotel and opened. Within located body of a man apparently 30 years of age, dressed in shirt awers only. On the side of the trunk, er the head of the corpse, were print- rge letters the words "So perish all to the great cause." The trunk ghastly contents were at once sent morgue.

thought by many that the body s that of Preller, and that he was ed by Maxwell, although a photo- found and identified as that of shows little if any resemblance to ated corpse. The head of the dead s bent to one side and crushed in- lesh of the shoulders, the feet be- t under and sunk into the thighs. coroner made an autopsy of the re- his afternoon, and it was found e stomach contained poison, but of rticular kind was not determined, baggage of Preller remains in the tely occupied by him. His trunks much better quality than those of l, being of fine leather, and the l effects in them indicate that the is a man of means and culture, ve the labels of the Cunard steam- mpany, of the Rossin house, To- and of the Continental hotel, lphia. Neither money nor letters were found. A telegram from l, dated at Boston, indicated that men meant to go to New Zealand. Preller apparently left England for a commercial tour of this , and seems from home letters that ted Maxwell to accompany him. he letters found in Preller's trunk following:

Clinton Place, New York City, 7, 1885.—I have great pleasure ducing to you by this note r brother, Mr. C. A. Preller, of England., known to us by ser- is he has paid to New York. you may be mutually benefited riendship during his stay in your n yours,

RICHD. N. OWENS.

riendship was awakened by my him to a tea meeting for young which dear H. G. Grunners spoke Where with all shall a young man is way." Dora Olson, 842 Valen- et, San Francisco, well known er Bloyse. been learned that Maxwell, ving the barber-shop had his wen off, thus totally changing rance. He was about 5 feet 8 height, weighing about 140 ell proportioned, and of good f hair which was of a light or, was worn without any part, ved "like a girl's. A druggist ner of 5th and Market streets ell came to his store on Easter got six ounces of chloroform. th some of this drug was found the missing man's trunks. are of the opinion that the ted on the inside of the trunk here to make it appear that the was a political assassination, ality it was for money. An en- nd in Maxwell's trunk, gives his 14 Paper Buildings, Temple.

Wouldn't Give In.

tory is told of an old farmer in pshire, who would always come of his antagonist, in one way if ther, no matter what the char- competition might be. One d his were engaged in getting in the old man having found from the mow with the slow- hich his assistants were pitch- up to him, the boys concluded satisfy him. "They began ging it up, and continued until as so dusty as to be fairly su- nd the old man was almost the mass. After a little, they word of complaint and in a down to the floor, covered d almost choked, came Uncle he dropped, the boys cried t are you down here for?" To repressible Uncle Silas mo'n onsarn yer hay picters! I'm or more hay!"

A LOCK OF RED HAIR.

CHAPTER V.—CONTINUED.

Scarcely had Lucy laid her head upon the pillow, before she was transported into the most delightful dreamland. For a time everything was blissful content; but suddenly the sky became clouded, and she found herself toiling alone up a dreary hill the rain descending in torrents, and the thunder crashing overhead. Presently there came a terrific clap, and she sprang up in bed awake, and trembling in every limb.

As she did so, a most appalling shriek broke upon the quiet night. Great Heaven, whence did it proceed? Paralysed with horror, she remained quite still for an instant, and then she heard a rushing sound pass her room and a door softly close in the distance. Again and again those awful shrieks filled the house.

"Heavens, it is Mrs. Richmond!" Lucy cried. "I am coming—I am coming, dear!"—and, without a thought of self or the danger she might encounter, the young girl flew through the passage into her friend's room.

She found her alone, in a most pitiable condition of terror—moaning and trembling in an agony of fear.

"What is it, dear?" asked Lucy, taking her in her arms and soothing her like a child. "You are safe now; you have been dreaming."

"Oh, Lucy, hide me, hide me! I shall go mad if I see it again."

"See what, dear?" faltered Lucy.

"I don't know," gasped Mrs. Richmond, shuddering. "I had fallen asleep, and I felt something touch my foot; and when I opened my eyes it stood there at the end of the bed glaring at me! Oh, don't leave me, for Heaven's sake don't leave me!"

"My dearest, I would not leave you for the world. I am only going to ring the bell to wake Mrs. Mitchell."

"Yes, yes; let us have her here too, in case he may come again; pray Heaven he may not!"

"Was it a man then, dear?" asked Lucy, remembering the sound she had heard in the passage.

"Oh, yes," replied Mrs. Richmond, still shuddering and hiding her face on Lucy's shoulder—"a man with a horrible white face! And, oh, Lucy, his fearful hair! It hung down on each side of his ghastly face like a curtain of blood! The sight of it will haunt me as long as I live. Oh, why did Elgar leave me?" she moaned. "Send for him—send for him at once—say, I shall go mad without him!"

"Yes, dear, I will, the first thing in the morning; but you must try to compose yourself now, for all our sakes, if not for your own."

By this time Mrs. Mitchell was with them. She also had heard the shrieks; but she slept much farther off. Her motherly, homely presence quieted Mrs. Richmond to some extent, and she was able to talk more calmly and reasonably on the subject of her terror.

Mrs. Richmond persisted that it was no dream; she distinctly felt the hand upon her foot before she saw the figure. Lucy then told of the rushing sound she had heard, and expressed her opinion that somebody must have made an entry into the house for the purpose of robbery.

"Of course it is known," she added, "that there are only women here now!"

"Ah, child, you say that to comfort me; but I am certain that was no living presence that was in the room to-night!"

Finding they could not argue her out of the belief that her horrible visitor was supernatural, Lucy was persuaded by Mrs. Mitchell to go to her room and dress.

"Go, my dear miss," urged the good woman, "or we shall be having you laid up next, and I'll take care of missus while you are away."

"Come back as soon as possible, Lucy; I feel safer with you by me."

Lucy required no incentive to hurry, for, although of a very brave temperament, her nerves were completely unstrung. She, however, quite believed in her own mind that the figure was not supernatural in any way, and determined to make a thorough examination of the premises down-stairs—more particularly of the cellars—directly it was light.

CHAPTER VI.

Daylight was breaking when Lucy returned to Mrs. Richmond's room. The poor woman was still in a most hysterical condition, alternating between violent attacks of sobbing and paroxysms of shuddering terror.

Mrs. Mitchell looked gravely at Lucy, and shook her head significantly.

"Don't you think we had better send one of the girls to ask the Doctor to come down as early as possible, miss?" she said. "I dare say missus would feel easier like if she consulted him; and he's a clever young gentleman, and will advise us what to do to prevent the fellow getting in again."

Although the old housekeeper adopted this reassuring tone, Lucy could see it was entirely assumed for the purpose of quieting the fears of her mistress, and that she was in fact fully impressed with the truth of the ghostly character of the terrible apparition.

"Yes," agreed Lucy. "You would like to see Doctor Maurice; wouldn't you, dear?"

"Yes, yes," replied Mrs. Richmond, who was by this time almost exhausted; "send for him; but don't you leave me."

"No, ma'am; don't you trouble; we won't leave you—never you fear! Now you keep still for a little while, and see if you cannot get a wink of sleep."

"I feel as if I should never sleep again," declared Mrs. Richmond, her sobs getting fainter and fainter.

"But try, ma'am; and, Miss Lucy dear, do you lie down on the sofa and do the same. Why, you look quite pale and worn out!"

The housekeeper could not have used a stronger argument than this last to quiet Mrs. Richmond, who, in the midst of her terror and suffering, still retained her unselfishness.

"Poor child, I have frightened her! Lie down, dear, and I will try to be quiet for your sake."

"And I'll sit in this arm-chair and keep watch over you both," added Mrs. Mitchell.

Strangely enough, in less than a quarter of an hour they were all three soundly asleep, completely exhausted by the excitement they had gone through.

When Mrs. Mitchell, who was the first to awake, looked at the clock, she found it was eight.

"Why, gracious me," she said to herself, "we have been asleep for four hours; that ought to do missus good! Poor soul! I wonder what that was a warning of in the night. I hope nothing has happened to master; but I doubt me. I won't disturb 'em; but I'll go and send off for the Doctor now, and make them a cup of tea. Bless her pretty face," she added, looking at Lucy, "she's like a sunbeam in the house! She'll make a good man happy some day, or I'm much mistaken."

They were still sleeping when Mrs. Mitchell returned to the room, bearing in her hand a tray with two cups of tea. A slight noise she made in setting it down awakened Mrs. Richmond, and immediately after Lucy opened her eyes.

"Why, I have surely been asleep!" exclaimed Mrs. Richmond, in amazement.

"That you have, ma'am, for nearly five hours; it must have done you a world of good."

"Well, I certainly don't feel so bad as I should have expected to; but then, you know, I have not slept so many consecutive hours for weeks."

"Now, you drink this cup of tea, and I'll put the room tidy. Doctor Maurice will be here before we know where we are."

Ten minutes later, he was ushered in, looking flushed with the hurry he had made. He remained with Mrs. Richmond some little time, and then descended to the drawing-room, leaving Mrs. Mitchell with her.

"Oh, Doctor Maurice," cried Lucy, who was anxiously awaiting him, "I am so thankful to see you! We have had such an awful night!"

"Yes, indeed, you must have had!" he said kindly. "I was quite grieved to hear such a dreadful account from the servant; it must have shocked you terribly! I cannot say I am altogether surprised," he continued. "She was in a dreadfully nervous condition when I left last night. I did not want to frighten you unnecessarily; but I was really alarmed, and intended coming this morning instead of in the afternoon."

"But why should her nerves have anything to do with it? Surely you don't suppose it was a ghost she saw?"

"Not I, indeed!" he returned, laughing. "I don't believe in them a bit; but I feel certain it was a case of spectral illusion. Her nerves were just in the highly-wrought condition that would induce an illusion of that kind. And what completely convinces me is the fact of the spectre having red hair. Between ourselves, I believe that unfortunate conversation of ours has been the cause of it all."

"You must forgive me for disagreeing with you," said Lucy. "I am firmly persuaded that a man did enter Mrs. Richmond's room in the night with the idea of robbing her, and that her shrieks so startled him that he rushed away without achieving his purpose; for I am quite sure, after her first scream, which awakened me, I heard some one brush past my room, and immediately after shut the door softly at the head of the stairs. I was so convinced of this that, had it been possible to leave her for an instant, I should have followed down-stairs."

"Thank Heaven you did not!" Doctor Maurice said earnestly. "You would have been running a fearful risk if there had been any one there. I still think, however, that your imagination played you false, as well as hers. You must remember you had just been startled out of a deep sleep. And is it likely now that any thief would deliberately wake Mrs. Richmond up by touching her foot?"

"No! That, I quite agree with you, must have been fancy."

"And the rest too, you may depend upon that," he said conclusively. "But, from whatever cause the fright arose, the result is just as alarming. She must not be left alone at night again, as—I feel bound to tell you—another attack of the same sort might have the most serious consequences. She has rallied from this wonderfully; but it has been a severe shock to her constitution."

"Then I suppose we had better urge Mr. Richmond to return at once?"

"Yes, his wife is going to write to him this morning. I would rather she had left it to you; but she must not be opposed. And what are you going to do with yourself," he added.

"In the first place, I am going to explore the cellars. Although you have so little faith in my burglar theory, I shall not be easy until I have quite satisfied myself there is no outlet from them."

"Let me come with you, then," he said softly. "And, when we have finished there, I want you to come with me for a drive by the sea-shore. I have to visit a patient at a farm-house five miles from here, and a good blow will do you good; you don't look the better for your trying night." Seeing that Lucy hesitated he went on—"Mrs. Richmond told me to say she hoped you would go, and she will write her letter while you are away. I advised her not to describe the events too minutely, as it would be so very alarming to him. The fact is, I put it in that way, hoping that consideration for his feelings may prevent her dwelling too much on the subject herself."

Lucy no longer demurred, but agreed to go with pleasure. They then went down into the cellars; but, after carefully examining them, they could find no trace of any opening. Lucy, however, still held resolutely to her original impression that some one did pass her door in the night; and, finding it impossible to shake her conviction, Doctor Maurice dropped the subject, and crying, "Now let us get out of this gloomy place into the sunshine and air!" led the way up-stairs.

Lucy went to put on her hat and say good-bye to her friend before starting. Mrs. Richmond was busily writing; the housekeeper sitting working by her.

"Good-bye, dear," she said; "I hope you will enjoy your drive. Don't worry about me; Mrs. Mitchell will stay with me until you return. I don't like to see your cheeks so pale. I dare say I shall be down before you are home."

Directly they had gone, Mrs. Richmond said to her companion—

"I sent Miss Starr out on purpose, Mitchell. I wish to make a slight alteration in my will, and I would rather she did not know anything about it. Will you call Emily? I shall want both your signatures as witnesses."

The housemaid was accordingly called, and Mrs. Richmond took the will from out of her escritoire. After writing for a few minutes, she called the two women to witness the signing of her name; and, when they had both written theirs, the form was re-sealed and securely locked up again.

"There," she thought—"I feel easier, now that it is done. I am sure Edgar is too good to find fault, and it will be such a help to them!"

She finished her letter, and, giving it to Mrs. Mitchell with directions to send it to the post at once, went down to await the return of Doctor Maurice and Lucy.

Before they reached Fernhurst, Doctor Maurice again impressed on Lucy that Mrs. Richmond must not be left alone at night.

"And I shall stop the brandy-and-water," he said. "I must make a complete alteration in the treatment."

He would not stay to luncheon, though Mrs. Richmond pressed him to do so, saying he did not wish to wear out his welcome.

Lucy slept in her friend's room during the three succeeding nights; but nothing occurred to disturb them in any way; and, to her great delight, the invalid seemed to be decidedly improving.

"I am very glad," said Doctor Maurice, when he saw how well his patient was progressing. "Your complaint baffled me at first, I must confess; but now I feel sure I shall conquer it."

The fourth morning brought the following letter from Edgar—

"My dearest Wife,—I cannot tell you how much your letter, which I have only just received, alarmed and distressed me. I cannot bear to think of your sufferings, and shall return home immediately, although matters over here are far from satisfactory. You will probably receive this in the morning, and I shall follow it in person the same evening. The boat does not get in until rather late, I believe; and, as I don't know which train I shall be able to catch, I cannot tell you the exact time to expect me. Any way, I cannot hope to be with you until twelve or one o'clock. Pray don't let any one sit up for me; I shall walk from the station, and can let myself in with my latch-key; then I will come straight to you. Good-bye, my dearest.

"Ever your most loving husband

"EDGAR.

"P.S.—By-the-way, I hope you will not be disagreeably surprised at my appearance; I have had my moustache shaved off since I have been here."

"Then Mrs. Mitchell or I had better sit up with you until he comes," suggested Lucy.

"No; I should not like you to do that. I am sure Edgar would be annoyed if any one sat up."

"But we could easily lie down on the sofa," persisted Lucy, recollecting Doctor Maurice's injunction.

"No, my dear; I do not wish it. You may remain with me until twelve if you will; and then I can only have a very few minutes to wait. If I want anything, I can ring the bell at the head of my bed which communicates with your room."

Lucy was not at all satisfied in her own mind with this arrangement, but thought she would leave any further argument until Dr. Maurice called in the afternoon; for she felt certain he would strongly deprecate Mrs. Richmond being left, even for a short time.

As fate willed it, however, that afternoon he could not come, having been called to a serious case at some distance, but sent a messenger, saying he would be there on the following morning.

"How unfortunate!" thought Lucy. "Had he been here, she must have given way."

All day Mrs. Richmond seemed greatly unsettled and restless; and Lucy began to fear the excitement of her husband's return would throw her back again.

"Nevertheless I am thankful he is coming," she told herself; "somehow I feel such a weight of responsibility on me since that dreadful night. I would give a great deal that he were safely here now! How strange it seems for me to be longing for Edgar Richmond's presence! Three months ago I should have declared such a state of feeling on my part to be impossible."

At night, when they went up-stairs, she again tried to induce her friend to let her remain with her.

"I will go directly I hear him coming, if you don't want him to find me here."

"No, my dear; I would much prefer you did not," Mrs. Richmond said somewhat testily. "Don't argue with me, child; I feel hot and restless as it is."

"Then I will say no more," replied Lucy sadly—"only I do not like going."

"Good night," said Mrs. Richmond; "Heaven bless you, and make you as happy as you deserve, my kind unselfish little friend!"

Lucy, after kissing her warmly and wishing her good night, left the room.

"Now," she declared to herself, "I will not go to bed until Mr. Richmond arrives; I shall be sure to hear him if I listen; I will lie down outside my bed, but I will not close my eyes."

But, although Lucy struggled bravely against the almost overwhelming sensation of sleep that oppressed her by getting up and walking about the room whenever she found that she had almost succumbed to it, ultimately tired nature asserted itself; she gave in, and when daylight crept into the room, she lay upon her bed sleeping soundly.

She awoke suddenly, unrefreshed, with an uneasy sense of something wrong, to find Emily, the housemaid, standing by her bed. The first glance at the girl's scared white face completely aroused her.

"Emily, how you startled me! What is the matter?"

"I don't know, miss," replied Emily, in a low awed tone; "but Fanny and I are dreadfully frightened."

"What at? For Heaven's sake, tell me quickly!"

"Well, miss, we can't get missus to answer us, and we have been knocking at her door for the last five minutes; I wonder you didn't hear us!"

"But has not Mr. Richmond returned?" inquired Lucy anxiously.

"No, miss, for, see, here is a letter in his hand-writing which has just arrived; that was my reason for disturbing missus so early."

"Let us go to her at once," cried Lucy; "perhaps she may be ill."

"Don't go in, dear miss, until Mrs. Mitchell comes; Fanny has gone to fetch her. Oh, I am afraid!" cried the girl, bursting into tears. "One of the dogs howled all the night, and I said to Fanny, 'Somebody's spirit is passing now.'"

"Emily, Emily, don't be so superstitious!" said Lucy, a cold horror creeping over her; but she went no farther than the door of Mrs. Richmond's room, and there they stood and waited, trembling and listening intently.

In a minute Mrs. Mitchell hurried up, followed by Fanny and the cook.

"We had better knock again," she said, in a terrified whisper; "perhaps she may be awake now."

Lucy knocked loudly on the panels of the door; but there was no response, and the five frightened women huddled closer together for sympathy and support.

"Open the door a little, and speak to her, Miss Lucy; maybe she doesn't hear us, as she is so deaf."

With a trembling hand, Lucy turned the handle of the door and opened it a few inches; as she did so, a perceptible shudder ran through the group.

"Mrs. Richmond," she called in a low voice, strangely unlike her usual one, "may I come in? Here is a letter for you."

They waited for an instant, breathless with anxiety; but still the awful silence was unbroken. Lucy looked blankly at her companions, with her lips quivering.

"We must go in; she is evidently ill."

"Then I must be the first," replied Mrs. Mitchell. "Heaven help us, I fear we shall see a sad sight."

Summoning all her resolution, the old woman pushed the door and entered, followed closely by the four trembling girls. She advanced firmly to the bed, drew the curtains aside, and then uttered a cry of anguish. There lay Mrs. Richmond dead, with such an agonised expression of terror on her poor face that it filled the spectators with pity as well as horror and grief.

"Come away, children!" said Mrs. Mitchell. "Draw the curtains; this is no sight for young eyes. My poor, poor mistress!" And then she burst into loud sobs, the three servants joining in hysterically.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Wart's" the Matter?

The fate of nations and men often turn on the merest trifles. It would be indeed curious if the destiny of England and Egypt was to be materially affected by the presence of two warts on the cheek of a Khartoum ship's carpenter. The occurrence of such a contingency seems, however, to be quite within the bounds of possibility. In his address to the Soudanese, Mohamed Ahmed wrote: "Has not God Himself given me the signs of my mission—the two warts on the left cheek which are spoken of in His book?" The cogent reasoning would seem to have had its effect, for the officers of the Kordofan army who joined his standard exhorted their companions to follow their example, declaring that Mahdi "is always smiling, and his countenance is beaming as the full moon. On his right cheek is a wart, and other signs which are written in the books of the law." There is, it is true, a grave discrepancy as to the position of the warts; but it might nevertheless have been better for the peace of the world if Mohamed Ahmed had been born without any warts at all.

Icicle, bicycle, tricycle, broken nose.

Russia's Aim.

The aim of Russia in Central Asia is not so much to menace or to invade India as to get possession of a coast line on the Arabian Sea. For generations Russia has been striving for maritime egress. An immense empire without a single unrestricted connection with the ocean.

The exit from the Black Sea into the Mediterranean is commanded by Turkish batteries on the Bosphorus. This striving to carve for herself a pathway to a free ocean coast works in Russia with the might of a chained-up elementary power. And it increases in intensity in the same degree as the interior of the various parts of the Empire is made capable of production by railroads and Russian trade is looking for markets. As soon as Russia's Asiatic possessions are connected by railroad with her European system—and the day is not far distant—a highway to some southerly coast becomes a law of necessity, which no power can resist obeying in the long run. This pressure to reach the ocean is the leading motive of all the events that have taken place in Central Asia. It characterizes the direction which the Russian advance must take, and it only needs a single glance at the chart to be convinced that all the expeditions up to this time have been carried out in accordance with a well-laid plan. The territories still dividing Russia in Central Asia from the ocean are Afghanistan and Beloochistan, and through these lands Russia must eventually reach the ocean.

This is the aim of Russia in Afghanistan at the present time. As for the question of Constantinople, Russia, in the event of a general war, may endeavor to get possession of the city and command the gateway to the Black Sea herself, or if she secures Turkey for an ally content herself with getting the unrestricted navigation of the straits for her war ships, as was the case in the days of the great Mahmood. It is reported that in the recent diplomatic intercourse between St. Petersburg and the Porte the Sultan is always referred to as the grandson of the great Mahmood, the friend of Russia, whose throne was saved by her, and hints have been broadly thrown out that under certain circumstances the Czar would guarantee Turkey a long lease of existence in return for favors received. Turkey, it is true, bears resentment for the sufferings caused in the past by Russia, but to this Russia replies in a way that carries a certain amount of conviction. Why did you not stand by the treaty of "Unkiar Skellessi?" This treaty was a secret compact between Mahmood and the Czar Nicholas, giving solely to Russia the freedom of the straits as a reward for her service in driving back the Egyptian army which, under Ibrahim Pasha, the warlike son of Mehemet Ali, was threatening Constantinople. Russia has been compelled to do all she has done, the Sultan is told, because "your predecessors foolishly departed from the policy of the great Mahmood. Imitate his example, grant again that which he gave so willingly to cement his friendship with Russia, and trust to the power of the Czar to maintain your throne against all Europe.

A Bicycler's Encounter with a Mountain Lion.

Little riding is possible all through this section of Nevada, and, in order to complete the forty miles a day that I have rigorously imposed upon myself, I sometimes get up and pull out at daylight. It is scarce more than sunrise when, following the railroad through Five-mile canon,—another rift through one of the many mountain chains that cross this part of Nevada in all directions under the general name of the Humboldt mountains,—I meet with a startling adventure. I am trundling through the canon alongside the river, when, rounding the sharp curve of a projecting mountain, I see a tawny mountain-lion trotting leisurely along ahead of me, not over a hundred yards in advance. He hasn't seen me yet; he is perfectly oblivious of the fact that he is in "the presence." A person of commonsense would simply have revealed his presence by a gentle sneeze, or a slight noise of any kind, when the lion would have immediately bolted back into the underbrush. But I lay no claim whatever to any of that rare virtue, and consequently acted about as foolishly as possible in the premises. I fancy some reader has already guessed that I slipped up behind the lion and pulled his tail; or mounted the bicycle and rode him down. I simply fired at him, and of course missed him, as a person naturally would at a hundred yards with a bull-dog revolver. The bullet must have singed him a little, though, for, ere I get my features into shape for the broad grin that I promised to treat myself with at seeing him wildly scoot for the brush, he turns savagely round and comes bounding rapidly towards me, and at twenty paces crouches for a spring. Do I "grin" when I see him thus? Again, Nay. Laying his cat-like head almost on the ground, his round eyes flashing fire, and his tail waving to and fro, he looks savage and dangerous. Crouching behind the bicycle I fire at him again. Nine times out of ten a person will overshoot the mark with a revolver under such circumstances, and, being anxious to avoid this, I do the reverse, and fire too low. The ball strikes the ground just in front of his head, and throws the sand and gravel in his face, and perhaps in his wicked round eyes; for he shakes his head, and seems to recollect suddenly that he left something at home, and jumps up and makes off into the brush.

"Dying in poverty," mused a needy student, "is nothing; it is living in poverty that is hard on a fellow."

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion. 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.
☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERF CT FIT GUARANTEED.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

MARKDALE
HARNESS EMPORIUM
ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.
THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor
Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47

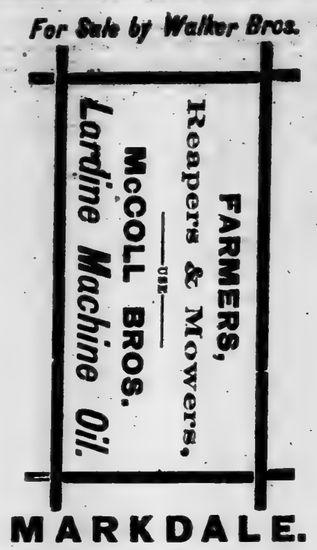
W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
124ly

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH
HORSE SHOEING
A SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS.



New Butcher Shop.
The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and
DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED
A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.
Remember the stand in McNea's block.
W. H. RUTLEDGE.

A RARE CHANCE.
SAW-MILL FOR SALE.
THE undersigned having lost his health, wishes to dispose of his Saw and Shingle Mill, which is situated 4½ miles West of Markdale. There is an abundance of splendid timber very convenient to the mill; a good business has been done, and an excellent chance is in store for a good pushing man. The mill is mostly new, being erected three years. Machinery in fine condition. Steam power 30 horse. Terms easy. For further particulars apply at this office, or on the premises.
J. A. DUNCAN,
230 tf Markdale P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT 22. con. 11, Glenelg, about 100 acres, mostly cleared and under cultivation. This farm is three miles from Markdale, and will be sold on very easy terms. For full particulars apply to Geo. S. C. BETHUNE, Toronto, CHAS. KING, Shelburne, or GEO. NOBLE, Markdale. 234

EUGENIA
Grist, Saw and Lath Mills
Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.
GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND
Chopping Done Every Day.
Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.
LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.
Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted
9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

For Sale by Walker Bros.

MARKDALE.

YOU CAN SUBSCRIBE
For any of the
FOLLOWING PAPERS
AT THIS OFFICE:

Daily or Weekly Mail,	Toronto.
Daily or Weekly Globe,	Toronto.
Daily or Weekly News,	Toronto.
Daily World	Toronto.
Family Herald and Weekly Star,	Montreal.
American Agriculturist,	Monthly.
Farmers' Advocate,	Monthly.

☞ Subscription can commence at any time.
STANDARD OFFICE,
MARKDALE.

SEEDS SEEDS
— IMPORTED —
FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS
The place to buy your Seeds is at
PARKER'S,
Drugstore, - DURHAM.

J. J. IRWIN,
Veterinary Surgeon,
GRADUATE of the Ont. Vet. College, Toronto, has opened business in Markdale, and is ready to attend all calls.
Office and residence opposite the Markdale House, Sydenham St.
☞ CHARGES MODERATE. 238-tf

NEW GROCERY STORE
IN CONNECTION WITH
Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.
Having just received a Choicee, Fresh and Select
STOCK OF
Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,
Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.
I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.
193 J. PLEWES.

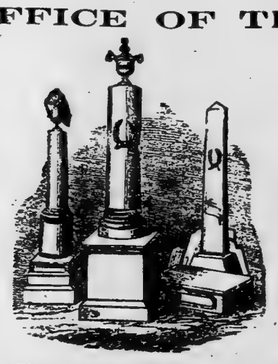
Markdale Roller Mills.
The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.
No more waiting while the grist is being ground.
The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs. Flour.
" "	61 "	39 " "
" "	60 "	38 " "
" "	59 "	37 " "
" "	58 "	36 " "
" "	57 "	35 " "



with offal in proportion to amount of flour.
I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it, if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.
John W. Ford.

J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all kinds of
PUMPS,
Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.
Iron Pumps Supplied
Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.
Also Agent for Sargent's
PATENT LOAD LIFTER
For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.
☞ Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS
H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.
JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble
☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.
N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.
H. B. HARRISON.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

OFFICE OF THE
Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT,
All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.
Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS
Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH.
TIME TABLE.
Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed
Toronto....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orangeville Arrive	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Orangeville Leave	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun.	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed
Owen Sound	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30pm
Chatsworth	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun.	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orangeville Arrive	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Orangeville Leave	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

ROBT. ASKIN,
MARKDALE,
Has opened out a First-Class
UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,
And therefore has supplied a want long felt,
COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortest notice.
A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.
—All kinds of—
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

ROBERT S. RAE,
TAILOR,
Sydenham Street.
MARKDALE.

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS
In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon
From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.
At prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $6 per acre, on 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country for securing Good Homes now open for settlement.
FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE—10,618,432 Acres ONE MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1882, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Northern Pacific Country, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

Local and Other Items

NOTICES in these columns intended to be Individual or Society will be charged a line for the first insertion and a line each subsequent insertion.

Markdale cattle fair is next Sat[urday], 9th May.

Meaford roller rink had a succe[ssful] opening last week.

MR. H. D. IRWIN lost a valua[ble] ox on Sunday last.

MR. and Mrs. Turner are this w[eek] visiting friends in Hamilton.

FOR Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doo[rs], Frames and Mouldings, go to Gr[ant] & Co.

The 24th of May comes on Sunday, and [in] consequence the surrounding towns are [preparing] to celebrate that event the follow[ing day] (25th).

FOR Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradl[es], Mattresses, and Spring Beds, [go to] Grant & Co.

A ring around the moon is a s[ign of] rain, and a ring around the eye i[s the result] of a blow.

A large lot of Dried Bacon, Sm[oked] Ham, and Spice roll, selling ch[eap at] Hanbury's.

PARTIES wanting Shingles had bet[ter call] on Weber at Vandeleur bef[ore] purchasing elsewhere.

MISS Spence McFarland's Millin[ery] is, makes, and trims Mantles [in the] very latest styles.

LEGATT & Carson have added La[rge] Rollers to their list of farm implem[ents] advertised in another column.

FOR Dressing Cases, Bureaus, Si[de] Boards, Cupboards, Lounges, &c., [go to] Grant & Co., Markdale.

JUST to hand at Hill Bro's something [quite] new in Tea Setts, which they are s[elling] very cheap: Call and see.

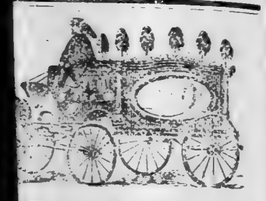
STORE to rent in Markdale; ap[ply to] Mr. John White, Strathnairn, [or] Mr. John Lyons, Markdale.

MR. John McDonald of Chatswo[rth] has purchased the residence of M[r.] Wade, of same place for $1,226.

THE Mercatile Fire Insurance C[o.'s] business is steadily increasing in t[he] locality—R. C. BRYDEN is agent.

DIAN PACIFIC R. L.
VEN SOUND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.



Tect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

IONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed.
..Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Arrive..	9 50 "	7 08 "	12 30pm
Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
e Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
.....	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
rd	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
.....	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
d.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

NS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
d.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
d.. ...	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 [illegible] "
.....	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
.....	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
.....	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
rive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
ave....	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
ction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

T. ASKIN,

KDALE,

pened out a First-Class

NG ESTABLISHMENT,

has supplied a want long felt,

CASKETS,

SHROUDS,

and all

L FURNISHINGS

l on the shortes notice.

endid Hearse

re at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

RE FRAMING

e on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

T S. RAE,

LOR,

ham Street.

KDALE.

RN PACIFIC

LANDS

North Dakota, Montana, Washington and Oregon

rior to Puget Sound.

ly from $2 to $6 per acre. This is the Best Country es now open for settlement. acres of Government Free under the Homestead mber Culture Laws. NOTE OR MORE THAN c Lands disposed of in 1883, cific country. Books and describing the Northern Railroad Lands for Sale and Lands. Address, CHAS. B. N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

L TRUSTEES.

manufacturing an ex- ssortment of Furniture.

OL SEATS and DESKS, S, etc., of the latest proved pattern. Highly ool Trustees and Teach- mfort and compactness. assortment of Farm and ays on hand. Send for th P. O.

ANDREW McGILL.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 243. MARKDALE, ONT., MAY 7, 1885. COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.

Spring Stock

COMPLETE.

Complete Watches.

old and Silver Cases, Ladies and ts sizes, Waltham, Elgin, Spring- and Swiss movements, 7, 9, 11 15 Jewelled. Close time-keepers. rrants cover all breakages, for 1 years.

32 FINE CLOCKS, h Thomas & other makes.

EDDING RINGS, ACID TEST.

oz. Coin Case, Elgin movement, . Bal., $12.00.
good Swiss Watch, 15 Jewelled, er Case, $9.50.

Advertise Actual Present Stock,

I am in a position to give better ms, time or cash, than any other er in this section of Grey Co. Get rations, compare with mine, and ve my statement. Long warrants to sell—very often—inferior or ction watches. I hold to the plan honest representation of every cle, and give no warrants exceed- 2 years. Cash discount 5 per cent. worth considerable to every purch- r.

FFICULT WATCH REPAIRING A Specialty. ALL WORK FULLY GUARANTEED.

W. A. BROWN,

weller, - Markdale.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

Markdale cattle fair is next Saturday, 9th May.

Meaford roller rink had a successful opening last week.

Mr. H. D. Irwin lost a valuable horse on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner are this week visiting friends in Hamilton.

For Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

The 24th of May comes on Sunday, and in consequence the surrounding towns are preparing to celebrate that event the following day (25th).

For Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

A ring around the moon is a sign of rain, and a ring around the eye is a sign of a blow.

A large lot of Dried Bacon, Smoked Ham, and Spice roll, selling cheap at Hanbury's.

Parties wanting Shingles had better see Weber at Vandeleur before purchasing elsewhere.

Miss Spence McFarland's Milliner, cuts, makes, and trims Mantles in the very latest styles.

Leggatt & Carson have added Land Rollers to their list of farm implements advertised in another column.

For Dressing Cases, Bureaus, Sideboards, Cupboards, Lounges, &c., go to Grant & Co., Markdale, Near to hand at Hill Bro's something entirely new in Tea Setts, which they are selling very cheap: Call and see.

Store to rent in Markdale; apply to Mr. John White, Strathnairn, or Mr. John Lyons, Markdale.

Mr. John McDonald of Chatsworth has purchased the residence of Mr. Hodge, of same place for $1,226.

The Mercatile Fire Insurance Co's business is steadily increasing in this locality—R. C. Bryden is agent.

A first-class new waggon for sale, very cheap for cash, or easy terms to responsible party. Apply at this office.

We candidly and squarely say that McFarland has the finest and cheapest lot of dress goods shown north of Toronto.

Tenders.—See advertisement by posters for erection of a Methodist Parsonage at Priceville. Jas. Brander, Chairman.

Wanted Immediately.—An apprentice to wagon making and painting. Apply at once to McArthur Bro's., Dundalk. 143-44

This week one case lovely Brocaded Marvilleaux Silks for Mantles $1.35, $1.65, and $2.00 Imported direct by McFarland.

Mr. Goode, merchant of Chatsworth has sold out and will remove to Toronto, where he is going into the grain business extensively.

A fresh arrival of new Millinery at Hill Bro's this week, "Grand opening next." Ladies, now is the time to secure your summer Hats, Bonnets, &c.

Miss A. V. Robinson, is prepared to give full satisfaction is all kinds of hair dressing, New York style, for two weeks at Geo. Ritchie's, Mill street.

Eggs.—Mamoth Light Brahmas, pure, for sale, one dozen for $2 or two dozen for $3. R. Montgomery, Markdale. 242 44

Wm. Lucas & Co. have any amount of money to loan on real estate security at 6½ per cent. Call on them before borrowing elsewhere. 238-3m

Express Wagons, Walking Sticks, Rubber Balls, Base Balls, Fishing Tackles, &c., splendid new stock at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

Oxen for Sale.—A well matched pair of oxen rising four years old, well trained. For particulars apply to Geo. Ireton, one mile from Barrhead Mills. 142-44.

The Thornbury paper says the Standard office has the best selection of horse cuts in Grey or Simcoe. Thanks brother—that's what we thought ourselves.

A new stock of Baby carriages just received at Thos. Mathews. Those in need of such, or expecting to require one will save money by purchasing from me.

The Shelburne Free Press is ten years old and has every prospect of being order. It is a first class local paper and one of our best exchanges. May continued success attend it.

The purest Wines and Liquors in town is kept at Hanbury's.

Also a large lot of Bottled Ale & Porter, Fresh Apple Cider always kept in stock.

See Miss Burch's Spring Millinery, choice goods, Wools and Fancy Goods, Dress and Mantle making as usual receives special attention. Eggs taken in exchange. 242-43

Tree Planting.—The Minister of Education has appointed the 8th of May as an Arbor or tree planting day in all the rural school sections of Ontario, subject to the approval of the trustees.

Loss.—Mr. Robert Wilcox lost a fine horse this week. One of the other horses kicked it in the stifle and the wound being pronounced incurable the animal was shot.—Shelburne Free Press.

A meeting will be held in the City hotel at 8 o'clock on Friday evening 8th, to make arrangements for the celebration of the Queen's birthday in Markdale. A full attendance is urgently requested.

We have been informed by the powers that be, that it is their determination to prosecute any party allowing the saw dust from their saw mill to enter the running stream. A word to the wise is sufficient.

On Monday last James Lyons lost a horse blanket, all wool, between Markdale and Lyon's Church, town line Euphrasia and Holland. The party who found it will oblige by leaving it at the Standard office, Markdale.

W. J Rowe has put in his new saw mill, one of Goldie & McCullough's self-acting shingle machine, also sever al other smal l saws, also a saw-dust carrier to prevent the saw-dust from going into the river. Making it now the best saw mill in the vicinity.

When you bury an old animosity never mind putting up a tombstone.

W. J. Latimer who purchased Dr. Gent's general store in Priceville about a year ago, has sold out and gone to Durham, we presume Priceville was not large enough for him, Mr. L., is however, an enterprising business man and will doubtless do a large trade in Durham.

A Nasal Injector free with each bottle of Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

Only two more days to clean up yards, both front and back: some have already obeyed the orders of our inspector, hope to see them carried out universally and thus save costs, as well as the trouble of the officers who we hope will carry out their intentions, and we have good reason to believe they will.

For Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer. It never fails to cure. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

Excellent Opening.—The ½ acre lot opposite the Town Hall, Rocklyn, upon which a very comfortable dwelling house and a convenient shoe-shop are erected, can now be bought cheap, and on easy terms of payment. It is an excellent location for a shoe-maker, blacksmith, or other tradesmen. Apply to W. H. Dodson, Rocklyn.

Shiloh's Cure will immediately relieve Croup Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. Sold by A. Turner & Co.x

Mr. Crowe, who we stated lost a horse recently by eating frozen wheat chop wishes us to state that he does not blame the feed at all for the death of the beast, as the animal had to be fed very carefully in order to avoid predisposed troubles, and when the horse got loose during the night and got an over feed it was not at all strange that the effect would prove fatal, and besides, it was a mixture of oats and wheat chop.

Are You Made miserable by indigestion, Consumption, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Yellow Skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

We have received the first number of the "Illustrated Sporting World," of New York. It is a handsome sixteen-page journal. Its pages will be devoted to athletic sports of all kinds. It is handsomely illustrated with many beautiful cuts and on the whole is the best sporting paper we have ever examined. It contains nothing that would offend the tastes of the most fastidious. We wish the proprietors success.

The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Bourbon, Ind., says; "Both myself and wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure." Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

Found Dead.—A young man named Noresworthy came up from Laurel to see the fair last Thursday. In the evening he went home with John Collister, who lives a short distance west of this village. During the night he had an epileptic fit, and apparently recovered but when Mr. Collister went to call him in the morning, he was dead. We understand that he was buried by the municipality.—Shelburne Free Press.

Bright fresh novelties in Millinery now attracts the eye on every hand. The lovely flowers which were, it not for the absence of natures fragrance, would never without a close examination be taken for artificial. The Feathers, Ribbons and Trimmings in all their charming hues when combined and placed on the charming new shapes in Hats and Bonnets by the artistic fingers of Miss Spence, McFarland's milliner, go to make up a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

A. McDougall is expected home this week.

Mr. Arch. Donaldson and family, returned from Muskoka last week.

There are now hopes of a peaceful settlement between England and Russia.

A fire Monday night destroyed the whole square from the Postoffice to the Telephone Exchange in Miles City, Montana. Loss, $100,000.

National Pills are sugar coated, mild but thorough, and are the best Stomach and Liver Pill in use.

A communication from our old Eugenia corr. Mr. J. W. Webster, now in British Columbia, to hand, but too late for this week: will appear next.

Fever colic, unnatural appetite, fretfulness, weakness, and convulsions, are some of the effects of Worms in Children; destroy the worms with Dr. Low's Worm Syrup.

A doubtful compliment: Mrs. Smith—"I fear I'm failing fast," Mrs. Jones—"Nonsense! I only hope I shall look as well when I'm your age." Mrs. Smith (sotto voive)—"When she is of my age! The hateful old thing!"—Boston Transcript.

The Hectic Flush, pale hollow cheeks and precarious appetite, indicate worms. Freeman's Worm Powders will quickly and effectually remove them.

Received this week, a line of fine waltham movements, with my own name on. Prices close for cash, also Screw-bizzil and Dust-proof watch cases Ladies necklets best roll plate. Large stock best makes of mouth-orgons. W. A. Brown, Markdale.

"Mamma, who tore Mr. Bland's hair all out," said little Mabel.

"Hush, child, you mus'nt speak of such things. Papa is bald too, you know,"

"Yes, but I want to know who tore Mr. Bland's hair all out; he isn't married."

Mr. Stokes of Proton Up., who was bitten by a dog while attending Flesherton Station spring show, suffered severely from the bite while attending Markdale show as judge, the second day following. His hand is now steadily improving. And he wishes to express his gratitude to the people of this village for their kindness, especially that of Mr. John McAleer and family of the City Hotel.

The quarterly business meeting of Markdale Methodist Church was held in the vestry last Monday afternoon, and a full attendance was in attendance. A unanimous invitation was extended to Rev. Mr. Casson to remain another year which, we understand, was accepted. Mr. W. A. Brown was elected lay representative to the District Meeting, with a unanimous expression of the meeting, that he also be representative to the Conference, which will be held in Owen Sound.

Secured.—Mr. James Plewes of this village has secured the agency for Ontario for a new invention in the flour mill business called "The Hercules Automatic Scourer, Seperator and Smutter." This Machine is pronounced by reliable practical millers who have used it both in Canada and the United States to be a very great improvement on any previous invention for the purpose. Mr. Plewes is meeting with wonderful success in taking orders. We wish him every success.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church, Markdale, are making extensive preparations for their annual bazaar and concert on the Queen's birthday, which will be held on Monday the 25th. The bazaar is to be ahead of anything of former years, while the concert is to be a rich treat; several outside assistants being engaged for the occasion. The laying of the corner stone will however be the greater attraction, Warring Kennedy, Esq., of Toronto is to lay the stone at 3 o'clock p. m., and will also address the assembly at the concert. Full particulars will be given by posters.

There is a story of three Yankees abroad who compared notes. One said: "I was mistaken for the Emperor of Russia." Quoth the second; "And I am continually asked if I am not Louis Napoleon." Up spoke the third: "I kin beat that. Yesterday I was going along the Champs Elysees and a fellow slapped me on the back and hollowed, "Satan is that you?."

Getting Better.—Truth, of May 2nd, contains some very fresh and valuable readings. John N. Lake, Esq., of Toronto writes of Clark's Crossing and the seat of the late battle, from his own personal observation. John Frazer, Esq., of Montreal, furnishes a racy reminiscence of visit to Glengarry forty years ago. Geo. Mercer Adam, Esq., of Toronto, commences some valuable papers in reguard to the early history of Ontario. Mr. Cannift Haight, of Toronto, gives an interesting reminiscence of the excitement in connection with the Fenian Raid in 1866. T. S. Brown, Esq., an old Montreal citizen, writes of the stirring time in 1837. The Poet's Page is of unusual interest. The Prize Story, from the pen of Mr. J. E Collins, of Ottawa, (for which a Gold Watch is awarded,) is beautifuly written. A piece of fine new music, "Canada the Free" by John Imrie, of Toronto, is published. How the Publisher manages to secure so much interesting and valuable fresh matter every week is a mystery. Truth is a well-printed Weekly Magazine, of 28 pages, at only $3.00 a year. Send 7 cents for a sample copy, to S. Frank Wilson, Publisher, Toronto.

"Pa, does the sausage come out of its hole on candlemas day, and look around for its shadow, so as to make an early spring? Ma says it does." "What are you talking about?" says the papa to the little boy. "It is the ground hog that comes out of its hole, not the sausage." "Well, isn't sausage ground hog?" and the little one went off on his roller skates as though shot out of a gun, leaving the old man to worry over the incipient punster in an otherwise respectable family.—Peck's Sun,

There will be a meeting of the citizens of Markdale at the Markdale House on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock sharp for the purpose of organizing a brass band. A good band in Markdale is an actual want, and we are highly pleased and much interested to learn that our citizens have at last been aroused to action in this regard. Our village has now attained that degree of prosperity and importance that we should be thoroughly alive to every enterprise that will tend to advance our interests. A good band always has a salutary effect in a community, both socially and morally; and, as we have a galaxy of worthy young men possessing a high degree of musical talent who are desirous of furthering the enterprise by devoting their time and talent to the band, we think that our business men and citizens generally will not fail to give them such financial aid and backing as shall be needed to give the band good prospects of success. Let us not be behind our sister towns, of even less commercial importance and enterprise, in providing some public amusement, both for old and young, that will serve to elevate our morals and inspire us with a healthy desire for advancement. A good band will do this and more, so let us remember the motto of that sturdy matron—"Josiah Allan's wife"—and put our "Shoulder blade to the wheel" and never let up pushing till we hear the golden notes of the cornet mingling with the harmonious tones of the baritone floating out upon the balmy air of a midsummer night, then we shall know that our efforts have been blessed with that success which all good acts merit.

Having A Clear Understanding.

"Now" said the bridegroom to the bride when they returned from the honeymoon trip: "let us have a clear understanding before we settle down to married life; are you to be president or vice-president of this concern?"

"I want to be neither president or vice-president," she answered, "I will be content with a subordinate position.

"What is that?"

"Controller of the currency."—Boston Courier.

CANADIANS IN THE SOUDAN.

Courage Under Arab Fire.

When the enemy saw the British were so determined they lost all courage and fled in disorder. The Highlanders covered in on the enemy's left flank, and the South Staffordshires on their right. "Cease firing" was sounded, and the Highlanders fell back under cover, while the Staffordshires poured volley after volley into the enemy's ranks, killing them in all directions. Their flag was captured.

A ROUSING CHARGE.

The only strong position to be taken now was the high rocky one on the hill. The three companies of Staffordshires were reinforced by two more, and with one tremendous yell they charged and bayoneted the enemy in all directions. The Royal Highlanders then charged from rock to rock, and completely annihilated the enemy. The enemy numbered about fifteen hundred, and they lost 650 men, killed and wounded. Our loss was three officers and 13 men. Our wounded was 54 non-commissioned officers and men. The troops returned after burying their dead about 6:30 p.m. The voyageurs were not permitted to leave the zareba, but a few managed to get away and went up and saw the fight. Lieut.-Col. Dennison stood beside the cannon, and assisted materially in sending some splendid shots into the enemy's ranks. Eighteen shell and six shrapnel were hurled into their ranks, doing great damage. As soon as the battle was over the voyageurs rushed out of the zareba and made for the battle ground, where they reached in time to see the wind-up of the fight. They secured many valuable mementos in the shape of guns, knives, swords, etc. It was to us Canadians who had never seen a battle. I can assure you, to see the dead and injured in hundreds lying about was something awful; and especially at the fort where Gen. Earle was killed. It was a stone hut about eight feet square filled with straw and thatched with rushes. Sixteen men took up a position inside, when they saw they could not get away they fired through the chinks at every one who came near. When the soldiers saw Gen. Earle rush forward and fall they seemed to become crazed, they rushed in a body, surrounding the hut and firing into the doorway. The shed took fire and all inside perished in the flames, but not a noise came forth, not a sound to tell of the awful agony within, for above all things a true Mohammedan abhors one who sues for mercy. Not a cry came out of that awful pile of dying men, but each continued while life lasted to hurl death into the ranks of the English, till at last suffocated and burned, they died.

AN AWFUL SIGHT

AFTER THE BATTLE.

After burying our dead we returned to camp. The Canadians in little groups talking over the events of the day, and wondering if any more battles would take place before they reached clear water, for this rocky cataract sort of water is not the most desirable sort of place one would like to be fooling around in knowing the Mahdi's followers lurk in rocky holes anxious to pick off any unwary soldier or Kanuck who wanders away too far; but they are all anxious to be armed and permitted to take part in the next battle, should there be one, as Lord Wolseley wants us for boating purposes, and not to fight, we will have to stand back and look on.

Russian Roguery.

"Russia has in its service but two honest men, you and me," the Emperor Nicholas once said to his son Alexander. If such a remark were justifiable half a century ago it would seem that the country has made but little progress in either official or business honesty, whatever it may have made in other directions. Robbery goes on in every department of the State, and permeates every branch of business. "Robbery is the rule, honesty the exception," says a recent writer on Russian affairs. "No cheating, no sales," is one of the cynical proverbs of the country, and the majority of the business people seem to hold it a fundamental rule that dishonesty is the only sure road to commercial prosperity,

The revelations at the trial of Rykov, once manager of the defunct Bank of Skopine, which took place recently at the Moscow Assizes, illustrate this national dishonesty with startling emphasis. The extent of the depredations, the number of years they had been allowed to go on unchecked, the number and character of the people implicated in the robbery, the fact that the exposure was due to the efforts of an obscure newspaper, and the necessarily rotten condition of a community in which such a robbery was rendered possible, all tended to give the case an almost European notoriety. The amount of the swindle perpetrated by the bank manager and his confederates was reckoned at 12 000 000 rubles, or about $8,000,000. When, after two years of legal shuffling and delay, the conspiracy was, at last, exposed in open court, the figures, large as they were, dropped into insignificance when compared with the social and political questions raised by this extraordinary trial.

A Georgia farmer leased some land last year to a colored man for a third of the crop. A severe drought cut the crops short, and the negro gathered only two bales of cotton and two wagon loads of corn. The latter was stored and the cotton sold. When the landlord called for his share he was told that there was none for him. He asked, in surprise, "Didn't I rent you my land for a third of the crop?" "Yes, boss," said the darkey, "but you see dere was no third. Dere was only two bales of cotton and two loads of corn; all mine, and nuffin for you by de contract."

A Cowboy's Whip.

"The hilarious cowboy has tastes which we are constantly endeavoring to cultivate and satisfy. Here is the latest effort in that line," said a dealer in horse jewelry. ... peculiar whip. There was a metal stock seven inches long, in the butt of which was a heavy whistle. Pulling out the whistle, it revealed a capacious match-safe, and when he let go of the whistle a spring popped it back in place, where it closed the match-safe. Around the stock was a short thong of lacing leather which made a loop just large enough to hold two fingers of the cowboy's hand. The other end of the stock terminated in a tapering rubber half an inch in diameter at the thick end and a quarter of an inch a foot away, where there was a little loop. A steel spring ran through the rubber to give it strength. Two feet of heavy leather, about the size of a sewing machine band was drawn half through the loop, thus forming a double lash.

"People here do not know how to whip a horse," the dealer continued. "They lash him under the belly and across the shoulders. The patient animal at last balks. If I was a horse I wouldn't balk; I'd kick the stuffing out of everything within a rod of me if I was whipped like that. The cowboy is more persuasive. He swings the whip by that loop around the handle over two fingers of his right hand, and swaying the whip across in front of him, brings his hand down on his left hip. The double lashes have an exhilarating effect on the horse's hindquarters. Only an unbroken Mexican broncho would fail to appreciate that sort of treatment, and if he survived the application of six inch buzz-saw spurs that would immediately follow, he would never hesitate again when whipped on the quarters."

Every Woman Knows Them.

The human body is much like a good clock or watch in its movements; if one goes too slow or too fast, so follow all the others; and bad time results; if one organ or set of organs works imperfectly, perversion of functional effort of all the organs is sure to follow. Hence it is that the numerous ailments which make woman's life miserable are the direct issue of the abnormal action of the uterine system. For all that numerous class of symptoms — and every woman knows them—there is one unfailing remedy, Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," the favorite of the sex."

The first thing in a boot is the last.

* * * * Premature decline of power in either sex, however induced, speedily and permanently cured. Consultation free. Book for three letter stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Western calf has four ears. This is fortunate for the calf as he will not be mistaken for a dude is conferred upon that magnificent institution, the human system, by Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" that fortifies it against the encroachments of disease. It is the great blood purifier and alterative, and as a remedy for consumption, bronchitis, and all diseases of a wasting nature, its influence is rapid, efficacious, and permanent. Sold everywhere.

A Strong Endowment

The first ingredient in conversation is truth, the next good sense, the third good humor, and the fourth wit.

Home Testimony.

Many hundred recommendations similar in character to the one given below have been received, and give proof of the great value of Polson's NERVILINE as a pain remedy. Try it.

ATHOL, Feb. 20.—We hereby certify that we have used Nerviline in our families, and have found it a most reliable remedy for cramps in the stomach, also for headache, and externally for rheumatic pains. No house should be without this invaluable remedy.—LUKE COLE. ELISHA COLE, J. P.

The best education in the world is that got by struggling to get a living.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the City.

Beryl green comes with a bluish metallic lustre among the spring greens in millinery goods.

Imitation!

Is the weak man's inspiration and the highest point ever reached by a numerous class in the community. Without the ability or perseverance to work from an independent basis, they cling like barnacles to ideas emenating from others and with perverse blindness believe them to be their own. Now that explains why that widely known and much appreciated remedy—PUTNAM'S PAINLESS Corn Extractor, has a dozen or more imitators; not having sufficient merit in themselves unprincipled dealers, for a larger profit, palm them off on unsuspecting and confiding customers as "just as good," &c. Beware of all such and use only Putnam's Corn Extractor. Sure, safe, harmless. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietors.

Speak well and little if you wish to be considered as possessing merit.

Young Men!—Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich. offer to send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt, and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

Many a dandy before marriage becomes subdued after it.

One of the sights of the City of Hamilton is the factory in which the celebrated "Myrtle Navy" tobacco is made. Some people may suppose that putting up plugs of tobacco must be a very simple matter, but a walk among the ponderous and complicated machinery of this establishment would speedily undeceive them. Here are hydraulic presses, screw presses, iron frames, all of enormous strength, besides a steam engine and many other pieces of machinery.

Purchase not friends by gifts; when thou ceasest to give, such will cease to love.

A. P. 226

FLAGS FOR SALE.—All kinds.—Send for list. JOHN J. DALEY, Guelph.

THOS. GALLOWAY & CO., Cotton, Woollen, Silk Carpet and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas. Ont

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR
IMPERIAL FRENCH SHOE BLACKING

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH. How it can be accomplished—sealed particulars 3c. Sanitary Pub. Co., Canadian Depository, Toronto, Can

PURE BRED AYRSHIRES for sale; two cows, two yearling heifers and one bull. Write for description, price and pedigree to G. F. BAKER, Trafalgar.

FARM FOR SALE—100 acres of land—80 acres cleared and 20 acres of good hardwood bush; new barn and stable, house and orchard, living spring and well. The place is fenced well; school, post office and churches convenient. MRS. HARRIGAN, AMBERLEY.

AGENTS WANTED Male and female—the best thing ever offered to agents—$25 00 per week easily earned, 3c. for circular. Address P Stevenson, room, "H," Arcade, Toronto, Canada.

THREE FARMS IN PLYMPTON—Respectively of 100, 50, and 50 acres; will be sold separately if required; the land is in the peach region, directly on the shore of Lake Huron, and of the finest quality; plenty of firewood and some good timber remaining; good fences, buildings, and orchards; Camlachie station 2, and Sarnia 12 miles distant. Apply personally or by letter to MRS. H WHITING, Camlachie P.O.

JOHN R. BARBER.
REOUT
Files DON'T WASTE THEM, ... OR BRING TO THE ONTARIO FILE CO.
150 Front St. E., TORONTO. Agents wanted.

FOR PLEASANT SEWING
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Cotton
Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry-Goods Dealers.

SMOKED SAUSAGES.
The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342 Montreal

R. W. PRITTIE,
REAL ESTATE AGENT,
Commissioner, Valuator Trustee & Financial Agent,
Room C., Arcade, Yonge Street, Toronto. Money to Loan, Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged. Manitoba and United States lands taken in part payment for city property.

BELTING
Manufacturers of Star Rivet, Leather Belting. Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts.
F. E. DIXON & CO., KING ST. EAST, TORONTO.

CUT THIS OUT!
The New Co-Operative
Sewing Machines!
—ARE THE—
BEST IN THE MARKET.
NEW STAND! NEW FURNITURE!
Latest Improved Attachments
Agents price for similar machine $60
Our price only $25 each.
Before buying send us stamp for our elegant photograph and sample of sewing Machines guaranteed for three years and sent on trial.
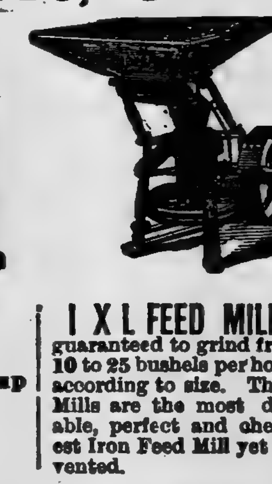
Any lady wanting a machine will do well to write to
THE CO-OPERATIVE
Sewing Machine Co.
22 JAMES ST. SOUTH, HAMILTON.



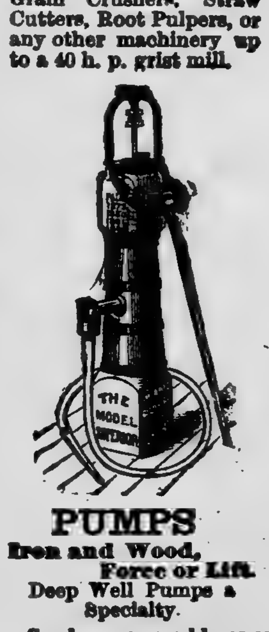
CAUTION!
Each Plug of the
MYRTLE NAVY!
IS MARKED
T. & B.
In Bronze Letters.
NONE OTHER GENUINE.

Canada Permanent Land & Savings Co
Incorporated A.D. 1855.
SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL $3,000,000
PAID UP CAPITAL 2,200,000
RESERVE FUND 1,100,000
TOTAL ASSETS 8,000,000
OFFICE: Co's Buildings, Toronto Street, Toronto.
Straight Loans ... PLAN.
... to lend ... lowest current rate of interest, repayable either in one sum or by instalments as may be desired by the borrower.
Applications may be made direct to the undersigned by letter or otherwise, or to the local representatives of the Company throughout Ontario. As the Company always has funds on hand no delay need be expected. Expenses reduced to minimum.
Mortgages and Municipal Debentures Purchased.
J. HERBERT MASON, Managing Director

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co. Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

TRY PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER
Pure Gold MANUFACTURING CO., 31 FRONT ST. EAST, Toronto.

ONTARIO PUMP CO.
(Limited.)
OFFICE AND FACTORY, COR. SPADINA AVE. AND CECIL Sts.
TORONTO, ONT.

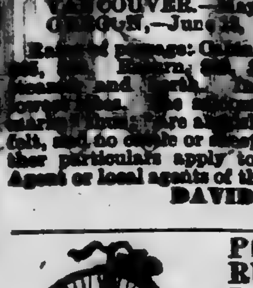


TANKS
from the smallest up to 2,855 bbls.

I X L FEED MILL
guaranteed to grind from 10 to 25 bushels per hour, according to size. These Mills are the most durable, perfect and cheapest Iron Feed Mill yet invented.

Eleven Sizes.
GEARED WINDMILLS
from 1 to 40 h. p., for Pumping Water, running Grain Crushers, Straw Cutters, Root Pulpers, or any other machinery up to a 40 h. p. grist mill.

PUMPING WINDMILLS
from 8 to 30 feet diameter.



HAYING TOOLS
A full line of the Best

PUMPS
Iron and Wood, Force or Lift.
Deep Well Pumps a Specialty.

Pipe & Pipe Fittings
In fact a full line of Water Supply Material.

Send us your address on a post card and we will send you 104 page illustrated catalogue free.
Mention this Paper

Dominion Line of Steamships
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from QUEBEC.
TORONTO.—May ..., June 27, Aug. 8, Sept. ...
VANCOUVER.—May 30, July 11, Aug. 22, ...
OREGON.—June 13, July 25, Sept. 5, Oct. 17.
Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool ... Return, ... $100, $117, $144, ... Intermediate $35, ... and staterooms in ... ships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.
General Agents, Montreal.

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for list.
Send 3c. stamp for largest Catalogue ever issued in Canada.
A. T. LANE, Montreal.

CONBOY'S

CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order them from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses, Cows, Calves, Sheep and Pigs. The YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first-class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time, and saves Food.
Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 200 Feeds.
HUGH MILLER and Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,
167 King St East, Toronto.
For Sale by druggists everywhere.

Coleman's Improved Plough Harness
Adapted to Orchard Work.
No whiffletrees to injure trees. Easy on man and team. Working qualities guaranteed. Money refunded if not satisfactory after a fair trial. Price, $10 without collars and bridles.
DEWEY & CO.,
COLBORNE ONT.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

LADIES
PILLS OF TANSY are Perfectly Safe and always Effectual. Sealed particulars 2cts.
Wilcox Specific Medicine Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

C. FELL & Co. 7 ADELAIDE ST. TORONTO ENGRAVERS LETTER CUTTERS
Mfrs. of HAND STAMPS Steel Alphabets kept in stock & cut to order Brass Stamps in any size & style fine RUBBER STAMPS, Type, Copper & Iron BRANDS, Stencils, SEALS, Checks &c &c

CLIMAX Lorillard's GRADE
R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Plug
bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered?

Farmers, Mill Men and all Oil Consumers
WILL SAVE MONEY BY USING McCOLL'S CELEBRATED OILS.
"LARDINE,"
For general lubricating purposes, is unexcelled, and their CYLINDER and other Oils have no equal. Highest Awards and Medals wherever exhibited. For sale by all dealers.
McCOLL BROS. & CO, TORONTO.

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BEEF
It is the only preparation of the kind which contains all the nutritious, together with the stimulating, properties of beef, and the only one which has the power to supply nourishment for brain, and bone, and muscle.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,
:) MANUFACTURERS OF (:
Finest Electro Gold and Silver Plate,
New York, Meriden (Ct.), Chicago, San Francisco, London, (Eng.).
BRANCH FACTORY—Cor. Cannon and Wellington Streets, Hamilton, Ont.
TRADE MERIDEN B. COMPANY MARK
Many purchasers having, through a similarity of names, purchased other wares under the impression that they were of our manufacture, we are compelled to ask special attention to the above TRADE MARKS. The fact that our name and Trade Marks are being so closely imitated should be a sufficient guarantee to the public that our wares are the BEST IN THE WORLD.
TRADE 1847 Rogers Bros. A1. MARK.

AGRICULTURA[L]

Evergreen Planti[ng]

Few trees look finer in ... than a good selection of ... such as can be found at conv... in most parts of Canada. ... principal objection often is the diffic[ulty of] getting them to grow. Greater car[e is needed in] their transplanting than with [other] kinds of trees. The Rural New [Yorker in] answer to a correspondent gives ... directions about the time a[nd manner] of transplanting:—

Plant from early Spring till Ma[y, or] after a heavy rain in August or ... till before frost sets in. Lift ca[refully], get as many roots as possible; ... mutilated roots and clean th[e] ends of all main roots. From th[e time] the trees are dug up till they [are] planted, never allow the roots to ... exposure or otherwise. Having ... holes prepared for their rece[ption], ... trees so that they shall be ... same depth in the ground as ... before. Spread out the roots a[nd work] fine, mellow soil among the ... care to pack it in firmly then f... pack the ground as firmly as poss[ible]. In Spring, a summer mulching of g... ... salt hay, or other litter, w... much good; if in Fall, a strong ... applied to each tree to keep ... place against winds and sto[rms]. In case of deciduous trees, a sma[ll mound] of earth heaped around the stem ... well, or better; but as e[vergreens] branch so low the mound practi[ce is not] always practicable. So long as ha... rocky, two to three times tra[nsplanted] young evergreens can be got so c[heaply from] our nurseries, we do not think ... any advantage, in securing you[ng trees] from their native wilds.

Successful Feeding.

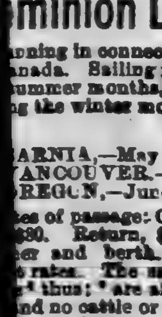
The quantity of butter produce[d by an] ordinary cow depends much more [upon] the feed and care of the ani[mal than is] supposed. Amasa Scott, a Verm[ont farm]er, is reported to have raised th[e] yield of ordinary cows to ever 500 ... a year. Here is the method adop[ted. It m]ay be well worth the careful study [of f]armers who want to make the m[ost pos]sible profit out of their animals:—

His method consisted in feeding ... almost solely, on hay (or "dried [grass"] grown on rich land, heavily seede[d and cut] just before heading out. Three crop[s were t]aken annually, amounting to abo[ut ... t]ons per acre. The cows had a goo[d pasture] in Summer, with all of this ha[y they] would eat, and in Winter were ke[pt in a w]arm stable and fed this dried gras[s with]out grain. Under this treatment c[ows w]ent up from less then 100 [pounds o]f butter a year, in one case, to 504 p[ounds, a]nd in another 633 pounds. One [pair of st]eers feeding the same way, at 23 m[onths, w]eighed 2,300 pounds, live weigh[t; an]other pair, at 24 months, weighed ... pounds; a third pair, at 23½ months, ... pounds, and one pair, 12 months, ... pounds, all native stock. I copy [these fi]gures from Mr. Scott's paper, re... in my "Notes." The cows that ... much butter had, in Winter, ... pounds of dried grass three times ... with four quarts of potatoes mornin[g and e]vening. The first 14 days of the te[st, o]ne that yielded 633 pounds churn[ed ...] pounds of butter. The cows were ... of all the time.

Experience with Fence-Po[sts].

It seems that there are some ... questions that are never to be se[ttled], among which are: When to cut ti[mber] so to make posts last; whether ... will turn to cheese, and whether ... various phases of the moon have an ... upon the animal economy, vegetation, ... weather, etc. I do not expect to ... any of these problems, and shall n... attempt to theorize or philosophise, ... simply to state facts.

With regard to the first proposit[ion, I al]ways cut my timber when I want ... and have never yet discovered tha[t the t]ime of cutting has any effect upo[n its du]rability.



About twenty-five years ago I f[enced a] garden and house-yard with a post ... think I cut the posts in the winter, ... hauled them on snow and set them ... spring. They were thrifty white oa[k, ...] split from one tree, set butt-end down, ... packed in the hole with small stone[s, and] a small heap of slaked lime whic[h a ne]ighbor told me to put around the ... he had tried it with good effect. ... putting about half a peck of lime a[round] each post on one side of the garden, ... are yet standing, the most of the[m in] pretty good order; the rest of the ... rotted away several years ago.

I have discovered that some post[s last] twice as long as others apparentl[y ...] them and under like circumsta[nces. ...] some of the yard fence, by adding ... new posts and propping, is yet stan[ding]. ... few of them are pretty sound, ... most of them are entirely rotte[d. ...] heart posts last much longer, alth... sap is taken off the rest. Some ... large posts. At the same time ... pairs of gate-posts. They were ... to about fifteen inches square, pa... capped at the top. They are al... through above ground, and one t... down several years ago.

A Gate Fastener.

A farmer says he has for several ... been noticing the different modes of ... ing gates, and has invented a pl... own, which he estimates as good ... and it is very cheap and simple. ... Take five or six links of a common ... chain, a staple of sufficient size, and a ... wrought-iron nail with the head al... in the letter T; bore a hole with a g... the inside of the front, upright be... the slats, and drive in the nail to w...

minion Line of Steamships nning in connection with the Grand Trunk ... anada. Sailing from Quebec every ... summer months, and from Portland ... g the winter months. Sailing dates ...
QUEBEC.
ARNIA,—May 16, June 27, Aug. 8, ...
ANCOUVER.—May 30, July 11, Aug. ...
REGON,—June 13, July 25, Sept. 5, ...
es of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool ... Return, $80, $108, $117, $144, ... and berth. Intermediate ... rates. The saloons and staterooms ... thus: * are amidships, where but little motion ... and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. ... particulars apply to any Grand Trunk ... or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.
General Agents, Montreal.

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for list.
Send 3c. stamp for largest Catalogue ever issued in Canada.
T. LANE, Montreal.

IMPROVED.
BOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best ... cheapest in the Market. Order ... your Carriage Maker. Take no other.

SHIRE CATTLE FEEDER
Fattening and bringing into condition, Horses, Calves, Sheep and Pigs. The YORKSHIRE FEEDER is used and recommended by ... ders. Milk Cattle produce more milk ... fattens in one-fourth the usual time, ...
... cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains ...
HUGH MILLER and Co.,
AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS,
167 King St East, Toronto.
... by druggists everywhere.

...m's Improved Plough Harness
...dapted to Orchard Work.
... detrees to injure trees. Easy on man ... rking qualities guaranteed. Money refunded ... if so ... after a fair trial. Price, $10 without bridles.
...WEY & CO.,
COLBORNE ONT.
...NSUMPTION.
... I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use ... of cases of the worst kind and of long ... have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith ... that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to ... Give Express and P. O. address.
... T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.
...ADIES
...F TANSY are Perfectly Safe and always Effectual. Sealed particulars 2 cts. ...ecific Medicine Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
...NGRAVERS LETTER CUTTERS
...rs. of HAND STAMPS Steel Alphabets kept in ... ck & cut to order Brass Stamps in any size or ... le fine RUBBER STAMPS, Type, Copper & ... BRANDS, Stencils, SEALS, Checks &c &c
R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Plug bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's ...pings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are ... cheapest, quality considered?
Oil Consumers
...USING
...ATED OILS,
...NE,"
...eir CYLINDER and other Oils ... exhibited. For sale by all
TORONTO.
...TON'S FLUID BEEF
...ly preparation of the kind which ... the nutritious, together with the ... properties of beef, and the only ... the power to supply nourishment ... and bone, and muscle.
...NNIA CO.,
Silver Plate,
...sco, London, (Eng.).
... Streets, Hamilton, Ont.
TRADE
1847 Rogers Bros. A1.
MARK.

AGRICULTURAL.

Evergreen Planting.

Few trees look finer in the yard, than a good selection of evergreens such as can be found at convenient distances in most parts of Canada. The principal objection often is the difficulty in getting them to grow. Greater care is needed in their transplanting than with most other kinds of trees. The Rural New Yorker, in answer to a correspondent gives the following directions about the time and metnod of transplanting :—

Plant from early Spring till May and from after a heavy rain in August or September till before frost sets in. Lift carefully and get as many roots as possible ; cut off badly mutilated roots and clean the broken, ends of all main roots. From the moment the trees are dug up till they are transplanted, never allow the roots to get dry by exposure or otherwise. Having large-sized holes prepared for their reception, set the trees so that they shall be about the same depth in the ground as they were before. Spread out the roots and introduce fine, mellow soil among them, taking care to pack it in firmly then fill in and pack the ground as firmly as possible. If in Spring, a summer mulching of grass mowings, salt hay, or other litter, will be of much good ; if in Fall, a strong stake may be applied to each tree to keep it firmly in place against winds and storms. In the case of deciduous trees, a small mound of earth heaped around the stems answers as well, or better ; but as evergreens branch so low the mound practice is not always practicable. So long as handsome, stocky, two to three times transplanted young evergreens can be got so cheap in our nurseries, we do not think there is any advantage in securing young trees from their native wilds.

Successful Feeding.

The quantity of butter produced by an ordinary cow depends much more largely on the feed and care of the animal than is supposed. Amasa Scott, a Vermont farmer, is reported to have raised the butter yield of ordinary cows to over 500 pounds a year. Here is the method adopted. It may be well worth the careful study of those farmers who want to make the most possible profit out of their animals :—

His method consisted in feeding solely, or almost solely, on hay (or "dried grass") grown on rich land, heavily seeded, and cut before heading out. Three crops were taken annually, amounting to about four tons per acre. The cows had a good pasture in Summer, with all of this hay they would eat, and in Winter were kept in a warm stable and fed this dried grass without grain. Under this treatment common cows went up from less then 100 pounds of butter a year, in one case, to 504 pounds, and in another 633 pounds. One pair of steers feeding the same way, at 23 months weighed 2,300 pounds, live weight; another pair, at 24 months, weighed 2,610 pounds; a third pair, at $23\frac{1}{2}$ months, 2,740 pounds, and one pair, 12 months, 1,707 pounds, all native stock. I copy these figures from Mr. Scott's paper, referred to in my "Notes." The cows that made so much butter had, in Winter, seven pounds of dried grass three times a day, with four quarts of potatoes morning and evening. The first 14 days of the test the one that yielded 633 pounds churned 42 pounds of butter. The cows were good beef all the time.

Experience with Fence-Posts.

It seems that there are some vexed questions that are never to be settled, among which are: When to cut timber; how to make posts last ; whether wheat will turn to cheese, and whether the various phases of the moon have an effect upon the animal economy, vegetation, the weather, etc. I do not expect to settle any of these problems, and shall not attempt to theorize or philosophise, but simply to state facts.

With regard to the first proposition, I always cut my timber when I want to use it, and have never yet discovered that the time of cutting has any effect upon its durability.

About twenty-five years ago I fenced my garden and house-yard with a post fence. I think I cut the posts in the winter, for I hauled them on snow and set them in the spring. They were thrifty white oak, all split from one tree, set butt end down, and tamped in the hole with small stones. I had a small heap of slaked lime which my brother told me to put around the posts, as he had tried it with good effect. I did so, putting about half a peck of lime around each post on one side of the garden, which are yet standing, the most of them in very good order; the rest of the fence passed away several years ago.

I have discovered that some posts will last twice as long as others apparently just like them and under like circumstances. Some of the yard fence, by adding some new posts and propping, is yet standing, a few of them are pretty sound yet, most of them are entirely rotted off. The heart posts last much longer, although the sap is taken off the rest. Some say, ... large posts. At the same time I set ... pairs of gate-posts. They were hewed to about fifteen inches square, painted, and capped at the top. They are all rotted through above ground, and one tumbled down several years ago.

A Gate Fastener.

A farmer says he has for several years been noticing the different modes of fastening gates, and has invented a plan of his own, which he estimates as good as can be, and it is very cheap and simple.

Take five or six links of a common trace-chain, a staple of sufficient size, and a large wrought-iron nail with the head shaped like the letter T; bore a hole with a gimlet on the inside of the front, upright between the slats, and drive in the nail to within an inch of the head. Put one end of the chain on the nail, put the staple in the other end of the chain, and drive the staple in the gate post, leaving the chain a little loose. It is impossible for your stirrups or harness to get hitched to this fastening. Your horse or your cow can never get snagged by it, and your meal-bag is perfectly safe in passing the gate post. Put a post in the ground, at the proper place behind the gate, and fasten a similar piece of chain with another staple to it, and you can easily fasten the gate open.

The Life Guards in Action.

A correspondent with General Graham in the Suakim-Berber Expedition, thus speaks of the Life Guards when under fire :—

Nothing could surpass the steadiness of the Guards. They fired as coolly as on a field day. I even heard them quietly joking along the ranks up to the moment of the charge. Meanwhile the cavalry having re-formed, were again ready for the enemy, who after their futile assault on the Guards' phalanx, had passed along the face of the hill. Having stood another charge, and suffered fresh loss, they scattered between the hills. At this time, however, another body of Mahdists coming round on our right, reinforced them. Their courage was admirable, but their tactics seemed, at this juncture, somewhat bewildered. Evidently, however, they seemed so full of fight, that they could not get enough.

Our troops quickly followed them up as they circled around the crests, pouring in a very hot fire at every point, and never letting them stop to concentrate. But they were not to be cowed, even by such constant punishment. All this time the firing was heavy and continuous. Our field guns were brought into play after a while, and, notwithstanding the disadvantage of position and the rough contour of the ground, they did excellent service.

By 11 30 a.m. all the adjoining hills had been cleared of the enemy, and our outposts held all the points originally occupied by these brave Arabs.

They had retreated farther into the hills on the right, and were being still followed by the troops. At this moment it was that I tried to get away with my despatches, but, as before telegraphed, I found a body of the enemy coming suddenly across our rear. I had a very narrow escape at one point, as I had to ride along their line in order to warn a camp follower (whom I saw leading some mules) of his danger.

Some Arabs, excellently mounted on good camels, pushed forward after me, but my horse was too good for them. Returning to the front, I found the enemy still hotly contesting the ground inch by inch. Our attack was scattered and somewhat irregular, and a brisk fusillade was going on in all directions. Our artillerymen were now doing good service in shelling the enemy from several positions held by them. As skirmishers no force I have ever seen in action is their equal. They cover ground as if by magic, and, moreover, do not understand the meaning of being beaten.

After these good soldiers had quickly climbed and lined the crest, smart firing immediately commenced, very soon increasing to a rolling thunder of musketry, which woke up a furious echo among the surrounding hills. Volley succeeded volley on both sides, and bullets began to fall unpleasantly thick around us, the sand puffing up in spurts between the horses' legs. Where I stood with the Sikhs the leaden hail by this time was whistling all around. The enemy appeared thoroughly plucky, but after a time our disciplined fire became too hot for them, and they cleared off. Some retired to the right, but the largest body moved off to the left of our front, the obvious intention of the latter manœuvre being to turn the hill held by the Marines and Berkshires ; so, in order to checkmate this attempt, the Bengal Cavalry was slipped at them. The Indian horsemen met the Mahdists on the ridge, and a determined fight there took place. I saw one officer of the Bengalese cut down two Arabs with his own hand. After their charge the cavalry fell back to give the infantry a chance of sending a volley among the scattered but thronging foe. The enemy, indeed, had soon closed up ; and starting forward in close pursuit of the retiring cavalry, rounded the hill, and there—all at once—came upon the Guards' Brigade drawn up in a square With a yell they went straight at it without hesitation, but in face of the withering fire which met them they never succeeded in getting nearer than fifteen or twenty yards of the line of bayonets.

"Coulee."

The word "coulee," which appears in dispatches from the scene of Gen. Middleton's operations in the north-west, signifies a ravine, or, more definitely, what in the Eastern States is termed a gully. The word is used, not in British America alone, but also in Dakota and Montana. It is pronounced as if spelled "cooly," with the accent on the first syllable.

The house of correction—The printing house.

A Georgia two-year-old stumped his mother by examining carefully his sister's eyes, and then asking. "Mamma, where does the Lord get his blue dust from?"

A little girl watching a kite made of a daily paper: "Mamma, isn't it going very high?" "Yes, my love, it is." "Do you think it will get beyond that cloud?" "It wouldn't surprise me if it did ; why do you ask?" "Well, I thought if it went as far as that the Lord might be able to read the news."

SUN BEAMS.

Man is like a potato—Never sure when he will get "into hot water."

It makes a red-nosed man very angry to have a little girl ask him in the presence of others if it hurts.

Oscar Wilde, who favors abolishing the coat and wastcoat, will, if he keeps on, soon look like a society lady in full dress.

It seems no more than right that men should seize Time by the forelock, for the rude old fellow sooner or later pulls all their hair out.

A naturalist has discovered that one of the curiosities of natural history is that a woman says "shoo" to frighten chickens and "boo" to a goose.

"What's in a name?" asks Shakespeare. A great deal, William ; a great deal. There is an artist in Brooklyn with the significant if not appropriate appellation of A Dauber.

A little girl whose general idea of Scripture was better than her knowledge of detail, in quoting a well kown passage rendered it as follows: "Man is born, and woman is full of trouble."

The Arabians have a funeral custom of placing ten cents in the mouth of a corpse to pay its passage over the river of death. If that is the price, it is an outrage. The fare ought to be reduced to five cents.

An article in an exchange describes the Queen of Madagascar's annual bath Annually seems a long while between baths, but fortunatly the queen wears a cuticle that doesn't show the dirt.

After her grandmother had given her a good scolding, a little mischief was overheard to say to herself: "Somebody is cross in this room; 'tain't me and 'tain't dolly and 'tain't kitty. I wonder who it is!"

A Paterson man recently advertised "instantaneous babies," and his place was overrun by women until it was understood that he was a photographer, and that the last half of his advertisement had been "pied."

An English traveler in looking over some American town mames came across the well-known one of Pawtucket, Shetucket and Nantucket. "Haw, haw!" he exclaimed," I'm blessed if the whole family didn't took it!"

There is a religious sect in Ohio which believes that when human beings die they turn into cats. Doesn't it make a man shiver, though, to think that perhaps he has been slinging bookjacks all Winter at his wife's grandmother.

A man never finds out how little he knows about domestic matters until his wife asks him to keep his eye upon the baby and see that a pan of melted butter is kept stirred while she goes into the attic to look through her rag bag.

"Oh, how do, Black? I'm almost ashamed of myself for not calling before. But I've put it off and put it off until it did seem I never would call." Black—"Don't mention it, my dear fellow. You are very kind, I'm sure."

Mrs. Yerger is not handsome, and her voice when she sings is dreadful, but Colonel Yerger is very demonstrative. "Why is he always kissing her?" asked a friend of the family of another gentleman. "I can't imagine, unless it is to keep her from singing."

They had been married six weeks, and she said ; "No don't oo stay out late, but come home soon to oor 'little wifey tifey!'" They had been married six years, and she said : "If you go out to-night, Smith, I'm going to lock up the house and go over and sleep at mother's."

Times are said to be so hard in Galveston than when a clerk goes out on the first of the month to collect bills for a leading firm and comes home at night with a dollar and a quarter and the ceiling of his pants worn out by the boots of the customers from whom he collected it, the boss regards it as a good day for collections.

A couple of tons of powder exploded in Salt Lake City the other day, wrecking everything in the neighborhood and shaking the whole town. A deaf old woman who lived a couple of blocks away pricked up her ears and said. "Come in!" Then she said to her daughter : "Law me, I do believe I'm getting back my hearing"

Leprosy in the South Pacific.

At Kalawao, on the island of Molokai, is a settlement of lepers, about 800 in number. This dreadful disease which is considered to be incurable, is believed to have been brought to the island by the Chinese. It is almost entirely confined to the native population, though there are a few whites at the settlement. On the first indication of leprosy the victim is hurried off to Kalawao, from whence they are never again permitted to return.

It is one of the saddest sights ever beheld to see a schooner load of these unfortunate beings taking leave of their friends and relatives, knowing that, although the distance which separates them will be but a few miles, yet they are parting never to meet again this side of the grave. This course is taken by the Government in hopes that, by isolating the lepers, the dread scourge may finally be stamped out. The contagious character of this disease, however, has not been satisfactorily determined, although many efforts have been made to that end. A murderer, under sentence of death, was promised his life if he would consent to be inoculated with leprosy, the physicians hoping by this to settle this important question. This was done a few months ago' but the disease has not yet shown itself. But this signifies nothing, as its appearance may be delayed from two to seven years.

RECEIPTS FOR HOME.

CUCUMBER SAUCE.—Three dozen cucumbers, six or eight white onions, half pint of salt, two quarts cider vinegar, quarter cup of black pepper, one cup black mustard seed, six dozen cloves. Slice the cucumbers and onions, and put them with the salt in a bag to drain for six hours ; then add pepper, mustard seed and cloves, and cold cider vinegar.

ROAST CLAMS.—These are very nice if properly done. Select either large or small clams. Lay them on the coals, and as their shells open, watch them closely until they are somewhat cooked. Send them to the table as hot as possible, on the half shell, with a small piece of butter on each.

CLAM SOUP.—Boil a knuckle of veal ; strain the liquor ; add twenty-five clams, chopped fine, four good sized potatoes, one onion ; drop dumplings. Season to taste with pepper, salt, sweet marjoram or parsley. Just before serving, thicken with one egg, and flour, made smooth with a little cream.

SAGO SOUP.—Take good, clear, soup stock ; remove the fat from the top and strain. Bring to a boil, and stir in half a cup of pearl sago, which has been washed and soaked for half an hour in tepid water, or three hours in cold. Season if needed. Simmer half an hour, and pour out. Send around grated cheese with it.

TURKEY SOUP.—Break up all the bones of one turkey ; add one pint of soaked split peas, and three quarts of water. Put it on early in the morning ; add a little celery and salt for flavoring. Season with pepper and salt, and boil slowly until noon. Strain.

BEEF SOUP.—Three pounds of lean beef, with a marrow-bone ; a ham-bone, if you have it, or half-pound of lean ham; one turnip, one onion, one carrot, quarter of a cabbage, three stalks of celery, three quarts of cold water. Salt and pepper to taste. Cut the meat fine, and crack the bones. Put them in a pot with a close top, cover with one quart of water and bring slowly to a boil ; the slower the better. When it begins to bubble, add the other two quarts of water, and boil slowly for three hours—two hours with closed top and the last with it slightly lifted. Wash and peel the turnip, carrot and onion ; scrape the celery and wash with the cabbage. Cut all into dice, and lay in cold water, slightly salted, for half an hour. Stew the carrot by itself in hot water until tender, then set aside to cool. Put the other vegetables on all together, in enough cold water to cover them, and let them boil to pieces, strain them half an hour before taking up the soup, and press to a pulp. Return the liquid to the saucepan, throw in a little salt, and let it boil up once to clear it ; skim and add to the soup. Put in pepper and and salt, unless the ham has salted it enough, and boil, covered, twenty minutes. Strain into an earthen dish ; let it get cold enough for the fat to rise. Skim off all you can. Rinse the pot with water ; return the soup to it ; boil briskly one minute, and throw in the carrot. Skim and serve.

Maud S.'s Bill of Fare.

A group of well-known horsemen stood around Maud S. in her comfortably fitted apartment in the Belmont Park stables, Philadelphia, the other day, and discussed the probability of the famous trotter lowering next fall her already great record. The little mare, who is always given the full range of her commodious stall, moved from one man to another, playfully poking her nose under their arms or into their coat pockets in quest of the tidbits she is accustomed to receive. She finally got around to her trainer, W. W. Bair, against whose cheek she rubbed her nose, and then proceeded to make a thorough examination of his coat pockets.

"She wants some candy," said Mr. Bair. "She likes it."

After eating several pieces of candy with apparent satisfaction, she demonstrated the versatility of her taste by munching with equal pleasure a small slice of gingerbread and a piece of pretzel.

"The little mare began jogging on the track on Monday last," Mr. Bair said, "but so far she has not been moved much, only enough to give her necessary exercise. The track is in such bad condition that nothing can be done on it yet. We jog Maud around six or seven miles a day at a slow gait now, but after the track gets better we will let her go faster."

The usual daily programme consists at present of a good rubbing down in the morning by Daniel Bowers, the groom, a brisk walk on the track in the forenoon and another in the afternoon, after which the mare is again well rubbed down and every particle of mud removed from her hoofs and legs. Her food consists principally of warm mash. Since she came to the park there has been no perceptible change in her weight, which is now 1,040 pounds. She weighed $942\frac{1}{2}$ pounds when she made her record of $2:09\frac{3}{4}$ at Lexington, Ky. Mr. Bonner was at Belmont Park last week and expressed great satisfaction with the condition of Maud S He has not decided at what places she shall trot during the approaching season

---

"What's the matter with the baby?" asked a lady of a little girl, whose baby brother she had understood to be ailing. "Oh, nothin' much," was the answer. "He's only hatching teeth."

An Allegheny City choir whose leader was about leaving for the West presented the gentleman with a breech-loading shot-gun during the week. Allegheny is determined that good music shall be heard in the West if the choir leader had to carry a cartridge-belt to the organ loft and beat time with a gun-wiper.

ARMED CRUISERS.

What Britain is Doing to Protect Her Commerce.

The Admiralty has now chartered five of the fastest and finest passenger steamers in the Atlantic trade, the Oregon, America, Arizona, Umbria, and Alaska. The steamers Coptic and Britannia are also chartered. The government will increase the number of armed cruisers to twenty. The conversion of first-class ocean steamers into armed cruisers has now begun in earnest. Following closely upon the decision to call out the Reserves, the announcement was made that the government had, in view of possible hostilities, secured four of the most modern, swiftest, and largest steamers in the British mercantile marine for warlike purposes, and at present matters have so far progressed that Messrs. Laird Brothers, of Birkenhead, who have been entrusted with the work by the Admiralty began the alterations that are found indispensable to convert the National Line steamer America into a ship of war. Built under the supervision of the Admiralty, all the great Atlantic liners are well adapted for the service for which the America the Etruria, the Oregon, and the Alaska have been chosen ; but, as the primary object kept in view during their construction has been to produce the best possible mercantile steamer, before they are armed, considerable modifications are necessary. The primary requirements of the Admiralty are that the ships placed on the list should have adequate stability, and be divided into numerous watertight compartments, and in these respects the America is a splendid specimen of her class. She is built throughout of steel, is divided into thirteen compartments by strong transverse bulkheads, and is capable of continuing afloat with the sea in any two of her compartments. In her main construction, therefore, no alterations are required; but as the ship was fitted so as to carry about 1,400 steerage and 350 saloon passengers, in addition to the crew, many of the appliances that were absolutely indispensable on a crack passenger steamer are now not only unnecessary, but are absolutely in the way. The whole deck devoted to passengers has consequently been cleared. The emigrants' quarters fore and aft have disappeared, and the bare side wall and bulkheads of the ship are all that remains. The handsomely fitted staterooms, sleeping-births, baths, and lavatories, and the accommodation provided on the same deck for other passengers have also disappeared. What will be placed in the vacancies thus created has yet to be determined, but if, as is intended, the America is to be utilised as a troopship as well as a cruiser, it will be possible to provide sleeping accommodation on this deck for fully 2,000 men.

By far the most difficult matter in the conversion of the steamer is its armament. This is to be of a somewhat formidable character, and will include four 5in. Vavasseur guns, six 64-pounder guns, six Nordenfelds, as well as four pinnaces for torpedo service. On the top of the forecastle two Vavasseur guns are to be placed, one at each side, at a distance of 25ft. or 30ft. from the bow. Lest the forecastle should not be strong enough to bear the strain put upon it, a massive bulkhead will be constructed below between the main deck and the underside of the forcastle, and the whole of the superstructure will be firmly bolted to this bulkhead, which in turn will be fixed to the main deck. Immediately under the commencement of the upper deck a 64 pounder gun will be fixed, and about thirty feet nearer midships a second 64-pounder will be placed on each side of the vessel. The carriages of these guns will remain upon the main deck, and will be placed there without difficulty. No further armament will be provided on this deck until the space between the upper deck and the poop near the stern is reached. Midway here a 64-pounder will be mounted on each side of the ship. Upon the poop two Vavasseur guns will be mounted, precisely as upon the forecastle, a level surface being provided with teak, and strength furnished by steel plates and a bulkhead underneath. The guns, both on the forecastle and the poop, will be in very exposed positions, but this fact is compensated for by their width of range, which extends over 150 degrees. The four guns have almost a direct fire over both bow and stern, and as they will be able to work round to fifty-eight degrees toward midships, it will be extremely difficult for any hostile vessel to escape them. The 64-pounders, of which there will be three on each side, will each have a range of ninety degrees, and will thus command the whole broadside of the ship.

The Great Seal of England.

The great seal of England consists of two silver disks, closely fitting one to the other, in appearance not much unlike two bright tin sauce-pan lids without handles ; and these disks, on being separated, would reveal on the inner surface of one a deeply cut device of the queen enthroned, with representations of the cardinal virtues around her, and on the other her majesty sitting on a highly caparisoned horse, attended by a page. These two silver disks are, in fact, the matrix by means of which is formed that enormous wax seal commonly known as the great seal of England, and which is affixed to acts of the sovereign which it is the royal pleasure publicly to make known.

Mule jokes have all the nature of the animal they immortalize ; they stubbornly refuse to quit going the rounds of the newspapers. Jokes about ballet girls and jokes about mules run about neck and neck. This is due to the fact doubtless that both are high kickers.

The Standard

MARKDALE MAY 7, 1885.

A MIGHTY CONFLAGARATION AVERTED.

On Tuesday last while we made our regular morning call at the Post office about 8 o'clock, smoke was discovered by Capt. Richards issuing from the hardware department, and the alarm of fire was given. The Captain, not being able to discover anything but smoke in that quarter, cried: "It must be in the cellar!" when he, accompanied by Lieutenant Smythe and Colonel Bowes dashed for the lower flat while Major Bigger and Private Steyens waited in breathless suspence the arrival of particulars from the supposed origin of the increasing smoke. The Milliners stood in amazement while our nervous form—well, we cannot find words to express our feelings. The General himself, as also a number of the sub-officers, had not yet returned from breakfast. Suddenly, however. the Captain and his willing men returned without having discovered the devouring element. "Where can it be?" shouted the Captain, and he makes a desperate dash through the blinding smoke into the crockery and hardware, when, lo! a tin pail of ashes was found in which there had been live coals and considerable rubbish, causing the above smoke. No damage, except perhaps nervous prostration on the part of some of the more excitable witnesses like ourselves.

SIR D. L. MACPHERSON.

Sir D. L. MacPherson's physicians have advised him to give up office at once. His health is roported to be extremely precarious, but it is not at all certain that the knight will take his medical advisers advice.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

On Wednesday evening last a very sociable gathering of the Sons of Temperance and their friends was held in their new and commodious hall in Dr. Christoes block. After the large gathering of about one hundred and twenty five had assembled, and all had for some time enjoyed themselves, some in groups discussing the topic of the day (War News), and others busily engaged in the various games and amusements provided for the occasion when in due time order was called and the usual blessing sang, when the waiters appeared with trays laden with good things. After all had satisfied the inner man, our genial friend Mr. M. Richardson, who always feels quite at home on such occasions was voted to to the chair, and performed his duties there in a most happy manner, when a very pleasant and interesting programme was gone through. Miss Hopkin, a reading in her usual able manner, Mr. Walter Woods, a song which was loudly enchored, A. R. Fawcett, a reading, after which the Misses Bellamy sang, Dr. Christoe, a reading, Miss Maud Richardson, a song, J. Blackburn, a reading, Miss Bella Christoe, a song,, after which the Rev. D. C. McDowell gave a short address, when the company all joined in singing "God Save the Queen," and the company separated after having spent a very enjoyable evening.

The cause of Temperance still prospers in our midst, the Flesherton Division of Sons of Temperence is in a most flourishing condition.

We noticed our old townsman and respected friend Mr. J. R. Anderson, in town on Monday last paying some of his old friends a visit here. Come again friend A., always welcome.

Honor Roll S.S. No. 8, Artemesia.

Second Class—Total 478.—Elsie McKee, 439; Eleanor McKee, 410; Hanson Badgerow, 249.

Third Class—Total 531.—Maggie Parliament, 474; Hannah Stafford, 374; Charles Stafford, 342.

Fourth Class—Total 476.—Bella Thompson, 414; Alice Nicholson, 391; Merion Badgerow, 284.

ELSIE INESTER,
Teacher.

A THROAT CURE.

A cure for Croup. There is no better remedy for Croup than Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken internally and applied according to special directions. This is the great household panacea for rheumatism, stiff joints, pain, inflammation, &c.

GREAT SALE of HARDWARE

W. KOUGH

Having decided to give up Business, is now offering his his immense stock of

SHELF & HEAVY HARDWARE, PAINTS, OILS, GLASS, &c., AT COST.

This is a genuine Clearing out Sale. Call early and secure Bargains.

W. KOUGH, - - - OWEN SOUND,

SIGN OF THE "BIG AXE." 240-53

THE NORTH-WEST.

An anxious week and poor progress.

GEN, MIDDLETON WAITING FOR SUPPLIES.

FATHER FOURMAND MUDERED.

THE WEATHER.

During the past week the weather has been generally fine with temperature ranging from 30 at night to 60 in mid-day.

SEEDING.

A large amount of seeding has been done and many of the farmers have finished grain sowing, and some have their potatoes planted. The weather in Manitoba Province has been quite open since the 20th February.

SUSPENSE.

The whole country is in a state of anxiety and suspense owing to slow progress being made towards surmounting the gigantic difficulties, and the apparent impossibility to procure reliable information as to the actual state of affairs and progress made by the ferces.

WAITING.

The troops under Gen. Middleton are very impatient, and exceedingly anxious to go forward and face the enemy, but have had a long wait owing to the steamer Northcote (on which supplies, ammunition and a gatling gun were loaded) having been stuck on a sand bar. The water is now rising on this river (the South Saskatchewan) and a report is to hand that the steamer has been floated and has reached Clark's Crossing, so that news of an important character may be looked for forthwith.

WHY FATHER FOURMAND WAS KILLED.

Archbishop Tache has received information confirming the report of the killing of Father Fourman at Batoche. He was killed by the Indians for refusing them absolution for rebelling against the Government.

MAIL FOR THE TROOPS.

The Winnipeg Times says:—"An immense quantity of mail matter passes through the post office here for the troops at the front. The mail for the force advancing on Batoche's Crossing leaves Qu'Appelle twice a week, and that for the troops at other points is sent on without delay. The The quantity handled may be imagined when it is known that all the leading newspapers of the Dominion gratuitously furnish each soldier with a paper: letters coming as they do from all sections are numbered by the thousands, and the male clerk becomes appalled as he contemplates which requires hours of labor to sort. Mayor General Middleton receives by far the largest correspondence of any officer in the field, owing to the many communications which he gets from the Government. The Queen's Own evidently have left many valued friends behind, as the bulk of the letters which go to Swift Current as a mail clerk remarked to a reporter, it would seem that every member of Col. Otter's crack corps had at least four lady correspondents in different parts of the Dominion."

THE HUGE BUNDLES,

WAITING FOR THE GAPS TO BE CLOSED.

The Montreal Garrison Artillery will leave that city as soon as the gaps on the C. P. R. are closed on the Lake Superior section, which will soon be complete.

DONATIONS.

Toronto people have forwarded two car load of various kinds of necessaries and comforts to the brave boys, who have gone to fight (and if necessary to lay down their life) for their country. These contributions have arrived in the North-West are in charge of Lieut. Hume, son of Hon. Edward Blake, for distribution.

Latest.

A BATTLE.

COL. OTTER ATTACKS POUND-MAKERS BRAVES AND FIGHTS SEVEN HOURS. SEVEN OF OUR MEN KILLED AND TWELVE WOUNDED.

WINNIPEG, May 5.—A dispatch from Saskatchewan, Landing, via Swift Current, per couriers, who arrived this evening from Battleford, brings news of a battle fought with the Indians at Poundmaker's reserve on Sunday, May 3. A fighting column of 300 men under Col. Otter attacked the Indians, 600 strong, at 5 o'clock in the morning. The fight lasted till noon. Poundmaker's reserve lies on the Battle river, between it and Eye Hill creek, near Manito lake. This chief has been joined by other bands under Red Pheasant, Moosomin, Strike-him-on-the-Back, and others, and was, now acting in conjunction with Big Bear, Little Child, and other chiefs operating further west.

Our loss was seven men killed, and twelve wounded. Col. Otter covered, including the engagement, 70 miles, fought the battle, and returned to Battleford inside of thirty hours. The men behaved magnificently. The list of killed and wounded is as follows:—

KILLED.

N. W. M. P.

Corporal Laurie.
Corporal Sleight.
Bugler Burke.

OTTAWA FOOT GUARDS.

Private Osgood.
Private Maynard Rogers.

"C" COMPANY INFANTRY SCHOOL.

Bugler Folkes.
Private Dobbs.
Total—7.

WOUNDED.

N. W. M. P.

Sargeant McLeod.

"E" BATTERY

Lieut. Peltier.
Sergeant Gaffney.
Corporal Morton.
Gunner Reynolds.

"C" COMPANY INFANTRY SCHOOL.

Sergeant-Major Spackman.

OTTAWA FOOT GUARDS.

Corol-Sargeant Winter.
Private McQuilliken.

Honor Roll for S. S. No. 7, Holland, for April.

4th Class—Jennie Irwin, 426, Mattie Bailey, 371.

3rd Class—Ettie Irwin, 419, John Crowther, 359.

Senior Second Class—Jennie Jackson, 359, Willie Doyle, 317.

Junior Second Class—Carson Price, 392, Willie Fee, 312.

Sr. Part Second—John Telford, 316, Maggie Campbell 265.

Jr. Part Second—Thomas Kemp, 314, Joshua Crowther, 300.

Part 1st—Thomas Spears, Mary A. Campbell.

LIZZIE S. MOORE,
Teacher.

Maxwell.

Not much news this week, but such as I have I give thee.

Farmers are busy ploughing and some have sown seed with the expectation of reaping a bountiful harvest. We hope they won't get disappointed.

The villagers are arguing the side walk question, and intend holding a meeting on that subject shortly.

One of the oldest residence of this place formerly occupied by the late Joseph Maxwell, has been torn down and is being replaced by his son's residence, which will present a better appearance to our town. Go ahead Dick.

Mr. John Kerton, Sr., is seriously ill.

Mrs. Jas. Crosby, of Stayner, is visiting friends in this place.

Miss Minte Radley of Toronto, is visiting friends in this neighborhood.

Mr. W. F. Kirton lost 12 fine ewes last week. It is thought that early shearing and exposed to the cold nights was the cause of their death. Still persevere Billy.

Mr. D. A. Holman of the big boot, and who has kept batch all winter, has given it up and made a change for the better. "I'll bet he wont batch it again."

Rev, John Chisholm, who for the past few years has been laboring in this locality, intends leaving for British Columbia in two weeks. The best wishes of his many friends go with him.

Shortly after noon on Monday the the farm residence of John Miller, of Maxwell, was burned to the ground. Cause unknown.

Rev. A. Wilson, of Markdale, preached an excellent sermon in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday last and was admired by all present.

Business men report trade rather dull at present.

Scarcely any sugar making going on this spring. Barney is longing for a taffey pull but I think he will get left this time.

Yours, PHIZ.

DRIVE IT AWAY.

Drive away all poisonous humor from the blood before it develops in scrofula or some chronic form of disease. Burdock Blood Bitters will do it.

The Illustrated War News.

The Grip Printing & Publishing Company, of Toronto, issued last week No. 4 of their fine illustrated newspaper, descriptive of events connected with the rebellion in the North-West. Each successive issue of this paper eclipses its predecessors, and we are pleased to observe that the publishers are meeting with the success which their efforts deserve. No. 4 contains the following illustrations:—Lord Melgund's Scouts surrounding three of White Cap's Warriors; The Winnipeg Light Infantry (91st Battalion) preparing for service. White Cap, the Sioux Chief; Trial Practice with the Gatling at Swift Current; Col. Otter's Brigade approaching the South Saskatchewan; The Nova Scotia Provincial Battalion at Montreal; Steamers at Medicine Hat loading Ammunition and Stores; Reading Battalion Orders in the Drill Shed, Hamilton; The Midland (Col. Williams') Battalion marching to the G. T. R. Depot, Winnipeg; Portraits of Officers at the Front, including Col. Ouimet, M. P.

No. 5, which will be issued on the 2nd May, will be an intensely interesting number, as it will contain, in addition to other fine illustrations, sketches representing the Relief of Battleford, and the Battle at Fish Creek. The price of the paper is 15 cents per copy, and it can be procured either from the publishers or from local newsdealers.

USE PEAR, LOW'S SURPHUR SOAP for Prickly Heat, Nettle Rash, Scaley Eruption, Itch, and all diseased conditions of the skin.

Notices of Births, &c., twenty five cents.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE

Fall Wheat
Spring Wheat
Barley
Pea
Oats	36	to
Butter
Eggs
Apples
Potatoes
Hay
Pork	5	to
Flour	3 75	to

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

Is now completed at great expense on the

Most APPROVED plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat

Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, etc, for sale wholesale & retail

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

SPRING ANNOUNCEMENT

The subscriber has much pleasure in intimating to the Ladies of Markdale and vicinity that she has commenced the

Dress-Making Business

In all its branches. Having graduated in the ranks of the best seamstress in the Dominion, she feels assured of giving satisfaction to all who may favor her with a call. The latest & best styles

London, Paris & New York Fashions

Strictly adhered to. She has on hand a supply of

FANCY GOODS

And a choice selection of the latest styles of

TRIMMINGS,

Which for beauty and rare design cannot be surpassed, if even equalled in Markdale.

Respectfully yours,

M. E. BENSON.

Markdale, April 7, 1885.

FOR SALE.

200 acres of land on easy terms, being Lot 10, con. 12, Holland township, 60 acres cleared, balance splendid timber, log house and barn; well watered with never failing spring creek. For terms, apply to MAJOR, Port Perry, Ont., 243

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Resturant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

A SAD NEGLECT.

Neglecting a constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring ill health and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a natural manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and Bowels.

The discovery of the instantaneous process of taking photographs has been quickly followed in the medical world by a perfect and instantaneous remedy for all acute pains and pains, as Neuralgia, Toothache, Rheumatism, etc. This valuable remedy is called Fluid Lightning, and is sold at 25 cents a bottle by Hill Bro's.

Correspondence

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for opinions expressed by our correspondents.

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR,—Since the Salvation Army came to Markdale, I believe they have succeeded in doing some good, and I trust they may continue to do so. There is much needed here. But the other hand, when the influence of God has been withdrawn will the parties who profess or pretend to be saved, continue to walk in the ways of the Lord, or will they go back to their former life? This is a question, and one we should think well before being influenced by excitement. Among those converts, I notice a few who never enter the church door; one who claims to have been in a church for over 30 years. I think the ministers are to blame here. Why did they not go and pray with him, and try to persuade that erring brother to attend church with a view of leading a better and more Christian like life? Surely the ministers of the churches had a claim on him. There is much to be done in Markdale, and I would advise the ministers to be up and doing. The Captain of the Army, who, I see, is visiting among us, is reporting with nearly all he meets. Is he doing now what the ministers ought to have done long ago, and although he will meet with little encouragement from some, he will be the means of bringing others to the feet of Christ? I know he has no desire to see any one go forward unless they do so calmly and seriously of the step they are about to take. Am afraid this is not the case with a good many. Do you hear people say that they do not get any good in the churches, and then, after attending a few of the Army meetings, they go forward, and on the following night, they stand up and tell the audience that they have been saved, and are sure of it. Is this consistent with the true Christian character? "No," far from it. Is the same persons require to be watched. If they have never derived any benefit in the church, whose fault is it? Surely simply their own, and they ought to be ashamed to tell it. People will always grumbling because they do not run things in the church and Sabbath school as they choose, will never receive the grace of God in their hearts unless they mend their ways. Christians should do all they possibly can to help on with the work of the Saviour, by showing their faith in Christ and working heart and soul for him, instead of grumbling and trying to keep others back in that great work. It would be better if the church had never seen such hypocrites. Some of they have the cheek to tell you it is the minister's fault.

This is not written in a spirit of unkindness—"God forbid"—only in the case persons referred to are sincere, they will help on with the work already begun, then. I say, God be with them, and to give them strength for the battle they are trying to fight. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space.

Yours, &c.,
CITIZEN.

Meaford Road.

(From our correspondent.)

MR. W. J. Holly, has been laid up for some time with a severe attack of inflamation of the lungs, he is now recovering.

Mr. W. Hutchinson lost a valuable three year old heifer last week. Mr. Hutchinson has been unfortunate this spring with his cattle, having lost several head.

Mr. W. Gilbert has rented the Vandeleur blacksmith shop and intends to move. He moved in last week.

W. Cooey, son of Mr. J. Cooey met with what might have been a serious accident last Thursday, he was driving one of the belts in the Eclipse mill and got caught with the belt suffering in a very severe sprained ankle. He is getting around all right again.

Mr. Day has the contract of putting up a new fence across the school ground.

Rev. J. G. Fallis, Dutton, certifies that some years my wife has been troubled with Dyspepsia, and has tried one thing and another recommended but with little effect till advise to give McGregor's Specific a trial. Since taking the first bottle I have noticed a decided improvement and with confidence recommend it to all who are troubled with Dyspepsia. This invaluable medicine for Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Kidney Disease, is purely vegetable. Sold at 50 cts. per bottle, large bottles given free.

WHAT WILL YOU cough Shiloh's Cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00. Sold by A. Turner & Co.

...es of Births, Marriages...
...ive cents.

Market Reports.

MARK...

...Wheat........
...Wheat........

...36
...14
...50
...18
...0 00
...5
...3 75

...ctor Roller Mills,

...RKDALE.

—THIS NEW—

...t Process Flouring Mill completed at great expense on the

...APPROVED

and with the best ma...
...manufactured, mak...
...n every sense of th...
"A Model Mill."

therefore in a position
the public a Superior of Flour.

...r trial respectfully so...
and I have no fear bu...
...lt will be eminently
...tory.

...d for good hard Wheat

...lour, Bran, Shorts, etc.
...ale wholesale & retail

ANGUS PLEWES.

...ANNOUNCEMENT

...riber has much pleasure in
...ng to the Ladies of Mark...
...and vicinity that she
...as commenced the

...Making Business

...ranches. Having gradua...
...e ranks of the best seam...
...in the Dominion, she
...ssured of giving satis...
...o all who may favor her
...The latest & best styles o...
...aris & New York Fashions
...ered to. She has on hand
a supply of

...CY GOODS

...ice selection of the latest styles of

...IMMINGS,

...beauty and rare design...
...be surpassed, if even
...lled in Markdale.
...fully yours,

...E. BENSON.
April 7, 1885.

...R SALE.

...of land on easy terms, bein...
...0, con. 12, Holland township...
..., balance splendid timber...
...arn; well watered with never...
...eek. For terms, apply to ...
...erry, Ont., ...241-5...

...PORTANT.

...it or leave New York City...
...xpress and Carriage hire and...
...nd Union Hotel, opposite...
...ral Depot. Elegant rooms...
...t of one million dollars, re...
...and upwards per day...
...Elevator, Resturant supplied...
...Horse cars, stages and elevat...
...depots. Families can live...
...oney at the Grand Union...
...y other first class hotel in...

...D NEGLECT.

...constipated condition...
...is sure to bring...
...at suffering. Burdock...
...egulate the bowels a...
...er, purifying the blood...
...healthy action of the...
...kidneys and Bowels...

...f the instantaneous process...
...raphs has been quickly...
...edical world by a perfect...
...s remedy for all sense...
...as Neuralgia, Toothache...
This valuable remedy is...
...tning, and is sold at 2...
Hill Bro's.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsib'e for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR,—Since the Salvation Army came to Markdale, I believe they have succeeded in doing some good, and I trust they may continue so, as it is much needed here. But on the other hand, when the influence has been withdrawn will the parties who are or pretend to be saved, continue in the ways of the Lord, or will they drift back to their former life? This I consider a serious question, and people should think well before being influenced by excitement. Among the converts, I notice a few who never enter a church door; one who claims not to have been in a church for over ten years. I think the ministers are to blame here. Why did they not visit and pray with him, and try to persuade that erring brother to attend church, with a view of leading a better and more Christian like life? Surely some of the churches had a claim on him? There is much to be done in Markdale, and I would advise the ministers to be up and doing. The Captain of the Army, who, I see, is visiting and exhorting with nearly all he meets, is doing now what the ministers ought to have done long ago, and although he will meet with little encouragement from some, he will be the means of bringing others to the feet of Christ. I know he has no desire to see any person go forward unless they think calmly and seriously of the step they are about to take. Am afraid such is not the case with a good many. When you hear people say that they never get any good in the churches, and then, after attending a few of the Army meetings, they go forward, and on the following night, they stand up and tell the audience that they have been saved, and are sure of it. Is this consistent with the true Christian character? "No," far from it. These same persons require to be watched. If they have never derived any benefit in the church, whose fault is it? Why, simply their own, and they ought to be ashamed to tell it. People who are always grumbling because they can't run things in the church and Sabbath school as they choose, will never receive the grace of God in their hearts unless they mend their ways. Christians should do all they possibly can to help on with the work of our Saviour, by showing their faith in Christ and working heart and soul for him, instead of grumbling and trying to keep others back in that great work. It would be better if the church had never seen such hypocrites. Then they have the cheek to tell you it's the minister's fault.

This is not written in a spirit of unkindness—"God forbid"—only if the persons referred to are sincere and will help on with the work already begun, then. I say, God be with them to give them strength for the hard battle they are trying to fight. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for above space.

Yours, &c.,
CITIZEN.

Meaford Road.

(From our correspondent.)

MR. W. J. Holly, has been laid up for some time with a severe attack of inflamation of the lungs, he is slowly recovering.

Mr. W. Hutchinson lost a valuable three year old heifer last week, Mr. Hutchinson has been unfortunate this spring with his cattle, having lost several head.

Mr. W. Gilbert has rented the Vandeleur blacksmith shop and premises. He moved in last week.

W. Cooey, son of Mr. J. Cooey met with what might have been a serious accident last Thursday, he was adjusting one of the belts in the Eclipse saw mill and got caught with the belt resulting in a very severe sprained knee. He is getting around all right again.

Mr. Day has the contract of putting up a new fence across the school ground.

REV. J. G. Fallis, Dutton, certifies: "For some years my wife has been troubled with Dyspepsia, and has tried one thing after another recommended but with little or no effect till advise to give McGregor's Speedy Cure a trial. Since taking the first bottle I have noticed a decided improvement, and can with confidence recommend it to be one of, if not the best medicine extant for Dyspepsia. This invaluable medicine for Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Kidney Complaint, is purely vegetable. Sold at Hill Bro's. Trial bottles given free. 2

WHY WILL You cough when Shiloh's Cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

"PARNELL."

The well bred Trotting Stallion "PARNELL," sired by Clear Grit, the founder of the family of Clear Grit brothers, dam grand daughter of Imported Glencoe, one of the best thorough bred horses ever brought to the United States, will travel this season for mares by the villages of MAXWELL, DUNDALK, ORCHARD DURHAM and PRICEVILLE, will be home every Saturday. This trotting colt is the true blood of Old Clear Grit. There is no doubt whatever of his being a natural son of Old Clear Grit, which he shows by formation, and broad flat clean legs, with good bone, long pasterns and splendid hoofs, and by his characteristic and undoubted Clear Grit style of trotting. Bred and owned by

JAMES O'BRIEN,
243-45. Of Artemesia.

Clydesdale Jock.

This beautiful dark bay, now nearly three years old is owned by A. & R. T. McGirr of Feversham, and is a fine specimen of heavy draught, possessing heavy bone, sound feet, perfect symmetry, and superior action. He will travel this season as follows:—Leaving his own stable on Monday each week will proceed to Maxwell for noon and via 10 side road and Gordon's Corner's to Geo. Thompson's for night. Tuesday via Durham Corners to Flesherton for noon, and via back line west and out 130 side road to Sam Cunningham's for night. Wednesday by Meaford road to R. Warlings for noon, and to Robert Hawkin's Eugenia for night. Thursday by 9th line to Feversham. Friday by 15th side road to Donald Cameron's for noon, and to McIntyre for night. Saturday by 4th to D. McInnis for noon, thence home to Feversham.

Clear Grit, Jr.

THE PROPERTY OF MR. J. R. TRIMBLE, MARKDALE.

This famous stallion is so well known, and his stock now showing for themselves the excellence of their sire as a stock producer, it is unnecessary to add anything accept that he has won 26 first prizes, 6 Diplomas, and one Silver Medal, which is more laurels than has ever been taken by any other roadster or carriage Stallion of his age in Canada.

The following is his route for the present season: Will leave his own stable on Monday May 4th and proceed by 9th line Euphrasia to Rocklyn for noon, thence by 5th line to Royal Hotel Meaford for night. Tuesday, via Woodford, to American hotel Owen Sound for night. Wednesday will proceed by way of Ingle's Falls, Kilsyth, Tiplin's and Allenford to Queen's Hotel Tara for night. Thursday, via Dobington and Irwin's to Maxwell's Hotel Chesley, for the night. Friday via Desboro, and Sauble to Williamsford Station for night. Saturday to his own stable where he will remain until the following Monday morning.

Young Messenger Clyde.

Young Messenger Clyde is 7 years old, was bred by Mr. Henry White of Mono. is very highly spoken of by those who know him since he was a colt as may be seen by testimonials on large posters. He will travel this season as follows: Leave his own stable, Mansion House on Monday May 4th, and proceed by way of Barhead Mills, H McKee's, Thos. Anderson's and Traverston to Townsend's for night. Tuesday via 12th con. Glenelg and 2nd con. east Garafraxa road and by Stewart's corner Bentinck and to John McLean's for night. Wednesday by Rocky Saugeen thence east to Wm. Ritchie's corner, and south to 5th con Glenelg and by 5th to Geo. Anderson's for night. Thursday along 5th to Wm. Patterson's town line Artemesia and Glenelg, and via Stone's to Snell's corner, and up 6th con. to Jas. Ryan's for night. Friday via Irish Lake to his own stable until the following Monday. Mr. James Bryan, Markdale Agent.

Young Wanderer.

This animal owned by Mr. Robt. Freeborn, is now five years old is one of the best horses of his class travelling this district, and is considered by competent judges the best Canadian bred Draught Stallion owned in this County. The following is his route according to bills: Monday will proceed from his own stable lot 41 con. 1 west T. & S. Road Holland via Holland Centre, Farley's corners, Andw. Irwin's and Massie to Wm. Norton's for night, Tuesday via Lily Oak, Halbert's corners, F. Taylors and 11th line Euphrasia to Walter Taylors for night. Wednesday by way of Basswood Tavern and Vandeleur to Flesherton for night. Thursday by back line west through Snell's neighborhood and out Nesbitt's sideroad to Revere hotel Markdale for night. Friday via Barrhead mills, John McFarlane's, 10th line Glenelg and Jas. Bell's to Andrew Freeborn's for night Saturday by Berkeley home, where he will remain until the following Monday.

MCGREGOR & PARKE'S Carbolic Cerate is invaluable for Wounds, Sores, Salt Rheum, Cuts, Burns, Scalds and Festers, as a hea'ing and purifying dressing. Do not be imposed on with other useless preparations, recommended to be as good. Use only McGregor & Park's Carbolic Cerate. Sold by Hill Bro's. 2 Euphrasia Council.

The council met pursuant to adjournment, on 25th April 1885.

Members all present.

Minutes of last session of Council read and confirmed.

The clerk was ordered to ask advice from County Treasurer, concerning 3 acres of land sold for arrears of taxes and supposed to be improperly described.

Mr. Shepherdson was authorized to make improvement on 11th line hill.

The following named gentlemen were appointed Poundkeepers and Fenceviewers, viz: Poundkeepers, A. McKewen, N. Hewson, W. Wilson, J. M. Thurston, J. B. Winters, S. Wiley, T. McConnel, J. Wilson 9th line, J. Stitt, T. Brady, N. Curry, R. Elliott, W. N. Artley. Fenceviewers, J. Raby, J. B. Soul, J. K. Reid, N. Hewson, G. Proctor, J. McKenzie, G. Vickers, H. White, T. Ellis. T. Dines, H. Knott, E. Parker, J. Pickerin, F. Burch, J. Perry, J. Cook, G. Richardson, Esq., R. H. Stinson, J. C. Paterson, W. Patton, J. Stinson, Sr., S. Harvey, J. Curry, J. Manary, R. Elliott, J. Halbert, W. W. Artley, W. Dayman.

By-law No. 349 appointing Pathmasters, Poundkeepers, and Fenceviewrs, was carried through the different stages and passed.

The Reeve and Mr. Hurd were appointed to get improvements made on deviation road at 6 & 7 side line.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to C. W. Rutledge, Markdale the sum of $38.00 printing and publishing up to date.

The Reeve's orders, were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows viz: R Dunlop, $20.00, transcribing and preparing the last years minutes of council for printer; John Blain, $27, ballance of contract of building bridge; A. H. McLean, $1.00, repairing bridge on valey road; W. Milligan, $4.64, taxes charged in error; W. Cartwright $4, statute labor charged though performed.

On motion of Messrs. Shepherdson, and Boyd, the council adjourned until 10 o'clock a.m., on Saturday, 30th May next, and then to meet as a court of Revision.

ROBT. DUNLOP,
Tp. Clerk.

Assessment of Artemesia, for 85

Total assessment of real and personal property. $1,077,680; Population, 3,770, Increase, 10; Cattle, 4,892, Increase 182; Sheep, 4,457, Increase 168; Hogs, 1,228, Decrease, 42; Horses, 1,278, Increase 102; Births, 81, Decrease, 9; Deaths, 31, Decrease 2; Number of resident ratepayers, 821, Increase, 7; Number of Non-resident ratepayers, 48, Increase 8; Acres of Non-resident land assessed, 2,485, Decrease 788; Fall wheat 676, Decrease, 264; Number of ratepayers on the roll, 870, Increase, 16; Methodist ratepayers, 378, Increase 18; Presbyterian ratepayers, 243, Increase, 9; Church of England ratepayers, 75, Decrease, 2; Baptists ratepayers 88, Increase, 8; Church of Rome ratepayers, 35, Decrease, 9; Disciples, rate payers, 4, Increase, 1.

JOHN WHITBY, Assessor.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY—a positive cure for Catarrh, Diptheria, and Canker Mouth. Sold by A. Turner & Co.

IN MEMORIAM.

LINES BY MISS S. J. WHITE, CHATSWORTH IRELAND, TO THE MEMORY OF THOMAS JOHN STINSON, WHO DIED OCT. 21ST, 1884, AGED 13 YEARS 2 WEEKS AND 3 DAYS.

The hopes which in life's morning shine,
However high and fair and bright;
Oft in their early hours decline,
More oft' than at meredian hight,
And bow before the untimely blast,
Sorrow all around to cast.

Just in the morning of his day
Our brother's sun went down to shine
Henceforth in a land where no decay,
Nor sun can reach, O, fair the clime.

So we may not mourn, but look above,
Though the way to the tomb was sad and drear,
It was lit by the lamp of a Saviour's love,
Never dying love which alone can cheer,
Safe now in the Shepherd's fold,
Over there he does behold
Never fading bliss untold.

Lum Smith On "Dr" W. H. Hale.

The current issue of the Philadelphia Herald, edited by Lum Smith, is undoubtedly the best ever issued. The fearless exposure of W. H. Hale, "M. D.," of so-called Health and Home, Washington, D. C., and of "Dr." Petzold, Baltimore, Md., are the leading articles, and will no doubt prove of incalculable benefit to the press and public. The Reading (Pa.) Daily Times editorially endorses Mr. Smith as follows: "Wherever you see Lum Smith, editor of the Philadelphia Herald, being abused in any paper, just make up your mind that he has trodden upon the toes of some pernicious newspaper publisher or rank fraud. Mr. Smith makes his business to expose this class to the public gaze and no better evidence could be given that he is administering the right kind of medicine to operate, than the frantic kicks of his victims. Let them howl."

A WIDE SPREAD EVIL.

The great source of consumption and of ugly sores is scrofula in the blood. Burdock Blood Bitters purify the entire system and cure scrofula, as well as the more common blood humors.

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Durham

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Hanover—Monday before Durham.

Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

A GOLDEN OPINION.

Mrs. Wm. Allan, of Acton, declares that Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best household remedy in the world for colds, croup, sore throat, burns, scalds and other painful complaints. Her opinion is well founded.

Professor: "Why does a duck put his head under water?" Pupil: "For divers reason." Professor: "Why does he go on land?" Pupil: "For sundry reasons." Professor: "Next, you may tell us why a duck puts his head under water?" 2nd Pupil: "To liquidate his bill." Professor: "And why does he go on land?" 2nd Pupil: "To make a run on the bank."

EASILY CAUGHT.

It is very easily to catch cold, but not so easy to cure it unless you use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, the best remedy for all throat, bronchial and lung troubles, coughs, colds and consumptive tendencies.

STANDARD 3 months for 25 c

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS,
CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES,
PURCES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

☞ NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James C. Russell,
Watchmaker, Jeweller,
217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

MORTGAGE SALE

OF valuable farm property in the township of Euphrasia, in the County of Grey, under power of sale contained in a mortgage which will be produced at the time of sale. There will be offered for sale by public auction at the Revere Hotel, Thornbury, on Friday, the

22nd day of May A. D. 1885,

at 2 p. m., all that certain parcel or tract of land situated in the township of Euphrasia, containing one hundred acres more or less, composed of the East half of Lot number nineteen, in the twelfth Concession of the said township. There are said to be upon the premises a log house and barn; the soil clay loam; thirty-three acres said to be cleared, the balance well timbered with hardwood.

This property will be sold subject to a reserve bid.

Terms and conditions made known on day of sale.

For further particulars, apply to

E. M. CHADWICK,
Vendors' Solicitor.

BEATTY, CHADWICK BLACKSTOCK & GALT

No. 58 Wellington Street East, Toronto.

Dated this 17th day of April A. D. 1884. 241-44.

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience. Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 261 Broadway, New York.

MORTGAGE SALE.

OF a valuable 50 acre Farm in the Township of Holland, being Lot 68, Range 1 South West of Toronto and Sydenham Road at the Revere Hotel, Markdale, on Tuesday, May 5th, at one o'clock p. m. About 40 acres cleared, fenced and free from stumps, remainder hardwood bush. The soil is a good loam. Close to Berkeley Station, on T. G. & B. R. R. For further particulars see posters, or apply to the Auctioneer, Geo. Noble, Markdale, or to HENDERSON & SMALL, Vendors' Solicitors, Toronto.

Toronto 16th April, 1885. 241-42

NOTE LOST.

A NOTE of $24.00, drawn by F. Kempt of Holland Centre, in favor of R. A. Scott, due about next June. Any person finding same will please leave it at the STANDARD office, Markdale. All parties are hereby warned against purchasing said note, as payment has been stopped.

242-44. MRS. R. A. SCOTT.

SHINGLES FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber wishes to inform the public that he has a large quantity of Cedar Shingles of the best quality at Sparling's Mill, near Vandeleur, for Sale.

JOHN WEBER,
Vandeleur.

Orders by mail promptly attended to. 242-4

Store to Rent in Markdale.

THE Store in Reynold's Block to rent. Application as to terms can be obtained from John Lyons, Markdale, or

JOHN WHITE, St. Vincent,
Strathnairn, P. O., Owner.

143-tf.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

Upon opening the meeting Brother Gardner fined Elder Toots $300 for breaking a lamp chimney with his elbow, and then announced the fact that the Hon. Overplus Boggs, of Delaware, was in the anteroom and waiting to deliver his celebrated lecture on "Will the Coming Man Shoot Off His Mouth?" The reception committee went out to escort the great man in, but presently returned with the statement that he was lying on the bench in a deep stupor, and that he had evidently been drinking heavily.

"De committee, assisted by Giveadam Jones," said the President, "will escort de lecturer down stairs in de most convenient manner, an' when he has reached de alley dosh it will be de dooty of de committee to see dat the occashun be made a memorable one in his diary fur 1885.'

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

The Secretary announced the following official report from the branch club at Petersburg, Va.:

The name of this club is "The Anti-Liars," and we have 124 active members. Our financial policy has been to fine each member $1 for every lie told. At the end of eighteen months we counted up and found we had taken in $1 80. Eli Perkins came here to lecture before our Y. M. C. A., and after the lecture we made him an honorary member and in less than forty minutes we took in over $900.

CONSIDER GREENLEAF.

P. S.—Do you know any other person who would be as profitable to us as an honorary member as Eli? If so, who?

AT MONTGOMERY.

The branch at Montgomery, Ala., which entitles itself "The Spartan Fathers from Sparta," reported a membership of 288, which is a gain of sixty-two in three months. The club was working very harmoniously, and the only dark shadow on the horizon was cast by the White Man's Drug Store Club, of the same city. This latter club had the whole field to itself for years, and was now intensely jealous of its young but sturdy rival, and had made threats of blowing up Sparta Hall to wipe out competition.

MANY THANKS.

The following communication was then read in a tremulous voice:

ANDERSON, S. C., April 10, '85.

Bro. Gardner:

At the last meeting of our club, which is called "The Heroic Whitewash Society," our Secretary read an account of your temporary illness, and the club at once passed the following resolution:

"Resolved: That it is the sense of this meeting that Brother Gardner should soon recover his health, but if Providence directs that he be stricken down and gathered into the arms of death, this club stands ready to donate $60 for one of the biggest funerals ever held in America."

There is very little lime to be had in this locality, and we have to do a great deal of our whitewashing with lamp-black. What rates can you give us on a car load of fall lime, warranted free from all rust or insects?

FAR OFF SMITH, Secretary.

The President returned what he called his "inflammatory thanks" for the resolution of sympathy, and the Secretary was directed to make the very lowest rates on lime, and throw in two dozen whitewash brushes.

FAIR WARNING.

A communication from Memphis gave information that Division John Smith, an honorary member of the club, was advertising to cure consumption by the laying on of hands, and in order to fill his purse was making all colored persons within ten miles of him believe that they had the fell disease.

A communication from Richmond, Va., likewise announced that Prof. Phosphate Wellington, another honorary member, was practicing as a fortune-teller, and everyone who paid him fifty cents was given so much good luck that work at $1 a day was no longer an object.

The Secretary was directed to warn both members in a large, bold hand, and red ink, that they must at once quit such business or suffer expulsion, and Brother Gardner added, for the benefit of his hearers:

"When members am sick a straight-out-dose, by a straight-out-doctor, will either cure or kill. You git yer money's worf, no matter which way it goes. We can't countenance no member imposin' on human natur' by pawin' around for two-shillin' a paw. As fur de bizness of tellin' fortunes, we all know de past an' kin guess clus 'nuff de fucher to keep an extra vest-buckle whar' we kin find it any time de old one gives out."

SENT TO NOVA SCOTIA.

Trustee Pullback was then informed that he was to be sent to Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, to organize a branch club, to be called "The P. D. Q. Colored Advisers."

———):o:(———

It Was the Trimmings.

"Blessed shade of Saint Crœsus!" howled old Hyson, when Mrs. H——'s millinery bill came in. "Bank of the Universe! $68 for a bonnet!"

"Yes, dear," she said so sweetly, "these are the days of Jeffersonian simplicity. The bonnet only cost $1.50; the rest is for the trimmings."

And the old man grinned and paid the bill without a murmur.

———):o:(———

Mother (severely)—Johnnie, you bad boy, you have eaten your little brother's candy. Didn't I share it equally between you? Couldn't you be content with your own and leave your little brother his share? Johnnie (whimperingly)—Yes, but didn't you tell me the other day that I was older and bigger than my brother and must always take his part?"

Map of the North-West.

MAP OF THE NORTH WEST.

In order to give our readers the best idea possible in regard to the present North-West Rebellion we have procured an excellent map of the whole Territory, which is published herewith. The map will be well worth preserving for future reference during the present unfortunate disruption, as all the principal places of interest are clearly marked out and can be traced at once. The Province of Manitoba is not disturbed by this rebellion, but it is laid down on the map, so as to give a better idea of the whole. It will be seen that Winnipeg is located in the south east corner, and from here the Canadian Pacific Railway stretches clear across the country to the rocky Mountains, and along it the men and supplies are easily transported to the nearest possible points. Qu'Appelle (pronounced Kapelle) Station lies a few miles east of Regina, and from here the trail extends across the vast prairies for many hundreds of miles. There is no railway north of this, and it is from this station that the volunteers took their long, dreary march towards Clarke's Crossing and on to Batouche. About midway between Clarke's Crossing and Batouche, is Fish Creek, where the first fierce bloody engagement with the rebels took place. The distance to traverse in this march was nearly 200 miles.

Beyond this lies Frog Lake, made memorable by the bloody work there at the very outset. North-west from this lies Battleford, at one time the capital of the north-west, and a point of much interest a few weeks ago because of the besieged condition of the white settlers there until the longed-for relief came. Fort Pitt, also now memorable because of the massacre there, lies still farther west on the Saskatchewan River, and Fort Saskatchewan and Edmonton are at the extreme north-western extremity. As these points all lie in the territory peopled by the disaffected Indians and Halfbreeds, there is a dread possibility that much stirring news may yet come from them.

At Medicine Hat, on the main line of the C. P. Railway the South Saskatchewan river crosses the road, and from here ammunition and supplies are being transported by river steamers to Clark's Crossing, and other points in the far interior. It was on this river that the steamer Northcote was struck with the cargo of first supplies to Gen. Middleton, causing such a long delay in the expected attack on Riel's entrenchments at Batouche. The river is very crooked, and filled with many sand-bars, very annoying and dangerous to navigation. When the ice first leaves, the river is at its lowest, but then a good deal during May and June.

The following tables of distances may help to give some idea of the extent of country now being traversed: From Winnipeg to Regina by railway, 356 miles; Regina to Batouche, about 250 miles. The Saskatchewan River, including its two branches, starting from Lake Winnipeg, is navigable for a distance of 2,200 miles. From Edmonton to the nearest point on the railway south is about 200 miles. From Swift Current station to the South Saskatchewan river, where the supplies are being now shipped, is 25 miles.

The line of telegraph laid down on the map from Winnipeg to Humboldt does not now exist. Such a line was built and in operation some years ago, but it is down now. The present line in operation is via Qu'Appelle and thence along the line of railway.

———):o:(———

Dodging the Nihilists.

Curious stories, based on the alleged fear of the Czar of Russia to show himself in public among his faithful subjects, are by no means rare, but the following account of one of His Majesty's subterfuges for eluding the danger of a Nihilist attack is, perhaps, the most authentic of any that have been published. It emanates from a correspondent of the Internationale, and is dated "St. Petersburg, September 17, 1883:"—"The inhabitants of this city were lately excited at the news of a very unexpected event. It was stated that the Emperor had at last made up his mind to come to St. Petersburg. He had been sent with only a small escort in an open caleche on the Nevski Perspective. People have become so unaccustomed to regard St. Petersburg as an imperial residence that, in spite of the assertions of the newspapers, no one at first placed any credit in the report. The next day, however, the Czar's promenade was repeated, and even incredulous people were convinced. His Majesty's partizans went into ecstasies and exclaimed, 'You see that Alexander III. is no coward, as his enemies pretend.' Alas! the illusions of the faithful and the wonder of the populace were of short duration. It soon transpired that it was not the Emperor who was seated on the cushions of the caleche, but a wax figure dressed in the imperial uniform, its face bearing a wonderful resemblance to the features of the sovereign. The Czar's consent to this mockery had been obtained by ingenious officials, who pointed out that his cowardice was daily becoming more evident to the people, and that it was absolutely necessary to redeem his fallen prestige. At last he gave in to these arguments, and the figure was made in secret. It is a perfect likeness, and the movements of the head to the right and the left complete the illusion. At the sight of the masterpiece the Czar is said to have embraced Tolstoi, exclaiming, 'At last I can show myself to the nation without fear of the Terrorists. Let them blow up my carriage if they dare.' A similar story was told of the late Emperor, except that in his case the wax figure was sent on in a so-called imperial train to test the safety of the railway line, while the real Czar travelled in a train composed of baggage forgons."

LOCK OF RED HAIR.

CHAPTER VI.—(CONTINUED.)

y who, had sunk into a chair at the of the bed, alone was dry- She felt a tight choking sensation throat, but could find no relief in As she sat, staring in front of mumming and wrestling with her spirit, suddenly her eyes fell upon bjects which enchained and fascin- them. For an instant she sat in less horror, then, awakening to celligence in a moment, and utter- piercing scream, she threw herself her knees and grasped them in her ood Heavens, dear Miss Lucy." Mrs. Mitchell, thinking it was an rical attack, and hurrying towards don't give way like this!"

their great astonishment, she sprang feet, her eyes blazing with excitome close to me, all of you. Mrs. ell, don't let one of them leave the o, no, dear miss; we are all here!" ee—see what I hold in my hand!" e women pressed round her.

Why, it's master's pencil-case!" de- Fanny.

And this?" continued Lucy.

That looks like a lock of red hair. re can it have come from? What it mean?"

t means," cried Lucy, groaning with ish, "that your poor mistress has murdered!"

Murdered!" exclaimed every one.— , cruelly murdered!"

But by whom?"—"By her husband." Oh, dear Miss Lucy, think what a iful thing you are saying!" cried Mrs. ell, fearing for her reason. "What an you have of what you say?"

These!" replied Lucy harshly.

But what do they amount to?" er no doubt left his pencil-case with

I am certain he did not; I saw him it into his pocket just before he the house. I told him the ring was ; and, see, it has broken through in this very room. Providence has ed it so that this terrible crime may rought home to him. The red hair I ot understand at present—I suspect part of some disguise that he has ; but no doubt an explanation will

But what ought we to do?" inquired Mitchell, her ruddy face pale with

I cannot think. Let us send for or Maurice and take his advice. But thing I implore you all to promise by the love you bore your poor mis- ; and that is that you will keep the et of her death faithfully until Doctor rice arrives. I am certain in my own d that a fearful crime has been com- d here; but I cannot convince you yself; he will help me when he . Now, Mrs. Mitchell, will you use?"

Indeed I will!" cried Mrs. Mitchell, hom Lucy's resolute tone had pro- d a great effect. "Oh, Miss Lucy, gin to fear you are clearer-sighted than re! My poor, poor mistress?"

Emily, Fanny, Harriet, you will do ame, will you not? You all loved mistress."

Ay that we did! We've lost our best d," cried Emily, the spokeswoman. Mrs. Mitchell has done so, I promise

And I," "And I," said the two others nly.

Now two of you go and fetch Doctor rice. Don't wait for him; merely e word that he is wanted here at once; Mrs. Mitchell, lock up this fearful , and let me go away and think."

he old woman did as she was directed, ing at Lucy with a sad questioning ex- ion, and then followed the weeping ants down-stairs, shaking her head rnfully.

Poor Miss Lucy!" she thought. "I she could cry; it's not natural for her ke it so hard like; I fear me she will way soon. I shall be thankful to see or Maurice."

Meanwhile, Lucy was walking up and n her room, endeavoring to calm her- to think rationally of the fearful oc- rence that had taken place, and to find e method of elucidating the mystery. s. Richmond had been in the house ing the night she was perfectly con- ed, and that he had in some way hasten- the death was also a foregone conclus- ; but beyond that everything was dark obscure.

Thank Heaven, I have a friend near " she thought. "I should go mad this terrible trouble if I had no one to ult. How hard it seems not to have e to mourn for one who I am sure loved dearly! But I must plan and think, when he is brought to justice, there be time to grieve—the cruel, heartless, acherous wretch!" she said to herself. Heaven grant me strength to go ough with it!"

After bathing her aching, burning brow, went down into the breakfast-room to it for Doctor Maurice, taking with her ichmond's letter to his wife, the pencil- , and the mysterious lock of red hair.

CHAPTER VII.

In a very few minutes Doctor Maurice me into the room.

"What is it?" he asked hurriedly. "Is worse?" And then, catching sight of ey's pale, worn face, he stopped sudden- "Heavens! What has happened?" cried. "It is you that are ill; tell me, me what it is."

At the sound of his kind voice, Lucy's rength utterly forsook her, and she uld have fallen had he not caught her his arms.

"My darling," he cried, forgetting everything but that she was suffering, and that he loved her, "tell me your trouble! I love you so dearly that I could devote my whole life to your happiness if you would let me."

"Oh, hush, hush, for pity's sake!" Lucy cried shrinking from him, and covering her face with her hands. "This is not the time to think of ourselves!"

And then she told him, with many breaks, and in a tremulous tone, all that had occurred.

The Doctor's horror and indignation knew no bounds, for he agreed unhesitatingly with Lucy in suspecting Edgar.

"Let me see the pencil-case and hair," he said.

Now, although Lucy had mentioned the lock of hair to him, she had said nothing about the color; the pencil-case, in her opinion, was much more important as evidence.

Directly his eye fell upon it, he started, and cried excitedly—

"Good Heavens! The ghost! This then is an explanation of it! Oh, the cruel, cowardly villain!"

"What do you mean?" eagerly asked Lucy, for a moment bewildered by his manner.

"Do you not see? This man has impersonated the ghost; and, in order to still further terrify his unsuspecting victim, he has disguised himself by wearing red hair. You remember she told us, poor thing, that he was perfectly aware of her strange, morbid antipathy?"

"Then the sound I heard in the passage is explained."

"Certainly it is!"

"Oh, what shall we do?" cried Lucy? "How are we to bring it home to him Help me, Doctor Maurice; pray think for me."

"I will do my very utmost to help you," he said gravely, "not only for your sake, but for the sake of justice; only you must trust me implicitly and believe I would give my life to save you from pain and sorrow. In the first place," he continued, "I must go up-stairs to the room with Mrs. Mitchell, and in a few minutes I will rejoin you here."

When he returned, his face was pale, and wore a very serious expression.

"She evidently died in a fit, poor creature, induced by excessive terror. She must have suffered horribly at the last. Now," he said to Mrs. Mitchell, who had followed him into the room, "let me see the servants; I wish to speak to them." When they were all assembled, he said, "I have just been to see the body of your poor mistress, and have no doubt whatever that her death was caused by an awful fright of some kind. You all know how ill she was a few days ago, after having seen, as she believed, a ghost. I said at that time, should anything of the sort occur again, I believed that the consequences would be very serious. Now I am firmly persuaded that no ghost ever appeared to your mistress; but that your master, for some wicked reason of his own, disguised himself by wearing red hair, and so succeeded in frightening her to death."

"But, sir," said Emily respectfully, "if master was here last night, how could we have received a letter from him this morning, dated from Boulogne?"

"That I cannot understand at present; and, as I don't feel at all able myself to solve this terrible mystery, I am going to telegraph at once to Scotland Yard; and, in a few hours a detective will be here. Until he comes, keep as silent as you have been about your mistress's death, and be particularly careful not to mention it to any of the out-door men-servants."

When they had left the room, the Doctor asked Lucy to break the seal and read the letter.

"We may learn something from it," he said.

It was to this effect—

"My dearest Wife,—I am awfully sorry I am prevented from coming this evening; I am so afraid you will have been anxious. But the fact is it is almost impossible for me to leave for a few days, unless I make up my mind to lose everything. Of course if Miss Starr were not with you, I should come, notwithstanding this; but, as it is, I think it would be weak to do so. Write at once, as I am very anxious for news of you. In great haste.

"Your very loving "EDGAR.

"I suppose there is no doubt this is Richmond's handwriting?" inquired Doctor Maurice.

"Yes, I am certain of that."

"Well, it is of no use our bewildering our brains unnecessarily. I will telegraph to Scotland Yard immediately, and we must be guided by what the detective will advise. I will return in the afternoon and, in the meantime, you must try and be as cool and quiet as you can, and have Mrs. Mitchell to sit with you. Good-bye for a few hours." He pressed her hand, looked lovingly and pityingly at her and left the room.

All day Lucy remained alone, restless and miserable; she did not send for Mrs. Mitchell, as she felt the old woman's garrulous lamentations would be more than she could bear. Every now and then the remembrance of Doctor Maurice's words and manner broke through the gloom; but she would not allow herself any comfort, and resolutely turned her thoughts in another direction.

In this way the dreary day passed, until, late in the afternoon, Doctor Maurice arrived; and, an hour after, the detective, Mr. Jobson, was announced.

Jobson was a quiet keen-looking man, with a soft, pleasant voice. He was quite unaware of the particulars of the present case, Doctor Maurice's telegram merely stating that a clever detective was wanted at Fernhurst at once. He listened respectfully, and with a most sympathetic expression, to the story; and, after reflecting a moment, said—

"I quite believe with you that Mr. Richmond was the cause of his wife's death; but at present we have no conclusive evidence against him."

"But how about the pencil-case and lock of hair, Mr. Jobson? Surely they are very suspicious?"

"But suspicious circumstances are not sufficient, think goodness, to justify a charge of murder! And then, again, though, mind you, I myself feel convinced of the truth of what you say, and believe I shall find means of proving it, no jury would think anything of the pencil-case evidence. Miss Starr herself admits that the ring which held it to the chain was nearly worn through; what so likely, they would say, but that it fell off directly he left you, that Mrs. Richmond saw it, picked it up, and took it to her room? The lock of red hair is very much the more important evidence of the two, as that certainly indicates that some man was in her room that night. It is, you see," he said as he examined it, "a portion of a theatrical beard with straight hair, which, as it has no foundation, has evidently been stuck upon the face with spirit-gum in different portions; the gum here has failed, and the lock has fallen off. I have seen so many of these things that I can tell at once what they are. It is necessary in these cases to know everything," he continued.

"Does Mr. Richmond benefit pecuniarily by his wife's death? And did he seem attached to her?"

"I can answer 'Yes,' to both of those questions," replied Lucy. "Mrs. Richmond had ten thousand pounds a year, entirely at her own disposal; and I believe she has left it all to him. And he certainly seemed devoted to her."

"Ah, that makes it more difficult for us," remaked Jobson, cheerfully; "but there was clearly a motive for wishing the poor lady dead! Now, sir, if you please, I should like to go up-stairs; and then, after that, to make a careful examination of the house and grounds. If we could find such a thing as a footprint, it would be worth something to us as evidence; but I don't suppose we shall. He is evidently an artful fellow; those letters prove that."

"Ah, yes, Mr. Jobson! How do you account for them? They completly baffled us."

"Very likely," he answered drily; "but they are in reality easily seen through. He must have had a confederate at Boulogne. You say he told you not to expect answers to your letters for four days; that would just give them time to send them backwards and forwards. My firm impression is that he has never left England."

"Good heavens!" cried John Maurice. "What a horrible scheme!"

"Yes, it's a very queer case," said Jobson gravely. "I don't know that I ever met a queerer. And, now, sir, if you please, I am ready."

When they came back, Jobson looked unmistakably puzzled.

"I can't find a trace of any kind," he said. "I must go into the garden and smoke a pipe and think. In case any of the men see me," he added, by way of caution, "you had better say Mrs. Richmond is worse, and I am a consulting physician from London. You can keep them out of the kitchen too by stating that the house must be quiet; for I am afraid, if you give the women much chance of talking, the secret will not be safe. How they have kept it all this time I cannot imagine; they must be a very unusual sort of females, and it's of the utmost importance it should not be known, for I am very much mistaken if Richmond has ever left the neighbourhood."

With that he went out; and Doctor Maurice and Lucy saw him pacing gravely up and down the garden for over half an hour. Watching him silently, they at last saw him suddenly stop, then turn toward the house, and walk rapidly in their direction.

"He has hit upon something," remarked Doctor Maurice; and then they waited breathless with anticipation, Jobson came in with a look of triumph in his eyes.

"I think I see my way clear now," he began, "though perhaps you and the young lady may object to the means we must employ. However my motto is, 'Treachery should be met with treachery.'"

"But what do you want us to do?" asked Doctor Maurice eagerly.

"Why, this—and I see no other way of fixing it on him—for I suppose, sir, no doctor would hesitate to say Mrs. Richmond died from natural causes?"

"Certainly; I should have said so myself, had I not known of these suspicious circumstances."

"Well, then, our only chance is to get him to criminate himself; and I think that may be done in this way. You, Miss Starr, must write a letter to him, saying that his wife is very much worse, in consequence of another appearance of the ghost, and that Doctor Maurice believes if any such thing should happen again, in her present shattered state of nerves, the result might be fatal. Then add that you are compelled to go home on Friday for a few days by the 5.30 afternoon train, and that Mrs. Mitchell is confined to her bed with acute rheumatism. You must urge him, in these circumstances, to return before night on Friday, as none of the younger servants will consent to remain in Mrs. Richmond's room, and she has absolutely refused to have a strange nurse."

"And what do you expect will be the result of this letter?" inquired Doctor Maurice.

"I firmly believe we shall have an answer from him, saying that he will arrive here shortly after Miss Starr has started; and then that he will come in the night, feeling sure that the coast is clear, to finish his fearful work. I suppose further that Miss Starr should really leave by the 5.30 train, which stops at Maltham, five miles from here, taking her ticket for London, and that she should get out at Maltham, and return to this house by another direction."

"Well, and what then?"

"Then, sir, I advise that we should conceal ourselves in the bedroom at night and wait to see what may happen. Positively catching him in the act is the only chance I see of detecting him. The poor lady's body must be removed to another room."

"But why should Miss Starr really leave here?" Doctor Maurice asked.

"Because I expect he will watch in some way to make sure she is absent before he ventures here. I presume he had means of ascertaining that you were not in the room last night, Miss Starr?"

"By watching he could have seen the light in my room, and I sat at my window for some time before lying down on my bed. He might also have heard us saying good night if he had listened—everything was so still, and, the lower rooms not being lofty, the windows are not far from the ground."

"Then he probably waited until he felt sure you were safely asleep before he entered the house. Now what do you say to my plan?"

"It is a fearful course to have to adopt," answered Doctor Maurice; "but I see no other way of accomplishing our ends."

"But," cried Lucy, "it seems so degrading to spread such an awful trap! Cannot we do our dear friend justice without so much deceit and falsehood?"

"I can think of no other way," replied Jobson coldly. "Of course it would be pleasanter to go through the world without dissimulation of any kind; but society must be protected, and it seems in such a case as this that the end will quite justify the means. It would be straining honour too far to shield such a ruffian as this!"

"I must own I agree with Mr. Jobson," said Doctor Maurice gravely, "though I grieve from my heart that you should be mixed up in such a horrible affair."

"Then I will do as you wish," Lucy agreed, with a shudder. "I am sure you would not counsel anything you felt to be wrong; but you must tell me exactly what to say; I am quite incapable of collecting my thoughts."

Even Jobson looked at her with pitying interest as he said—

"It does seem hard on a young lady like you; but it cannot be helped; any one else writing would at once arouse Richmond's suspicions."

Lucy sat down, and, with a hand which she vainly endeavoured to steady, at their dictation wrote the following letter—

"Dear Mr. Richmond,—Pray come home at once. Your poor wife is much worse. She had another attack last night, and was found this morning insensible. I am compelled to go home on Friday for a day or two, and Mrs. Mitchell is ill in bed and cannot be moved. Let nothing prevent your coming before night, as all the young servants are so dreadfully nervous. They have positively refused to remain in Mrs. Richmond's room, and we cannot induce her to have a strange nurse. Doctor Maurice says another attack of the same sort would most likely prove fatal. I leave by the 5.30 train. I trust you will manage to be here before I start.

"In great haste, yours faithfully,
"LUCY STARR."

"Now," said Jobson, "I will wish you good-night. I will post this on my way to Lulmouth, and, if you should want me, you will find me at the Imperial Hotel; but I shall be round here early in the morning."

He bowed respectfully, and left them. For a few minutes they kept complete silence; and then Doctor Maurice said hesitatingly—

"Dear Miss Starr, I cannot go to-night without one word from you. I spoke impulsively this morning; had I known the dreadful trouble you were in, I would have waited; but now, having spoken, I cannot rest without some assurance from you. The happiness of my whole life hangs upon your answer. Ah, if you knew how deeply I love you, you would forgive me!"

"Oh, Doctor John," cried Lucy, bursting into tears, "don't press me for an answer now; it is disloyalty to my poor friend to think of myself now."

"But," persisted John gently, "may I speak to you again when brighter times have come for both of us, as please Heaven they will?"

"I feel as if I should never know a moment's peace again," sobbed Lucy; "but if I ever should," she murmured "dear Doctor Maurice, you may speak."

"Heaven bless and comfort you, my darling!" he cried; and then, taking her hand and kissing it lovingly, he went away.

"How happy I might have been, thought poor Lucy; "but now a cloud has come over my life which nothing can dispel!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.

How Children are Utilized South.

A gentleman who came through Lancaster County, S. C., recently found in his route a very pretty little girl, about 6 years of age, harnessed with a rope to a light guano distributer and very contentedly plodding along with it, while a sister about 3 years old managed the machine, the two doing the work of a full hand. They were asked why they did not change places, when the smallest one explained that she was too little to reach the handles. Both were cheerful and happy and interested in their work, and their father, who was ploughing in the same field, kept a paternal eye on them.

There are fifty-two widows in the little town of Prospect, Me.

YANKEE NOTIONS.

Portland's public library contains thirty thousand volumes.

New Haven, Conn., supports, after fashion, 135 lawyers.

A Brecton grocery-shop sold six hundred dozen eggs at retail the other day.

Amherst agricultural college students are caring for seventy-five thousand cabbage plants

An Easton, Mass., man put one thousand eggs in an incubator and the result was one chicken.

About thirty thousand bushels of Virginia oysters have recently been bedded near East Providence, R.I.

Jotham Johnson, of Durham, Me., read a newspaper without the aid of glasses on his one hundredth birthday.

W. K. Plumer, of Newbury, recently bought at an auction a warming-pan 157 years old for 37 cents.

Aunt Nancy Lindsay, of Double Beach, Conn., has made a list of 2,248 words from the letters in the word "incomprehensibility."

A Nashua, N.H., concern has just deluged the country with thirteen million spring circulars, which were distributed in twenty-seven thousand packages.

John Snow, a Bath, Me., expressman has an old whip which has seen seventy years of service. It was used on the first stage ever drawn into Bath.

Richard H. Gladwin, of Moodus, Conn., has a cow which gave birth to a calf recently which had no tail nor eyes. The calf is healthy, and otherwise perfectly formed.

Henry Curtis, a Stratford, Conn., nonogenarian, has always lived in the same house in which he was born in 1795. He served in the militia in 1812, and remembers every president except Washington.

The Swallow's Marvelous Speed

Among all the migrants, the swallow has, perhaps, attracted most attention in all ages and countries. It arrives in Sussex villages with remarkable punctuality; none of the migrants perform their journeys more rapidly than the swallows and their congeners. A swift with young ones or during migration, covers from 1,500 to 2,000 miles a day. It begins business, feeding its young, about 3 o'clock A. M. and continues it till 9 P. M. At that season, therefore, the swift spends nearly eighteen hours upon the wing, and it has been computed that at the ordinary rate of travelling of this very fast bird, it would circumnavigate the globe in about fourteen days. At a push, if it were making forced flights, the swift would probably keep on the wing, with very brief intervals of rest during fourteen days. The speed of the whole tribe is marvelous, and seems the more so when compared with that of the swiftest of animals that depend for their progressive powers on legs, however many legs they may be furnished with.

The hare is swift, yet in Turner's well-known picture of rain, steam, and speed, the hare's fate is sealed; she will be run over and crushed by the engine rushing in her wake. The swiftest animals soon break down at forty miles an hour, which the swallow unconsciously accomplishes, merrily twittering all the while. All the swallow tribe are found in every part of Great Britain, including Shetland, except the swift, which is not found in those islands.

A Much Governed Community.

I find on examining the record that there are 522 public officers of one sort or other in Bermuda, writes a correspondent from that place—a little more than one-half of all the adult white citizens. And in this I do not count the queen, who is absent. For salaries they get all the way from $15,000—that of the governor—down to nothing at all. The governor sports a cabinet of ministers, about as numerous as President Cleveland's. Then instead of relying on a couple of justices of the peace, as a Connecticut town of the same size would do, they have a court of bankruptcy, an instance court of vice admiralty, a court of general assize, a court of ordinary, and a court of chancery, with their chief and associate justices. Then they indulge in the grand luxury of a regular parliament, with upper and lower house, like those of London, and the forty-six members sit month after month, and they turn out a tremendous code of laws sufficient to govern the empire of Great Britain. And there are two cities, and each city has a full-fledged mayor and board of aldermen and common council. How is that for a government?

How Water may Flash into Ice.

A correspondent of "The Scientific American" says: Three times during the winter I have seen water instantaneously converted into ice. I have read that water could be reduced to a temperature lower than 32 degrees Fahrenheit, and still not form ice, and have seen water raised above 212 degrees Fahrenheit, when, when agitated, suddenly exploded with such force as to nearly empty the vessel containing it. The instantaneous formation of ice I saw in a large tin pail partly filled with water. There was ice on the floor, cups partly filled with water held thick coverings of ice, but the water in the pail was as clear as crystal. Intending to dip a cupful, I accidentally struck the edge of the pail, and quick as a flash of light there shot from the sides of the pail towards the center, long, slender needles of ice, beautifully marked on their edges. These needles in a few seconds grew until the water for an inch or so below the surface was closely packed with these delicate shoots, which, when my cup reached them, were easily shattered.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued evesy Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the aption of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East.
199-251 TORONTO.

J. ASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERF CT FIT GUARANTEED.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

MARKDALE
HARNESS EMPORIUM
ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.
THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
1941y

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH
HORSE SHOEING
A SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and
DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF
THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.
Remember the stand in McNea's block.
W. H. RUTLEDGE.

EUGENIA
Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made eqtensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.
GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND
Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.
LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.
Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted
9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Farmers will save money by buying their Agricultural Implements from Legate & Carson,
—AGENTS FOR—
L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton.
A. McGILL, Chatsworth.
BRANTFORD BINDER.
MANN'S BROADCAST SEEDER AND HARROW COMBINED.
Wisner's Spring Tooth Harrow.
SHOW ROOM—Kay's old stand, opposite the STANDARD printing office.
J. H. CARSON. T. LEGATE,
Also agents for the Walker Patent Rack Elevator and Lucas Lock Block.

For Sale by Walker Bros.

FARMERS,
Reapers & Mowers,
—USE—
McCOLL BROS.
Lardine Machine Oil.
MARKDALE.

YOU CAN SUBSCRIBE
For any of the
FOLLOWING PAPERS
AT THIS OFFICE:

Daily or Weekly Mail,	Toronto.
Daily os Weekly Globe,	Toronto.
Daily er Weekly News,	Toronto.
Daily World	Toronto.
Family Herald and Weekly Star,	Montreal.
American Agriculturist,	Monthly.
Farmers' Advocate,	Monthly.

Subscription can commence at any time.

STANDARD OFFICE,
MARKDALE.

SEEDS SEEDS
— IMPORTED —
FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at
PARKER'S,
Drugstore, - DURHAM.

J. J. IRWIN,
Veterinary Surgeon,

GRADUATE of the Ont. Vet. College, Toronto, has opened business in Markdale, and is ready to attend all calls.
Office and residence opposite the Markdale House, Sydenham St.
CHARGES MODERATE. 238-tf

NEW GROCERY STORE
IN CONNECTION WITH
Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF
Teas,
Sugars,
Tobacco, &c,
Whish will be sold VERY CHEAP.
I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.
198 J. PLEWES.

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs. Flour.
" "	61 "	39 " "
" "	60 "	38 " "
" "	59 "	37 " "
" "	58 "	36 " "
" "	57 "	35 " "

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it, if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all kinds of
PUMPS,
Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.
Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's
PATENT LOAD LIFTER
For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.
Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS
H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.
H. B. HARRISON.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH.
TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed.
Toronto....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orangeville. Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Orangeville. Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Owen Sound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
Chatsworth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orangeville. Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Orangeville.. Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto.....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

ROBT. ASKIN,
MARKDALE,
Has opened out a First-Class
UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,
And therefore has supplied a want long felt,
COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
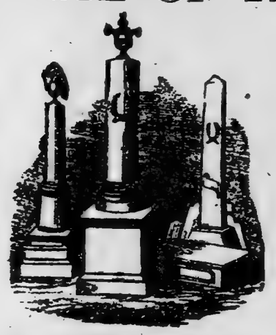
and all
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.
A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.
—All kinds of—
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.



ROBERT S. RAE,
TAILOR,
Sydenham Street.
MARKDALE.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

HAGYARDS PECTORAL BALSAM.
Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.
Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

OFFICE OF THE
Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.
All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.
Satistaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS
Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

DIAN PACIFIC R. R.
VEN SOUND BRANCH.
TIME TABLE.
ffect Monday, November 24th, 1884.
GOING NORTH.

ONS.	Mail.	Exp	Mixed.
..Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
e Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
.....	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 36 "
rd	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
.....	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
d.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

NS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
d.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
d.. ..	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
.....	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
.....	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
.....	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
rive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
ave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
nction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

T. ASKIN, RKDALE,
pened out a First-Class
ING ESTABLISHMENT,
e has supplied a want long felt,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
L FURNISHINGS
d on the shortes notice.
endid Hearse
ire at moderate rates.
—All kinds of—
RE FRAMING
ne on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

RT S. RAE,
LOR,
ham Street.
KDALE.

OOL TRUSTEES. is manufacturing an ex-assortment of Furniture.
OOL SEATS and DESKS,
SKS, etc., of the latest approved pattern. Highly chool Trustees and Teach-
comfort and compactness.
n assortment of Farm and always on hand. Send for worth P. O.
ANDREW McGILL.

YARDS TORAL LSAM.
the permanent cure of Throat, Asthma, Croup, gh, Bronchitis, and ng Diseases.
ranteed to give satisfaction.
CO., Proprietors Toronto.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 244. MARKDALE, ONT., MAY 14, 1885. {COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.}

pring Stock
COMPLETE.

Complete Watches.

old and Silver Cases, Ladies and ts sizes, Waltham, Elgin, Spring-and Swiss movements, 7, 9, 11 15 Jewelled. Close time-keepers.
rants cover all breakages, for 1
2 years.

32 FINE CLOCKS, h Thomas & other makes.

DDING RINGS, ACID TEST.

oz. Coin Case, Elgin movement,
. Bal., $12.00.
good Swiss Watch, 15 Jewelled, er Case, $9.50.

dvertise Actual Present Stock,
I am in a position to give better ne, time or cash, than any other ler in this section of Grey Co. Get tations, compare with mine, and re my statement. Long warrants to sell—very often—inferior or station watches. I hold to the plan honest representation of every icle, and give no warrants exceed-2 years. Cash discount 5 per cent.
worth considerable to every purch-r.
FFICULT WATCH REPAIRING A Specialty.
LL WORK FULLY GUARANTEED.
W. A. BROWN,
weller, - Markdale.

ocal and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

Lovely weather.

A lot of interesting matter crowded out this week.

Mrs. Bloomfield is now visiting her daughter in this village.

For Lath, Lumber, Sash, Doors, Frames and Mouldings, go to Grant & Co.

Mr. Allan McDougal arrived from Port William on Monday.

For Bedsteads, Cribs, Cradles, Mattrasses, and Spring Beds, go to Grant & Co.

There is now good prospects for peace between England and Russia.

National Pills are sugar coated, mild but thorough, and are the best Stomach and Liver Pill in use.

You can get your Roll Flour at Benson's same price as at the mill and delivered to you.

Markdale Cheese factory commenced operations for the season on Tuesday.

Without a doubt Hill Bros. have the cheapest and most stylish dress goods shown in Markdale.

Mrs. Fuller has been paying her daughter Mrs. T. Hill, of this place, a visit recently.

J. R. Trimble has the largest cheap cash and best stock of Boots & Shoes ever offered in Markdale.

Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

New Tweeds to hand at Hill Bros., which they are selling at 25 cts per yard below regular prices.

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

J. R. Trimble has just opened out a large and beautiful stock of Ladies Dress Goods in all the newest style.

A first-class new waggon for sale, very cheap for cash, or easy terms to responsible party. Apply at this office.

Glenelg Council will meet as a court of revision on the 2nd of June, and Holland the 28th May.

For Dressing Cases, Bureaus, Sideboards, Cupboards, Lounges, &c., go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

Shiloh's Cough and Consumption Cure is Sold by A. Turner & Co. on a guarantee. It cures consumption. z

South Grey Teachers' Association will be held in Flesherton on Thursday and Friday May 28th and 29th next.

That Hacking Cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

Nothing in town to compare with Hats trimmed by Miss Love, (Hull Bros. Milliner,) for style and cheapness.

The cattle fair on Saturday last was not very largely attended as the weather was most inpropitions and the roads very bad.

Wanted Immediately.—An apprentice to wagon making and painting. Apply at once to McArthur Bro's., Dundalk. 143-44

Sleepless Nights, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the remedy for you. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

J. R. Trimble, has just to hand a fine lot of Carrot, Turnip Clover and Timothy seed, also Flax seed, Flax seed meal, Oil Cake and Seed Corn.

Eggs.—Mamoth Light Brahmas, pure, for sale, one dozen for $2 or two dozen for $3. R. Montgomery, Markdale. 242 44

Mr. Wm. Bilby has leased his farm and is gone to take charge of a large farm near Guelph for a Company. His new position is a responsible one and fairly renumerative.

What every body says must be true that J. R. Trimble of the Mamoth House Markdale, keeps the largest best and cheapest stock of goods in Markdale.

Wm. Lucas & Co. have any amount of money to loan on real estate security at 6½ per cent. Call on them before borrowing elsewhere. 238-3m

Will You Suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

Ladies & Gentlemen please call into the Mammoth House Markdale, and see how tastefully Mr. L. J. Thomas has all the new goods arranged, the display is simply immense.

The Hectic Flush, pale hollow cheeks and precarious appetite, indicate worms. Freeman's Worm Powders will quickly and effectually remove them.

Catarrh Cured, health and sweet breath secured, by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. Nasal Injector free. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

Express Wagons, Walking Sticks, Rubber Balls, Base Balls, Fishing Tackles, &c., splendid new stock at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

Fever colic, unnatural appetite, fretfulness, weakness, and convulsions, are some of the effects of Worms in Children; destroy the worms with Dr. Low's Worm Syrup.

Miss. N. Reynolds, daughter of Mr. John Reynolds, of Mount Forest, has been successful in passing her examination as an M. D. and won a $60 scholarship, the highest honor given in the college."

A word to the wise: When you require anything in the Grocery or Liquor line, go where you can get the worth of your money; that is at the Original Belfast House, next to Medical Hall.

Shiloh's Vitalizer is what you need for Consumption, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness, and all symptoms of Dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents per bottle. Sold by A. Turner & Co. z

Mr. M. Sullivan, owner, will run the City Hotel, Markdale.

See Miss Burch's Spring Millinery, choice goods, Wools and Fancy Goods, Dress and Mantle making as usual receives special attention. Eggs taken in exchange. 242-48

Brass Band.—The organization of a band in our village is now a certainty. About $150 has been subscribed towards purchasing instruments, and the prospects are that before the end of May we may hear the "Music of the —— —— horn."

Oxen for Sale.—A well matched pair of oxen rising four years old, well trained. For particulars apply to Geo. Ireton, one mile from Barrhead Mills. 142-44

The excavation for the new Methodist Church is about complete and a heavy force is to commence the mason work early next week. The pushing contractor, Mr. Richards, is determined to move things along with the greatest possible dispatch.

J. R. Trimble has the largest cheapest and robbiest stock of ready made clothing, Tweeds fine shirts ties in fact everything in Gents Furnishings ever brought to Markdale.

Cheap Rates.—On Monday May 25th, tickets will be issued to any point on the C. P. R. at a single fair for the round trip for one day only. Also on May 22, 23, and 25, good to return on 26th inclusive at Fare and One Third on round trip.

J. R. Trimble has received this week New Prints, New Parasols, New Sun Shades, new Ribons, new Gloves, in fact everything new and stylish and cheaper the than cheapest.

The Davison's Hercules Automatic wheat Scourer and Seperator which we noticed last week, and for which our friend Mr. Jas. Plewes, is agent for Ontario, took first prize medal and highest award at the World's Fair, New Orleans, May 12th 1885.

W. J. McFarland is now in Toronto passing through the customs the second shipment of Dress Goods, Swiss Embroideries, Laces and Silks, Direct Importations from Manchester, England.

Mr. Simon Plewes, brother of Mr. Angus Plewes, proprietor of Markdale Victor Roller Flour Mill, has purchased Creemore mill and will put in rolls and fully overhaul that mill forthwith Mr. S. Plewes is a thorough first class miller, and we hope to see him successful in his new undertaking.

Wanted to purchased 4 or 5 car loads good large sound potatoes for which the highest market price will be paid in cash, must be delivered inside the next 8 or 10 days, J. R. Trimble.

Received this week, a line of fine Waltham movements, with my own name on. Prices close for cash, also Screw-bezel and Dust-proof watch cases Ladies necklets best roll plate. Large stock best makes of mouth-orgons. W. A. Brown, Markdale.

Excellent Opening.—The ½ acre lot opposite the Town Hall, Rocklyn, upon which a very comfortable dwelling house and a convenient shoe-shop are erected, can now be bought cheap, and on easy terms of payment. It is an excellent location for a shoe-maker, blacksmith, or other tradesmen. Apply to W. H. Dodson, Rocklyn.

Please note that W. J. McFarland has no shoddy second-hand shop-worn goods, that have been handled and auctioned around the country for months, and have grown gray, and in their old age seek to find a resting place among the people of Markdale and neighborhood.

A case of Canadian Long Clear Bacon just opened out at Benson's for 10 cents per lb., 9 cents by the side; cheapest and best in town. Another lie nailed: In last week's issue a local appeared, that the best brands of liquors were always kept on hand at a certain liquor store down town. The whole country and village wanted to know from one of the Benson boys if they had sold out their business. 'Nuff said.

The population of Owen Sound is 5,317, an increase over last year of 662. The total assessment is $1,544,598, being an increase of $130,160 over last year.

Corner Stone.—The laying of the Corner Stone of the Methodist Church here on the 25th promises to be an occasion of more than ordinary interest. Mr. Warring Kennedy of Toronto has kindly concented to be present for that purpose, and will lay the stone at three o'clock when free will offering will be made by those present. The Bazar will be extensive, and the concert in the evening will doubtless be a rich treat.

Did you ever notice that the fellow who won't take the paper, because by withholding his patronage he thinks he can break it up, is the first man to gobble a copy off some of the paying subscribers? This looks a little inconsistent, but it's a fact. This kind of a man will swear that he wouldn't touch the worthless sheet with a pair of tongs, but he would sit around the stores on the morning of issue and before the paper is dry from the press will pounce upon it like a duck upon a June bug.

He attempted Suicide.— On Monday evening last, Mr. Wm. Rusk, of Ruskview, Mulmur, made an ugly gash in his throat with a pen knife. Mr. Rusk, during the past few months has been low-spirited, and at times out of his mind. The day the act was committed he appeared worse than usual, and told his family that the neighbors were all plotting against him, trying to injure him, but that he would soon be out of their way. Dr. Lawrence of Honeywood, has been in attendance and entertains hopes for the recovery of his patient.

Navigation is now open on the Northern Lakes, the Algoma, having started on her first trip from Owen Sound to-day, (Thursday), for Port Arthur. The Alberta and Athabaska will follow on Saturday and Tuesday when regular trips will be made during the summer on Tuesday Thursday Saturday each week. A special train will leave Toronto on the same days at 10:30 a. m. to connect with the above Steamers at Owen Sound Removal.—Having failed to make satisfactory arrangements with the proprietor, Mr. John McAleer is removing from this village this week to Eugenia where he will conduct the hotel in that place. We regret very much to loose Mr. Mc., as he is one of the few who keeps an orderly house while his integrity is unquestioned. We understand he will re-build the stairs at the Falls which was burned down a year ago, the public will be highly pleased to know they will be complete in good time for the pic-nic season, as Eugenia Falls is a popular resort for such.

C. P. R.—Mr. Whyte, late Superintendant of the T. G. & B. and O. & Q. divisions of the C. P. R., has just been appointed General Superintendant of combined eastern and Ontario divisions. The road which Mr. Whyte will then have under his charge will be the main line from Montreal to Port Arthur, 999 miles; the Ontario Division, comprising the Ontario and Quebec, the Toronto, Grey and Bruce, and the Credit Valley, 585 miles; and the line between Brockville and the upper Ottawa; making up an aggregate mileage of about 1850 miles. He and Mr. Van Horne, Vice-President of the road, are now on a tour of inspection of the main line east of Carleton Place. Mr. Whyte's career as railway man has been exceedingly creditable, & shows what pluck & perseverance united can accomplish. He commenced life in Canada as freight clerk on the Grand Trunk at Coburg. His future headqrarters will be Montreal.

DRIVE IT AWAY.

Drive away all poisonous humor from the blood before it develops in scrofula or some chronic form of disease. Burdock Blood Bitters will do it.

Markham, May 10.—A few minutes before two o'clock this morning Fleury & Sons machines hops were discovered to be on fire. The fire had made such headway before being discovered that it was impossible to stay the flames. The dwelling house on the premises occupied by Seth Fleury and all the shops, machinery, patterns, tools, etc., were entirely destroyed. Ten new threshing machines, five being finished, together with all the spring stock of farm implements, were consumed. The buildings belonged to the Nichol's estate, insured for $800, Fleury & Sons loss nearly $20,000, no insurance. Mair's law office was also destroyed.

Use Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap for Prickly Heat, Nettle Rash, Scaley Eruption, Itch, and all diseased conditions of the skin.

A change has been made in the length of midsummer vacation in the public schools during the last session of Ontario legislature. The new law reads as follows:—In rural districts the schools will close for the summer holidays on the 1st Friday in July, and reopen on the 3rd Monday in August. The other holidays remain as before. In cities, towns, and incorporated villages, public and high schools also close on the 1st Friday of July and reopen on the last Monday in August. Trustees cannot reduce the holidays as before. The vacation here will extend from Friday, 3rd of July, to Monday, 31st nearly two months, this summer.

In the prayer meeting of one of the Methodist churches of this town on Sunday evening last a zealous old member who was a strong supporter of John A's Government, in the course in mentioning the troubles in the North West, said, "Oh, Lord, if the Government is to blame, remove it, when a good old Grit called out loud enough to be heard in any part of the church, "there is no if about it Lord, thou knowest well enough it is to blame." Then all the Tories groaned and all the Grits said, amen.—Brampton Times.

A pleasent and interesting ceremony took place in Grace Church yesterday morning (April 29th) Rev. E. A. Stafford, B.A., united in the holy bonds of matrimony W. L. Bain, M. D., College of P. & S., New York, of Wolseley, Assa., N. W. T., and Miss Cecilia A. Boland, third daughter of the late Jas. K. Boland, Esq., of "The Oaks," county of Grey, Ont. The bride was very becomingly dressed in a handsome Grey travelling suit, trimmed with plush and pearl clasps, and wore at the throat and waist orange blossoms and white chrysanthemums. After the ceremony, breakfast was partaken of at the residence of Mr. J. R. Boland, 28 Francis street, and the happy couple left on the 8.40 train, St. P. M. & M. R. R. for Chicago and the east, followed by the best wishes of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Dr. Bain arrived here with his wife on the 3rd inst., and have been visiting friends in the vicinity. We had a pleasant call from the Dr. on Monday last, he left on Tuesday on his return for the North-West to attend his practice, but owing to the present unsettled state of affairs Mrs. Bain, will remain here with friends for a time; the Dr. does not however anticipate any serious trouble along the line of the C. P. R. We extend to our old friend and his partner in life our best wishes.—Ed.]

Honor Roll.

The following is a list in order of merit of the pupils of Markdale public school, (1st division) who obtained 60 per cent. or over at the examination for the month of April:—

Class V.—Geo. Bowes, S. B. Douglass, Herby Brown.

Class IV., Sr.—Annie Cunningham, Willie McFarland, Janie Irving, Bella Cunhingham, Johnston Wilson.

Class IV., Jr.—Herbert Hull, Willie Leslie, Minnie Wilson, Frank Bryden.

Class III.—Hannah Steer.

F. Porter.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"De ole man Peters war' ober to my cabin las' nite," said Brother Gardner, as the lamps were turned up for business. "He sot and sot, an' his complaint was dat he had lost all confidence in human na'ur'. Some one promised him a two-shillin job o' whitewashin', but afore he got aroun' to it de people had employed anoder artist.

"Uncle Ben Johnson war' in to see me de odder Sunday, an' he had also lost all confidence in de world. Some one had gin him a twenty-cent piece fur a quarter, an' he ain't gwine to look fur honesty in any human bein' arter dis.

"De widder Clovertop war' weepin' when she entered my doah yesterday afternoon. Somebody had started de story dat she sold her coal stove to buy herself a pa'r of silk stockins, an' she declared dat she would nebber—no nebber, expeck to ha'r any one speak de truf agin. She was ready an' willin' to believe de world chuck full o' liars an' slanderers.

"I has heard more dan one member of dis club sot down wid a grunt of despair an' groan out agin de world. You hasn't had a fa'r show; luck has bin agin you; you hev bin robbed an' deceived by your friends, an' so on to de eand.

"Now, my frens, de fack am dat human natur' was nebber any better, an' probably not much wuss, dan you find it to-day. Five hundred y'ars B. C. men told lies an' indulged in false pretenses an' cheated each other in a hoss-trade. Women gossiped an' slandered an' played hypocrite, an' if you bought a crock of butter from a farmer it was jist as apt to have a stone in de bottom as not. Dis drappin' down on a cheer like a bag o' sand an' groanin' about de wickedness o' mankind am time thrown away. You do your full sheer of lyin' an' cheatin' an' deceivin', an' you shouldn't squeal when some one gits de bulge on you. Pay yer debts, but don't pay until be bills am sent in. Tell de truf, but keep 'nuff back to hedge on in case you put yer foot in it. Be candid in yer speech, but doan' tell all ye know fur at least a week. Use yer nayburs right, but keep a club in reserve fur back yard nuisances. Let us now purseed to attack de bizness which has assembled us togeder."

THEY WERE PROTECTED.

The Hon. Judiciary Johnson then introduced a resolution requesting the President to appoint a committee to investigate and report as to whether, in the recent troubles on the Isthmus, the colored people received proper protection.

Brother Gardner replied that he had already investigated the matter, as far as able, and that due protection was extended to persons of color. The only point he was in doubt on was whether it was extended by the British or American man-of-war present at the time, and a resolution of thanks, until this point was decided, might go astray.

DEATH SEIZES ANOTHER.

Trustee Pullback announced that he had received a telegram (charges unpaid) giving the news of the death of Brother Anchovy Gibbs, of Raleigh, N. C., who met his sad fate by falling off the roof of a barn. He would move that a resolution of sympathy be drawn up in the best blue ink and forwarded to the widow.

"Did he leave any widder?" asked the President.

"I-I dunno, sah."

"What was he doin' on de roof of dat barn?"

"De telegraff do'n' say."

"If he was puttin' on shingles dat's one thing; if he had climbed up dar to see a circus go by dat's another. To be on de safe side we will drape de doah-knob wid de customary emblem of mournin', but keep back our sympathy 'till we git furder perticklers of de accident."

TO BE ORGANIZED.

Giveadam Jones took the floor to inquire if there were any branch clubs of the Lime Kiln Club in England. The President replied in the negative, but announced that a movement was now on foot to organize one in London, a second in Liverpool and a third in Manchester. There were many colored people in that country anxious to become members and be known among the faithful, and an opportunity would be given them very soon.

IT MAY SEEK HIM.

Samuel Shin was then invited to step to the front, and as he posed before the desk the President said:

"Brudder Shin, I understands dat you am seekin' an offis."

"Yes, sah—a lettle one."

"You am coaxin', promisin', runnin', wire-pullin', an' lickin' butes in order to git yerself into an offis payin' starvashun wages. Has any offis sought you?"

"I—I dunno, sah."

"Den you quit yer foolin' an' go to airnin' day wages. When an offis wants you it knows whar' to come and it will doubtless seek you out. Let us now disembark de meetin'."

Country Newspapers.

The country newspaper is the most useful and least compensated of all the agencies which stamp the impress of progress upon villages and inland cities. Without the aid of local newspapers local towns are as a rule thriftless and dead. It is common for small great men to speak with contempt of the local newspapers, but the village newspaper makes more great men out of less material—bricks without straw—than any other factor in politics, and it is the one ladder on which men climb to local distinction as the beginning of wider fame. The advent of the local newspaper has always dated the increased thrift of the community. The local newspaper is the life of the locality, and the measure of its support, as a rule, measures the advancement of the people.

They Could Repent at Leisure.

Recently Miss Mary Shoemaker, of Des Moines, Iowa, a pretty girl with a merry laugh and a pretty figure that is the perfection of grace, came into Mr. Loren F. Bishop's bakery to buy some fresh rolls, and she looked at the young baker in such an irresistible way that he was quite beside himself with admiration. "Miss Shoemaker," said he, "you look so pretty that I have half a mind to go right with you and get married."

"I never refuse a dare," said the girl, with flushing cheeks and eyes that sparkled with a roguish light.

"Well, shall I go and get my coat and go and get a license?"

"If you want to, you may, and I'll go with you, too."

The young man's face sobered down a little, but he went and got his coat.

"Do you still want to go?" he gently inquired.

"Why, I thought it was you that wanted to go" said the maiden hesitatingly.

"Well, I do, but I thought maybe you would give it up."

"If that's all, we'll go," was the reply.

Loren was caught, and he had the good sense to see it. They went to the County Clerk and got a license, and before the sun set they were married.

Power of a Cannon.

In the course of a lecture on the conversion of heat into useful work Mr. W. Anderson remarked that a gun was the simplest machine for the purpose indicated. It was a single-acting engine which applied its work at one stroke, and did not work in a continuous series of cycles like most engines. The new pattern 10-inch breech-loading rifled gun which he selected as an example weighed 27 tons, and was 26 feet ten inches long, and discharged a shot weighing 500 pounds. The charge of 300 pounds of pebble gunpowder was capable of producing work equal to 73,658 foot tons, of which, on the discharge of the gun, 24,685 foot tons were expended in external work—the energy imparted to the shot in its forward motion, etc., 1,581 foot tons in external work—producing a rotary motion of the shot, etc., and the remaining large balance in communicating to the metal of the gun the molecular motion which became apparent in the form of heat.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

"Johnny," said an editor to his hopeful, "are you in the first class at school?" "No," replied the youngster, "I am registered as second-class male matter."

What he thought about it.

I am a commission merchant doing business in the West Indies. "I used some of your Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor when in Canada, and think it is the best cure for corns I have ever seen. Please send me a few dozen for friends and customers in South America and the West Indies."

(Signed), WM. GOULD, N. Y. City.

Thousands of testimonials in addition to the testimony of druggists have been received and prove Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to be Sure, Pop and Painless corn cure. Sold by country dealers in medicine and druggists everywhere. N. C. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

"Milkman, why does your milk always look so blue," inquired the housewife. "My cows came from Boston, mum," proudly replied the milkman, "and they're blue-bloods."

The demand for the "Myrtle Navy" tobacco is still on the increase, and from every quarter the firm who make it are receiving unsolicited testimony of its growth in public favor. A gentleman from one of the mining islands of Lake Huron, writes:—"Your 'Myrtle Navy' is an invaluable solace to the loneliness of the miner's life. don't know how our men could get along without it. If their stock ran out they would risk swimming to the mainland to replenish it, heedless of danger, and I believe they would cross the ice in winter on the same errand if it was not more than an inch thick. No other tobacco will satisfy them."

When is a poem like a newspaper oath? When it is just dashed off.

Young Men!—Read This.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRO-VOLTAIC BELT and other ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

A life-long Republican who thought he saw which way the cat was going to jump, carried a transparency in a Democratic procession, and now wants office. That won't do. The dodge is too transparent.

What's the Use?

Why suffer a single moment, when you can get immediate relief from internal or external pain by the use of Polson's NERVILINE, the great pain cure? Nerviline has never been known to fail. Try a 10 cent sample bottle. You will find it just as recommended. Neuralgia, toothache, cramps, headache, and all similar complaints disappear as if by magic when Nerviline is used. Large bottles 25 cents. Test bottles 10 cents, at druggists and country dealers.

It's no secret that Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed is composed of best genuine French Brandy, Distilled Extract of Smart-Weed and Jamaica Ginger Root, with Camphor Essence, and constitutes, therefore, the best remedy yet known for colic or cramps, cholera morbus, diarrhoea, dysentery or bloody-flux, or to break up colds, fevers and inflammatory attacks. 50 cents. By druggists.

The famous old English watering place of Bath has not been so crowded since the days of Jane Austin, fashionable doctors having again discovered the virtues of its waters.

"The leprous distilment, whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man,
That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body," and causes the skin to become "barked about, most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust." Such are the effects of diseased and morbid bile, the only antidote for which is to cleanse and regulate the liver—an office admirably performed by Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery."

At Castle Howard, Lord Carlisle's seat in Yorkshire, there is a guest house in the park where a month's rest, with good living, is provided each month for four hard-working women from large towns.

Young men or middle-aged ones, suffering from nervous debility and kindred weaknesses should send three letter stamps for illustrated book suggesting sure means of cure. Address, World's Medical Association, Buffalo, N.Y.

A small piece of what looked to him like glass was picked up in Macon, Ga., recently by a citizen of that place, who took it to a jeweller, by whom it was pronounced a diamond, and worth from $800 to $1,000.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy, and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

A. P. 227.

THOS. GALLOWAY & CO., Cotton, Woollen, Silk Carpets and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, Ont.

FARMS FOR SALE, CHEAP.—All kinds.—JOHN J. DALEY, Guelph.

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR
IMPERIAL FRENCH SHOE BLACKING

PURE BRED AYRSHIRES for sale; two cows, two yearling heifers and one bull. Write for description price and pedigree to G. F. BAKER, Trafalgar.

WANTED—Partner with $10,000, to start wholesale and retail timber and manufacturing business. Good investment, large profits. Principals only dealt with. Address, MANAGER ADVERTISING AGENCY, 33 & 35 Adelaide St. W., Toronto, Canada.

FARM FOR SALE—100 acres—80 improved—north County of Lambton; soil, clay loam and tile under drained. Good brick house, barn, sheds, coach house other out buildings. Orchard, over 300 fruit trees, and about 500 ornamental trees. Never-failing stream running through farm. Mostly all board fenced. Within three miles of town on railway. Will be sold very cheap on most favorable terms. Apply, Box 163, London.

THE BLIND afflicted SEE.—Those are requested to get Williams' Eye Water, it cures all diseases of the Eye that are curable, even Color Blindness, ask your druggists for it. Wholesale by Lyman Sons & Co., Montreal. Send for circular to see the marvelous cures effected in Montreal to GEO. WILLIAMS, 709 St. Lawrence street, or at GARDNER'S Drug Store, corner McGill and Notre Dame streets.

"COLD WATER DIP!!"
(TAR ELIXIR SHEEP DIP.)
used in England since 1873, awarded gold medal London, Eng., 1884. POSITIVE CURE FOR SCAB and all skin diseases, either on cattle, horses or sheep; destroys all insects and lice; also insects on plants, vines and trees. Write for circulars and prices, and see testimonials from Hon. M. A. Cochrane. Address NESS & CO., 759 Craig St., Montreal. Agents wanted. Good inducements offered to smart men.

BELTING

Manufacturers of Star Rivet, Leather Belting. Large double Driving Belts a specialty.
Send for Price Lists and Discounts.
F. E. DIXON & CO., KING ST. EAST, TORONTO.

R. W. PRITTIE,
REAL ESTATE AGENT,
Commissioner, Valuator, Trustee & Financial Agent,
Room C, Arcade, Yonge Street, Toronto. Money to Loan, Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged. Manitoba and United States lands taken in part payment for city property.

Smoked Sausages.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P.O. Box 342, Montreal.

Dominion Line of Steamships.

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday, during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from QUEBEC.

SARNIA,—May 16, June 27, Aug. 8, Sept. 19.
VANCOUVER,—May 30, July 11, Aug. 22, Oct. 3.
OREGON,—June 13, July 25, Sept. 5, Oct. 17.

Rates of passage:—Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate, $35. Steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to DAVID TORRANCE & CO., General Agents, Montreal.

All Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.

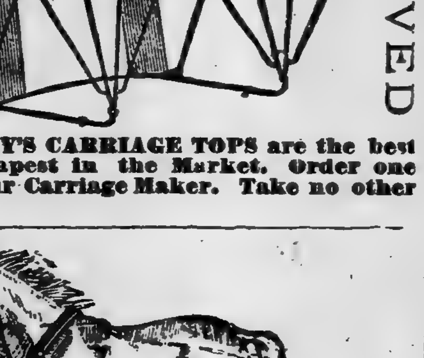
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brookie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

AGENTS WANTED Male and female—the best thing ever offered to agents—$25.00 per week easily earned, 3c. for circular. Address P. Stevenson, room "H," Arcade, Toronto, Ont.

FOR PLEASANT SEWING
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Cotton!
Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any Sewing Machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry Goods Dealers.

CUT THIS OUT!

The New Co-Operative
Sewing Machine!
—IS THE—
BEST IN THE MARKET.
NEW STAND! NEW FURNITURE!
Latest Improved Attachments
Agents price for similar machine $60
Our price only $25 each.



Before buying send us stamp for our elegant photograph and sample of sewing.
Machines guaranteed for three years and sent on trial.
Any lady wanting a machine will do well to write to
The Co-Operative
Sewing Machine Co.
22 JAMES ST. SOUTH, HAMILTON.

CAUTION!
EACH PLUG OF THE
MYRTLE NAVY
IS MARKED
T. & B.
IN BRONZE LETTERS.
NONE OTHER GENUINE.

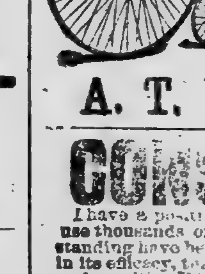
THE CANADIAN GRENADE

FIRE EXTINGUISHER
J. B. COGHILL, 169 Queen St. E., Toronto.

STEEL, BRASS AND RUBBER
STAMPS PRESS & WAX SEALS
I. C. FELL & CO., TORONTO.

CONBOY'S IMPROVED

CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order one from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.



Coleman's Improved Plough Harness.
Adapted to Orchard Work.
No whiffletrees to injure trees. Easy on man and team. Working qualities guaranteed. Money refunded if not satisfactory after a fair trial. Price, $10 without collars and bridles.
DEWEY & CO.,
COBOURG, ONT.

BANK OF TORONTO.
DIVIDEND NO. 58.
Notice is hereby given that a dividend of four per cent. for the current half year, at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and a bonus of 1 per cent. upon the paid-up capital of the Bank, has this day been declared, and that the same will be payable at the Bank and its branches on and after Monday, the 1st day of June next.
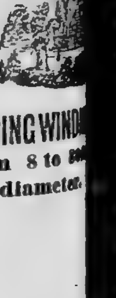
The transfer books will be closed from the 17th to the 31st day of May, both days inclusive.
The Annual General Meeting of Stockholders for the election of Directors will be held at the Banking House of the Institution on Wednesday, the 17th day of June next. The chair to be taken at noon. By order of the board,
D. COULSON, Cashier.
Bank of Toronto, April 29, 1885.

FOR Fattening and bringing into condition Horses, Cows, Calves, Sheep and pigs, the YORKSHIRE CATTLE FEEDER is used and recommended by first-class breeders. Milk Cattle produce more milk and butter. It fattens in one-fourth the usual time and saves food. Price 25 cents and $1 per box. A dollar box contains 200 Feeds.
HUGH MILLER & Co., AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTS, 167 King St. East, Toronto.
For sale by Druggists everywhere.

TRY PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER
Pure Gold MANUFACTURING CO.

PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd-hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for list.
Send 3c. stamp for largest catalogue ever issued in Canada.
A. T. LANE, Montreal.

CONSUMPTION
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.



R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Plug
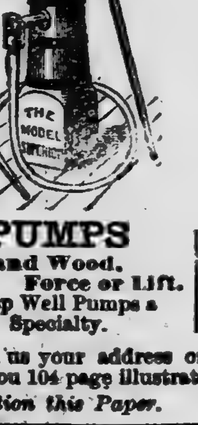
bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs are the best and cheapest, quality considered?



ONTARIO PUMP CO.,
(Limited.)
OFFICE AND FACTORY, COR. SPADINA AND CECIL STS., TORONTO, ONT.

TANKS.
from the smallest up to 2,855 bbls.

I X L FEED MILL
guaranteed to grind 40 to 25 bushels per hour according to size. These Mills are the most durable, perfect and cheapest Feed Mill yet invented.

Eleven Sizes
GEARED WINDMILLS
from 1 to 40 h. p., for Pumping Water, running Grain Crushers, Straw Cutters, Root Pulpers, or any other machinery up to a 40 h. p. grist mill.

PUMPING WINDMILLS
from 8 to ... diameter.

PUMPS
Iron and Wood.
Force or Lift.
Deep Well Pumps a Specialty.

HAYING TOOLS
A full line of ...

Pipe & Pipe Fittings
In fact a full line of Water Supply Material.

Send us your address on a post card and we will send you 104 page illustrated catalogue free.
Mention this Paper.

Farmers, Mill Men and all Oil Consumers
WILL SAVE MONEY BY USING McCOLL'S CELEBRATED OILS
"LARDINE,"
For general lubricating purposes, is unexcelled, and their CYLINDER and other oils have no equal. Highest Awards and Medals wherever exhibited. For sale by dealers.
McCOLL BROS. & CO., TORONTO.

ENGLAND AND RU...

Bullet Whistlings.

...ada vainly endeavored ... loan of $10,000,000 in ... day. The most tem... made to some of the larg... but even these did no... money needed.

...e steel man-of-war How... ched at Pembroke, Wales ... tion to the British navy ... and will have a crew of 44... is a twin-screw, steel a... ette ship of 9,700 tons bu... horse-power.

...n. Komaroff, the comman... nistan, is Russian governor ... trans-caspian provinces, ... nts is a very remarkable ... ological subjects he is an... represented as exceeding... erse respecting such topics, ... within the range of his ... knowledge.

...l. Alikhanoff, the governor ... one of the most active ... Russians during their rec... in central Asia, if not a M... faith, is at least descende... parents. His name original... but he has Russianized ... tion of the Muscovite te... " He is a scheming, i... pioneer of the class that ha... empire of Russia in cent... served under Skobeleff at th... ok Tepe, and possessed th... of that officer.

...asmuch as everything that ... in the Russian newspapers ... scrutinized by agents of the ... mewhat significant that th... nya, of St. Petersburg, say... that in the event of war ... settle matters with Engl... in Afghanistan but in India ... presumably authorized rema... rrant the often-expressed ... English papers that Russia's ... btaining possession of the ... is ultimately to try to obtai... n of India itself.

...is the opinion of Mr. George ... ds that, in the event of war ... land and Russia, American sy... withstanding the unfriendly ... e British government during ... r, would largely incline to the ... land. Of the truth of this th... o question. The civilization of ... thing but the reluctant homag... le barbarism to modern ide... ress. The genius of its gover... ndamentally repugnant to the ... n conception of political justi... ty. Its ascendancy would doo... to a darkness deeper than the mi... e middle ages. The forces for ... nds in conflict with those of E... zation, would exalt the will of ... bove the rights of a race, and ... the law of absolutism for trial by ... the protection of the habeas c... it is not written in the book o... this world should ever be gov... he successors of Tamerlane.

A Famous Fortress.

...e renowned Castle of Chillion s... an isolated rock close to the ro... de of the lake, surrounded by ... crossed by a covered wooden b... st picturesque appearance. I... in 1238 by Amadeus IV. of S... is an admirable specimen of ... y-towered mediæval structures. ... used as a state prison, unpleas... n to many of the early reform... he famous Bonnivard, Prior o... r, in Geneva, who was immure... Castle from 1530 1536, is gene... ved as Byron's "Prisoner of Chilli... pears that when Byron wrote ... us poem he was describing an ima... victim and was not acquainted ... real story of Bonnivard, though... wards connected his name with ... net. In those days the Pays ... belonged to Savoy, and Bonniv... g made himself obnoxious to ... ing duke was shut up by him ... eon of Chillon. It was only in 1... he Swiss wrested the country f... es III. of Savoy. Chillion was ... place to yield, but besieged by a ... army on the land side, and attac... Genevese galleys, from the l... compelled to surrender. Bon... was delivered, and returned to G... where he avowed his adherance ... estantism, but dissuaded its suppo... rom introducing it rashly. During ... vity Geneva had become a Protest... blic instead of being dependent ... Dukes of Savoy. The castle is n... s a magazine for military stores, ... nterior of the building is well p... d. It has become almost a pl... grimage for visitors from every p... world, who, Byron in hand, go ... every detail connected with ... prisoner. After all, to judge ... direful legends of the place, suppor... outward and visible signs sho... to strangers, Bonnivard ought ... thought himself a very lucky fell... ve endured his six year' captiv... out loss of life or limb. For here ... seen the potence, black with a... which the prisoners were hung; ... is the "terrible hole in the wa... gh which their bodies were cast i... ke, 500 feet in depth; here is a t... chamber, with a wooden pillar soo... ot irons; and here is the oubliet... tful place—a trapdoor which shut ... ght, and then a small spiral stairc... ree steps, where the prisoner fou... urth step, and was precipitated t... n of 80 feet upon large knives. ... nivard lived for 24 years after his ... nce of Chillon, and was twice m...

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

Bullet Whistlings.

Russia vainly endeavored to secure a private loan of $10,000,000 in London the other day. The most tempting offers were made to some of the large discount houses, but even these did not bring out the money needed.

The steel man-of-war Howe has been launched at Pembroke, Wales. This new addition to the British navy carries ten guns, and will have a crew of 445 men. The Howe is a twin-screw, steel armor-plated barbette ship of 9,700 tons burden and 7,000 horse-power.

Gen. Komaroff, the commander in Afghanistan, is Russian governor-general of the trans-caspian provinces, and by all accounts is a very remarkable man. On archæological subjects he is an authority, and is represented as exceedingly ready to converse respecting such topics, or indeed any within the range of his experience and knowledge.

Col. Alikhanoff, the governor of Mery, is one of the most active agents of the Russians during their recent operations in central Asia, if not a Mohammedan by faith, is at least descended of moslem parents. His name originally was Ali Khan, but he has Russianized it by the addition of the Muscovite termination "off." He is a scheming, intriguing, bold pioneer of the class that have spread the empire of Russia in central Asia. He served under Skobeleff at the taking of Geok Tepe, and possessed the confidence of that officer.

Inasmuch as everything that is to appear in the Russian newspapers is carefully scrutinized by agents of the czar, it is somewhat significant that the Navoe Vremya, of St. Petersburg, says editorially that in the event of war "Russia will settle matters with England, not alone in Afghanistan but in India as well." This presumably authorized remark seems to warrant the often-expressed belief of English papers that Russia's purpose in obtaining possession of the gate to India is ultimately to try to obtain possession of India itself.

It is the opinion of Mr. George William Curtis that, in the event of war between England and Russia, American sympathy, notwithstanding the unfriendly attitude of the British government during our civil war, would largely incline to the side of England. Of the truth of this there can be no question. The civilization of Russia is nothing but the reluctant homage of an Asiatic barbarism to modern ideas and progress. The genius of its government is fundamentally repugnant to the Anglo-Saxon conception of political justice and liberty. Its ascendancy would doom mankind to a darkness deeper than the midnight of the middle ages. The forces for which it stands in conflict with those of English civilization, would exalt the will of a despot above the rights of a race, and substitute the law of absolutism for trial by jury, and the protection of the habeas corpus. It is not written in the book of fate that this world should ever be governed by the successors of Tamerlane.

A Famous Fortress.

The renowned Castle of Chillion stands on an isolated rock close to the road by the side of the lake, surrounded by deep water, crossed by a covered wooden bridge of most picturesque appearance. It was built in 1238 by Amadeus IV. of Savoy, and is an admirable specimen of the many-towered mediæval structures. It was used as a state prison, unpleasantly known to many of the early reformers; the famous Bonnivard, Prior of St. Victor, in Geneva, who was immured in the Castle from 1530 1536, is generally believed as Byron's "Prisoner of Chillion." It appears that when Byron wrote that famous poem he was describing an imaginary victim and was not acquainted with the real story of Bonnivard, though he afterwards connected his name with it in a sonnet. In those days the Pays de Vaud belonged to Savoy, and Bonnivard, having made himself obnoxious to that reigning duke was shut up by him in a dungeon of Chillion. It was only in 1536 that the Swiss wrested the country from Charles III. of Savoy. Chillion was the last place to yield, but besieged by a Bernese army on the land side, and attacked by Genevese galleys, from the lake it was compelled to surrender. Bonnivard was delivered, and returned to Geneva, where he avowed his adherance to Protestantism, but dissuaded its supporters from introducing it rashly. During his captivity Geneva had become a Protestant republic instead of being dependent on the Dukes of Savoy. The castle is now used as a magazine for military stores, and the interior of the building is well preserved. It has become almost a place of pilgrimage for visitors from every part of the world, who, Byron in hand, go to study every detail connected with the famous prisoner. After all, to judge by the direful legends of the place, supported by the outward and visible signs shown daily to strangers, Bonnivard ought to have thought himself a very lucky fellow to have endured his six year' captivity without loss of life or limb. For here is to be seen the potence, black with age, from which the prisoners were hung; and there is the "terrible hole in the wall" through which their bodies were cast into the lake, 500 feet in depth; here is a torture-chamber, with a wooden pillar scored by hot irons; and here is the oubliette a frightful place—a trapdoor which shut out the light, and then a small spiral staircase of three steps, where the prisoner found the fourth step, and was precipitated to a depth of 80 feet upon large knives. But Bonnivard lived for 24 years after his exit from the Castle of Chillion, and was twice mar-

The Romance of Courting by the Firelight.

Uncle Dave was giving the boys some advice on their love-making affairs, and one of them asked him how the young people did when he was sparking. "Them was great times, boys," he said in reply, "great times. We didn't have no gas, nor no keerosene, nor no newfangled notions, and we done our sparking by a plain taller dip; but most frequently just by the firelight. Firelight is warmin', boys, and flickers just enough to make a girl's eyes shine and the peach bloosom glow in her cheeks. It's mighty soft and purty, too, and kinder reaches out and melts two hearts together in a way none of your gaslights knows anything about. Sometimes the fire shined up a little too powerful in places, and the young man would git up, without sayin' anything, and put a shovelfol of ashes on it. Then he would cuddle up to the girl in the shadows and she would cuddle some too, and it really didn't seem like there was anything else in the whole big round earth to be wished for. Purty soon the fire would git obstreperous again, and the little flames would twinkle in and out, as if they wanted to see what was goin' on, or had seen and was laughin' and winkin' about it and havin' some fun too, and the young fellow would reach for the shovel and the ashes and cover the bright blazes all up. And sometimes—remember, now, only sometimes—the girl would get up and put ashes on, and then—well, boys, when the bluebirds come in the Spring, and the fishin' worms crawled out of the ground, and the boys set on the green banks of the little creek waitin' for a bite, and the johnny-jump-ups nestled in the sunny places, there was a weddin' in an old house, and the purty bride wore apple blossoms in her hair, and the awkward young fellow blushed in his store clothes and tight boots; and when the Winter came again they set by their own fire, and the shovel and the ashes was out of a job."

English Soldiers and Matrimony.

An English soldier can not lawfully get married until he has completed six years' service and is also the possessor of a good conduct badge. Having served the allotted period, leave has been obtained from the commanding officer of the regiment; but as a rule permission is granted readily enough. When married the soldier's position is much improved. He has his separate room in the barracks, with coal, gas, and wood, free; and if his wife is a good laundress she can add to his income by doing washing. By the practice of strict economy a soldier's wife, can, under such conditions, enjoy a more comfortable existence than if she had mated an agricultural laborer or mechanic.

But even under the most favorable conditions it is hard to lay by for a rainy day. The proportion of married men for whom accommodation is provided by the government is about 15 per cent. of the strength of the regiment, and when that limit is passed the soldier must marry, if at all, without leave, which is done by large numbers, but he has to support his wife and self on his regimental pay and rations. But he is allowed the privilege of "living out of mess:" that is to say, instead of taking his meals in common, he is permitted to draw his rations and do his best to make three-quarter pounds of meat per diem and one pound of bread fill two mouths instead of one.

A Tragedy in Royal Life.

A royal recluse has just met a strange death. Princess Augusta Montlear, famed for her benevolence, and who has left her vast wealth to charity, being excited the other day, so the story goes, fired at her man-servant. She missed him, but the man, feigning to be shot, fell on the floor. The Princess, terrified at what she had done, blew out her own brains. Another report, which is generally believed in Vienna, declares that the Princess was murdered by a domestic. Deceased was the daughter of the Countess de Carignan, who was saved from the flames by Doctor Montlear, at the famous ball at the Austrian Embassy in 1812, the countess afterwards marrying her preserver. The late Princess was intimately related to several reigning and princely houses, although she held no intercourse with any of them, but led a solitary and eccentric life. She never married, and when yet a girl retired to her estates in Galicia. Her own life more resembled that of a beggar than a lady of exalted rank, and although in matters relating to herself and her household she was exceedingly penurious, yet she managed to spend all her large income in works of charity, being especially bountiful to the humble poor and to needy students.

A Woman's Wit.

A woman's advice is generally worth having; so, if you are in any trouble, tell your mother or your wife or your sister all about it. Be assured that light will flash upon your darkness. Women are too commonly judged verdant in all but purely womanish affairs. No philosophical students of the sex thus judge them. Their intuitions or insight are most subtle, and if they cannot see a cat in the meal there is no cat there. I advise a man to keep none of his affairs from his wife. Many a home has been saved, and many a fortune retrieved by a man's confidence in his wife. Woman is far more a seer and a prophet than a man, if she be given a fair chance. As a general rule the wives confide the minutest of their plans and thoughts to their husbands. Why not reciprocate, if but for the pleasure of meeting confidence with confidence? The men who succeed best in life are those who make confidantes of their wives.

WITTICISMS.

Happy as a clam—An oyster.

The black sheep—A colored thief.

Cinder-ella—The girl who shakes out ashes.

The fiery charger—The red-headed hotel clerk.

The mouse a woman never fears—A moustache.

A statistician has estimated that courtship averages three tons of coal each.

Woman was made after man, but the man have been after the women ever since.

The man who kills two organ grinders where one lived before is a public benefactor.

"Was early man a savage?" asked a magazine writer. Yes, until after breakfast.

"I vas habby like a pig sohnflower mit neider ven de udder fair Sharman vas avay." That's the way Carl Pretzel puts it.

The old-fashioned two-for-a-quarter kiss has come in again, with the revived style of wearing the mouth large and open.

"Why is a young man like a kernel of corn?" asked a young lady. "Because," said another, "he turns white when he pops."

"What secret society is it to which Mr. J. belongs?' "Well, I really don't know, but from the number of horns he takes I should say the Elks."

"Johnny, where have you been?" "Fishin'." Did you catch anything?" 'Not yet, but I'm gonter, though, cos I've muddled my trousers."

The hoop-snake, which takes its tail in its mouth, and so trundles over the ground, seems to be a fashionable critter. His walking suit consists of a swallow-tail.

It is difficult to say what race existed at the beginning of the history of mankind, but it is probable that the people who will be on hand at the end are the Finnish.

Brother Talmage says: "Women like to go to the society plays to see how the actresses dress, and the men go to the variety plays to see how they don't dress."

What is the difference between the young fellow who is osculating a girl and another who only sees the performance? One is kissing a miss and the other is missing a kiss.

It is a fearful thing to have a secret which you are compelled to keep from your wife, but it is Hades with the lid off to suspect that your mother-in-law knows the secret and is holding it over you.

"Plague take a woman, anyhow; she can't never do anything a body wants done. A man can do anything." "No he can't. I'll tell you what a man can't do." "What's that?" "He can't mind his own business."

At some point in the career of every human soul yawns a chasm that seems impassible. One of these ditches confronts the young wife when she first opens her eyes to the fact that she can't cook like somebody's mother.

A Baptist minister was once asked how it was that he consented to the marriage of his daughter to a Presbyterian. "Well, my dear friend," he replied, "as far as I have been able to discover, Cupid never studied theology."

Mr. Sampleson is a very irascible man, and is in the habit of punishing his boys very severely. Not long since he scolded the youngest boy for wearing out his clothes so fast. "Pa, no pants can last any time the way you hits," replied the son, reproachfully.

"A nice husband you are!" said madam, in a passion. "You care less about me than about those pet animals of yours. Look what you did when your poodle, Azor, died." Husband (quietly): "Well, I had him stuffed." Wife (exasperated): "You wouldn't have gone to that expense for me—not you, indeed."

Prisoners at Massowah.

I have just come to Massowah from Suakin where five miles from that city I visited the recent battle ground. I came from Suakin to Massowah in the Egyptian ship Melulla, in company with many rebels, prisoners taken in the late battles. Loaded with irons, but not subdued, they were proud of having fought in the holy cause. Some of them in their fury, and unable to do anything else, bit the railing of the deck, others spit on their chains. At their head was an old sheik whose white beard contrasted strangely with his black face. During the day he stared gloomily at the sea, and in the evening when the sun set, he called all his fellow prisoners to prayer. I was extremely surprised when an Arab official, one Ibraim Effendi Lufti, who was on board, told me that all these prisoners were destined for Massowah and the neighborhood, and not only they, but 500 others, who would be forwarded in a few days. All were to be confided to the custody of the Italian soldiers. The Egyptian officer seemed himself surprised at this. Why send to Massowah—where at any time the few soldiers might be wanted to suppress an insurrectionary movement of the natives?—why send there such a large number of fanatical prisoners already used to war? It is a bad sign that when these prisoners pass through the streets of Massowah they were surrounded by a number of natives, who press their hands and exchanged signs and words which to me seem very suspicious.

FOREIGN ECHOES.

Population of China—Killed by Hailstones—Ellen Terry's Marriages—England's Wood Supply—A Curious Point in Law, Art, &c.

At a recent meeting of the Statistical Society, in London, Sir R. Temple read a paper combating the statements as to the number of the population of China, and estimating it at 297,000,000.

The farmer king of Alabama is Bragg B. Comer of Barbour county. He raised 2,250 bales of cotton last year, besides a large amount of corn. He has from 8,000 to 10,000 acres in cotton and corn this year, and says crop prospects were never better.

Col. Alikhanoff, who figured so conspicuously in the Penjdeh affair, is a native of central Asia. His name was Ali Khan, but when he joined the Russian army he added "off." Russia has been greatly aided in her advances toward India by Central Asiatics.

Thirteen must be a lucky number. John Bennett of West Fairfield, Pa., died of consumption at the age of 60, leaving a family of thirteen children. All are alive and well to-day, the oldest being 87 and the youngest 60. Sickness has never troubled the family.

Among the present English Ministers there is only one ex-journalist, Sir William Harcourt. Mr. Courtney who only recently retired, was a leading writer on the London Times. Nearly every member of the French Ministry, on the other hand, has been a journalist.

One of the most splendid collections of armor is that of Mr. Stittert, an Englishman, at Florence. It is mounted with great taste in a vast hall. He estimates that for twenty-seven years he has spent at the rate of £3,000 a year on it. He means to leave it to the city of Florence.

The Indian Medical Gazette records the deaths of seven shepherds in the Belgaum district from being struck by hailstones of the size of cocoanuts. A large number of animals were killed by the storm, which, from the accounts, produced missiles quite as dangerous as the Russian cannon balls.

The Earl of Selkirk, whose title has become extinct by his death lately at St. Mary's Isle, Scotland, was son of the founder of the Selkirk Settlement in Canada. Paul Jones once dropped down on St. Mary's Isle and carried off the family plate while the Earl was away. It was recovered, and the family have it to-day

The average strength of the European troops in India in 1883 was 55,525, among whom the death rate was 10.88 per 1,000. The native army showed an average strength of 114 830, with a death rate of 14 31. The most fatal diseases for the Indian troops were those of the respiratory organs.

The present Duke of Bedford, head of the house of Russell, who is held up in a rather unpleasant form just now by the London press, is a confirmed cynic. There is no member of London society who says so many good things, who is the author of so many bitting mots, or who impresses one with a deeper notion of his disbelief in human nature generally.

At the recent sale of the cellars of the late Earl of Wilton, at Egerton Lodge, Melton Mowbray, and Grosvenor square, London, the prices realized may seem rather startling to American eyes. Some Chateau Laffittes brought from $41 to $44 a dozen bottles, and the Perrier Jouet champagnes of the vantage of 1874 sold up to 410 shillings. This is equivalent to $102 a dozen, or $8.50 per bottle.

A London paper points out that the strength of the British army lies largely in voluntary enlistment, which gives fighting men for fighting and leaves the rest for peaceful pursuits. In England it has always be found that a rumor of war brings any number of recruits needed, whereas the United States are full of men who have left their country to avoid the army, many of whom are suited for nothing but the army.

The old notion of "combating" with medicines such diseases as lung inflammation has given place to more enlightened views. The system of the late Dr. Hughes Bennet is described as "treatment by restoratives directed to further the natural progress of the disease and supporting the vital strength." The Lancet states that the Doctor had 105 cases of uncomplicated inflammation of the lungs which he treated on this principle, without a single death.

The versatile Ellen Terry, the actress, first married Mr. Watts, the artist. That gentleman, having obtained a divorce, was succeeded by Mr. Wardell. Not satisfied with her second choice, Miss Terry divorced him, and, settling her affections upon Charles Kelly, became his wife. Incompatibility soon separated them, and now death, by the removal of Mr. Kelly, has severed all entangling alliances. The London papers are saying that Mr. Irving will marry Miss Terry now that she is free again.

A Mexican historian makes a new attempt to show that America was discovered in the fifth century, A.D., by a party of Buddhist monks from Afghanistan, of whom one, Hwui Shan, returned to Asia after an absence of forty-one years. A short account of the land which he visited supposed to be Mexico, was included in the official history of China. There is proof that Hwui Shan actually visited, some unknown Eastern region, and the traditions of Mexico contain an account of the arrival of monks.

According to the Progres Medical, the mortality among children "brought up on the bottle" is frightfully large. Of 4,510 infants under one year who died of gastro-intestinal troubles in Paris in 1882, it is found by recent investigations that very nearly the whole number were victims of artificial alimentation, wholly or in part, or had been fed prematurely with solid food. At the dispensary of the Societe Philanthropique not a single case of the disease was found in infants fed in conformity with natural laws.

England is the largest importer of wood in Europe, requiring 290,000,000 feet per annum more than she produces. Inasmuch as neither Canada nor the United States can much longer spare large quantities, and since no European country can now produce much more than is required for home consumption, while almost all of them are importers, Great Britian must ere long depend on her own resources. There are extensive tracts of land in Ireland and Scotland that might be profitably devoted to forest culture.

M. Braun, the photographer, is now engaged in reproducing the important collection of pictures in Buckingham Palace. The most valuable masterpieces are those by Jan Steen, Teniers, and A. Van Ostade, as delineators of plebeian character and life; Terburg, Netscher and E. Van der Neer, as painters of elegant social life: G. Dow, G. Metzu, and F. Meiris, as the most refined portrayers of common life and domestic incident; De Hooghe and Van der Heyden, as imitators of natural effects of perspective and light, and Hobbema Ruysdael, and Cuyp, as landscape painters.

The Hindu "Secret Mail."

It would seem that in the far East among those peoples whose civilization belongs to the past—to antiquity rather than to the present, there exists a culture of the mental perception that is capable of strange achievements. The phenomena of what is known in India as the "secret mail" have puzzled Europeans for many years and eluded all efforts on the part of Government officials to discover their source.

An editorial in the New York Tribune briefly alludes to it as follows:

"Anglo-Indians and all who have lived in Asiatic countries are aware that the natives have means of conveying news which at important junctures enables them to forestall the Government. Thus, throughout the Indian mutiny, the intelligence of all the important events—such as battles, captures of cities, massacres, and investments—was in possession of the bazaars usually hours and frequently days before it reached the authorities, and this notwithstanding the fact that the latter had often taken special measures to insure the quickest transmission possible. And it is also well known that this "secret mail' is so trustworthy that the natives invariably act upon it with implicit confidence—speculating, for example, to the full extent of their fortunes. How the news is sent, however, has never been discovered, or at least no explanation comprehensible or credible by the average Western mind has been reached.

"The London Spectator of a recent date discusses this queston at much length, and suggests the employment by the Asiatics of carefully laid "dawks" or stages. This no doubt has the appearance of a common-sense explanation, but the difficulty about it is that no European during the whole time Hindustan has been occupied has ever seen such a stage in operation or come across any of its machinery.

"Now, it may be admitted that it is it is possible for Asiatics to arrange such stages or lines of communication over hundreds or thousands of miles without being discovered; but it is certainly extremely improbable that they should have been able to do this on the considerable scale it must have been done upon to account for the facts, without ever being discovered.

"Again, the circumstance that on one occasion when the Government had made special arrangements for the swift dispatch of news from a distant point, the 'secret mail" beat the Government couriers twelve hours, appears to warrant the conclusion that some means of communication more rapid than horses or runners must be at the disposal of the natives. The Spectator thinks it possible that they transmit news by signal; but while this may be the case where comparatively short distances are concerned, it is not applicable to routes covering several hundreds of miles. Anglo-Indians as a rule refuse to accept the native explanation of the 'secret mail,' which involves belief in what is just now being called "telepathy.' The natives, when they are willing to talk of the matter at all, which is very seldom to western men, say that neither horses nor men are employed, and that no 'dawk' is laid for the carrying of news, but that it results from a system of thought-transmission which is as familiar to them as the electric telegraph is to us."

The late developments, through special inquiries by the London Society for Psychical Research and through a similar line of investigation undertaken by the New York Academy of Anthropology, have well-nigh satisfied us that the claim of the Indian natives is true, and that they are in possession of a system of thought-transference or mental telepathy that has advanced beyond the stage of mere experiment as with us. The "sixth sense," if the reader will, or the "seventh," as Dr. Wm. Thomson thinks, is here brought into active exercise.

Can you give me a definition of nothing?' inquired a school teacher. "Yes, mum. It's a bung hole without a barrel around it!' shouted little Ted Saunders, whose papa is a cooper.

"A petrified baby was recently discovered in Texas." Unmarried men may believe this, but those who have seen a baby in motion know it is never still long enough to petrify.

The Standard.

MARKDALE MAY 14, 1885.

THE REBELLION.

A THREE DAY'S ENGAGEMENT AT BATOCHE.

The weather in the North-West continues fine and warm, the temperature ranging from 87° at night to 70° during the day.

Gen. Middleton's forces had an encounter with the enemy, commencing on Saturday morning and lasting more or less night and day until latest accounts (Monday evening.)

The Rebels are strongly entrenched, making it almost impossible to rout them without advancing upon them, which would be certain death to a large number of our brave volunteers, which no one would for a moment encourage.

There were two of our men killed in this engagement, viz., Wm. Phillips, "A" Battery, Quebec, and T. Moore, "C" Company, Royal Grenadiers, Toronto; also some 15 wounded, It is supposed some 40 or 50 rebels were killed. It appears to be Gen. Middleton's intention to starvs them out rather than sacrifice many lives of our noble men. He has plenty ammunition and supplies for weeks while the rebels supplies are getting very low.

VERY LATEST,

As we go to press the latest dispatch brings news of Gen. Middleton having taken Batoche, the rebel principal strong hold, at the point of the baynot, six more volunteers have fell and a large number of rebels killed. The prisoners held by Riel have been rescued by Middleton. It is sincerly hoped that the end of the rebellion is drawing near.

THE SITUATION.

There are few of our people to-day who can fully comprehend that we are now plunged into a war, the result or termination of which neither the forensic knowledge of the general in the field, nor that of the philosophic statesman can forsee.

Although many families may mourn bereavements from the family hearth-stone, yet there is a heartrending consolation in the fact that the bravery of our boys in the North-West who have fallen by the bullets of Indian assasins, will be a theme of admiration in the drawing-rooms of generations yet unborn.

We are not going to discuss the question if

"Some one has blundered:"

Our authority has been set at defiance by a motley rabble, and the die is so cast that for the future good government of the North-West, transgressors of the law must be told, that villainy cannot be practised with impunity.

We would again advert to the conduct of our boys at the front. They have not only received the highest commendation from an old veteran like Gen. Middleton, but also from an unbiassed authority like the St. Paul (Min.) Pioneer Press, whose encominms are enthusiastic.

The halo of glory surrounding a soldier's grave will be a beacon-light for future generations.

The Nickel Plate Shows.

The first circus of the season will arrive here by special train on Wednesday May 27th afternoon and evening. These trains will come direct from Chicago, Ill., the home and winter quarters of W. H. Harris, the proprietor, and Dan. Castello, the king of translantic arenas, who accompanies the show. This great circus having met with brilliant financial success last season contrary to the expectations of many large concerns which complain bitterly of having lost heavily on the season's business, Mr. Harris has made a new and redical departure this season determining by honest merit to render the show in every way worthy the confidence and patronage of all lovers of first class amusements, and we have no doubt its vibrations will be felt on the better side of the ledger account in the ticket wagon. They do not gull the public by sending out a string of empty baggage wagons on the streets, cutting off a useless and expensive luxury, but give their entire show in the tents instead fo on the streets and bill boards. However, just prior to the afternoon performance, the Nickle Plate Cornet Band will parade in their band chariot.

A THROAT CURE.

A cure for Croup. There is no better remedy for Croup than Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken internally and applied according to special directions. This is the great household panacea for rheumatism, stiff joints, pain, inflammation, &c.

GREAT SALE of HARDWARE.

W. KOUGH

Having decided to give up Business, is now offering his his immense stock of

SHELF & HEAVY HARDWARE, PAINTS, OILS, GLASS, &c., AT COST.

This is a genuine Clearing out Sale. Call early and secure Bargains.

W. KOUGH, - - - OWEN SOUND,

SIGN OF THE "BIG AXE." 240-53

British Columbia.

ANOTHER INTERESTING LETTER FROM MR. J. M. WEBSTER.

Mr. Editor,—In my last to the Standard, which was dated up to Sept. 4—at which date I mentioned my abhorrence of such continual rain. And here let me say, that I expected a good deal of rain in this country and I have not at all been disappointed September, October, and November, it rained by computation about 20 days in each month. Oh, yes! and nights also! The rain fell for November I know is given at 8.77, or nearly 9 inches!—enough, you will say, for a whole year.

Frost set in about the 19th of Dec. and for a few weeks we had pretty cold weather, the themometer getting down to 10 below zero. But, although that doesn't indicate much cold with you, yet I think it as cold as though it was 20 below; this I think is owing to the damp atmosphere. About 13 inches of snow fell, giving four or five weeks sleighing. All disappeared during the first week in February. March verv dry, and up to date, April 12, only a slight shower.

Seeding operations, potato planting, &c. is pretty well in hand.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have given you as carrect an idea of the weather, as could be given, but still I find I am misconstrued. Some people say I give a bad account, and then reason by saying it cannot be bad or else I would not stay. All I have to say is that the mildness of the climate is favorable for cattle raising. And, although I am suited, 75 per cent of those who come here are disappointed. I know parties who, after a short stay, have went home and, and lo! here they are back again. I wish to state nothing to induce or otherwise prevent those desirous of coming or staying from doing so.

I have before stated that land is hard to clear, and I think settlers here should be placed on the same footing as regards free grants as in Manitoba. The Dominion Gov't cannot be so hard pressed but this could be done. You cannot imagine the difficulty there is in clearing timber land, that is, fir lands.

In so far as travelling is concerned, I may state that the most timid need have no fear. The North'n Pacific officials from Markdale through the whole route, are most corteous and attentive and give every assistance to passengers. Such is the experience of my family. Even if the C. P. R. was completed to-morrow I would not risk myself on it.

Farewell Banquet.

The inhabitants of Priceville and its vicinity, on Tuesday the 28th ult., prior to his departure for Toronto extended a farewell banquet to Dr. Ghent. His friends had not the opportunity of issuing as many invitations or having it on as large a scale as they intended, owing to the Doctor, being compelled to move earlier than anticipated, yet notwithstanding the hurried preparations and the very unpropitious day, a large and respectable company assembled at the Commercial Hotel to do honor to the occasion. It is superfluous to speak of the excellency of the spread, but as usual, it was done in Mrs. Atkinson's best style, which is a sufficient guarantee of its quality. Professor Konold was voted to the chair, and delivered a most elaborate introductory speech, in fact we had no idea the Professor was so fluent and logical speaker. According to our impression it would even bear comparison with the Rev. Mr. McLeod's address, which was not only admirably appropriate, but replete with general remarks and sentiments, calculated to give a higher tone to these farewell gatherings. At the conclusion of his speech, the most pleasing feature of the evening was the following resolution, which we leave on its merits. Moved by the Rev. D. McLeod and seconded by A. Brown Esq., and resolved:—That this meeting, composed of representative men of the village of Priceville and the surrounding country, assembled as we are to do honor to our worthy and asteemed friend, Dr. Ghent, on the eve of his departure from our midst to reside in the the city of Toronto, take this opportunity of expressing also our high esteem and great regard for his amiable partner in life. We feel that in parting with Mrs. Ghent and family, the comunity loses a center of culture of refining influence and exalted virtue. Her life in our midst has indeed been a beautiful one. We have now for many years observed her walk and conversation, and we are in a position to listify that both in private life, in the home circle, as a christian lady and a member of society, her influence has always been for good. Whenever opportunity offered she was ready to relieve the wants of the poor and needy with a liberal hand, and a kind sympathetic heart; and she did this in such a happy manner, and with such hearty good-will and generosity as to make the humblest recipients feel that when they accepted her gifts they were doing her a favor rather than receiving a charity. Those who know her the best value her friendship the most highly. By her many virtues, high character and unassuming manners, she has won the love and admiration of all good people. We therefore beg to assure her that not only the Doctor, but also herself and family carry away with them, the highest esteem, regard and good wishes of all who are present and also of the whole community. And our prayer is that they may indeed have prosperity, and be long spared in the enjoyment of every blessing which makes life truly happy and gives the earnest as well as the promise of the highest felicity.

The motion, being put to the meeting by the chairman, was carried unanimously, all present rising to their feet. In response Dr. Ghent made an exhaustive and feeling reply, reviewing his experiences and life in Priceville, introducing political, public, professional and social experiences with his usual tact and good sense. On taking his seat the Dr. was enthusiastically cheered and honored in the old time vocal fashion. Dr. Hixon successor to Dr. Ghent, Messrs. Latimer, John McLeod, Jenkins of the Chronicle and several others spoke briefly during the evening, the addresses being interspersed with songs by Messrs. A. Smellie, Wm. Mead and others. The gathering was in every respect a felicious and sussessful one and was kept up far into the sma' hours, although many of the more staid retired earlier. Dr. Ghent, we feel assured, will look back with pleasure to the kindly leave taking, and spontaneous good wishes of his many friends, represented by those present. Once more tender our best wishes for the future prosperity and happiness of Dr. Ghent and his estimable wife, and in bidding adieu to the former we feel we are losing a sincere friend, although a powerful political opponent—Durham Chronicle.

Liberty Enlightening the World.

This new wonder of the world, which is now being loaded on the French transport Isere for shipment to this country, is the largest statute in the world. Some idea of its magnitude may be obtained from the fact that forty persons found standing room within the head. A six foot man standing on the level of the lips only just reached the eyebrow. While workmen were employed on the crown of her head they seemed to be making a huge sugar-caldron, and they jump with ease in and out the tip of the nose. Fifteen people might sit around the flame of the torch, which elevation can be reached by a spiral stair case within the outstretched arm.

The London Daily News, in speaking of it, says; "It is out and away the largest statue of modern times. The Colossus of Rhodes was nothing to it. It could carry the 'Bravaria' or the 'Hermann' in its arms. It towers to the skies from the yard of the Rue de Chazelles, where it has been eight years in construction, and the view from its cornet sweeps clear of the six story houses and beyond the walls of Paris."

The weight of this stupendous statute is 440,000 pounds, of which 176,000 pounds are copper and the remainder wrought-iron. It is expected to arrive in New York about the 25th of May, where it will be erected on Bedloe's Island, this being the location selected for it by W. T. Sherman, who was appointed by the President to make the selection. When placed in position it will loom up 305 feet above tide-water, the height of the statue being 151.2 feet, that of the pedestal 91 feet, and found ation 52.10 feet.

This imposing statue, higher than the enormous towers of the great Brooklyn Bridge or the steeple of Trinity Church, which is the loftiest in the city of New York,—higher, in fact than any of the colossal statues of antiquity,—by its rare artistic proportions, as well as by its stupendous dimensions, will add another to the Wonders of the world. A word should be said of its artistic merit. The pose, stride and gesture, with its classic face, are pronounced perfect; the drapery is both massive and fine, and in some parts is as delicate and silky in effect as if wrought with a fine chisel on the smallest scale.

The conception and execution of this great work are due to the great French sculptor, M. Bartholdi, who has devoted eight years of his life and most of his fortune to this great work and whose general impulse, which must be on a scale commensurate with this noble work, prompted him to make such a gift to the United States. The committee in charge of the construction of the base and pedestal for the reception of this great work are in want of funds for its completion, and have prepared a miniature statuette, an exact counterpart of the original, six inches in height, the figure being made of bronze, the pedestal of nichol silver, which they are now delivering to subscribers through out the United States for the small sum of $1 each. Aside from its being a lasting souvenir of this colossal statue, it will ornament our homes and bear testimony that we have contributed to the completion of one of the grandest works of modern times. All remittances should be addressed to Richard Butler, Secretary American Committee of the statue of Liberty, No. 33 Mercer Street New York. The committee are also prepared to furnish a model, in same metals, twelve inches in height, at $5 each, delivered.

We feel assured our people will be only too eager to testify their grateful sense of the friendliness of this magnanimous offer on the part of the French people, and to reciprocate the kindly and liberal sentiments in which it originated, by thus aiding in an active prosecution of the labors that they may be required to give the statue an appropriate base and pedestal. Now is the time to do it. Whoever wishes to have the honor and pleasure of contributing to the erection of the grandest statue of any age, to say nothing of the sentiment that should be welcomed and encouraged, must act promptly, for the money will be raised as sure as the sun rises. Every subscriber sending $1 will be supplied with a miniature counterpart of this great and imperishable statue of

"Liberty Enlightening the World."

A SENSATION.

An unparalleled sensation is being created all over Ontario by the wonderful and unequalled manner in which Neuralgia, Toothache, Rheumatism, Backache, Headache, is removed by but one application of Fluid Lightning. No offensive, disgusting drugs need be taken for days. It is an instant cure. Try a 25c. bottle from Hill Bro's. 3

Osprey.

From our own correspondent.

Seeding is very backward, owing to the heavy rain fall and continued showers. Feed is getting very scarce, hay can scarcely be had at any price.

Rev. John Chisholm preached his farewell sermon on Sabbath last from Luke 12 and 32. The church was filled to its utmost capacity. Mr. Chisholm has accomplished a work never before attained by any minister in the Presbyterian church in this place. He has the warmest sympathy and best wishes of almost every one in the township. He left on Thursday for British Columbia to take charge of Mission work in interest of the Canada Presbyterian Church.

McGREGOR'S SPEEDY CURE.

It is popularly admitted everywhere that McGregor's Speedy Cure is the safest, most reliable and far cheapest remedy for Dyspepsia, constipation, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, impure Blood, Loss of Appetite, and all kindred troubles. It is not necessary to take a large quantity before any result is produced. A few doses will convince you of its merits. Trial bottle given free at Hill Bro's.

Presentation.

Toronto, May 3rd, 18

Dear Father Cassin.

I have just learned that I have been fortunate enough to win the cushion offered at your social, being No. 257. You will please accept it for your self as a small token of esteem from one of your many friends.

And greatly oblige the giver,

Believe me,

Yours Sincerly,

Annie E. Kiely,

Toronto.

Rev. Father Cassin wishes to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a beautiful Cross, presented by Mr. Dan McLeod, Markdale.

DON'T BE DECEIVED

Beware of any druggist who will try to induce you to take anything in place of McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. It is a marvel of healing for Sores, Cuts, Burns, etc. No family should be without it. It has no equal. Get McGregor & Parke's and have no other. Only 25c. per box at Hill Bro's.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 78	to $
Spring Wheat	0 78	to 0
Barley	50	to
Peas	58	to
Oats	36	to
Butter	10	to
Eggs	10	to
Apples	50	to
Potatoes	18	to
Hay	0 00	to 14
Pork	5 00	to 5
Flour	3 75	to 4

Victor Roller Mills

MARKDALE

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring

Is now completed at great expense on the

Most APPROVED

plans, and with the best machinery manufactured, making it, in every sense of the term, "A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior Article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear that the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat.

Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc, for sale wholesale & retail.

ANGUS PLEWES.

219

FOR SALE.

200 acres of land on easy terms, being Lot 10, con. 12, Holland township, 60 acres cleared, balance splendid timber, log house and barn; well watered with never failing spring creek. For terms, apply to MAJOR, Port Perry, Ont.,

A SAD NEGLECT.

Neglecting a constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring on ill health and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a natural manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and Bow

Osprey.

From our own correspondent.

Seeding is very backward, owing the heavy rain fall and continued showers. Feed is getting very scarce hay can scarcely be had at any price.

Rev. John Chisholm preached farewell sermon on Sabbath last from Luke 12 and 32. The church was filled to its utmost capacity. Chisholm has accomplished a work never before attained by any minister in the Presbyterian church in Osprey. He has the warmest sympathy and best wishes of almost every one in township. He left on Thursday for British Columbia to take charge of Mission work in interest of the Canada Presbyterian Church.

McGREGOR'S SPEEDY CURE.

It is popularly admitted everywhere McGregor's Speedy Cure is the safest, most reliable and far cheapest remedy for Constipation, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Impure Blood, Loss of Appetite, and all similar troubles. It is not necessary to take a large quantity before any result is produced. A few doses will convince you of its merits. Trial bottle given free at Hill Bro's.

Presentation.

Toronto, May 3rd, 188

Dear Father Cassin.

I have just learned that I have been fortunate enough to win the cushion offered at our social, being No. 257. You will please accept it for your self as a small token of esteem from one of your many friends,

And greatly oblige the giver,

Believe me,

Yours Sincerely,

ANNIE E. KIMIY,

Toronto.

Rev. Fathsr Cassin wishes to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a beautiful cross, presented by Mr. Dan McLellan, Markdale.

DON'T BE DECEIVED

Beware of any druggist who will try to induce you to take anything in place of McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. It is a marvel of healing for Sores, Cuts, Burns, etc. No family should be without it. It is unequal. Get McGregor & Parke's, and take no other. Only 25c. per box at Hill's.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 78	to	$0
Spring Wheat	0 78	to	0
Barley	50	to
Oats	58	to
Oats	36	to
Butter	10	to	1
Eggs	10	to
Apples	50	to
Potatoes	18	to
Hay	0 00	to	14
Pork	5 00	to	5
Flour	3 75	to	4

Victor Roller Mills,

MARKDALE

—THIS NEW—

Patent Process Flouring Mill

now completed at great expense on the principles, and with the best machinery manufactured, making

MOST APPROVED

"A Model Mill."

I am therefore in a position to give the public a Superior article of Flour.

A fair trial respectfully solicited and I have no fear but the result will be eminently satisfactory.

Cash paid for good hard Wheat

Flour, Bran, Shorts, etc., for sale wholesale & retail

ANGUS PLEWES.

FOR SALE.

acres of land on easy terms, being Lot 10, con. 12, Holland township. Cleared, balance splendid timber and barn; well watered with never-failing creek. For terms, apply to Port Perry, Ont.,

A SAD NEGLECT.

Constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring on headache and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a prompt manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

The regular Quarterly Services was held in the Methodist church on Sabbath last.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Wilson, the Rev. Mr. D'Argent of Maxwell occupied the pulpit very acceptably on Sabbath afternoon last.

Mr. C. J. Leitch, son of our esteemed citizen, Mr. Thos. Leitch, paid our town a visit for a few days last week. Mr. Leitch has been for some time living in Texas, U. S., but is now about to take a situation in Toronto.

Monday last was fair day in our town. Not many buyers present, and a very poor show of bovines.

The Flesherton cheese factory is again going in full blast. Again the rattle of the wagons, conveying the milk, is heard at an early hour on our streets.

COTTAGE SOCIAL.—A very pleasant and successful social was held, by the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Vanzant in their dwelling on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of Flesherton Presbyterian Ladies' Aid Society. There was a good turnout, and all appeared to enjoy themselves well. Various games were heartily entered into by those present, while Mr. Vanzant, who can almost make a violin speak, accompanied by Miss Damude and Mrs. Geo. Saul on the Piano, discoursed some charming music, much to the delight of those present. It is needless to say that the good things provided by the ladies was all that could be desired.

Quite an amusing scene took place on our streets on Tuesday last. A couple of our citizens having found some of those little animals (the hog) at large, thought the pound-keepers stables (Mr. Munshaw's) would be the best place for them, and had them almost to the door of the pound when the lady to whom they belonged appeared upon the scene, then it was for who was master of the situation. We think the animals knew the voice of her who was kindest to them. A halt was made; a moment's meditation; a charge; the ranks waver, and the captives are free; the men fall back upon the rear, and nothing more is seen of them. None killed, very few wounds.

EASILY CAUGHT.

It is very easily to catch cold, but not so easy to cure it unless you use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, the best remedy for all throat, bronchial and lung troubles, coughs, colds and consumptive tendencies.

"The Illustrated War News."

THE GRIP PRINTING & PUBLISHING Co. have now sent us the fifth number of this now very popular illustrated paper. This issue we consider to be superior to any former number, both in artestic merit and subjects illustrated. It contains a graphic illustration of the Battle of Fish Creek which is compiled from a photograph of the locality, and anthentic information obtained. It well represents the difficulties which our brave volunteers had to encounter in this first severe engagement with the rebels, and on this account alone this number should be brought by everybody who is interested in the North-West rebellion. Besides this, there are sketches representing the Relief of Battleford. The front page contains an excellent equestrian picture of General Middleton, and Capt. Wise, A. D. C., who had two horses shot under him in the recent engagement at Fish Creek. The black page contains typical sketches made at the drill shed in Hamilton. The supplement, which is a double page one deserves special mention, as it is without doubt one of the finest pages of artistic lithography ever produced in Canada. It represents a group of rebel leaders, including Louis Riel, Beardy, Big Bear, White Cap and Gabriel Dumont.

We have also received the sixth number of the popular Illustrated War News. The front page contains a picture which will be of intense, though mournful, interest to Canadians. It represents the Buriel of the Volunteers who fell at the Battle of Fish Creek. A graphic sketch shows the attack of half-breeds on the steamer carrying the first expedition from the relief of Battleford. The commencement of the fight at Duck Lake is given from a sketch furnished by a North-West Mounted Policeman. The advance guard of the Royal Grenadiers passing Humboldt, and the men of "C" Company (Intantry School) returning from a rabbit hunt are from sketches from the same source. The entertainment of the 7th Fusiliers, of London, at Port Arthur, is shown on page four, also the Ottawa Sharpshooters (G. G. F. G.) at Winnipeg. This number contains the usual two-page Supplement, which is a fine one, and represents, in three sketches, Toronto ladies receiving and packing contributions for the soldiers at the front.

The paper sells at 15 cents per copy, obtainable either from local booksellers or from the office of publication.

The First Best and only Show that will visit

MARKDALE THIS SEASON ON WEDNESDAY, MAY 27TH.

W. H. HARRIS' New, Absolutely World Famous Nickel-Plate Shows

MENAGERIE OF TRAINED

WILD ANIMALS

And Congress of Celebrated

EQUESTRIAN STARS.

A show of wonderful features and the greatest ever perfected or conceived; the top of the ladder of fame, overshadowing all competition, challenging all rivalry in equestrian and gymnastic the only

Umbrella-Eared Elephant

With the largest ears of born brutes. The largest and most

SAVAGE DEN OF LIONS

In captivity, entered and performed daily.

THE HANDSOMEST

ROYAL BENGAL TIGERS.

THE ONLY

"GRAVE ROBBER."

The smallest ponies, the largest horses, the only Male and Female Samson on this continent, pulling against horses and Elephants.

M'LLE DORA

Wonderful Tattooed Fejee Island Canibal. only one ever seen in America. The best broke trick and ring horses and the Greatest Circus Aerformance

Ever witnessed. Read the bills and advertisements, not one-tenth can be told in this limited space. Two performances daily, afternoon at 2, evening at 8 doors open one hour earlier. Admission, popular prices. Don't forget date,

MARKDALE,

WEDNESDAY, MAY 27th, 1885.

Euphrasia Spring Show.

Imp. Draught Stallion,—1, Jas. R. Trimble, Garfield, 2 Jas. Noble, Wonder.

Canadian Daught.—1 Geo. Watson Netherby; A. Cuthbertson, Highland Chief.

General Purpose,—1, J. R. Trimble, Black Prince; 2 Mitchall Bros. Duke of Wellington.

Carriage or Roadster,—1, J. R. Trimble, Clear Grit: 2 Jas. Noble Goldfinder.

Percheron —1 Meaford Horse Importing Co., Nogeant; 2 Sydenham & St. Vincent, Arago.

Bulls aged with Pedigree,—1 Jos. Shepherdson. Bulls under 3 years old,—1 Noble Clark; 2 George Potlemy.—Thornbury Standard.

A WIDE SPREAD EVIL.

The great source of consumption and of ugly sores is scrofula in the blood. Burdock Blood Bitters purify the entire system and cure scrofula, as well as the more common blood humors.

NORTHERN PACIFIC R. R. LANDS

In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

From Lake Superior to Puget Sound.

At prices ranging chiefly from $2 to $8 per acre, on 5 to 10 years' time. This is the Best Country for securing Good Homes now open for settlement.

FREE 320 acres of Government Land Free under the Homestead and Timber Culture Laws. NOTE—10,218,433 Acres OR MORE THAN HALF of all the Public Lands disposed of in 1882, were in the Northern Pacific country. Books and Maps sent FREE, describing the Resources and Future Geography, the Railroad Lands for Sale and the FREE Government Lands. Address, CHAS. B. LAMBORN, Land Com'r, N. P. R. R., St. Paul, Minn.

A GOLDEN OPINION.

Mrs. Wm. Allan, of Acton, declares that Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best household remedy in the world for colds, croup, sore throat, burns, scalds and other painful complaints. Her opinion is well founded.

"PARNELL."

The well bred Trotting Stallion "PARNELL," sired by Clear Grit, the founder of the family of Clear Grit trotters, dam grand daughter of Imported Glencoe, one of the best thorough bred horses ever brought to the United States, will travel this season for mares by the villages of MAXWELL, DUNDALK, ORCHARD DURHAM and PRICEVILLE, will be home every Saturday. This trotting colt is the true blood of Old Clear Grit. There is no doubt whatever of his being a natural son of Old Clear Grit, which he shows by formation, and broad flat clean legs, with good bone, long pasterns and splendid hoofs, and by his characteristic and undoubted Clear Grit style of trotting. Bred and owned by

JAMES O'BRIEN,

248-45. Of Artemesia.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Express and Carriage hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot. Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced at $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan, Elevator, Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first class hotel in the city.

LOOK! Look! Look!

James G. Russell's

NOTED JEWELLERY STORE,

FLESHERTON,

Is the place to buy

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery.

A large assortment just to hand.

A 1 Solid Silver Watches, Full Jewelled, from $8.50 up to $26, worth from $10.50 to $32.00, warranted from two to five years.

It will pay you to come twenty miles to have your Watch or Clock repaired by Russell.

Satisfaction guaranteed every time.

217-269 JAS. G. RUSSELL.

COURT OF REVISION.

THE COURT OF REVISION FOR THE TOWNSHIP OF GLENELG.

WILL hold its first sitting for the year 1885, at the Town Hall, Glenelg, on Monday the second day of June next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to which all parties concerned, will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

J. S. BLACK, Tp. Clerk.

Dated this 14th day of May, 1885. 3in.

EUGENIA HOTEL.

EUGENIA FALLS - - - Ont.

J. McAleer, - - Prop.

The public may rely on receiving every necessary attention as to Stables, Drinkables, and Horse Care. 244-57

—FINE—

WATCHES, CLOCK & JEWELERY.

New goods arriving every week, consisting of

WATCHES, CLOCKS, CHAINS, CHARMS, SPECTACLES, PIPES, PURCES, VIOLIN STRINGS, etc.

18 k. Wedding Rings always in stock.

Watches, Clocks and Jewellery

Repaired by myself and satisfaction guaranteed.

NO TROUBLE TO SHOW GOODS.

Give me a Call.

James C. Russell,

Watchmaker, Jeweller,

217-269 Flesherton.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

MORTGAGE SALE

OF valuable farm property in the township of Euphrasia, in the County of Grey, under power of sale contained in a mortgage which will be produced at the time of sale. There will be offered for sale by public auction at the Revere Hotel, Thornbury, on Friday, the

22nd day of May A. D. 1885,

at 2 p. m., all that certain parcel or tract of land situated in the township of Euphrasia, containing one hundred acres more or less, composed of the East half of Lot number nineteen, in the twelfth Concession of the said township. There are said to be upon the premises a log house and barn; the soil clay loam; thirty-three acres said to be cleared, the balance well timbered with hardwood.

This property will be sold subject to a reserve bid.

Terms and conditions made known on day of sale.

For further particulars, apply to

E. M. CHADWICK,

Vendors' Solicitor.

BEATTY, CHADWICK BLACKSTOCK & GALT

No. 58 Wellington Street East, Toronto.

Dated this 17th day of April A. D. 1884. 241-44

NOTE LOST.

A NOTE of $24.00, drawn by F. Kempt of Holland Centre, in favor of R. A. Scott, due about next June. Any person finding same will please leave it at the STANDARD office, Markdale. All parties are hereby warned against purchasing said note, as payment has been stopped.

242-44 MRS. R. A. SCOTT.

SHINGLES FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber wishes to inform the public that he has a large quantity of Cedar Shingles of the best quality at Sparling's Mill, near Vandeleur, for Sale.

JOHN WEBER,

Vandeleur.

Orders by mail promptly attended to. 242-49

Store to Rent in Markdale.

THE Store in Reynold's Block to rent. Application as to terms can be obtained from John Lyons, Markdale, or

JOHN WHITE, St. Vincent,

143-tf. Strathnairn, P. O., Owner

WM. G. GUTHERIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plaster

Opposite the new Presbyterian Church Markdale.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Two coat work done for eight and a half cents per yard.

Lathing and all labor done by me, parties finding material. 244-6m.pd

COURT of REVISION.

THE FIRST SITTING OF THE COURT Of Revision for the Township of Holland for 1885, will take place at Holland Centre on the 26th inst. at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. All parties concerned will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

CARSON PRICE.

Dated this 17th day of May 1885. 241-46

FOR THE FARMER.

Crop Suggestions.

Asparagus is often set too close.

Pruning should not now be deferred.

Buy seed, etc., from reliable parties only.

Horse radish prefers a rich clay loam to sand.

For early pasture nothing is equal to orchard grass.

Better the seed better the crop, other things being equal.

Don't throw away bones, but convert them into fertilizers,

Cut out the thin shoots from currants, and the fruit will come larger.

Manure is the keystone of all good farming. Add to the compast heap.

One is not apt to make the soil too rich for strawberries, but it can be done.

The sugar beet is excellent for sheep, being palatable and containing much solid nutritious matter.

Of course the prospect for fruit next summer and fall is badly blasted. It always is at this season of the year.

Never plant a young tree in the place where an old one stood, without first removing several cubic yards of soil, replacing it with some that is fresh.

Those who are posted say that we can depend on splendid crops the coming season. The theory is that very cold weather and plenty of snow "mellows" the ground, kills insects and their eggs, and enriches the earth.

Few growers succeed in raising turnips early in the season, but it can be done. The seed must be sown very early and in rich soil. Then the growth will take place before hot weather comes on, and a fine crop be the result.

The beds and banks of streams may be profitably utilized by sprinkling a little watercress. It will flourish for years, is always a good crop to market, is one of the earliest spring salads, and the demand for it is increasing.

Grass, corn and the smaller grains feed mainly near the surface. Top dressing is the best method of manuring all these. Clover and most root crops feed more deeply. Even with potatoes it is well to have a portion of the manure in the bottom of the furrow.

Around every house there will be found more or less bones, thrown out from the kitchen, and there are also additions to this supply from animals that meet an accidental death on the farm. The bones and carcasses of all such should be saved and mashed into fertilizer.

Before a man plants any fruit extensively he should ascertain how the varieties which he proposes to cultivate succeed in his neighborhood. If he cannot ascertain, then plant moderately, so as to "feel his way." The variations on account of soil and climate are very great.

The pastures in woodlots are generally so poor that they cannot be depended upon. Where a maple grove can be formed by cutting out other trees, the woodlot can sometimes be profitably used as a pasture. It should be seeded with orchard grass, that being best adapted to growing in the shade.

According to the Boston Cultivator, it is seldom that a crop worth the labor of growing can be got in a bearing orchard. If it could, in most cases it would be poor policy to attempt it. A well-cared-for orchard produces what sells for more than any other equal area on the farm, and nothing besides its fruit should be expected of it.

To grow trees after the original plan, as seedlings, and then tod-graft, even if considered desirable, is impracticable for general purposes of orcharding; but if the principle, as generally admitted, is the correct one, then the preservation of as much of a desirable hardy seeding stock as is practicable on large nursery grounds, is certainly the desideratum sought after.

Many farmers complain of poor results from the orchard. In the majority of cases it comes from neglect, and very often from an attempt to grow two crops off of the one piece of land—a crop of fruit and a crop of grass. The grass has millions of roots which draw upon the soil for success, and it is absurd to expect young trees to grow and prosper under such conditions.

No grain crop will be more quickly benefitted by manure than barley. Its growth is rapid, and at the beginning is at a season when plant food does not develope fast in the soil. Hence some kind of commercial fertilizer drilled with the seed to give the plant its first start is especially valuable for this grain. Of late years it is found that the weight of grain, on which depends its value for sale, is due to the application of mineral manures.

A Chat Concerning Implements.

Perhaps no farm subject is oftener discussed then the care of implements. The articles sometimes appear in season, but oftener are inspired by the evidences of neglect that are painfully conspicious on too many farms, and the warnings given are likely to be forgotten before it is time to put the suggestions into practice. Now is the time to decide in what condition implements shall be put into a field, how they shall be used and how cared for. A liberal coat of paint on any machine or implement that is to be exposed to the weather will always be found a good investment. The implement should always be repaired before it gets in a "ramshackle" condition. It is easier to prevent rust than to remove it. Dull tools wear out men and animals, cause a waste of time, insure poor work and, as a consequence, poor crops. The farmer who discards a worn out hoe or plow puts more money in his pocket than the amount expended for a new one. There is a certain kind of so-called economy that is thriftless in the extreme. A dull saw or even a dull jack-knife should not be tolerated. A wagon that is in need of constant repairs and always breaks down at inopportune moments, and a horse that is incapable or unwilling to work can profitably be allowed to rust and rest. If they can be disposed of at all it will be to the owners advantage. No man is so rich that he can afford to keep a balky horse. As soon as an implement is not needed in the field it should be cleaned and housed.

How many farmers know how to sharpen a scythe? Certainly a very small proportion of those using that implement. Scythes are made with a steel centre and soft iron on each side. It is therefore necessary to grind equally on both sides. Many, however, grind almost altogether on one side, believing that the steel is on the other. In doing so, they grind off the material for the edge, which is always in the centre, and then wonder why the the iron does not remain sharp. If you have a scythe that does not do good work, examine and see if it is improperly ground and if so it can probably be made into a good tool in a few minutes. The steel used in scythes is what is known as German steel, and the labels "cast steel" and "silver steel" do not state a fact. There is no such thing as silver steel, still the labels should not be altogether disregarded. If a scythe is polished the flaws show, and those with flaws are painted on both sides, labeled German steel and sold cheap, the others being branded as stated above, and though not what they are called, are really superior to the painted ones.

The Bottom of the Sea.

There has been much dispute as to the quantity of light at the bottom of the sea. Animals dredged from below 700 fathoms either have no eyes, or faint indications of them, or else their eyes are very large and protruding. Another strange thing is that, if the creatures in these lower depths have any color, it is orange, or red, or reddish orange. Sea anemones, corals shrimps, and crabs have a brilliant color. Sometimes it is pure red or scarlet, and in many specimens it inclines towards purple. Not a green or a blue fish is found. The orange-red is the fish's protection; for the bluish green light in the bottom of the ocean makes the orange or the red fish appear of a natural tint and hides it from its enemies. Many animals are black, others neutral in colour. Some fish are provided with boring-tails, so that they can burrow in the mud. The surface of the submarine mountain is covered with shells, like an ordinary sea-beach, showing that it is the eating-house of vast shoals of carnivorous animals. A cod-fish takes a whole oyster into its mouth, cracks the shell, digests the meat, and spits out the rest. Crabs crack the shells and suck out the meat. In this way come whole mounds of shells that are dredged up. Not a fish bone has ever been dredged up. A piece of wood may be dredged up but it is honeycombed by the boring shell-fish and falls to pieces at the touch of the hand. This shows what destruction is constantly going on in these depths. If a ship sinks at sea with all on board, it will be eaten by fish, with the exception of the metal, and that will corrode and disappear. Not a bone of a human body will remain after a few days. It is a constant display of the law of the survival of the fittest.

Tracking the Thief.

Semedo, in his "History of China" relates a very curious anecdote of penetration and quickness of mind which occurred in that country:

A certain chagneu, or governor of a province, was taken very ill, and refused to admit any visitors into his house. This being told to a mandarin of his acquaintance, he was very much concerned, and after many importunities obtained an interview with him. On his entrance he was surprised to find no signs of sickness in his friend, and asked what was the matter with him? The governor at length told him that he had lost the emperor's seal out of the cabinet where it used to be kept, and that as the lock remained uninjured he was sensible that the seal was stolen; of course he could transact no business, must soon be deprived of his government, and probably also of his life. The mandarin perceiving the extraordinary nature of the case, asked him if he had any enemy in the city? The other answered "Yes; and that he was an officer of rank who had long owed him a grudge." "Away then," replied the mandarin; "let your most valuable goods be secretly removed this evening; then set fire to the empty part, and call out for help, to which the officer must of necessity repair with the rest, it being one of the principal duties of his place. As soon as you see him among the people, deliver him, in public presence, the cabinet, shut as it is, that it may be secured in his possession, and if he has caused the seal to be stolen he will put it in its place again when he restores the cabinet; and if he is not the thief, yet the fault will lie upon him for taking so little care of it, and you will not only be free from danger, but also be revenged on your enemy." The governor followed his advice, and the next day recieved back his cabinet with the seal in it, both parties keeping the secret for their mutual safety.

A Brooklyn man said to his Presbyterian pastor: "I am going to the Methodist church after this." "Ah, and why so?" asked the minister. "Well if you don't get your shoes made at my shop, I won't get my preaching done at yours."

AMERICAN SYMPATHY FOR ENGLAND.

Extract from a New York Let

The closing Anglo-Russian war is, of course, the all absorbing topic of conversation. Sympathy is almost universally expressed for the English. How can it be otherwise? England, or a large part of it, was antagonistic to us in our late War, but I wonder how many of us bear in mind the load of gratitude we are under to Queen Victoria? How many of us know that to her kindly, womanly nature we probably owe our integrity as a nation? Yet such is the fact. When the Trent affair occurred Thurlow Weed was in London, having been sent there with others by this Government to induce the Queen to recognize our blockade of the Southern ports, and he tells the following anecdote: All England was roused to indignation by the insult to her flag, and loud was the cry for war. For the first time since 1815 the navy-yards were working double-handed night and day. On this side of the water public sentiment was in the same condition. The country was in arms anyway, the war spirit was rife, and the cry was that we would not give up Mason and Slidell, the Rebel Commissioners. Mr. Seward was cruelly embarrassed. Justice demanded the return of the prisoners. The American people demanded their retention. Luckily there was no cable, and as it was in winter, only two steamers a month. So the press of the two countries did less mischief than is usual under such circumstances. When Lord Palmerston took the draft of the dispatch to be sent to Mr. Seward demanding the release of the Commissioners to Windsor Queen Victoria found fault with its wording, which was harsh, arrogant, and war-provoking. She took it into the room of the Prince Consort, then in his last illness, and asked his advice. He took a pen, though every exertion caused him the most exquisite pain, struck out passage after passage of the message, substituting for them sentences of his own. In this amended form, no longer bitterly aggressive, but courteous and forbearing in tone, the document was forwarded to Lord Lyons for Mr. Seward. So great was the anxiety of our Secretary of State as to the contents of the message that he asked to be allowed to read it over before it had been communicated to him officially in order to avoid receiving it if possible if it were aggressive and stave off war, pending negotiations. This done, and Mr. Seward having read it at once proclaimed that the United States would cheerfully liberate the four persons taken from the Trent, but, as he afterwards said, the entire question of war or peace "hinged" on the wording of he dispatch. The country demanded war. A dictatorial message would have brought it on, and with the South on our hands what would have been our fate had we gone to war with England? All honor to the noble woman who stood by us in the hour of our sorest need, and by her timely sympathy and friendliness saved us from possible disruption.

Persia's Military Strength.

A correspondent of the London Standard, writing about the army Persia can put in the field, says: In case of need the province of Khorassan, together with the Persian nomade tribes of Kurds, Chahsserins, Farsses, and Kackays could furnish 100,000 irregular cavalry, as good as any that could be opposed to them. They cannot be mobilized by the shah, owing to the wretched state of Persian finances. There are three or four regiments of regular cavalry, in all about thirty-five hundred horsemen, a small portion of which has lately been transformed into a detachment of Cossacks by Russian instructing officers. When the reigning shah ascended the throne Ameer Nizam, the able Persian premier, had succeeded in raising the strength of the infantry to 160,000 men. At Present the Persian troops belonging to that branch of the army muster 80,000. Their organization is still that introduced nearly half a century ago by English officers. A few regiments were, however, reformed by the Austrian military mission sent to Persia two or three years ago, and there are still several Austrian officers in the Persian army. The infantry is armed with rifles of different systems, including Werndl's, Berdan's, and Winchester's. The majority have Werndl breechloaders ceded to Persia by the Austrian government The artillery number seven to eight thousand men. Most of the guns are on the old system, but there are seveal Uchatius batteries, purchased in Austria. There is no corps of engineers in the Persian army. Excellent gunpowder is manufactured at an arsenal at Theran, but the army uses metallic cartridges imported from Austria, whence also the ammunition for artillery is derived. It is estmated in India that in case of war Persia could put on foot about two hundred thousand men, providing, of course, the Persian officials themselves had nothing whatever to do with carrying out the mobilization. Nor must Persia be called upon to furnish the cadres. If the shah's army is to be employed in co-operation with Indian or British troops in a future campaign, it must be exclusively commanded by English officers. The Russian and Austrian military missions that have lately been attached to the Persian army have found the Persian soldiers tractable, intelligent, and eager to profit by instructions. Almost throughout Persia the English are held in higher esteem than any other foreigners.

A brother was praying with much noise for faith—soul-saving faith, sin-killing faith devil-driving faith. There was a quiet friend near to him, to whom the noisy brother owed a large bill. "Amen," said the quiet friend. "Amen, and give us debt-paying faith, too."

The Cossacks.

In personal appearance, the Cossack is not usually heroic. He is a clumsy man with coarse and common features of the Tartar type, and his shambling air and manner do not compensate for his want of fine proportions. But his courage, endurance, and fidelity are beyond dispute. On service, these men sleep in the open air, and are extremely useful as scouts; for their predatory habits, quick eyesight, and familiarity with wide tracts of country, enable them to discern with great readiness the features of the ground they are traversing, to fall unexpectedly on small detatchments of the enemy, and to disappear with rapidity as soon as the desired mischief has been effected. They elect their own officers, with the exception of those of superior rank, who are named by the Government. Without having the scientific character of more regular troops, the Cossacks will always be useful in the performance of outpost duties, for foraging and scouting, for harrassing the enemy's flanks, or for acting as a species of police. Since the commencement of 1875, they have been more strictly organized than before. The active troops are divided into three classes, representing three gradations of age, and consequently three degrees of proficiency, and a reserve is formed out of veterans, who are liable to be called on for service whenever war occurs. But the Cossack is still a barbarian, and is likely to remain one for many years to come. He is given to plundering, and has not the slightest remorse in taking whatever he wants wherever he can discover it. His cruelty when exposed is extreme and every country invaded by a Russian army has reason to dread the rapacity and savage caprice of Cossack irregulars. These hordes from the outlying steppes have little idea of civilization. Badly clothed and equipped, and accustomed to lives of a precarious nature, they are apt to help themselves in any way they find convenient, and resistance to their will is death. In this respect they are no better now than they were a hundred or two hundred years ago. Primitive instincts are not easily subdued, and in Russia there are few influences by which such habits are likely to be mitigated or held in check. The Czar relies on his faithful Cossacks, and any crimes they may commit are matters for their own consciences, which are not likely to be very exacting taskmasters.

A Bridegroom of a Day

The New York Herald relates a dramatic incident in real life which is seldom exceeded in tragic intensity by writers of romance: Paul Loeblen and Jennie Loux were married. The following morning after Loeblen had been called to perform work of a more laborious character than usual, he retired to rest.

The bride made inquiries concerning his whereabouts. When told he was upstairs sleeping she ran up gayly and knocked at the door. There was no response to her repeated rapping, and she pushed the door in.

"Paul! Paul!" she cried, but there was no response.

She entered the room and was surprised to find herself in darkness and oppressed by a strong odor of gas.

"It is me, Paul," she cried. "Stop your fooling."

Still there was no response. The happy bride ran over to the bed upon which her husband lay, and, taking hold of him, shook him soundly.

"Get up, you lazy fellow," she said, playfully turning his face to her. She placed her lips to his cheek, but drew quickly back with a cry of terror. His cheeks were cold as death. The people in the house, alarmed at the wife's cries, ran hastily up-stairs with a light. Loeblen was found unconscious, but his body was still warm. A physician was called in and restoratives were applied at once but all to no purpose. Ten minutes after the wife's discovery her husband of twenty-four hours was a dead man. He had died from the effects of gas which had escaped in quantities from a defective gas-pipe in the room.

Arab Oddities.

An Arab on entering a house removes his shoes, but not his hat. He mounts his horse upon the right side, while his wife milks the cow on the left side. In writing a letter he puts nearly all his compliments on the outside. With him the point of a pin is its head, while its head is made its heel. His head must be wrapped up warm, even in summer, while his feet may well enough go naked in winter. Every article of merchandise which is liquid he weighs, but he measures wheat, barley, and a few other articles. He reads and writes from right to left. He eats scarcely anything for breakfast, about as much for dinner, but after the work of the day is done, he sits down to a hot meal swimming in oil, or, better yet, boiled butter. His sons eat with him, but the females of his house wait till his lordship is done. He rides a donkey when travelling, his wife walking behind. He laughs at the idea of walking in the street with his wife, or of ever vacating his seat for a woman. He knows no use for chairs, tables, knives, forks, or even spoons, unless they are wooden ones. Bedsteads, bureaus, and fireplaces may be placed in the same category. If he be an artisan he does work sitting, perhaps using his feet to hold what his hands are engaged upon. He drinks cold water with a spoon, but never bathes in it unless his home is on the sea shore. He is rarely seen drunk, is deficient in affection for his kindred, has little curiosity and no imitation, do wish to improve his mind, no desire to surround himself with the comforts of life.

MANIAC'S TRIPLE CRIME

Killing His Wife and Child in Bed and Cutting His Own Throat.

Particulars of the Humpf tragedy in the town of Danube, Herkimer county, N.Y., have been received. George Humpf was employed as a section hand on the New York Central Railway. He was industrious and made friends wherever he went. He emigrated from Germany a number of years ago. Humpf was betrothed in his native land to a widow, who had one child, and after coming here he kept up a correspondence with her.

At length he persuaded her to come to him which she did, in company with her daughter. Humpf was disappointed when he saw that her face had been pitted by a recent attack of small-pox, and told her he would never marry her, but was willing to wed her daughter. The young lady indignantly spurned his proposal, and the two women are now living together near Five-Mile Dam. Subsequently Humpf returned to Germany, where he met and married his late wife. On the voyage over he shot a fellow passenger in a quarrel and was lodged in prison, but escaped punishment on a technicality.

Humpf and his bride, on their arrival in this country, settled at Indian Castle, where the recent tragedy occurred. To all appearances the couple lived happily together, and they gained the respect of the community. Humpf's fellow workmen, however, harassed him constantly by allusions to the widow he had deserted, and their taunts worked so strongly upon his mind that a month ago he began to show signs of insanity. His condition was reported to the Overseer of the Poor, who appointed Constable Briggs to watch him. His wife did not want him taken to the county house, as he was not considered dangerous. After the birth of his child, five days ago, Humpf grew worse. Mrs. Briggs, wife of the constable, was employed as nurse by Humpf. On Monday afternoon, while she was absent, Mr. Briggs, who was on guard, heard screams in the house. The building was filled with a sulphuric odor, which almost stifled the men. They made their way to Mrs. Humpf's bedroom, and found the woman and child dying. The bed had been saturated with kerosene and fire, and both victims were horribly burned. The murderer had stabbed the child in four places and cut the mother's throat. The infant lived a short time only. Mrs. Humpf survived until 11 A. M. Humpf was tracked by blood marks to a room through the ceiling of which he had knocked a hole with an axe. He was found perched on the joists, with a shovel in his hands to defend himself with. A wire was thrown over his leg, by which he was hauled down. He died soon afterward from loss of blood, he having cut his own throat.

The National Mottoes.

Honi soit qui mal y pense. This motto, inscribed on a dark blue ribbon with border, buckle, and pendant of gold, usually surrounds the British national shield. Primarily this buckle and motto formed part of the insignia of the Order of the Garter. The origin of the motto is given as follows:—About 1350 A D. Edward III., elated with the victories in France, gave a grand tournament and ball at Windsor Castle. At the ball Joan, the fair Countess of Salisbury, whilst dancing with the king, by a casual misadventure dropped her garter, whereupon Edward, with happy gallantry, picked it up, and turning round to his laughing courtiers, called out, "Honi soit qui mal y pense," ("Evil be to him that thinks evil"). Soon after this occurrence the king instituted an order of knighthood similar to the round table, which flourished in the days of King Arthur, and designated it the "Order of the Garter." The buckle already referred to represents the Garter, and this, together with the motto of the Order, is now generally found encirclingthe royal shield.

Dieu et mon droit, "God and my right," motto of the Royal Shield of the United Kingom, is said by some authorities to have been first used by Richard I. when besieging Gisors in Normandy in 1198. Philippe Agustus, King of France, had without right taken that town, which then belonged to Englaud. Richard led on his soldiers to the assault, calling, "Dieu et mon droit," and, having succeeded in retaking the town, adopted this cry as his motto, and forthwith it was marshalled with the Royal Arms, where it has remained ever since. According to Boutell, "Dieu et mon droit" was assumed by Henry VI., who reigned in 1422-1461.

Nemo me impune lacessit, "No man provokes with impunity," is one of the royal mottoes of Scotland. The other is "In my defence," placed above the Scottish crest—a sitting lion imperially crowned. This latter motto was assumed by James V., and was borne also in the signet ring of Mary Queen of Scots.

A board schoolmaster desired a boy to write on his slate an account of the Good Samaritan. The following was the result:—"A certain man went down from geruselum to gerriker; and he teld amung 'thawns;' and the 'thawns' sprung up and choaked him; whereupon he gave tuppins to the host and said take care of him and put him on his hone hass; and he past by on the other side."

"Mamma," inquired Bobby, "do only good little boys go to heaven?" "Yes, dear." "And bad little boys go to the bad place?" "Yes." "I'm a good little boy, ain't I?" "Sometimes, Bobby, and sometimes you are quite a bad little boy." Bobby thought for a moment and said: "Then I s'pose I'll have to spend part of the time in one place and part of the time in the other."

...ANIAC'S TRIPLE CRIME.

...g His Wife and Child in Bed and then Cutting His Own Throat.

...iculars of the Humpf tragedy in ...n of Danube, Herkimer county, ...ave been received. George Humpf ...mployed as a section hand on the ...ork Central Railway. He was in... ...us and made friends wherever he ... He emigrated from Germany a ...r of years ago. Humpf was be... ...in his native land to a widow, ...d one child, and after coming here ... up a correspondence with her. ...ngth he persuaded her to come to ...ich she did, in company with her ...r. Humpf was disappointed ...e saw that her face had been pit... ... recent attack of small-pox, and ... he would never marry her, but ...ing to wed her daughter. The ...dy indignantly spurned his pro... ...d the two women are now living ... near Five-Mile Dam. Subse... ... Humpf returned to Germany, ... met and married his late wife. ...oyage over he shot a fellow pas... ...a quarrel and was lodged in pri... ...escaped punishment on a technic...

... and his bride, on their arrival ...untry, settled at Indian Castle, ... recent tragedy occurred. To ...rances the couple lived happily ... and they gained the respect of ...munity. Humpf's fellow work... ...ever, harassed him constantly ...ns to the widow he had deserted. ...eir taunts worked so strongly ...mind that a month ago he be... ...w signs of insanity. His con... ... reported to the Overseer of ... who appointed Constable Briggs ...him. His wife did not want ... to the county house, as he was ...idered dangerous. After the ... child, five days ago, Humpf ... Mrs. Briggs, wife of the ... was employed as nurse by ...On Monday afternoon, while ...absent, Mr. Briggs, who ...ard, heard screams in the ...e building was filled with... ...dor, which almost stifled the ... made their way to Mrs. ...droom, and found the woman ...dying. The bed had been ...ith kerosene and fire, and ...ns were horribly burned. ...er had stabbed the child in ...and cut the mother's throat. ...lived a short time only. ...f survived until 11 A. M. ...tracked by blood marks to a ...h the ceiling of which he had ...ole with an axe. He was ...d on the joists, with a shovel ... to defend himself with. A ...own over his leg, by which he ...down. He died soon after... ...ss of blood, he having cut ...at.

National Mottoes.

...ui mal y pense. This motto, ... dark blue ribbon with bor... ...nd pendant of gold, usually ... British national shield. ...s buckle and motto formed ...nsignia of the Order of the ... origin of the motto is given ...About 1350 A D Edward III., ...e victories in France, gave ...ament and ball at Windsor ...e ball Joan, the fair Coun... ...ry, whilst dancing with the ...ual misadventure dropped ...ereupon Edward, with hap... ...picked it up, and turning ... laughing courtiers, called ... qui mal y pense," ("Evil ... thinks evil"). Soon after ...e the king instituted an or... ...ood similar to the round ... flourished in the days of ...nd designated it the "Or... ...ter." The buckle already ...presents the Garter, and ...with the motto of the Or... ...nerally found encirclingthe ...

...roit, "God and my right," ...yal Shield of the United ... by some authorities to ...used by Richard I. when ... in Normandy in 1198. ...s, King of France, had ...ken that town, which then ...laud. Richard led on his ...assault, calling, "Dieu et ... having succeeded in re... ... adopted this cry as his ...with it was marshalled ...Arms, where it has re... ... According to Boutell, ...roit" was assumed by ...reigned in 1422-1461.

...me lacessit, "No man ...ounity," is one of the ...Scotland. The other is ... placed above the Scot... ...g lion imperially crown... ...notto was assumed by ... borne also in the sig... ...Queen of Scots.

...naster desired a boy to ...an account of the Good ...llowing was the result:— ...t down from geruselum ...e teld amung 'thawns;' ...sprung up and choaked ...he gave tuppins to the ... care of him and put ...ass; and he past by on ...

...ired Bobby, "do only ... to heaven?" "Yes, ... little boys go to the ..." "I'm a good little ...metimes, Bobby, and ... quite a bad little boy." ... a moment and said: ... have to spend part of ...e and part of the time...

A LOCK OF RED HAIR.

CHAPTER VIII., AND LAST.

The three following days passed with... ...t incident, and then the eventful and ...xiously looked-for Friday arrived. ...As Jobson had predicted, a letter from ...Richmond came by the first post.

"Dear Miss Starr," it ran—"Your note ...expressibly shocked me. I shall be at ...Fernhurst by 6·30. I am sorry just to ...miss you; but I find I cannot arrange it ...differently. Give my fondest love to my ...poor dear wife, and believe me very truly ...your obliged, "EDGAR RICHMOND"

"Ah," said Jobson, when they showed ...it to him, "I was right so far!"

At five p.m. Lucy was driven to the ...station by the coachman, taking with her ...only a small bag by way of luggage. There ...was no one in the booking-office when she ...went for her ticket, and she took her ...seat in the train apparently unobserved. ...As the train moved out of the station. how... ...ever, a man came on to the platform and ...stood and watched its departure. Lean... ...ing from the carriage window, she caught ...a glimpse of his face, and drew back ...shuddering. The face that she had seen ...was that of a stranger, but it had bright ...red hair and whiskers. At Meltham she ...found Doctor Maurice waiting for her; ...and together they drove back to within ...half a mile of Fernhurst. Here John left ...the horse and trap with a farmer he knew ...and they walked the rest of the way, with... ...out meeting any one on the road.

When they arrived at the house, they ...found the inmates in a state of painful ex... ...citement. Jobson had thought it right ...that they should all know what was about ...to take place, and, under his directions, ...everything had been prepared during ...Lucy's absence for the approaching crisis.

"Will you come up-stairs with me now ...Miss Starr, and see that everything is as ...usual in the room?"

Lucy, accompanied by John, did as she ...was requested.

"Yes," she said, looking round with a ...shiver; "everything is in its place."

"But was the brandy-decanter there?" ...inquired Doctor Maurice. "I ordered ...that she was to have no more brandy."

"Nor did she while I was with her," ...replied Lucy, "though I don't think the ...decanter was moved from its position."

"I'm sure missus must have had some ...more last night, for the glass that stood by ...the decanter had been used," interrupted ...Mrs. Mitchell.

"Ah, then we will leave it as it is!"

The room had a large bay-window fac... ...ing the foot of the bed; on the right was ...a small side-window, and on the left the ...door. Against the wall by the side of the ...smaller window, and immediately opposite ...the side of the bed, was a wardrobe ...with a large looking-glass door, which ...opened in towards the room.

"Ought not that to be shut?" inquir... ...Jobson, alluding to the door of the ...wardrobe.

"It will swing open," replied Mrs. ...Mitchell; "there is something wrong ...with the spring. Master took the key with ...him by mistake, and poor missus did not ...think it was worth troubling him to send ... It stood open like that on the awful ...night; I remember it distinctly when we ...came in in the morning."

"Then by all means leave it so. Now ...let us draw these curtains, and have every... ...thing in readiness."

In the bay-window stood the dressing-... ...table; a curtain on a straight pole shut ...off this in at night, leaving a space behind ...sufficient to conceal two or three watch... ...ers.

"When I have made two or three slits ...in the curtain, we shall be quite prepar... ...ed," remarked Jobson.

He took out his pocket-knife, and cut ...jagged holes at a convenient height from ...the ground; they would be quite unno... ...ticeable in the dim light, but any one ...could see distinctly through them what ...was taking place.

"Now," he said, "we can do no more; ...we must go down-stairs, and keep as quiet ...as we can until twelve o'clock; that will ...be the time, Doctor, for us to take up ...our position here."

"Lucy dear," whispered John, when ...the long dragging hours had brought them ...to half-past eleven, "you must leave us ...now. Go to Mrs. Mitchell, dear; send ...the servants to their rooms, and order ...them to extinguish all the lights except ...one in the passages."

"John," replied Lucy—in her agitation ...she did not notice that she called him by ...his Christian name—"I cannot leave ...you—I must share your watch, or I shall ...go mad!"

"My darling, it is impossible!" Your ...nerves are overstrained as it is—you could ...not stand it."

"I can bear anything with you by me. ...I should go mad with Mrs Mitchell! I ...should picture what was taking place over ...and over again, until the suspense and ...uncertainty would drive me mad!"

"What are we to do?" John asked, in ...utter perplexity. "It would not be right ...that she should be present."

"Nevertheless, I am afraid we shall ...have to let her," answered Jobson, in a ...low tone. "She is evidently working up ...for an attack of hysterics, and, if she ...should have one, she may upset every... ...thing. You'd better let her have her own ...way; she'll be quiet enough then. I'll ...answer for it!"

"Lucy, my dearest, I am afraid you are ...carrying yourself beyond your strength."

"No," declared Lucy firmly, "I am ...not. I shall not suffer nearly so severely ...in that awful room with you as I should ...if shut up in ignorance of what was going ...on."

Jobson then sent for Mrs. Mitchell, ...and gave her strict directions how to pro... ...ceed.

"You had better," said Jobson, "sit ...in the room with the younger servants ...yourself, so as to insure perfect quiet—the least sound might be very dangerous."

Mrs. Mitchell did her best to persuade Lucy to accompany her; but her expostulations and pleadings were quite unavailing; and a minute or two afterwards they heard her marshalling the servants up the long flight of stairs. Little by little their footsteps died away in the distance, and all was silent again.

"Now," said the detective, in a low, awed tone, "it is time. You go up first, Doctor, with Miss Starr; and I will follow directly I have turned out the lights."

They ascended the stairway softly, without speaking a word, Jobson joining them as they reached the room. Candles were burning when they entered; but Jobson, after lighting a night-light, put them out.

The curtains of the bed, an old fashioned four-poster, were arranged in their customary order—closed at the side nearest the door, and at the foot, and open towards the side-window for the sake of air. A small table, on which were the night-light, brandy-decanter and water-bottle, stood by the curtained side of the bed.

"Take a chair into the recess for Miss Starr; we can't tell how long we may have to wait," whispered Jobson, "and let us conceal ourselves at once; it is close on twelve o'clock."

Stepping noiselessly across the floor, their hearts palpitating painfully, they entered the bay-window, the detective carefully closing the curtains after them. Lucy sat down at once, and John took up his position close by, with his arm on the back of her chair.

"And now not a word!" said Jobson impressively.

For half an hour they waited, listening intently, chilled to the very soul by the solemnity and horror of the situation; but not a sound disturbed the stillness of the night, save the wind that moaned faintly among the trees and the ticking of the clock on the mantelshelf.

As the time crept on, Lucy's heart sank lower and lower. She was stifling behind the heavy curtains; and, when she looked through them into the deserted room, with its dim wavering light, the oppression that was upon her was almost more than she could endure. She felt a strong desire to break the horrible stillness by speaking; but, when she looked at her companions, her lips were sealed. So set and motionless were the pale faces that were indistinctly visible to her that, but for their smothered, anxious breathing, they might almost have been dead men—so still were they.

Another half-hour passed in silent watching.

"I cannot bear this much longer," thought Lucy; "the beating of my heart is choking me. Would to Heaven I had listened to John and stayed away! Perhaps they would let me go now. I will beg them to do so."

Turning her head with the evident intention of speaking, she felt John clutch her shoulder convulsively, and, looking up, saw Jobson with his finger on his lips to enforce silence, and a new and aroused expression of interest in his eyes.

Then she became aware of a soft shuffling sound, which came slowly, slowly, along the passages, until it reached the door of the room in which they were concealed: and there it stopped. With an almost insupportable tension of the nerves the three watchers fixed their straining eyes upon the handle and saw it gently revolve, the door noiselessly open, and the figure of a man in a long black cloak glide into the room. For an instant it stood, evidently listening, and then closed the door. After taking two or three stealthy steps it stopped again, and looked narrowly round the room.

All this time they had been unable to distinguish the face, as the figure was between them and the dim light, and moreover wore a large slouching black hat.

Apparently satisfied that all was safe, the figure removed its hat, placing it carefully on a chair at the foot of the bed, and then crept towards the table at the side. As it bent over the table from the back, the face was, for the first time, turned towards the concealed witnesses, who felt a cold shudder run through them as they gazed long and fixedly at the fearful and scarcely human countenance which, even through its horrible disfigurement, Lucy recognized as that of Edgar Richmond.

The face, which, with the light focused upon it, stood out in startling contrast with its dusky surroundings, was utterly pallid; and the large eyes, looking out of cavernous black hollows, with the light reflected in them, glittered with a cruel purpose. The eyebrows were bushy, and of the same colour as the ghastly red hair, which, parted smoothly from the white forehead, fell lank and heavy on the shoulders. So vivid was the red of the hair that it increased the pallor of the face, and gave it almost a corpse-like appearance. A small straight beard completed as awful and supernatural a disguise as could well be imagined.

"The fiend!" thought Doctor Maurice. "And this is what that poor, susceptible, nervous woman awoke to, to see standing at the foot of her bed!"

Richmond's next action puzzled them all. He took up the brandy-decanter, and appeared to be attentively calculating the quantity in it. After considering for a moment, he evidently arrived at some conclusion, for he set the bottle down, carefully withdrew the stopper, and, after again pausing to listen, took out of an inside breast-pocket a small paper packet. The horrified beholders then saw a white powder cautiously poured into the decanter.

This was so utterly unexpected by them all that Lucy would have shrieked aloud had not John caught her in his arms and placed his hand tightly over her mouth. Almost fainting, she remained clinging to him.

This movement on their part had caused a slight sound, and they saw the guilty wretch start and tremble in every limb; great beads of perspiration stood upon his brow, and his wicked mouth worked convulsively as he stood glaring in the direction of the sound he had heard. John and Lucy could hardly believe he did not see them, so concentrated appeared his gaze; and, hiding her face on John's shoulder, she shut out any more of the fearful sight. In a minute or two the deep silence seemed to re-assure the poisoner, and he re-stoppered the bottle, and put the paper which had contained the powder back into the pocket whence it had been taken. Then, wiping the moisture from his face, Richmond stole across the room again, and stood at the foot of the bed with his back to them.

The two men—Lucy being by this time almost insensible—now saw him take something from his pocket, which he was for a minute or so arranging, and then deliberately fling back the curtains and stand fully revealed. The next instant they were almost dazzled by a strong concentrated light which was reflected in the looking glass door of the open wardrobe. In a moment their eyes became accustomed to it, and in the glass they saw clearly something that made them, strong men though they were, tremble and gasp like frightened children.

Richmond held in his hand a dark lantern with an unusually strong reflector. He had managed that the light should be turned full upon his face and head, leaving the rest of his figure in obscurity. But his face—words fail to describe the ghastly horror of it! The eyes, showing the whites distinctly, glared straight before them, the tongue protruded from the mouth, and the whole aspect was that of a corpse-like gibbering maniac.

For a short time he maintained the fearful distortion, and then an expression of doubt crossed his face, and he leaned forward and peered into the dim light the glare of the lantern in his eyes evidently making it difficult for him to see. His next movement was to throw the stream of light on the bed; and then, in one awful moment, he seemed to realize the trap that had been laid for him, for, uttering an imprecation, he dashed the lantern to the floor and turned to escape, only to be confronted by Doctor Maurice and Jobson. He made one wild effort to pass them; and then, seeing that resistance would be quite useless, sullenly and silently gave in. Lucy had fallen heavily to the ground directly John relinquished his hold of her. Jobson kept guard over the murderer that night, and next morning he was handed over to the custody of the police.

At the inquest the medical evidence showed that, although the deceased lady did not absolutely die of the subtle poison that had been administered to her, her end had been hastened by its means. The contents of the brandy-decanter having been analysed, it was found that the poison used had been one that would in time destroy life; and it was evident in this case it had been selected from others of greater potency on account of being a powerful brain-irritant.

Detectives being sent to Boulogne, they soon discovered Evans, the man-servant, who had been living there as Mr. Richmond, and who, in the hope of saving himself from punishment as an accomplice, turned Queen's evidence, and revealed the whole structure of the horrible plot.

As Jobson had conjectured, Richmond had never left England, but had been staying at a small town some few miles from Fernhurst, disguised and under an assumed name.

The poison had been administered in the first instance in the effervescing drinks and this was the explanation of Lucy's illness and Richmond's outburst of temper when they were disapproved by Doctor Maurice. Evans also admitted that the plot was organized before the marriage of the unfortunate lady, and that the purchase of the haunted house was the first step on the fearful path that was pursued with so much fiendish ingenuity to the end.

It was never known how Richmond effected his entrances to the house, as he obstinately refused to give any information whatever; and to the last, even after the death-sentence had been passed upon him, not a word of contrition could be got from him.

Lucy, by a merciful intervention of Providence, was spared the last scenes of this terrible tradgy, for, at the time of the trial, she was prostrate on a bed of sickness and quite unable to give any evidence. Many times in after-life she gave thanks to Heaven that she had not been compelled to appear against the wretched culprit.

John Maurice devoted himself to her and, at the end of many months, was rewarded by seeing her completely restored to health, though it was very long before she regained her cheerful happy nature.

On reading Mrs. Richmond's will, it was found that she had left her property unconditionally to her husband, with the exception of an annuity to Mrs. Mitchell; but a codicil, written a few days before her death, willed one thousand pounds a year to her dear friend Lucy Starr, and, after her, to her children. Richmond's money went to swell the public coffers; but Lucy's troubled life enabled her to marry John Maurice, whose income was a very small one, about a year after.

They have led a very happy married life since then, and are beloved by all who come into contact with them; but it is doubtful if Lucy will ever be as light-hearted as she was before she knew poor Mrs. Richmond, and was the means of avenging her death by her discovery of the Lock of Red Hair.

THE END.

Thought He was Spotted.

A practised detective can frequently discern at a glance as a man is a rogue. The stamp of dishonesty on his features, or his anxiety on being observed, tells the story. A remarkable illustration of this fact is narrated. The detective was Constable Demetus Clapp, the successor of "Old Reed," a famous rogue-catcher of Boston half a century ago, who was for forty years a terror of evil-doers in and about the New England metropolis. Clapp was a shrewd man and a most excellent judge of human nature. He could tell a rogue as far off as he could a black man, and he never made mistakes. His "come along with me" was imperative and admitted of no argument. An instance of his readiness in reading character occurred one morning in the upper criminal court. A case of considerable interest was being tried, and the gallery was crowded with spectators. Two or three reporters were sitting near the door when Clapp, stooping over, whispered:

Don't all look at once, but please observe that nice looking man with the white cravat in the front middle seat of the gallery."

We looked. "Now," says Clapp, "I'll bet that I can set that man travelling out of the court house on the double-quick in less than five minutes, nor will I leave the room or send him any message."

While we were wondering how the feat was to be accomplished, the veteran quietly beckoned to Officer Tallant, and taking a pair of handcuffs from his pocket, directed that Officer's attention to the party in the gallery, and apparently gave him some directions. Tallant opened the door and stepped into the entry, and a the same instant the gentleman with the white cravat bolted like lightning through the crowd to the door, and disappeared.

"Gentlemen," remarked Clapp, "I never saw that man before in my life. It illustrates the scriptural saying, 'The wicked flee when no man pursueth.'"

Recruiting in Russia.

Some particulars have been published by the imperial Minister of War on the subject of the recruiting of the Russian army during the year 1884. The first result noticed is that the number of men fit for service has diminished by 30,000 as compared with the preceding year. The number of effective recruits had remained stationary or had even slightly increased in the ten provinces of Poland, the seven provinces of the West, and the three Baltic provinces, as well as in those of Pskov and Smolensk. On the other hand, it had fallen off in all the other provinces of European Russia, especially in those of Viatka, Perm, and Poltava. This at first sight unfavorable state of things has a natural explanation in a decree of the War Minister of 1882, by the terms of which admission into the ranks has been placed under more rigorous conditions as regards the development of the men's thorax. Thus it happened that at the end of a few months a large number of conscripts had to be sent home on account of their health, and particularly through chest complaints. On the average, 32 per cent of the conscripts enrolled during the last six years were married—a fact furnishing further proof of the great number of early marriages, which are so prejudicial to the moral and economic welfare of the country. In the majority of cases the women and children of these conscripts become a burden on the communes, and frequently the wives seek other family supporters during the five years that their husbands pass with the colors.

Rough Welcome to a Minister.

Before accepting an invitatiton to dinner one does well to be sure that it comes in good faith and from "both sides of the house."

After an afternoon service, held many years ago in a certain village in Scotland the preacher, a stranger, who had officiated, accompanied one of the elders of the congregation home, and was introduced to his wife. The good man having asked the clergyman to stay to dinner, the latter, after a little pressing, consented.

The good lady hurried off to prepare for the unexpected guest, and seeing, as she thought, her husband washing as was the custom in those days, at the kitchen sink, she seized the family Bible and approaching from behind, brought down the ponderous tome upon his bald pate exclaiming,

"Tak' ye that for bringing hungry preachers here to denner every time they come to the parish!"

As soon as the assaulted one could get the suds out of his eyes, he looked about him, and after thinking the matter out concluded that the old lady had made a slight mistake. She, too came to the same conclusion when upon returning to the parlor she beheld her husband patiently waiting for his reverend friend.

A Novel Fishing Boat.

A Port Adelaide, Australia, ship-carpenter has constructed a novel fishing-craft consisting of two separate boats joined together by a common deck. The twin craft are precisely alike each having a length at the water-line of twenty-eight feet, a beam of twenty inches, and a draught of three feet six inches with a freeboard of about two feet. They are separated six feet from each other by crossbeams which support a deck extended the whole length of the boats. On this deck are to be fitted sleeping cabins for two or three men, with a compartment for fish, and from the centre of it will rise a cutter mast. Each boat has steering-gear worked by a common bar. It is stated that this kind of twin boat sails very fast and is much safer in a rough sea than an ordinary boat of equal capacity.

The Land of the Afternoon.

An old man sits in his garden-chair,
Watching the sunlit western sky;
What sees he in the blue depths there,
Where only the isles of memory lie?
There are princely towers and castles high,
There are gardens more than human fair,
There are happy children thronging by,
Radiant women and stately men
Singing with voices of sweetest attune
The songs of the land of the afternoon.

The old man watches a form of cloud
That floats where the azure islands are,
And he sees a homestead, gray and loved,
And a hand that beckons him afar
O cheek of roses and hair of gold!
O eyes of heaven's devinest blue!
Long have we lain in the graveyard-mold—
But love is infinite, love is true.
He will find her—yea it must be soon:
They will meet in the land of the afternoon.

The sky has changed, and a wreck of cloud
Is driving athwart its troubled face;
The golden mist is a trailing shroud—
It is cold and bleak in the garden-place.
The old man smiles and droops his head.
The thin hair blows from his wrinkled brow,
The sunset-radiance has spread
O'er every wasted feature now;
One sigh exales like a breath in June—
He has found the land of the afternoon.

Traitorous Pashas Hewn to Pieces at Khartoum.

On stepping out of my tent in camp this morning I observed approaching me a man with a bronzed, hatchet-shaped visage. He was clothed in Egyptian uniform, and his countenance wore a peculiarly weary and careworn expression as, looking me full in the face, he said: "You do not know me? We were at Kowa Fort together, and marched together in the army of Hicks Pasha." I remembered him at once, and exchanged notes. "And where have you been since I left you?" I asked. "I returned," he answered, "at the same time that you did to Khartoum. You would like to hear something of our life during our long seige? Well, I will tell you." After I had invited him into my tent, and sat me down to make notes of his story, he continued:

"After the anniversary of the birth of Mohammed, Wad Sheik El Obeid came opposite Khartoum to the other side of Bahr-el-Azrek, and encamped on the isle. Gordon Pasha sent for the troops under Hassein Abraham and Mahomet Abru Said, who had been made Pashas by Gordon Pasha. Directly we landed we formed a four-deep square. Even so we marched boldly from the shore. One gun is at an angle of the square. They charged us furiously; but, ah! how they scampered. Shattered was that great band of rebels. But now what I have to relate fills my heart with grief. The traitor Abraham takes off his tarbash, puts it in his breast, from which he takes a dervish's cap, putting it on his head. Next to this what does he do? He gallops up to the bugler, and tells him to sound the kus-rah' ('retreat'; this in military Turkish signifies defeat.) The brave boy refused, and said: 'Pasha, we are not defeated; and I will not sound as you order.' Then he cleaves the brave boy's head with his cimeter, and smites others who would not turn. Now, when our enemies see these things come to pass, they gain heart, return, and attack us again. We become disorganized—why not? We fly back to the outworks and huts we had left close to the cemetery. But we did not let the traitorous Pasha escape. We circle round his horse and compel him to retire with us; much does he struggle, bag and protest; he had endeavored to escape; but escape for him was not. We brought him back, bound hand and foot.

"Now, all these things," continued my informant, "and how the traitorous Pasha had been the cause of our disgrace, Gordon Pasha had spied from the top of his house. He was much grieved; and when the wicked Pashas, who were both guilty, were brought bound, as I said, hand and foot before him, he spake never a word except 'Away with them!' He was reading Holy Writ at the time. They were tried by court martial, and sentenced to death. Seven days afterward they were executed in the inner yard, near the large square of the prison. They were hewn in pieces by a halbert. I saw the execution, so it is no use of your saying 'they were shot.' I tell you, according to Turkish military law, a military traitor is always sentenced to be cut to pieces. The two were bound up against the wall by chains and rings. Two soldiers armed with sharp hatchets approached them from out of the sides of a square we had formed. The prisoners' crime was read out and their sentence. A hundred soldiers were present, some senior officers, but not Gordon Pasha. The senior Bey cried, "Executioners, perform sentence on the traitors!' Immediately these advanced close, and lopped off first their arms above the elbows, then the legs above the knees; then cut their bodies in twain; then decapitated them. They died not till they were cut asunder; then their heads fell on their breasts, and they expired with a hideous yell. Surely their fate was deserved. I cannot say whether Gordon Pasha knew of this manner of execution. I tell you this is the Turkish mode of punishing military traitors, and it is a just punishment."

Effect of Fear.

Dr. E. S. B., of Davenport Iowa, writes, that in 1832, before the cholera had made its appearance in the United States, his brother was living at Oxford, Ohio, and when he heard the first news of its probably reaching this country, became greatly excited. He was sure he would fall a victim to the disease, he said. His fear increased as further reports came, and before the malady reached New York, he was taken sick with "Asiatic cholera," attended with all the concomitant symptoms, and died within twenty-four hours after being attacked.

That was a very conscientious humorist who broke off an engagement because his girl had "chestnut" hair.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS, ECHLIN & GARVIN,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,
199-251 TORONTO.

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

MARKDALE
HARNESS EMPORIUM
ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.
THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Medical.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

122-47

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.

124ly

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's

THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.

Contracts taken for all kinds of

BRICK AND STONE WORK,

Plain Ornamental Plastering.

Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.

126-ly.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH
HORSE SHOEING
A SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.

EUGENIA
Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

9ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Farmers will save money by buying their Agricultural Implements from

Legate & Carson,

—AGENTS FOR—

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton.
A. McGILL, Chatsworth.
BRANTFORD BINDER.
MANN'S BROADCAST SEEDER AND HARROW COMBINED.
Wisner's Spring Tooth Harrow.

SHOW ROOM—Kay's old stand, opposite the STANDARD printing office.

J. H. CARSON. T. LEGATE.

Also agents for the Walker Patent Rock Elevator and Lucas Lock Block.

For Sale by Walker Bros.

FARMERS,
Reapers & Mowers.
—USE—
McCOLL BROS.
Lardine Machine Oil.
MARKDALE.

YOU CAN SUBSCRIBE
For any of the
FOLLOWING PAPERS
AT THIS OFFICE:

Daily or Weekly Mail,	Toronto.
Daily os Weekly Globe,	Toronto.
Daily er Weekly News,	Toronto.
Daily World	Toronto.
Family Herald and Weekly Star,	Montreal.
American Agriculturist,	Monthly.
Farmers' Advocate,	Monthly.

Subscription can commence at any time.

STANDARD OFFICE,
MARKDALE.

SEEDS SEEDS
— IMPORTED —
FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at
PARKER'S,
Drugstore, - DURHAM.

J. J. IRWIN,
Veterinary Surgeon,

GRADUATE of the Ont. Vet. College, Toronto, has opened business in Markdale, and is ready to attend all calls.

Office and residence opposite the Markdale House, Sydenham St.

CHARGES MODERATE. 238-tf

NEW GROCERY STORE
IN CONNECTION WITH
Plewes' Flour and Feed tore.

Having just received a Choicee, Fresh and Select
STOCK OF
Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,
Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

Markdale Roller Mills.

The subscriber begs leave to announce to the farmers of the surrounding country that he is turning out flour equal to any other roller mill.

No more waiting while the grist is being ground.

The following is the scale of exchange:—

Wheat Weighing	62 lbs,	40 lbs. Flour.
" "	61 "	39 " "
" "	60 "	38 " "
" "	59 "	37 " "
" "	58 "	36 " "
" "	57 "	35 " "

with offal in proportion to amount of flour.

I find the average weight of new wheat to be 60 lbs. to the bushel, and the most of it, if properly cleaned, would weigh 61 or 62 to the bushel.

John W. Ford.

J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all kinds of
PUMPS,
Cylinder, Drop Valve and Cistern Pumps.
Iron Pumps Supplied

Orders respectfully solicited and satisfaction guaranteed.

Also Agent for Sargent's
PATENT LOAD LIFTER
For Glenelg and Bentinck townships.

Orders by mail promptly attended. 219

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS
H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRANITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

OFFICE OF THE
Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.
All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH.

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.	Mixed.
Toronto....Leave	7 20am	4 40pm	.....
Cardwell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
Charleston	9 25 "	6 45 "	11 45am
Orangeville { Arrive	9 50 "	7 03 "	12 30pm
Orangeville { Leave	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 55 "
Orangeville Jun.	10 17 "	7 34 "	1 14 "
Shelburne	10 45 "	8 04 "	2 10 "
Dundalk	11 10 "	8 30 "	3 05 "
Flesherton	11 36 "	8 55 "	4 06 "
Markdale	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 33 "
Williamsford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 45 "
Chatsworth	12 28 "	9 49 "	6 37 "
Owen Sound	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Owen Sound	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
Chatsworth	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
Williamsford	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
Markdale	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
Flesherton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
Dundalk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
Shelburne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
Orangeville Jun.	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Orangeville { Arrive	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Orangeville { Leave	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
Charleston	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
Cardwell Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
Toronto....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

ROBT. ASKIN,
MARKDALE,
Has opened out a First-Class
UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,
And therefore has supplied a want long felt,
COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

ROBERT S. RAE,
TAILOR,
Sydenham Street.
MARKDALE.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of School Furniture,
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

191 ANDREW McGILL.

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM.
Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

Local and Other Items

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit individual or Society will be charged [illegible] a line for the first insertion and [illegible] a line each subsequent insertion.

MR. J. LAMB returned from Cleveland Tuesday.

MR. McCOLMAN, M. P. P., was in this week.

MISS MAGGIE McLEOD paid her brother a flying visit this week.

Threshing is now about completed and station exceedingly rapid.

MR. H. BLISS has leased the Traverston Mills from Mr. Wm. Hall.

MR. A. KIRKWOOD's family left on Tuesday for Deloraine, Manitoba.

Something nobby in Gent's [illegible] and ties this week at McFarland's.

Mr. Wm. Lucas and family are visiting a few weeks in Western Ontario.

All kinds of candies, biscuits, cakes [illegible] &c., &c., at Montgomery's bakery.

DURHAM is making extensive preparations for the celebration of the Queen's birthday.

OWEN SOUND is to have a new Presbyterian Church this summer at a cost of $12,300.

WE had a friendly call on Friday from Mr. Wm. Hall of Credit, formerly of Traverston.

Master Chas. Lee of Bracebridge, [illegible] his mother spent a few days in Markdale recently.

The Glenelg Council will meet as a court of revision on the 2nd of June, and again the 28th May.

An opposition stage has been started between Owen Sound and Allenford fare reduced to 50 cents.

A new post office has been opened in the "Green Settlement," Garafraxa, to be known as Living Spring.

NATIONAL PILLS are sugar coated, mild but thorough, and are the best Stomach and Liver Pill in use.

Express Wagons, Walking Sticks, Rubber Balls, Base Balls, Fishing Tackles, &c., splendid new stock at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

NADIAN PACIFIC R. W.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH

TIME TABLE.

g effect Monday, November 24th, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

TATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.	Mixed.
to....Leave	7 20am	4 [illegible]pm	.....
ell Junction	9 07 "	6 27 "	.....
eston.....	9 25 "	6 45 "	.....
e- Arrive..	9 50 "	7 03 "	11 45am
e Leave...	10 05 "	7 22 "	12 30pm
eville Jun..	10 17 "	7 34 "	12 55 "
urne.....	10 45 "	8 04 "	1 14 "
lk	11 10 "	8 30 "	2 10 "
erton.....	11 36 "	8 55 "	3 05 "
lale.....	11 51 "	9 10 "	4 08 "
msford	12 03pm	9 22 "	4 32 "
worth	12 28 "	9 49 "	4 45 "
Sound.....	1 00 "	10 20 "	6 37 "
			6 30pm

GOING SOUTH.

ATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.	Mixed.
Sound.....	5 20am	2 45pm	6 30am
worth.....	5 50 "	3 15 "	7 25 "
nsford.....	6 05 "	3 30 "	7 54 "
ale.....	6 27 "	3 52 "	8 35 "
rton	6 42 "	4 06 "	9 00 "
lk	7 06 "	4 31 "	9 45 "
rne	7 31 "	4 57 "	10 45 "
ville Jun...	8 00 "	5 23 "	11 50 "
Arrive...	8 12 "	5 35 "	12 15pm
Leave...	8 35 "	5 55 "	12 40 "
ton.....	8 55 "	6 13 "	1 26 "
ll Junction.	9 07 "	6 27 "	2 03 "
....Arrive	10 45 "	8 35 "	.....

BT. ASKIN,
ARKDALE,
Has opened out a First-Class
RTKING ESTABLISHMENT, restore has supplied a want long felt,
KS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
ERAL FURNISHINGS
upplied on the shortes notice.
Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.
—All kinds of—
TURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

BERT S. RAE,
AILOR,
denham Street.
RKDALE.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
signed is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
ool Furniture,
of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS,
S' DESKS, etc., of the latest most approved pattern. Highly ed by School Trustees and Teach-apness, comfort and compactness, ied. An assortment of Farm and kept always on hand. Send for Chatsworth P. O.
ANDREW McGILL.

HACYARDS
ECTORAL
BALSAM equal for the permanent cure of ds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Coughs ng Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.
bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
BURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto

Markdale Standard

VOL. 5.--No. 245. MARKDALE, ONT., MAY 21, 1885. { COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH. }

LIABLE WATCHES.

GOOD TIMEKEEPERS.

Genuine Waltham, Elgin and Springfield Movements.

rades Key and Stem Winders now on hand.

Swiss Watches $9.50 to $16, ery suitable for teachers, being close timers.

26 Watch Cases,

kes, 2 to 5 ounces, Hunting and Open Face, Waltham Screw Bezzil.

HY'S DUST PROOF KEPT IN STOCK.

e stock of Roll-plate Chains and Seals.

line of Weddinz and Gem Rings,

Sets, Roll-plate Necklets, Bracelets,

Pins, etc Gents' Cuff and Collar But-

Clocks, Musical Instruments, Violin

gs. Best line Fishing Tackle in town.

nt Meridan Co. Silver Plate Flat and Hollow Ware.

E WATCH REPAIRING CAREFULLY DONE

Goods and Work Warranted to be as Represented.

Call and see my stock how complete and get my close quotations e're you

THE RELIABLE JEWELLER,

. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

ocal and Other Items.

tices in these columns intended to benefit individual or Society will be charged ten a line for the first insertion and five a line each subsequent insertion.

es. J. Lamb returned from Cleveland Tuesday.

. McColman, M. P. P., was in n this week.

s Maggie McLeod paid her brother e a flying visit this week.

Seeding is now about completed and etation exceedingly rapid.

. H. Bliss has leased the Travers- Mills from Mr. Wm. Hall.

Mr. A. Kirkwood's family left on esday for Deloraine, Manitoba.

Something nobby in Gent's straw s and ties this week at McFarland's

Mr. Wm. Lucas and family are nding a few weeks in Western On-

All kinds of candies, biscuits, cakes 's &c., &c., at Montgomery's ery.

Durham is making extensive prepar- ons for the celebration of the Queen's thday.

Owen Sound is to have a new sbyterian Church this summer at ost of $12,300.

We had a friendly call on Friday m Mr. Wm. Hall of Credit, form- y of Traverston.

Master Chas. Lee of Bracebridge, d his mother spent a few days in rkdale recently.

Glenelg Council will meet as a court revision on the 2nd of June, and lland the 28th May.

An opposition stage has been started ween Owen Sound and Allenford d fare reduced to 50 cents.

A new post office has been opened the "Green Settlement," Garafraxa, be known as Living Spring.

National Pills are sugar coated, ild but thorough, and are the best omach and Liver Pill in use.

Express Wagons, Walking icks, Rubber Balls, Base Balls, shing Tackles, &c., splendid new ock at the Medical Hall. A. Turner Co.

Shiloh's Cure will immediately relieve Croup Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. Sold by A. Turner & Co.x

Dundalk will celebrate the Queen's Birthday on the 25th. An extensive program is advertised by large posters.

A Nasal Injector free with each bottle of Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

There are 144 hands employed in printing and bookbinding apartments of the Christian Guardian office, Toronto.

Don't fail to call and see W. A. Brown's large and valuable stock of Jewellry, &c., when in Markdale the 25th.

Mr. John Gimby of Brooke, near Owen Sound, died on Monday, the 11th inst., at the advanced age of 101 years.

One cup of McFarland's pure Japan Tea taken three times daily, will tone up the stomach and cure sick head ache.

Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy—a positive cure for Catarrh, Dipthrie, and Canker Mouth. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

Use Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap for Prickly Heat, Nettle Rash, Scaley Eruption, Itch, and all diseased conditions of the skin.

Mr. Edward Lomas sold 28 load of hay and straw up to the 9th inst., which shows that fodder has been indeed scarce with many.

Why Will You cough when Shiloh's Cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x Scarce goods just received at McFarland's, Children's Toffeto Silk Gloves, new shades Swiss Embroidery lovely goods Imported direct.

The Sacromental services last Sunday in the Methodist church were largely attended and more than ordinary interest manifested in the service.

Wm. Lucas & Co. have any amount of money to loan on real estate security at 6½ per cent. Call on them before borrowing elsewhere. 238-3m Rev's W. Casson, T. Grandy and Mr. W. A. Brown left on Tuesday to attend the District Meeting, Methodist Church, at Wiarton on Tuesday.

The Hectic Flush, pale hollow cheeks and precarious appetite, indicate worms. Freeman's Worm Powders will quickly and effectually remove them.

Mr. Osborn, our genial and popular conductor spent Monday last fishing in this vicinity and succeeded in taking home a very fine lot of speckled beauties.

The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Bourbon, Ind., says; "Both myself and wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure." Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

This takes the cake for early potatoes. Mr. S. Jefferson of the ninth line Euphrasia, dug over 100 bushels of splendid potatoes on the 18th May. Who can beat this.

Fever colic, unnatural appetite, fretfulness, weakness, and convulsions, are some of the effects of Worms in Children; destroy the worms with Dr. Low's Worm Syrup.

A band meeting will be held in the Markdale House this (Thursday) evening at eight o'clock. This is an important meeting and all subscribers are requested to attend.

For Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer. It never fails to cure. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

Wanted.—Good reliable man to canvas the village of Markdale and surrounding townships. for bookbinding Good commissions. Reference required, write for particulars to

Rutherford Bros.,
Bookbinders & Stationers, Owen Sound.

The London dynamiters have been sentenced to imprisonment for life.

Any person having pure Barley fit for seed for sale will do well to leave particulars at this office not later than Saturday 23rd.

Sixteen hands are now working on the new Methodist Church, and if the weather continues favorable the work will progress rapidly.

The gaps are now all closed on the C. P. R. north of lake Superior, the last spike having been driven on the evening of the 17th.

Are You Made miserable by indigestion, Consumption, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Yellow Skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. Sold by A. Turner & Co. x

R. O. Whitby finished painting the Methodist parsonage (formerly Primitive) this week, and it is now one of the most comfortable and tasty dwelling's in the village.

Wm. McLeod has added five years to his lease of the premises he now occupies. This would indicate that his business is prosperous, and the boot and shoe business looking up.

Any person desiring a first-class job in plain and ornamental plastering should consult W. G. Guthrie, residence opposite Presbyterian Church. Mr. G. is an excellent mechanic in his line.

Mr. Alex. Webster, formerly of Priceville, and now of Cookstown, visited his son in Euphrasia last week. We were much pleased to meet his genial countenance in our village on Saturday.

Mr. Wm. Hall, who left Traverston mills three yeaas ago, took with him at that time two young calves which now turns the scale at 3.200 lbs. A saucy pair of three-year-olds we should say.

Cheap Rates.—On Monday May 25th, tickets will be issued to any point on the C. P. R. at a single fair for the round trip for one day only. Also on May 22, 23, and 25, good to return on 26th inclusive at Fare and One Third on round trip.

The Bell Telephone Company have recently opened up an exchange in Meaford, and have about twenty-eight subscribers. The line will be built from Owen Sound to Toronto by way of Meaford and Collingwood this summer.

John Chisholm, Esq., Warden of this County has donated $10 to the South Grey Agricultural Society, to be given for the best package of shipping butter, and to be divided as follows:—1st prize $5.00; 2nd, $3. 3rd, $2.00.

Mr. Jas. Beecroft, one and a half miles east of Flesherton, has an extensive greenhouse on his premises, and favored this village with a load of beautiful plants on Saturday. He had no difficulty in disposing of his load, and intends coming again.

Excellent Opening.—The ½ acre lot opposite the Town Hall, Rocklyn, upon which a very comfortable dwelling house and a convenient shoe-shop are erected, can now be bought cheap, and on easy terms of payment. It is an excellent location for a shoe-maker, blacksmith, or other tradesmen. Apply to W. H. Dodson, Rocklyn.

Meetings are being held in the Agricultural Hall every evening by the Salvation Army, commencing at 8 o'clock except Monday night, that evening being reserved especially for the members of the army. The meetings are well attended, very orderly and we believe a good work is being done.

Corner Stone.—The laying of the Corner Stone of the Methodist Church here on the 25th promises to be an occasion of more than ordinary interest. Mr. Warring Kennedy of Toronto has kindly consented to be present for that purpose, and will lay the stone at three o'clock when free will offering will be made by those present. The Bazar will be extensive, and the concert in the evening will doubtless be a rich treat.

Wm. Mason has removed his carriage business to his new premises, McKenna's block.

The Euphrasia Mission, Methodist Church held their fourth quarterly business meeting for the past year in Ebenezer Church on the 11th inst., with very satisfactory results. Notwithstanding the depressed state of finances, the amount raised for various purposes reached nearly double that of the previous year.

Re-Opening.—Mrs. Montgomery has engaged a gentleman to re-open her bakery business, wishes hereby to intimate to the public that she is now prepared to supply good bread and all else that is in the bakery line, and that they can rely on getting a four lb. loaf whereas they have been getting a three and a half for some time.

I wish to inform the public of this village and surroundings, that I am prepared to cut hair, Shampoo, Shave, and dye the young mens' moustaches and do all matters and things to soften your mustache, so while kissing young ladies' you won't cause them to shed tears as large as pumpkins. Come young and old and give me a trial on your hair and beard. I will endeavor to suit all who will favor me with their patronage. Thanks for the past favours, I am, yours very truely, T. D. Smith.

Tramps.—On Wednesday night 13th a number of tramps broke into the Orange Hall, Holland Centre, and demanded a nights lodging from the Goat, which was unwillingly granted. The following morning the goat's boss was informed of the intrusion when a complaint was lodged with the J. P., and a warrant issued for the capture of the guilty ones, Constables, Vogan, Greenaway, Telford and Dunbar were at once dispatched in persuit of the fugitives. Dunbar captured two, but, to his great chagrin they both made good their escape. The other three were, however, arrested and tried before Justice Price and Hamilton, and sentenced to three days imprisonment in gaol, thereby securing for themselves, (the prisoners) board and lodging for that length of time, together with a free ride to Owen Sound, while their more unfortunate chums who escaped had to foot it or pay for or beg their rations. The Queen of course paid the costs of the court. Damage to hall a broken lock and chewed drumstick.

There is a big lawsuit on hand between the O. S. Steamship Company and the C. P. R. When the O. S. Steamship Company was organized, an agreement was entered into with the Toronto, Grey and Bruce, by which they were to have the exclusive right to carry freight to and from the railway at Owen Sound for three years. When the T. G. & B. R. became absorbed in the Ontario and Quebec, the latter road assumed the agreement. Meanwhile the C. P. R. constructed their steel steamers, and though it was at first announced that they would run from Algoma Mills, Owen Sound was found to be the more convenient place, and they were brought here. While our citizens generally were rejoicing that these magnificent boats were making our harbor their headquarters, the O. S. Steamship Co. were concerned for their agreement, which was interfered with by the new arrangement, and failing to get any satisfaction from the C. P. R. as well as having some other claims unsettled, on Monday they issued a writ for $40,000 for services rendered, and $150,000 for alleged breach of contract, retaining D. McCarthy, Q. C., and Chas. Moss, Q. C., as counsel.—O. S. Times.

Look.

60 pairs ladies toffeto silk gloves 20 cts. per pair.

120 pairs lisle lined gloves 5 cts. per pair.

300 ladies collars 5 cts. each. Wonderful goods at McFarlands.

Fluid Lightning does not take a day or an hour to remove Neuralgia, Headache, Toothache, Lumbago or Rheumatism, but will do it instantly, and without carrying your head in a poultice for a day or using greasy liniment. Try a 25c. bottle from Hill Bro's. 4

A Rink Chronicle.

MARY GOETH TO LEARN THE NEW ART THAT LEADETH NOT TO SALVATION.

And there came a day when the young man with the lead pencil legs and high water pants bethought him of the skating rink.

So he went out, and when he came nigh unto his girl he spake, saying: "Come, Mary, let us gird ourselves up and go hence to the rink, for behold I have been diligent in my absence and embezzled two coupons." So they went, one with the other, for they loved each other with love the greatness of which was like unto death.

And when the youth and maiden were come unto the rink they saw divers other young men and maidens waltzing hither and thither and standing upon their necks, and spreading themselves upon the floor to the four corners of the place.

And Mary was pleased thereat, for she saw the other maidens sticking to their escorts closer than boiler rivets. And she longed for some of the same agony.

So she prevailed upon her lover to go and do likewise. And he went with a light heart, for he loved the sport because he had been there before and knew the whichness thereof.

And after a little while he returned and took Mary's feet upon his lap and fastened the skates thereon. And in like manner he did unto his own feet. Then they smiled one upon the other and went upon their slippery way.

And when they had got out where the eyes of the multitude were upon them Mary forgot herself and looked back. Now, this was a grievous thing to do, for it was written on the wall: "Thou shalt not look back when thou skatest lest thy feet forsake the and tread upon thine ear."

But Mary was full of joy and chocolate caramels and remembered not these things.

And when she looked back her feet flew from under her, and went up into the atmosphere and cut a star therein, and descended with a great crash and Mary sat down on the thud, so that her bustle escaped and came out at the neck of her dress. And her fall was exceedingly hard; yea, great was the muchness thereof.

So likewise had her lover spilled himself, but he hurt himself not, for he had been like the seven wise skaters who had put cork soles in the basement of their trousers.

But in an evil moment he saw Mary's bustle about her neck, and he lifted up his voice and laughed and asked her from whence came the chaff bag.

Then was Mary wroth, and she grew red in the countenance, and answered saying: Thou leadest me into slippery paths, and when the floor riseth up and striketh me in a grievous place thou comest not to my aid; yea, thou gurglest at my misfortune. Henceforth we shall remain together a little closer off.

And from that day unto this she passeth him by on the other side of the avenue.

"PARNELL."

The well bred Trotting Stallion "Parnell," sired by Clear Grit, the founder of the family of Clear Grit trotters, dam grand daughter of Imported Glencoe one of the best thorough bred horses ever brought to the United States, will travel this season for mares by the villages of MAXWELL, DUNDALK, ORCHARD DURHAM and PRICEVILLE, will be home every Saturday. This trotting colt is the true blood of Old Clear Grit. There is no doubt whatever of his being a natural son of Old Clear Grit, which he shows by formation, and broad flat clean legs, with good bone, long pasterns and splendid hoofs, and by his characteristic and undoubted Clear Grit style of trotting. Bred and owned by

James O'Brien,
248-45. Of Artemesia.

STORY OF A BOTTLE.

A Love-Letter From Mid-ocean Reaches Its Destination.

A sea captain says the Boston Herald, relates that on June 4, 1884, the schooner R. Bowers, Capt. Thompson, bound to Gloucester from Messina, was pitching about in a long ocean swell in latitude 42 deg. 46 min., longitude 60. deg. 47 min. We had made a good run thus far, but on this particular day struck a dead calm. There was little to do, except to watch the vessel and whistle for wind, and several schemes were invented by the officers to pass away the time. The second mate of the schooner, Mr. Cruikshank, had left a sweetheart at home, and naturally his mind drifted across the watery waste to her bright eyes. Noticing his preoccupied manner, the captain's wife suggested that he send his love a message from the sea. The idea seemed a good one. He wrote a note, inclosed it in an envelope, addressed it to the young lady at Big Brook, Cape Breton, inclosed the whole in a bottle, and threw it overboard.

Their was great speculation at the time as to where the bottle would bring up; but in a few hours a breeze sprung up, and, in working the vessel, all thoughts of the bottle and its contents were forgotten. The schooner in due time arrived in Gloucester, and Mr. Cruikshank started for Cape Breton. His arrival was expected, but his astonishment may be imagined when his lady-love brought forth the identical bottle which the mate had thrown into the sea, and produced the note contained therein. The story of the drift was a singular one. It had been picked up on the shores of Little Dover Bay, on the east end of Nova Scotia, after a drift of forty-one days' duration, and the finder sent it to the young lady. Another singular circumstance connected with the finding of the bottle was the fact that the finder turned out to be a near relative of Mr. Cruikshank, although they never had seen each other.

Where the Old Shoes Go To.

It has long been known by many persons what became of the old tin cans which are picked up throughout the city and are carried away in wagons, but it has only recently been discovered to what use the old shoes are put. Occasionally wagons go through the city, and return toward New York heavily laden with old shoes and boots—those that have been thrown away as worthless. It is quite an industry in New York gathering these, and they are said to be worth five cents each. The foreman of a wall paper factory in the city mentioned says that different prices are paid for different, grades of leather, and that a pair of fine calf-skin boots will bring fifteen cents. The boots and shoes are first soaked in several waters to get the dirt off them. Then the nails and threads are removed and the leather is ground into a fine pulp ready for use. The embossed leather paperings which have come into fashion lately, as well as the stamped leather fire screens, are really nothing but thick paper covered with a layer of this fine pressed leather pulp. The foreman of the factory to whom the reference is made says that the finer the quality of the leather the better it takes the bronze and old gold and other expensive colors in the designs painted on them. Fashionable people think they are going away back to mediæval times when they have the walls of their libraries and dining rooms covered with embossed leather. They don't know that the shoes and boots which their neighbors threw into the ash-barrel a month before form the beautiful material on their walls and on the screens which protect their eyes from the fire. Many other trades use old shoes and boots, and the tops of carriages are largely made of them ground up and pressed into sheets. Book-binders use them in making the cheaper forms of leather bindings, and the new style of leather frames with leather mats in them are entirely made of the cast-off covering of the feet. There is very little wasted in this world.

A Model Dog Story.

One of the most singular incidents of brute intelligence that now and then cause men to pause and ponder upon the inscrutable mysteries of creation occurred recently in the city of Alleghany. A gentleman residing there has two very intelligent dogs, which he has trained to work in a treadmill that runs his wife's sewing machine, thereby relieving her of that labour The dogs take turn about at it, one working in the morning and one in the afternoon. The lady was recently making a masquerade ball costume, which, of course, she carefully guarded all knowledge of from her female friends. One lady especially had tried every means to find out what the costume would be, and an absolute enmity had grown up between the two. The other day one of the dogs was taken sick, and the morning dog had to do double duty. To this he strenuously objected, but was whipped until he did the work. At the masquerade ball, a few nights afterwards, the lady was deeply chagrined to see her rival wear a costume identically the same as her own. How she could have got the pattern remained a mystery, until the ladies became friends again, and the facts leaked out. It seems the dog knew of his mistress's desire to keep her costume a secret, and resentful for the extra work imposed upon him, had watched his opportunity and taken the pattern of her rival in his mouth. After it had been inspected and copied he had returned it to its place under the sewing machine box and carefully placed the scissors and thimble upon it as they had been. It really looks beyond the power of instinct.

Postal Cards and Envelopes on Tap.

A curious invention called an automatic postal box is being exhibited by the agents of its inventor. It is a device to supply postal cards or stamped envelopes and paper from a receptacle to be placed in all public places, streets and resorts, by means of mechanism operated by the coin which the purchaser drops into the machine. The inventor of this contrivance is an Englishman, and he made a successful experiment in introducing it in his own country.

The apparatus consists of a box, somewhat larger than an ordinary lamp post letter box. In it are two compartments, one containing postal cards, the other, stamped envelopes with sheets of paper enclosed in it. Behind these is a compartment enclosing the machinery. In the lid on the top of the box is a slit over each compartment. When a coin of the denomination (involving a certain size, thickness and weight) for which the machinery has been constructed, is dropped into the slit, the lock of a drawer in the bottom of the box is released, and on the drawer being pulled out a postal card or stamped envelope is found in it. Any other than a proper coin will not release the lock, but, running through the machine, is expelled upon a board at its base. If the coin is bad, it is retained in the machine and the lock is kept fastened. When all the cards or envelopes have been sold a plate rises over the slit marked "empty," and no more coins can be put in.

The machinery of the box may be adapted to the delivery of a variety of articles, such as theatre tickets, ferry tickets, prize packages or fancy cards, and it is expected that it will be employed by many of the larger shops and hotels for this kind of delivery.

It Astonished the Public to hear of the resignation of Dr. Pierce as a Congressman to devote himself solely to his labors as a physician. It was because his true constituents were the sick and afflicted everywhere. They will find Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" a beneficent use of his scientific knowledge in their behalf. Consumption, bronchitis, cough, heart disease, fever and ague, intermittent fever, dropsy, neuralgia, goitre or thick neck, and all diseases of the blood, are cured by this world renowned medicine. Its properties are wonderful, its action magical. By druggists.

Speak well and little if you wish to be considered as possessing merit.

'Say, why is everything Either at sixes or at sevens ?"

Probably, my dear nervous sister, because you are suffering from some of the diseases peculiar to your sex. You have a "dragging-down" feeling, the backache, you are debilitated, you have pains of various kinds. Take Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" and be cured. Price reduced to one dollar. By druggists.

Beryl green comes with a bluish metallic lustre among the spring greens in millinery goods.

The Worst Urethral Strictures speedily cured by our new radical methods. Pamphlet, references and terms, two letter stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Steeet, Buffalo, N.Y.

The best education in the world is that got by struggling to get a living.

What will he do with it ?

A most interesting chapter could be compiled showing the peculiar means sometimes resorted to to relieve pain in some suffering member. Nnmberless cases could be cited showing the frequency of amputation of a toe to get rid of a troublesome corn—a radical remedy to be sure—but one that many will hesitate to adopt. He that is wise will choose milder and safer means and use the sure pop remedy Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It never fails, always acts painlessly and costs little. Beware of dangerous substitutes and imitations. Sure, safe and painless. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston, Ont.

Many a dandy before marriage becomes subdued after it.

Those who have Tried it Say

The best proof of the great power of Polson's NERVILINE over every kind of pain is obtained by the use of a 10 cent bottle. Nerviline requires no puffing; every bottle tells its own story. It cannot fail, for it is a combination of the most powerful pain-subduing remedies known to medical science. Nerviline is equally useful in external or internal pains Try the great remedy. Ten cent bottle at any drug store. Large bottles only 25 cents.

The first newsdealer was Joseph. Pharaoh made a ruler out of him, and he became stationary.

MYRTLE NAVY.—The success which the Myrtle Navy tobacco has with the public is because it is composed of the very finest Virginia leaf grown, and is manufactured with the most scrupulous care at every stage of the process.

The first thing in a boot is the last.

Young Men !—Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich. offer to send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt, and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

"What's the matter with the baby ?" asked a lady of a little girl, whose baby brother she had understood to be ailing. "Oh, nothin' much," was the answer. He's only hatching teeth."

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the City.

Jotham Johnson, of Durham, Me., read a newspaper without the aid of glasses on his one hundredth birthday.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

A.P 228.

FARMS FOR SALE.—All kinds.—Send for list. JOHN J. DALEY, Guelph.

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk Carpet and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas. Ont

ASK YOUR GROCER FOR
IMPERIAL FRENCH SHOE BLACKING

PURE BRED AYRSHIRES for sale; two cows, two yearling heifers and one bull. Write for description, price and pedigree to G. F. BAKER, Trafalgar.

FOR SALE CHEAP—Full or part set of Band Instruments; good order—rare chance for new band. Apply to A. JORDAN, Prescott, Ont.

"COLD WATER DIP ! !"
(TAR ELIXIR SHEEP DIP.)
used in England since 1873, awarded gold medal London, Eng., 1884. POSITIVE CURE FOR SCAB and all skin diseases either on cattle, horses or sheep; destroys all insects and lice; also insects on plants, vines and trees. Write for circulars and prices, and see testimonial from Hon. M. A. Cochrane. Address NESS & CO., 759 Craig St. Montreal. Agents Wanted. Good inducements offered to smart men.

BELTING
Manufacturers of Star Rivet, Leather Belting. Large double Driving Belts a specialty.
Send for Price Lists and Discounts.
F. E. DIXON & CO., KING ST. EAST, TORONTO.

R. W. PRITTIE,
REAL ESTATE AGENT,
Commissioner, Valuator Trustee & Financial Agent,
Room C., Arcade, Yonge Street, Toronto. Money to Loan, Estates Managed, Properties Exchanged. Manitoba and United States lands taken in part payment for city property.

AUGURS WELL BORING BUY THE STAR.
Will bore 5 to 25 inch hole; hand or horse-power; 20 feet per hour. Our combined augur and Rock Drill a grand success, worked by steam or horse-power. Send for Catalogue.
68 Mary Street, Hamilton, Ont.

FOR PLEASANT SEWING
—USE ONLY—
Clapperton's Spool Cotton
Warranted FULL Length, and to run smooth on any sewing machine. See that CLAPPERTON'S name is on the label. For sale by all Dry-Goods Dealers.

BANK OF TORONTO

DIVIDEND NO. 58.

Notice is hereby given that a dividend of four per cent. for the current half year, being at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and a bonus of 2 per cent upon the paid-up capital of the bank, has this day been declared, and that the same will be payable at the Bank and its branches on and after

Monday, the 1st day of June next.

The transfer books will be closed from the 17th to the 31st day of May, both days included. The Annual General Meeting of Stockholders for the election of Directors will be held at the Banking House of the Institution on Wednesday, the 17th day of June next. The chair to be taken at noon. By order of the board.

D. COULSON, Cashier.

Bank of Toronto April 29, 1885

CAUTION !
Each Plug of the
MYRTLE NAVY
IS MARKED
T. & B.
In Bronze Letters.
NONE OTHER GENUINE

CUT THIS OUT !
The New Co-Operative
Sewing Machines !
—ARE THE—
BEST IN THE MARKET.
NEW STAND! NEW FURNITURE!
Latest Improved Attachments
Agents price for similar machine $60
Our price only $25 each.
Before buying send us stamp for our elegant photograph and sample of sewing.
Machines guaranteed for three years and sent on trial.
Any lady wanting a machine will do well to write to
THE CO-OPERATIVE
Sewing Machine Co.
22 JAMES ST. SOUTH, HAMILTON.

CANADA PERMANENT LOAN & SAVINGS COMPANY
INCORPORATED A.D. 1855.

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL	$3,000,000
PAID UP CAPITAL	2,200,000
RESERVE FUND	1,100,000
TOTAL ASSETS	8,000,000

OFFICE:—Co's Bldgs. Toronto St., Toronto.

STRAIGHT LOANS,
OR CREDIT FONCIER PLAN.
The Company has a large amount of money to lend on Real Estate securities at the lowest current rate of interest repayable either in one sum or by instalments as may be desired by the borrower.
Applications may be made direct to the undersigned by letter or otherwise, or to the local representatives of the Company throughout Ontario. As the Company always has funds on hand no delay need be expected Expenses reduced to minimum.
Mortgages and Municipal Debentures purchased.
J. HERBERT MASON, Managing Director.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore, via Halifax and St. John's, N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly; Glasgow and Boston, weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co, Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's, N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

I. C. Fell & Co
TORONTO
for BRASS LABELS STAMPS SEALS & STEEL DIES

LADIES
PILLS OF TANSY are Perfectly Safe and always Effectual. Sealed particulars 2 cts.
Wilcox Specific Medicine Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

R. U. AWARE
THAT Lorillard's Climax Plug bearing a red tin tag; that Lorillard's Rose Leaf fine cut; that Lorillard's Navy Clippings, and that Lorillard's Snuffs, are the best and cheapest, quality considered ?

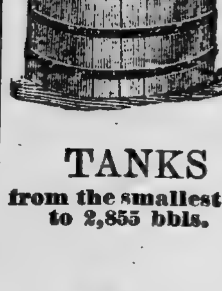
PREMIER.
RUDGE.
ROYAL CANADIAN.
EXPERT.
KANGAROO SAFETY.
50 2nd hand Bicycles and Tricycles.
Send for list.
Send 3c. stamp for largest Catalogue ever issued in Canada
A. T. LANE, Montreal.

Coleman's Improved Plough Harness
Adapted to Orchard Work.
No whiffletrees to injure trees. Easy on man and team. Working qualities guaranteed. Money refunded if not satisfactory after a fair trial. Price, $10 without collars and bridles.
DEWEY & CO.,
COLBORNE ONT.

CONBOY'S

IMPROVED.
CONBOY'S CARRIAGE TOPS are the best and cheapest in the Market. Order one from your Carriage Maker. Take no other kind.

SMOKED SAUSAG[E]
The most convenient meat for farmers ... season. These meats are cooked and ready ... Sold by grocers through the Dominion ... to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342 Montreal



Dominion Line of Steam[ships]
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk ... of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday ... the summer months, and from Portland every ... during the winter months. Sailing dates from QUEBEC.
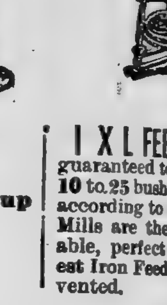
SARNIA,—May 16, June 27, Aug. ...
VANCOUVER.—May 30, July 11, Aug. ...
OREGON,—June 13, July 25, Sept. 5, Oct. ...
Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144 ... steamer and berth. Intermediate $35 ... lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms ... marked thus: * are amidships, where but little ... felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them ... ther particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Agent or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & Co.
General Agents, M...

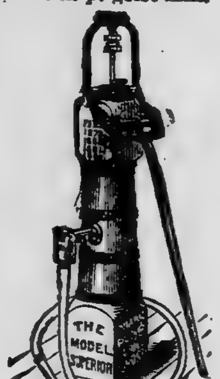
TRY PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER
Pure Gold
MANUFACTURING CO.



The Eagle Washer ... Washing Machine ... vented that a woman ... years old, ... the use of a ... board, can ... wash 50 to ... in one hour. Wanted all ... ada. Sample ... trial and territory given. Ladies make good agents; ... clothes, and every lady will buy after trying it; ... to wash calicos in five minutes. cotton goods in ... 10, or no sale. Address, FERRIS & CO., Patentees and Manufacturers, 78 Jarvis Street, TORONTO, Canada

ONTARIO PUMP CO.
(Limited.)
OFFICE AND FACTORY, COR. SPADINA AND CECIL STS.
TORONTO, ONT.

TANKS
from the smallest up to 2,855 bbls.



I X L FEED ...
guaranteed to grind 10 to 25 bushels per ... according to size. ... Mills are the most ... able, perfect and ... est Iron Feed Mill ... vented.

Eleven Sizes.
GEARED WINDMILLS
from 1 to 40 h. p., for Pumping Water, running Grain Crushers, Straw Cutters, Root Pulpers, or any other machinery up to a 40 h. p. grist mill.

PUMPING WIND... from 8 to 30 ... diameter.

PUMPS
Iron and Wood, Force or Lift.
Deep Well Pumps a Specialty.

HAYING TOO[LS]
A full line of the ...

Pipe & Pipe Fi...
In fact a full ... Water Supp... Material.

Send us your address on a post card and we'll send you 104 page illustrated catalogue free.
Mention this Paper

JOHNSTON'S FLUID BE[EF]
It is the only preparation of the kind ... contains all the nutritious, together with ... stimulating properties of beef, and the ... one which has the power to supply ... ment for brain, and bone, and muscle.

Farmers, Mill Men and all Oil Consumers
WILL SAVE MONEY BY USING McCOLL'S CELEBRATED OIL
"LARDINE,"
For general lubricating purposes, is unexcelled, and their CYLINDER and other ... have no equal. Highest Awards and Medals wherever exhibited. For sale by ... dealers.
McCOLL BROS. & CO., TORONTO.

MERIDEN
BRITANNIA
COMPANY.
FINEST Electro Plate

CAUTIO[N]
Goods stamped ... den Silver Plate ... are not our ... you want reliable ... insist on getting ... made by the MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,
HAMILTON,

THE LIME-KILN CLU[B]

... Stepoff Johnsing in de ... " asked the President, as ... winked at Samuel Shin to ... and roast Elder Toots o... the stove.

... sah!" replied a high-pitche... ne of the back corners.

... will please step to de fron... her Johnsing has always ... the length of his heels, and ... ed to think that the hour h... he was to receive a prize ... he wore a broad grin, and ... ment he would have lent ... de Davis fifty cents with... security.

...poff Johnsing," said ... er in his deep toned voice, "... ed stoh de odder night to see ... two-bits wuth of meal fur my ... you walked in an' wanted ... fur a bale of hay fur your ... ' he trusted me, sah."

...ctly, an' it pleased me to ... minits de ole man Cummin... De two of you talked ab... wickedness of mankind fu... an' den a dispute arose as ... the world."

..., sah. De ole man Cummin... nuffin, sah."

... called him a liar."

... he called me a fool."

... called him a bigot."

...' he called me a humbug."

...actly—'zactly—heerd it all, ...hnsing, an' now I want to a... you know about de age ...?"

...I—know as much as de old ...ins."

...w old am de airth ?"

...unno, sah."

... you don't! You an' Cummin... an' almost fight ober what ne... kin cum widin a millyun mi... ! Dat's mankind, 'zactly. ... bluffed on what we do know, ... n't back water fur any libin' ... we doan' know. When we ... we fight fur it sooner da... facks. If we can't convinc... party by blab we am ready to do ... Brudder Johnsing, it wil... you to disreckolect a few fa... of argyment am worth a bush... It takes a man of strong com... admit his faults an' errors. ... lieve wid all yer might an sti... wrong. Find a man who pr... on sticking to his opinyuns ... found a dangerous member o... nity. You may now sot down ... attack de reg'lar programme."

NOT A MEMBER.

...ack Smith arose to make an ... He had seen a paragraph in ... to the effect that the Hon. Gr... ckson, of Hamilton, Ont., w... uring through Canada on "... Too Much ?" had been sent ... mission by the Lime-Kiln Cl... h he was a respected memb... is statement true ?

... consulting the Secretary's bo... ident answered that the pers... was not even a member of ... Any one giving him credit for p... a plug of tobacco must do so ... peril. As to his lecture, if ... much the fact would be a surpr... colored people in America. N... emed troubled to get away wi... provisions his income allowe... out of ten stomachs were expe... n for several hours per day ...

WILL AFFILIATE.

... Secretary announced an offici... nication from the "White Sno... Club," of Point Pleasant, We..., asking the Lime-Kiln Club ... with it. Its motto was: "W... know it was loaded," and its obje... elevation of colored corn docto... suppression of æstheticism in th... States."

...er Gardner replied that the clu... affiliate up to a certain point. H... that colored corn doctors neede... g. The last one who stopped ... e stole three snow shovels and a... he had been present when two o... ernity had been hung for murder ... ld go in for about seventeen de... moral elevation, and after tha... e about any further engagement ...

AGRICULTURE.

...ommittee on Agriculture reporte... backward spring would probably ... the onion crop by 250,000 bush... warned the colored race to ge... the calamity. The cause of the ... d season, as near as the committee ... atch on, was the fact that las... hadn't sense enough to let go.

RESOLVED.

...Hon. Burdock Cantelope then ... the following:

...reas, Fifty recent graduates from ... lical College of Michigan havin... deir services to England in case ... wid Russia; nowdarfore,

...lved, Dat we advise England to accept ... offer, an' be shah an' keep ebery ... m at de front under fish."

...Rev. Penstock opposed the reso... A doctor who had been in prac... twenty-four hours saved him ... lling out of a tree and breaking ... , and he wouldn't go back on the ... y. Nevertheless, the resolution ... t to vote. It was carried by a ... y of 72.

... meeting then adjourned.

... milk ought to make good butter.

... most popular book—The pocket-...

... nd wants Komaroff to "come off," ... ya says. She thinks he is lieing.

... bachelor who always knows how ... hould be brought up, but he for... ter marching ...

MOKED SAUSAGE
The most convenient meat for farmers son. These meats are cooked and d by grocers through the Dominion
W. CLARK, P. O. Box 358 Montreal

ominion Line of Steamsh unning in connection with the Grand Trunk R Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday summer months, and from Portland every T ing the winter months. Sailing dates from QUEBEC.
ARNIA.—May 16, June 27, Aug. 8, Sept. 19
VANCOUVER.—May 30, July 11, Aug. 22, Oct. 3
OREGON.—June 13, July 25, Sept. 5, Oct. 17
ates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool or $60. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144. mer and berth. Intermediate $30, et rates. The saloons and staterooms re thus: * are midships, where best and no cattle or sheep is carried on particulars apply to any Grand ns or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

PURE GOLD BAKING POWDER
Pure Gold
MANUFACTURING CO.
31 FRONT ST. EAST

The Eagle
Washer is the Wash-day Machine vented clear woman, or years old, wit line use of a board, can wash wash 50 to 100
in one hour.
wanted all over
ada. Samples
nd territory given. Ladies make good agents; no
, and every lady will buy after trying it; wri circulars in five minutes cotton goods in 10 sale. Address, FERRIS & CO., Patentees and rs, 78 Jarvis Street, TORONTO, Canada

ONTARIO PUMP CO.
(Limited.)
CE AND FACTORY, COR. SPADINA A AND CECIL STS.
TORONTO, ONT.

TANKS
the smallest up
2,855 bbls.
I X L FEED MI
guaranteed to grind 10 to 25 bushels per according to size.
Mills are the most able, perfect and est Iron Feed Mill vented.

even Sizes.
O WINDMILLS to 40 h. p., for g Water, running
Crushers, Straw
Root Pulpers, or er machinery up
h. p. grist mill.
PUMPING WINDM from 8 to 30
diameter.

HAYING TOOL
A full line of the UMPS
d Wood,
Force or Lift.
Well Pumps a pecialty
Pipe & Pipe Fit
In fact a full
Water Supply
Material. s your address on a post card and 104 page illustrated catalogue free.
n this Paper

NSTON'S FLUID BE
he only preparation of the kind all the nutritious, together ing, properties of beef, and the ch has the power to supply brain, and bone, and muscle.

l Oil Consumers
USING ATED OIL
NE," their CYLINDER and other er exhibited. For sale by TORONTO.

CAUTIO
Goods stamped den Silver Plate
are not our make.
you want reliable insist on getting made by the MERIDEN BRI
NIA CO.,
HAMILTON,

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

Am Stepoff Johnsing in de hall dis cin'?" asked the President, as he rose nd winked at Samuel Shin to stir up fire and roast Elder Toots out from nd the stove.

Yes, sah!" replied a high-pitched voice, one of the back corners.

You will please step to de front."

rother Johnsing has always bragged the length of his heels, and he now ared to think that the hour had come n he was to receive a prize chromo.
face wore a broad grin, and just at moment he would have lent Brother alide Davis fifty cents without the security.

Stepoff Johnsing," said Brother iner in his deep toned voice, "I war' feed stoh de odder night to see about
'two-bits wuth of meal fur my hens, you walked in an' wanted to get ed fur a bale of hay fur your mule."

An' he trusted me, sah."

Zactly, an' it pleased me to see it.
few minits de ole man Cummins limp-

De two of you talked about de al wickedness of mankind fur a few s, an' den a dispute arose as to de of the world."

Yes, sah. De ole man Cummins doan muffin, sah."

You called him a liar."

But he called me a fool."

You called him a bigot."

An' he called me a humbug."

Zactly—zactly—heerd it all, Brud-Johnsing, an' now I want to ax you you know about de aige of de
?"

—I—know as much as de old man mins."

ow old am de airth?"

dunno, sah."

n you don't! You an' Cummins call s an' almost fight ober what neither kin cum widin a millyun miles of in'! Dat's mankind, 'zactly. We e bluffed on what we do know, but on't back water fur any libin' man at we doan' know. When we git a y we fight fur it sooner dan fur n facks. If we can't convince de party by blab we am ready to do it by n'. Brudder Johnsing, it will be ur you to disreckolect a few facks.
of argyment am worth a bushal o'
. It takes a man of strong common to admit his faults an' errors. You believe wid all yer might an still be wrong. Find a man who prides lf on sticking to his opinyuns an' s found a dangerous member of de unity. You may now sot down, an ll attack de reg'lar programme."

NOT A MEMBER.

oback Smith arose to make an in-
He had seen a paragraph in the to the effect that the Hon. Green Jackson, of Hamilton, Ont., who turing through Canada on "Do s Too Much?" had been sentout
s mission by the Lime-Kiln Club, ich he was a respected member this statement true?

er consulting the Secretary's books esident answered that the person i was not even a member of the Any one giving him credit for paror a plug of tobacco must do so at n peril. As to his lecture, if we o much the fact would be a surprise colored people in America. He seemed troubled to get away with provisions his income allowed, me out of ten stomachs were expect-run for several hours per day on m.

WILL AFFILIATE.

Secretary announced an official unication from the "White Snow-Club," of Point Pleasant, West ia, asking the Lime-Kiln Club to e with it. Its motto was: "We know it was loaded," and its object elevation of colored corn doctors e suppression of æstheticism in the States."

her Gardner replied that the club affiliate up to a certain point. He ed that colored corn doctors needed ing. The last one who stopped at use stole three snow shovels and an d he had been present when two of ternity had been hung for murder.
uld go in for about seventeen deof moral elevation, and after that see about any further engagement.

AGRICULTURE.

Committee on Agriculture reported e backward spring would probably e the onion crop by 250,000 bush-d warned the colored race to get for the calamity. The cause of the rd season, as near as the committee catch on, was the fact that last hadn't sense enough to let go.

RESOLVED.

Hon. Burdock Cantelope then the following:

Resolved, Fifty recent graduates from edical College of Michigan havin' deir services to England in case
wid Russia; nowdatfare,

Resolved, Dat we advise England to ace offer, an' be shah an' keep ebery
'em at de front under fish."

Rev. Penstock opposed the reso-
. A doctor who had been in pracly twenty-four hours saved him falling out of a tree and breaking k, and he wouldn't go back on the nity. Nevertheless, the resolution put to vote. It was carried by a ity of 72.

meeting then adjourned.

's milk ought to make good butter.

most popular book—The pocket-land wants Komaroff to "come off," boys say. She thinks he is lieing.

a bachelor who always knows how should be brought up, but he for-after marriage.

The Warning from the Bake Oven.

Not long since there moved to Chesterton a middle-aged man and his wife, together with a large family of children. They came from New England, and purchased a place on which stood one of the oldest and best known houses to be found in the whole country. They moved in early spring, and when May came, naturally began to explore the place more fully. One day Mrs. Charles, a large, whole-souled woman, with a strong religious temperament almost verging upon superstition, came upon an old bake-oven which had been used in early times, but long ago abandoned. As Mrs. Charles' family was large, she determined to make use of the oven, for the next Saturday's baking. She hated it, put in her dough, and the result was six magnificent loaves of very tempting bread. But on the bottom of one of the loaves appeared the statement: "Died June 15," in old fashioned but well defined text. The fact disconcerted the family, and their feeling amounted to consternation, when week after week the same statement appeared on the bread—"Died June 15." Mrs. Charles, with her slightly superstitious turn, thought it meant her, and, as the date approached gradually grew ill. So strong was the power of imagination, in fact, that the day before the fatal one named found her in bed a very ill woman, and firmly convinced that the next day would be her last. The news of Mrs. Charles' illness spread abroad and finally reached the ears of an old residenter, who lost no time in getting to the home of the sick woman. He found her in what she thought her last hours, but quickly explained that, many years before, he had helped to build that bake-oven, and had used for one of the bottom slabs a part of an old tombstone that had been spoilt in the cutting. Everybody in the neighborhood, he said, knew about this peculiarity of old Hannah Kendrick's bake-oven and should have told the newcomers. It only remains to add that Mrs. Charles' superstition rapidly gave way, and her health as rapidly improved.

Greeley and the Mediums.

In the ante-telegraph days, Hon. Horace Greeley, whose handwriting was atrociously bad, wrote to a country correspondent in relation to a lecture engagement: "Will be with you on Tuesday—or, if I can't, will rap." Such, at least, was presumed to be the tenor of the communication. At this day the "autograph," preserved as a curosity, may be read in that way, as well as in any other. The "rap" hardly needs explanation, but there may be here and there a person who does not understand that "raps" were once on a time the only received method by which the disembodied "spirits" communicated with the living. Perhaps Mr. Greeley thought, or pretended to think, that he could induce some of those imponderables to throw their mysterious weight into the business. He did not in this instance try. Indeed the famous "founder" of The Tribune, himself eminently a practical man, found the "spirits" impracticable for any sensible purpose. Always ready to listen to anybody or to test any new proposition, Mr. Greeley having attended a "seance" offered a handsome engagement to the "medium." "If," he said, "you will give me, daily, the London Mark Lane reports, I will pay for the exclusive intelligence such a price as will make it worth your while." The reports were not to be paid for until verified by the than slowly transmitted foreign mail. The "medium" declined the offer, and Mr. Greeley turned away from him and called "next," on the roll of eccentric matters in which he loved to experiment.

Britain's Naval Reserve.

